The Crossley meetings at St. James Methodist church are creating a splendid religious atmosphere. To attend any of them is to secure a spiritual uplift; to be present at all of them is to get in touch with a power making for the deepening of the spiritual life. The congregations have been good, the one on Sabbath evening filling the church. The account of Sir John A. Macdonald's conversion was illuminating and convincing that to be a great man one must be good. The Christian church has its place to-day and the call to everyone, high and low, is to be identified with it.

The musical selections by Mr. Crossley are very timely, and such favorites as "The Pearly Gates and Golden" and "De Massa ob De Sheepfol'" are well received and enforce the truth of the theme being given.

Only a week remains of the series, and we anticipate a crowded church at each service. The song service begins at 7.45. Last night Rev. R. E. Spence, B.A., of Neepawa, Man., was present and led in prayer, while friends from Foxboro and outside points are also coming in. Be sure not to miss any of the remaining services.

The meeting to-night will be a song sermon on "Heaven."

NOMINATIONS IN EAST CITY

G. L. Hay and A. Weir Are Nominated

At the nominations in East City at noon, G. L. Hay and Archibald Weir were nominated for the vacancy in the city council, caused by the resignation of Ald. Anderson.

Mr. Hay was proposed by Messrs. A. A. Fowler and J. L. Malane, and Mr. Weir's nomination was made by Messrs. John Hutchinson and Jos. Barnard.

The H. Webb Chamberlain Stock Co. won popular favor in the opening engagements at the Grand opera house on Monday. The company is well-balanced and has a repertoire of plays that promises high-class entertainment for this week.

The afternoon presentation was greeted by a large audience, and in the evening it was not possible to accommodate all who had hoped to see the performance.

Oliver Twist will be presented to-night.

Engineers estimate the available water power of Oregon as more than thirteen million horse power.

MONTENEGRINS DEFEAT AUSTRIANS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 13.—According to a despatch received in Rome from Cettinje, Montenegrin troops under General Bukovitch have defeated 16,000 Austrians, supported by six batteries of artillery, at a point northeast of Sareyeve.

TREACHERY IN SOUTH AFRICA

Colonel Maritz Leads Movement to Set up Independent Republic in South Africa—Has Arrested Officers and Men Who Refuse to Help Him.

MARTIAL LAW HAS BEEN PROCLAIMED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Colonel Maritz led a commando in the Boer war 14 years ago, and in 1904 was sent by the British government with 500 Boer riflemen to help Germany suppress a rebellion of natives in German South West Africa.

General Botha's government recently realized that something was wrong in the territory under Maritz's command, and sent Colonel Brits to investigate. As a result of this visit, it has transpired that Maritz is leading a movement, assisted by Germans, to set up an independent republic in what is now British South Africa. He has Germans as well as Boers under his command and has arrested and sent into German territory as prisoners all officers and men who refuse to join in the rebellion.

The proclamation imposing martial law follows: "Whereas a state of war exists between the British Empire on the one hand and the German Empire on the other, and whereas the government of the protectorate of German Southwest Africa has, through a widespread secret propaganda, persistently endeavored to seduce citizens of the Union and officers and members of the defence forces of the Union from their allegiance, and cause rebellion and civil war within the Union; and whereas these efforts have so succeeded that Lieut.-Col. Solomon Gerhardus Maritz, together with a number of his officers and a portion of the forces under his command, has shamefully and traitorously gone over to the enemy and is now in open rebellion against the government and people of the Union and is in collusion with forces of the enemy invading the northern portion of Cape Province; and whereas there is grave reason to think that the government of German South West Africa has, through its numerous spies and agents, communicated with and corrupted also other citizens of the Union, under the false and treacherous pretext of favoring the establishment of a republic in South Africa; and whereas the government of the Union considers it necessary to take effective measures to protect and defend the interests of the Union and its loyal and law-abiding citizens against these insiduous and treacherous attacks from within and without, and to that end to declare martial law."

BELGIAN GOVERNMENT TRANSFERRED WITH TEMPORARY OFFICES AT HAVRE

Morning Post Jumps on First Lord for Sending Small Naval Force to Antwerp --- British Losses Greater Than Admitted It is Claimed

IMPROVEMENT IN POSITION OF THE ALLIES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Bordeaux, Oct. 13.—It has been decided to transfer the Belgian government to France, in order that it may have full liberty of action. This was announced officially here to-day.

Several Belgian ministers, accompanied by officials, left Ostend, sailing for Havre, where the French government has prepared temporary offices for them.

King Albert remains at the head of the Belgian army.

BOER COLONEL CAUSES TROUBLE.

Cape Town, Oct. 13.—It is officially announced here that Commander Colonel Maritz has rebelled in the northwest of Cape Province. Martial law has been proclaimed throughout the Union.

MORNING POST ATTACKS CHURCHILL.

London, Oct. 13.—The Morning Post attacked Winston Churchill for sending a small naval force to Antwerp. A large force should have been sent or none at all.

The Post claims that the British losses were greater than admitted.

Churchill's advice resulted only in loss of life and hampering the Belgian retreat.

Prince Dies From Wounds

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Petrograd, Oct. 13.—Prince Oleg, son of Grand Duke Constantine, died yesterday of wounds received in action. An official despatch from Petrograd on October 11 said Prince Oleg had been wounded in a cavalry engagement at the front. He was carrying a Russian standard at the time he was shot.

KNIT FOR SOLDIERS

Committee Will Resume Knitting on Wednesday

The Women's War Fund knitting committee will resume knitting in preparation for the second contingent, and all ladies willing to help are invited to meet in the recreation room at the armouries at 2 o'clock to-morrow (Wednesday) afternoon. Wool will be provided.

It is also requested that ladies to whom knitting needles were loaned will be good enough to return them for this meeting.

Erring Pastor Leaves for Home

London, Ont., Oct. 13.—Disgraced and despondent, Rev. Isaac Wilson, the Milan, Mich., clergyman who staged a fake hold up and robbery here in the hope of escaping creditors, was allowed to leave for his home city yesterday. The erring clergyman, who has aged considerably since getting into trouble here, stated that the matter of his rejoining his congregation would depend upon an investigation now being conducted by his parishioners into his difficulty in this city.

KAISER'S HEAVY DEMAND

City Has Not Been Badly Damaged Except in Suburbs

LONDON, Oct. 13. — The Times' correspondent in eBigium under date of Sunday says:

Twenty-four of the Antwerp forts were still holding out to-day in the face of a continuous bombardment. Last night over twenty blazing fires could be distinguished from afar in different parts of the city.

The city itself and the remaining defences are in the hands of the Germans who have signalized their arrival by a demand for a war levy of $100,000,000.

"Antwerp was not seriously damaged by the German bombardment," says The Chronicle's Amsterdam correspondent. "Only the suburb of Berchem and the southeast quarter of the town suffered badly.

"Long after they had been evacuated by the Belgians the Germans continued firing on and around the ruins of the blown-up forts. They feared mines and hoped thus to destroy them. Near the southern suburbs the ground had been extensively mined by the Belgians, but the Germans were warned by trailers from within the city and took care to avoid the danger zone.

"On Thursday morning the retreating troops from Antwerp passed on their flight to Ostend no fewer than 600 motor cars filled with soldiers who had already passed through the town. The intention was to reach Ostend by forced marches, and the soldiers were relieved of their knapsacks, which were carried in the vans. Motor 'buses from London carried footsore troops who had fallen out of line. Then came columns of machine guns drawn by dogs."

Altogether 22,000 British and Belgian soldiers are interned at different points in Holland. About 1,500 of these men are British marines, who were driven over the boundary. This statement has been made by the Dutch War Office, according to a despatch from the Rotterdam correspondent of The Times.

BASUTOS TO HELP.

King of African Nation Will Levy a Shilling a Man For Funds.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The King of Basutoland has sent King George a deep expression of his loyalty and adds:

"I ask whether, as my King is engaged in fighting his enemies, I, his servant, will be doing well to keep aloof watching his being attacked? As I am unable to be with the King in person, I beg to know whether I may show my loyalty of the Basutos by giving monetary assistance, to be raised by calling on each Basuto to pay the sum of one shilling as a contribution to the funds now being raised for the relief of sufferers.

"The Basutos and myself are grieved at seeing our King attacked by his enemies and that we, his servants, cannot assist him."

This offer has been gratefully accepted.

An expression of loyalty has also been received from Lewanika, chief of the Barotose tribe of Northern Rhodesia.

CRUISER IS SUNK

Russian Warship is a Victim of German Submarine

PETROGRAD, Oct. 13.—An official communication issued yesterday announces that on Oct. 11 the Russian armored cruiser Pallada was torpedoed in the Baltic Sea by a German submarine and sank with her crew.

The text of the communication, which was made public by the Marine Department, follows:

"On Oct. 10 German submarines were sighted in the Baltic Sea. The same day, early in the morning the submarines attacked the cruiser Admiral Makarov, which had stopped to search a suspected bark flying the commercial flag of the Netherlands.

"A submarine of the enemy launched several torpedoes, which luckily missed the mark and caused no damage whatsoever to the cruiser.

"On Oct. 11 at two o'clock in the afternoon the submarines of the enemy again attacked our cruisers Bavan and Pallada, which were patrolling the Baltic.

"Although the cruisers opened in time a very strong fire, one of the submarines succeeded in launching torpedoes against the Pallada, whereupon an explosion resulted and the cruiser with all her crew sank."

The armored cruiser Pallada carried a complement of 568 men. She measured 443 feet and had a displacement of 775 tons. Her speed was 22 knots. With the Admiral Marakov and the Bayan she constituted a group of cruisers known as the "Bayan class."

The Pallada carried two 8-inch guns, eight 6-inch guns, twenty-two 12-pounders and four 3-pounders, in addition to torpedo tubes. She was laid down in 1905.

LONG, BITTER WAR AHEAD

Curzon Says More Than One Christmas Will Pass

BEFORE THE END

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Earl Curzon of Kedleston, formerly Viceroy of India, in a speech made at a war meeting at Harrow School last night, said that the taking of Antwerp was a deliberate part of the German plan.

"Germany has taken Antwerp to fortify it, to keep it, to make a great naval port of it, to use it as a great jumping-off place for her future attempts upon this country. It is no temporary occupation unless we make it so."

The speaker added that by fortifying Antwerp Germany would secure a grip on the whole of Belgium, make Holland play her will, and then settle down to her main object — the destruction of this country. He said Britain was in for a long war, and declared he was shocked that some people should think the hostilities would be over by Christmas. In his opinion more than one Christmas would roll by before the ending of hostilities. In conclusion he advised his hearers not to begin to divide up the German Empire "before you have got hold of it."

Britain's need of more fighting men was emphasised by the announcement last night that the infantry standard, which had been raised to check the great rush of recruits at the outbreak of the war, has again been lowered. The minimum height for recruits, which formerly was 5 feet 6 inches, has been placed at 5 feet 4 inches, and chest measurement from 35 1-2 to 34 1-2 inches.

An appeal has been issued in Glasgow for 2,000 recruits to replace the naval men interned in Holland.

NEWSPAPERS AND THE WAR.

SOME PEOPLE have an erroneous idea that the war means a harvest for the newspapers. As a matter of fact, the war has hit the newspapers as hard as any business, perhaps harder than any. The cost of the telegraph service has been increased three to five times the usual cost. The few extra papers sold on the street are a negligible quantity. "Extras" always cost more than the revenue derived from their sale. Bills are harder to collect, business has decreased just the same as in other lines of work. More work is required of editors and reporters, while the price of paper has been greatly increased. In short, the war has meant that the newspapers have to give more reading matter to the public and receive less revenue at the same time. That is one of the effects of the war, and the newspapers are endeavoring to meet the situation with as good a service as it is possible to give. When trade improves in other lines, the business side of newspapers will also improve. The newspapers are thus directly affected by the war, and are not thriving on its evil consequences — they are merely endeavouring to weather the storm.

QUEEN'S WILL SUPPLY LECTURERS.

THE CANADIAN CLUB is making arrangements to bring a number of lecturers to Peterborough to speak on the war. In this regard we are informed that Queen's University, as well as Toronto, is willing to offer speakers in their University Extension service, and the local organization should arrange for some lectures. We understand that Dean Cappon, Professors Skelton and Grant are available. These men are well known and in conjunction with the men from Toronto University, a very interesting and attractive series of lectures should be available for the people of this city.

GERMAN BRUTALITY.

ONE of the things difficult to credit has been the charge of brutality against the Germans. Col. Mason, in a recent address, gave the following concrete cases, which show the bitterness with which the Germans are prosecuting the war:

Letter to G. M. Black, Winnipeg, describing the fate of a relation (Captain Buckle, of the Royal Artillery): "Captain Buckle was wounded in both legs by bursting shrapnel. He was lying in an agony of pain when he was discovered by some German officers. They stooped over him—not to administer aid and comfort, but actually to cut the tendons of his right wrist, with the obvious intention of disabling him permanently."

Letter to James Pettit, York Road, Guelph, from an aunt in Stratford Terrace, Leeds, England: "We have in our house to care for, a little Belgian girl, aged eight, who had both her hands chopped off by German soldiers. Her brother, a little younger, was treated the same, so he would never be able to handle a rifle."

Letter to Mrs. Cheesman, St. James, Winnipeg, relating to Harold Hawkins, of the Sussex Regiment, now in a hospital in Sussex: "Private Hawkins was left on the battlefield wounded, and as he lay on the ground he could see the German soldiers going over the field clubbing and bayonetting the wounded in the thigh, and when reached, the officer in charge, seeing that his condition was not serious, drew his sword and, with his own hand, hacked off the soldier's hands at the wrist, and then left him, bleeding and unconscious, on the field. He was later rescued by British Red Cross men and sent with other wounded to England."

Letter to Andrew Dods, barrister, Toronto, from Whyteleaf, Surrey, England: "There must be no stopping of the war until the Germans are wiped out. It must be, for they are devils. Here in our cottage hospital is a soldier who was wounded in the thigh, and when he was lying wounded had his eyes put out by a German Uhlan."

Miss Hanson, daughter of the pastor of the Erskine Presbyterian church, Montreal, on her return from London, quotes the statement of the matron of a London hospital that thirteen English nurses serving at the front had their two hands cut off by German soldiers, and that the nurses were being treated in the hospital with which she was connected.

Of general statements, Harold M. Sewall, an ex-United States minister to Germany, makes public a letter from a personal friend who at first disbelieved in these atrocities, and who now wrote, after investigation, that the treatment of women and girls was "beyond description in their inconceivable horror." Of the destruction meted out to the Belgian towns and villages, and their unfortunate inhabitants, something is known. Jo. H. Whitehouse, a British M.P., visited the one-time beautiful Termonde and states that its destruction—as in other cases—was not due to bombardment or siege; "in each house a separate bomb had been placed, which had blown up the interior and set fire to the contents. All that remained in every case were portions of the outer walls."

This evidence does not read like fiction—would that it did. It means that Britain, the Empire and the Allies must leave no stone unturned to insure the decisive defeat of German huns.

CANADIAN BOOTS.

JUST AFTER the war broke out a Canadian bootmaking firm got an order from the Canadian Government to make 40,000 pairs of boots for the army. The manager of the company, making a speech to the employes, gave some good advice, to show what every worker might do to make sure that every boot that went on a Canadian soldier's foot in Europe was as good as any other part of his equipment. He showed that a poorly filled sole, a rotten counter in the heel, a badly-sewn seam or a defective arch might spoil a soldier's efficiency in the field. In view of the fact that the war is teaching us all to be soldiers one way or another, suppose we apply a little of this bootmaking philosophy to the boots we wear in everyday life. A man is known by the boots he wears. Looking over the honor roll of boots past and present—probably made in Canada—how do they compare for efficiency with the things bought from other countries?

Some have been excellent, some middling, others quite poor. But what is important is that conditions are changing and the better class of shoes should predominate. We have contended for this before, that Canada is a place possessing all the requirements necessary for the production of the highest class of footwear, not in price so much as in general all round quality. There should be an end to the saying that American shoes are superior to Canadian shoes. Now that the world is at war and countries like Canada are thrown more on their own resources, it is very necessary that the people should give added support to goods made in Canada or in the Empire. If manufacturers of shoes for the retail trade produce goods on the standard required for the Canadian soldiers' shoes, we should have as good shoes made here as in any part of the world. Manufacturers should see that there is no valid argument against buying Canadian made goods.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A LINDSAY PAPER says the Peterborough Board of Trade wrongly claimed the credit for getting the early mixed train from Toronto, that this was due to the Lindsay deputation, and that the Toronto Globe thanked the committee for its work. If the Peterborough Board of Trade has to plagiarize another board to give the impression that it is doing something, it is getting pretty hard up. But, any way, getting an early mixed train from Toronto is no chef d'oeuvre to howl about either in Lindsay or Peterborough.

CANADIANS are advised by the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, to gather their own flower seeds this year, or at least conserve them owing to the fact that a large quantity of flower seed was imported from Germany. As the war has interrupted the trade in this commodity, supplies in Canada will not likely be nearly so large as formerly, and prices may be much advanced, while in some lines seed may be impossible to obtain.

THIS apple campaign embraces the dried variety, too. Eat them for breakfast, drink water for lunch, and have a swell dinner.—Montreal News. That means, of course, that you won't need any supper.

War and Bars.

(Montreal Journal of Commerce.)

Saskatchewan has just passed an order in council forbidding the discussion of war in bar-rooms. Apparently the government feels that a discussion of the war by the polyglot westerners might result in a series of miniature combats which would rival in intensity, if not in magnitude, the great battle now being fought on the Aisne. It is undoubtedly a wise restriction to make. Men befogged by liquor are never any too friendly, and it would only add to the difficulties of race assimilation if a lot of ill-feeling were engendered because of the war. Canada is the melting pot of the races, and we are anxious that the different people who come to our shores would develop into good Canadians and not keep up the racial and religious differences which characterized them in the old lands.

The Matter of Initials.

(Exchange.)

During the Boer war a corporal installed himself in an empty shack which promised to afford more comfort than his water-logged tent. An hour or two later an orderly arrived with the information that the G.O.C. wanted the house at once. "You can tell the G.O.C. that he can G.T.H.," said the indignant corporal, who was not up on initials. It was not long before a guard put in an appearance and escorted the corporal to headquarters, where Smith-Dorrien sternly asked him what he meant by sending an insulting message to the general officer commanding. Light thereupon dawned on the corporal, who promptly replied that no insult was intended; that the reply he sent back was that the G.O.C. can Get The House.

What a Canadian Did.

(Guelph Herald.)

When Victoria, Australia, wanted a man to take charge of its state railways, it took from the Canadian Pacific one of its leading spirits in the person of Sir Thomas Tait. The railways of the state were then at their lowest ebb. For many years the government had faced a heavy deficit, and experts said success was impossible. In four years he turned a deficit of $2,000,000 into a surplus of $1,000,000, besides paying off liabilities of $3,000,000, and reducing freight rates.

The Unemployed Problem.

(Canadian Municipal Journal.)

A concerted and determined effort on the part of the civic authorities to grapple with the unemployed problem, calling in the assistance of the business men, would only end in good results. Most of the men out of work are citizens of some community, and it is the bounden duty of the powers to see that means are found to give employment to those who are in want of it.

WASTED MEN

By Walt Mason

The war goes on, there is no sign of peace; no seer can say when gory strife shall cease; no gifted prophet, in his spangled robe, can send a dove around the weary globe; the guns still roar, the captains march and slay, men's lives, like threshed out chaff, are thrown away. The young men die, in battle, siege and rout; who knows what genius has been blotted out? Perhaps a Shakespeare lies among the slain, born to the bays, and born, alas, in vain! Full many a youth, with bright resplendent dreams, gives his warm blood to swell the crimson streams which moisten Europe, till their mists arise, and spread a veil of red across the skies. The youth and genius of the warring lands, with foolish weapons in their artist hands, are carving flesh, who should be carving stone, are wielding swords, when brushes are their own. Alas, what waste, what sinful waste of men, to prove the sword is mightier than the pen!

Hogs.

Selects, $8.25, fed and watered; $7.90 f.o.b. cars, and $8.50 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Oct. 12.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, the feature of today's trade was the weaker feeling for cattle, and prices declined 25c per 100 pounds, which was attributed to the increased receipts. There was a fairly good demand from packers and butchers for good to choice steers, and a fair trade was done in these grades, full loads of the former selling at $7.50 to $7.75, and of the latter at $8 to $8.25. The demand for medium and lower grades was somewhat limited, as buyers seemed to be well supplied. Sales of round lots of bulls were made at $4.65 to $5; and cows at $2.65 to $3.25 per 100 pounds.

The weak feeling which has characterized the market for live hogs for the past few weeks still continues to be the main feature of the provision market, and prices have declined 25c to 50c per cwt. since this day week. The supply was smaller than a week ago. The demand from packers was fair and sales of selected lots were made at $9, cows at $7 and stags at $4.50 per cwt. weighed off cars.

The feature of the small meat market was the weaker feeling in sheep, and prices declined 25c per cwt., which was attributed to the increased supplies coming forward. Lambs were firm. Ewes sold at $5.25 to $5.50, and bucks and culls at $4.75 to $5 per cwt. Lambs sold at $7.25 to $7.50 for Ontario and $6.75 to $7 per cwt. for Quebec stock. The supply of good to choice milk-fed calves was small, for which there was a good demand, and prices ruled firm at 7c to 8c per pound, live weight.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 12.—Cattle—Receipts 6000; slow; prime steers, $9.50 to $10; shipping, $8.50 to $9.25; butchers, $7 to $8.75; heifers, $6 to $8; cows, $4 to $7.25; bulls, $5 to $7.25; stockers and feeders, $6 to $7.50; stock heifers, $5 to $6.75.

Veals—Receipts 1900; active; $5 to $12.

Hogs—Receipts 19,200; active; heavy and mixed, $8.50 to $8.55; yorkers, $8.25 to $8.50; pigs, $8.25; roughs, $7.25 to $7.40; stags, $6.50 to $7.25.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts 14,000; sheep slow; lambs active; lambs, $5.50 to $7.90; yearlings, $4.50 to $6.50; wethers, $5.75 to $6; ewes, $2.90 to $5.50; sheep, mixed, $5.50 to $5.75.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—Cattle—Receipts, 23,000; market, steady; beeves, $6.50 to $10.90; Texas steers, $6.15 to $9.10; stockers and feeders, $5.30 to $8.30; cows and heifers, $3.40 to $9.10; calves, $7.50 to $11.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 24,000; market, steady; light, $7.35 to $8.00; mixed, $7.30 to $8.05; heavy, $7.05 to $8.20; rough, $7.05 to $7.20; pigs, $4.75 to $8; bulk of sales, $7.40 to $8.

Crockford's Wife

By SADIE OLCOTT

One day a man named Crockford went to his bank, drew $500 and was about to go out when he stopped and said to the paying teller:

"Look right over my shoulder. You see that young Italian looking fellow with a striped waistcoat and felt hat with a fancy band? Well, when I got through counting the money you paid me I turned suddenly and caught the fellow looking at the bills with a covetous expression on his face. You know that there are a lot of robberies committed by persons seeing some one draw money from a bank."

"Why don't you call a policeman to see you home or wherever you are going?"

"Because I don't believe I shall die till my time comes, and when it does nothing can save me."

The disappearance of Stephen Crockford was one of the great mysteries of the close of the nineteenth century. The police had a very strong clew, but were unable to follow it. A bank clerk gave them the incident that has been told above, and they did not doubt that the Italian had murdered Crockford, but when or where or what had been done with the body they failed to discover. The only other clew in the matter was furnished by Mrs. Crockford. Her husband when coming home from the city often made a short cut over a path through a wood. She searched the wood and in a part so thick that few ever went into it she found the remains of a fire, and some wood corded near had visibly diminished. In the ashes she found some bits of bone and burned flesh. She picked up also an unburned piece of a man's cuff. This she took to a laundry where her husband was used to having his collars and cuffs laundered, and the mark on it was identified as having been put on a cuff belonging to the missing man. This, indicating that the body had been burned in the thicket, ended the information concerning the disposition of Mr. Crockford's body. The police, getting no further clew, gave up the case.

Crockford was financial man for Englehart & Co., importers of Japanese goods. Mrs. Crockford after her husband's disappearance went to the head of the firm and asked for a position by which she might support herself. She was taken into his private office, where she was informed that a sum was missing from the firm's cash and her husband was suspected of having taken it. He had been seen a day or two before his disappearance in company with a blond woman not his wife. Mr. Englehart believed that Crockford was not dead, but had fled with the blond woman.

On hearing this recital Mrs. Crockford fell on the floor in a faint. So great was the sympathy of Mr. Englehart that he agreed to employ her on the books, she having some knowledge of bookkeeping. She became the assistant of John Hardwick, who had been her husband's assistant. Since the latter's disappearance Hardwick had been promoted to be the financial man of the firm.

A year passed, during which nothing was heard of Crockford. Mrs. Crockford was complained of by Hardwick for inefficiency several times and at last notified the firm that she must leave or he would do so himself. She was informed of the fact and told that since Hardwick was an excellent accountant and willing to work for a mere tithe of what he was worth they had decided that she must go. She asked to be kept till the end of the month, and her request was granted.

One evening Mrs. Crockford telephoned Mr Englehart that Hardwick was a defaulter and about to take to flight. She begged that Hardwick be arrested or kept in sight. Englehart discredited the information, but put a watch on Hardwick.

The next morning who should appear at Englehart & Co.'s office but Mr. and Mrs. Crockford. They begged to be admitted to the private room of the head of the firm, and there they let in on his brain a flood of information.

Shortly before Crockford disappeared he told his wife that Hardwick was a defaulter, but had trapped him (Crockford) into a position wherein there was excellent evidence that he was the thief. He was every day expecting arrest.

Mrs. Crockford arranged for her husband's disappearance. She dined with him at a public restaurant made up with a blond wig and enameled complexion. She was the Italian who had watched him at the bank. She had taken the wood that had disappeared and burned most of it in her fireplace. With the rest she burned some pieces of meat and bone. The cuff she had partly burned and rubbed the remainder in ashes. Her fainting when informed of her husband's villainy and infidelity was feigned. She had asked for a position with a view to destroying the evidence Hardwick had cooked up against her husband and getting evidence in turn against Hardwick.

The lady who had executed this delicate work was presented with a handsome sum by the firm, and her husband was put back in his position.

The police, who had been beaten in their own detective field by a woman were incredulous of the explanation they received. As to the courts, in which Crockford would have been convicted if tried—courts do not feel.

Kitchen Kinks

Keeping Food Fresh.

Salads should be washed (or wiped, if this is found sufficient) and then left in a colander in an airy cool place until wanted. A cloth should be placed over the top of the colander. Cucumbers placed stalk end in a jug of water will keep fresher than if placed on a cool stone or slab.

Fleshy fruit should not be piled up in a dish until the last possible moment, but spread out in a cool place so that one piece scarcely touches another.

Milk should be covered by means of a muslin bag held tight by a rubber band, while butter should be kept in a covered ventilated dish and placed in a pan of salted water.

If any suspicion is entertained regarding the freshness of meat or fish, it is well to cook some at once, as cooked food will keep in better condition than raw. Should the meat not be required the same day it is well to partially cook it over night.

It should be remembered that if mildew attacks a dish such as jelly the whole of it is tainted, although the mildew may be visible only in places, and therefore such food is unfit for consumption.

Use For Small Grapes.

Use up small grapes for making grape jam or grape butter. A delicious jam that is almost a jelly is made as follows:

Measure the fruit and allow one pound of sugar to the same weight of grapes. Put the latter over the fire in a preserving pan with very little water. Cook gently for nearly an hour, then press through a colander to remove seeds and skins. Dissolve the sugar in the strained juice and put over the fire again. Cook gently until it begins to jell. When it drops from the spoon and forms a jelly the preserve is done. Skim during the cooking, if found necessary, and when cooked turn into glasses and seal.

Grape butter is made in very much the same way, except that half a pound of sugar only is allowed to each pound of fruit, and the mixture is cooked down until it is very thick and dark. It should be stirred very frequently and canned while hot.

Uses For Extra Milk.

Surplus milk may be used in many ways.

Skimmed milk answers as well as any milk for soups and doughs when fat is also used. Even if otherwise likely to curdle in heating the addition of a little cooking soda makes it possible to scald milk, and then it may be used for custards, puddings, etc. Sour milk is available for doughs and cheese, and cream may be substituted for butter and milk in simpler cakes and cookies.

Another method of using sour milk is to strain it when it is quite thick into a small muslin bag. Tie a piece of string around the top of the bag and hang it in the air in the shade to drip. At the end of three or more days, according to the quantity of milk used, an uncommonly dainty cheese will have been produced without effort.

Cheap Cuts of Meat.

In the preparation of cheap cuts of meat brown the meat first in a hot spider or kettle for flavor and sear the surface so that the juices may be retained in the meat.

Some scraps of fat may be browned and onion sliced and fried in the fat, an equal mixture of flour added, and when it is mixed smoothly with the fat water is put in to make thin gravy.

The meat is then put in and left covered on the back of the stove, and later vegetables and seasoning are added, or they may be put in with the meat, seasoned, covered and boiled five minutes and put at once into the fireless cooker and left several hours or all day. Long, slow cooking is the only rule for good results.

Testing the Oven.

A useful and simple test to try the heat of an oven is by means of a piece of white paper. If too hot the paper when placed in the oven will blaze up or blacken. When the paper becomes dark brown, the color of meat pie crust, then the oven is suitable for small pastry. When light brown, the color of real nice pastry, then the oven is ready for pies, etc. When the paper turns dark yellow you can bake bread, large meat pies or large pound cakes. If the paper is just tinged the oven is right for sponge cakes and meringues. The temperature of an oven may be easily reduced while cooking by placing a bowl of water in it.

Keeping Grapes Fresh.

Select large, nice bunches of grapes, carefully pick out any that are unsound and wipe dry. Warm a can of sealing wax, take each bunch separately and dip the stem in warm wax, not hot, and lay on the table for the wax to harden. Now get a clean, dry box, place a layer of paper in the bottom, then a layer of grapes, another layer of paper, and so on until the box is filled. Keep cool and dry. They may be kept for a long time.

Toast With Vegetables.

When vegetables have been strained and are ready to be put in the dish, if a piece of dry toast is laid on the bottom of the dish first the remaining water will be absorbed by the time they are served.

NEURALGIA SETTLED IN HER LUNGS

No Relief From The Pain Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

CAMPBELLVILLE, ONT., MAY 5th. 1913.

"I cannot speak too highly of "Fruit-a-tives". For over thirty years, I have suffered from chronic Neuralgia and Constipation, experiencing untold agony. The Neuralgia settled in my lungs and I took bottles of medicine without relief. The doctor told me I would not get better but "Fruit-a-tives" proved that the doctor was wrong by giving me quick relief and finally and completely curing me.

"I would not have my present health if it were not for "Fruit-a-tives" and I am glad of this opportunity of giving you this letter about such a splendid remedy as "Fruit-a-tives".

For the Children

Street Arabs at Play In a New York Park.

Lined up, ready for a trial of speed, in East River park, New York city, are these three little barebacked boys. Their lack of clothes is not so much because they have no shirts as because they had just emerged from a swim when the idea of a foot race was proposed. So they determined to make the trial without the impediment of useless apparel. That was when the camera man caught them. Beside them stood a policeman, who cannot be seen in the picture, and he gave the word "Go." It was a short race and quickly over, and doubtless the speediest lad won. But of that the photographer has no record. They all were far ahead of him at the finish line.

Story of the Colors.

Nearly every one thinks that red is a lucky color. It means love, courage and victory. The red stripes in our flag mean bravery.

The god Thor chose it for his color and sent red streaks of lightning through black clouds to show that he was more powerful than the darkness.

Some Indian chiefs paint their faces red when they are victorious in battle.

Green is the color of the early spring. Some people call it a magic color because they think it is the color of the fairies, who do not like people to wear it. Green is the national color of the Irish, who admire it very much, but the Scotch do not like to wear it because they think it brings bad luck.

Yellow is the sign of the sun because it is bright and pure. The Chinese hold it sacred and use it for charms against disease. In Egypt it is the color of mourning and death because the leaves get yellow before they fall from the trees.

Blue is the color of the clear sky, the water and the ocean. With the druids it was a holy color. It is the sign of affection and truth. The blue in our flag stands for truth.

Black is absence of color, and some say white is a combination of all colors.

Fie!

"I'm afraid," said Mrs. Twickenbury, "that the young people of the present day are too much inclined to indulge in sectarian amusements on Sunday."—Christian Register.

Home Pickling

Cucumber Pickles—Make a brine of salt and water that will float a fresh egg. Wash 500 small cucumbers and cover with this brine for 24 hours. Wipe the pickles and pack in vinegar to scalding, add one-fourth pound of white mustard seed, one ounce of whole allspice, one-fourth pound of mixed spices. Pour this over the pickles. If packing in small jars it is best to mix the spices evenly by dividing into as many portions as there are jars, and dropping the spices in as the pickles are packed. In addition to the above use six small red peppers and six buds of garlic for the 500 pickles.

Cucumber Catsup—Chop very fine four ripe yellow cucumbers, two dozen small white onions, three red peppers. Sprinkle with salt and let stand over night. Drain and then pack in jars. Cover with hot vinegar to which is added one ounce each of whole cloves and whole allspice.

Mixed Chopped Pickles — Chop fine enough green cucumbers to make one quart, add two quarts of chopped cabbage, twelve small onions chopped, one quart of green tomatoes chopped, one quart of chopped green beans and twelve sharp green peppers. Sprinkle with salt and let stand half a day. Drain and put in jars. Cover with hot vinegar. In packing the pickle distribute the following spices evenly: Two tablespoons of grated horseradish, three tablespoons of turmeric, one tablespoon each of ground cinnamon, ground mace, cayenne and celery seed, three tablespoons of olive oil, one cup of white mustard seed and one cup of sugar. It is best the mix the turmeric and sugar and dissolve in the vinegar.

Mustard Pickle—Slice cucumbers to make one quart, and the same amount of green tomatoes. Separate one large head of cauliflower into bits, chop four green peppers quite fine and peel one quart of small onions. Make a brine of one-eighth as much salt by measure as water. Mix the vegetables and cover with the brine for 24 hours. Bring all this to the boiling point next morning and drain well. Mix one cup of flour, six tablespoons of ground mustard and one tablespoon of turmeric with cold vinegar to make a paste. Add one cup of sugar and the remaining vinegar from two quarts. Heat the vinegar till it is well thickened, stirring to keep smooth. Add the vegetables and allow to become just heated through and then seal.

Declares Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her Life and Sanity.

Shamrock, Mo.—"I feel it my duty to tell the public the condition of my health before using your medicine. I had falling, inflammation and congestion, female weakness, pains in both sides, backaches and bearing down pains, was short of memory, nervous, impatient, passed sleepless nights, and had neither strength nor energy. There was always a fear and dread in my mind, I had cold, nervous, weak spells, hot flashes over my body. I had a place in my right side that was so sore that I could hardly bear the weight of my clothes. I tried medicines and doctors, but they did me little good, and I never expected to get out again. I got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and I certainly would have been in grave or in an asylum if your medicines had not saved me. But now I can work all day, sleep well at night, eat anything I want, have no hot flashes or weak, nervous spells. All pains, aches, fears and dreads are gone, my house, children and husband are no longer neglected, as I am almost entirely free of the bad symptoms I had before taking your remedies, and all is pleasure and happiness in my home."—Mrs. JOSIE HAM, R. F. D. 1, Box 22, Shamrock, Missouri.

RUSSIANS FORCED TO GIVE UP SIEGE OF PRZEMYSL FORTRESS IS RELIEVED

Fighting Has Begun Along Vistula River Near Warsaw, According to Russian Advices—Gen. Rennenkampf is Now Before Koenigsberg Menacing Danzig-Thorn Line After Weeks of Hard Fighting.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The following official statement was issued last night by the chief of the general staff in Petrograd:

"On Oct. 11 fighting began on the left bank of the Vistula, in the direction of Ivangorod and Warsaw.

"There is no change at other points on our front.

"Detachments of Russian cavalry, having passed through the defiles in the Carpathian Mountains, have emerged into the plains of Hungary."

An earlier statement announced the abandonment of the siege of Przemysl for strategic reasons.

From the east came tidings of a decided reversal in form, the despatches both from Vienna and Petrograd indicating that the Austrian army at Przemysl, so often reported surrounded, hopelessly outclassed and on the verge of surrender, had, with the aid of reinforcements turned on the Russians and forced them to retreat.

The first news of this claim emanated during the morning from the Austrian capital. It was followed later in the way by what purports to be a Petrograd admission that the Russians had abandoned the siege of Przemysl for strategical reasons, with the object of drawing up a new line against the Austro-German army in other points of Galicia.

Whatever be the truth of the situation the Russians have been claiming an unbroken series of victories in their sweep through Galicia, and the coincidence of yesterday's despatches, supplemented as they were by more circumstantial accounts from Vienna of a vigorous Austro-German offensive seemed to presage important news.

The most reliable report indicates that Gen. Rennenkampf is now before Koenigsberg, menacing the Danzig-Thorn line of forts. These names are familiar and were featured daily some weeks ago when the Russian advance first drove into East Prussia. But Gen. Von Hindenberg won a victory at Allenstein, which forced back the Czar's legions. It has taken weeks of persistent fighting to recover the lost ground, the last phase of this movement developing in a series of operations in the Russian Province of Suwalki, where the Germans suffered heavily. Their armies have recovered poise again, however, and are offering a stubborn resistance all along this front.

The Russian centre has made slight but progressive advances toward Breslau, and are gradually forcing their opponents back. On the Vistula German arms appear to be successful, and the Russians are fighting desperately to affect a passage of that river. In fact, the situation in Galicia and southwestern Poland cannot be judged accurately because of the strict censorship. But desperate fighting is under way and the result appears to be very doubtful, with the advantage turning to the Austro-German forces.

The official German statement of yesterday has the following to say of the eastern operations:

"From Vienna we have reports that in the face of heavy destruction Russia has given up the attempt to take the besieged fortress of Przemysl.

"The Austrian army defeated six Russian divisions near Lancut and routed one Cossack division east of Nymaso."

MORE BOMBS FOR PARIS

Second Raid in Twenty-four Hours Terrifies Citizens

PARIS, Oct. 13.—Paris was attacked again yesterday by a German bomb-dropping aeroplane, the second aerial raid over the city within twenty-four hours, and as a result of the fight the population is in terror and is demanding that the French aerial blockade be strengthened.

The ease with which the German aviator penetrated to a point over Paris and dropped two bombs on the Northern Railroad station, so soon after Saturday's raid by two machines which scattered twenty bombs, killing three and wounding fourteen persons, has roused the people to a realization that their overhead danger is constant and unprevented by the French Aviation Corps.

Following Sunday morning's raid by two German aeroplanes, when the Cathedral of Notre Dame was struck by one of the falling bombs, all of the aerial craft defending Paris was made ready for instant action. Despite these preparations a German aeroplane swooped over Paris at 9.15 yesterday morning and dropped two bombs between two crowded railroad trains which were leaving the Northern Railroad station.

SPIES ACTIVE

Beresford Urges Drastic Measures in Britain

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Notwithstanding the reassuring statement issued by the Home Office last Thursday to the effect that the spy system established by Germany in this country has been completely broken up, Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, retired, is convinced that it still exists and constitutes a grave menace to the safety of the country.

In a letter published yesterday, Lord Charles calls upon his countrymen "to take strong action with regard to the crowd of alien enemies in our midst." He urges that "meetings be held in every town, and that resolutions be adopted protesting against the present state of affairs and sent to the Prime Minister."

Russian Campaign Veiled.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 13.—The battle which began Saturday on the western border of Poland equals the battle in France on the Aisne in extent and may equal it in length of time. The numbers of the opposing armies are as great as in the western theatre of war.

Semi-official intimations that secrecy is needed for the success of the Russian operations have been published and no information as to the tremendous conflict now taking place has been given out.

Montenegrin Attack Ragusa.

ROME, Oct. 13.—The Montenegrin columns are before Ragusa, an Austrian city on the coast of Dalmatia, according to a despatch from Cettinje. The fall of the city is believed imminent.

The despatch declares that in a battle Friday at Sarayevo the Austrians were defeated. They again attacked at Kalimoski and lost their baggage train and a number of quick-firers.

Germans Claim Victory.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 13.—An official announcement from military headquarters in Berlin says that the German cavalry defeated a French cavalry division near Hazebrouck.

The fighting along the front is still without definite result. In the western theatre of war, all attacks on the First and Tenth Corps have been repulsed.

Kaiser Still Finds Believers in His Mission

LONDON, Oct. 13.—It is asserted that the Kaiser has sent the following proclamation to his army in East Prussia:

"The Holy Spirit has descended upon me. As the German Emperor, I am the instrument of the Most High. I am the sword and the rod. Woe and death be unto those who resist my will and who do not believe in my mission. Woe and death unto all cowards and enemies. The German God demands their destruction. God, through me, commands you to fulfil His will."

GREAT BATTLE OF BELGIUM WILL EXTEND 300 MILES

After Taking Antwerp German Forces Are Making a Desperate Effort to Get to Ostend and Are Reported to Have Occupied Ghent—Activity is Reported Near Verdun and Soissons on Line in France.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Both sides are bending every energy for the campaign that will decide the fate of Ostend. The possession of this port would be of immense advantage to Germany, of much greater significance than the capture of Antwerp. To drive the assault home the Germans are undoubtedly bringing up every available man, both from Antwerp and such points as their centre and left can spare. Opposing these will be an equally allied army, made up largely, it is rumored, of fresh British, Indian and Canadian troops. The battle may open at any moment and will probably be long and bloody.

A Central News despatch from Amsterdam says a troop of German cavalry entered Ghent yesterday morning and the German colors were hoisted over the Town Hall.

Uhlans have also arrived at Selzaete, a short distance from Ghent, and the commander announced that 4,000 soldiers must be quartered in the village.

The whole German front is preparing to take the offensive again along a battle line no less than 300 miles long.

German cavalry has advanced within thirty miles of Ostend; Ghent is threatened by the invaders; Uhlans, screening a heavy Prussian force, have been encountered all through the territory west of Lille.

The first activity of any importance on the centre of the opposing armies that has occurred in some days took place yesterday north of Soissons and east and southwest of Verdun. The French field guns opened on the German trenches in that region and kept up a steady play on their opponents for several hours. Then the French infantry advanced with a rush, and there was a hurculean combat for possession of the trenches. The Germans fought with their usual determination, but were compelled to cede ground at certain points. North of Soissons the French won positions of value. The enemy was also thrown back from elevated posts before Verdun, where preparations were under way by the Germans to essay a new artillery attack on the fortress.

Between Lassigny and Roye, where the allies won considerable ground Sunday, the Germans fought with great valor yesterday in an effort to retrieve the positions lost. But allied reinforcements had come up in the night, and the advantage of Sunday was pushed home, making an appreciable inroad into territory held by the Kaiser's men.

The capture of Apremont by the French is regarded as a great tactical victory. This point covers the German line of communications into Lorraine and would be an effective obstacle to a retreat of the German forces now at St. Mihiel.

In Northern France and Southern Belgium great events are transpiring. Cavalry engagements continue to be the outstanding feature of the fighting, large forces of mounted troops participating on both sides.

French Statement.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—Continuation of the activity in the north of France, and repulses of the Germans between Lassigny and Roye are reported in the official statement given out yesterday afternoon by the War Office. The statement follows:

"On our left wing the cavalry engagements continue in the region of La Bassee, Estieros and Bazbrouck. Between Arras and the Oise the enemy has attempted numerous attacks which have been repulsed, notably between Lassigny and Roye.

"In the centre we have made some progress on the plateaus on the right bank of the River Aisne, before Soissons and to the east and southeast of Verdun.

"On our right wing, in the Vosges, the enemy has made a night attack in the region of Bam de Sapt, to the north od St. Die, but repulsed."

"The flag captured yesterday belonged to the 6th Regiment of Pomeranian Infantry, No. 49, of the 2nd Prussian Army Corps.

"The fusileer brigade was engaged on the 9th and until the morning of the 10th against German forces, which it repulsed, inflicting serious losses. Two hundred Germans were killed and 50 made prisoners. The French losses were 9 killed, 9 wounded and one man missing.

"In Belgium, according to the latest information received from Antwerp, the Germans occupy only the outskirts of the city, the 24 forts on both banks of the Escaut river resisting energetically.

"In Russia the battle on the East Prussian frontier continues with desperate fighting. To the northwest of Lyck the Germans are in retreat, having destroyed the bridges in Southern Poland between Ivangorod and Sandomir. Artillery duels are in progress with the enemy's columns that have reached the Vistula."

The following official statement was given out last night:

"There is nothing in particular to report.

"Violent attacks have occurred along the front. We have gained ground at some points and we have not lost any at any place."

PLEDGED TO GIVE UP LIFE

In Attempt to Repel Zeppelin Raid on London

LONDON, Oct. 13. — It was announced by Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, at a patriotic meeting in Kingsway Hall here Saturday night that "if Zeppelins raid London all the members of the British flying corps have pledged themselves to dash their machines right through the airships even if both are brought to earth."

"Anyone passing through London," continued the speaker, "can see that we expect a visit by German aircraft."

"The British aeroplanes have proved to be more than equal to those of the German Government," says the Paris correspondent of The Times. "Especial success has been scored with the new type of British aeroplane called the 'Chaser,' which is capable of developing a speed of 150 miles an hour, and which can rise from the ground at a very sharp angle."

THREE LIVES LOST

Railway Engineer One of the Fatally Injured

MONTREAL, Oct. 13.—Three men were killed and two injured in an accident which occurred about eleven o'clock Sunday morning on the National Transcontinental construction work northwest of La Tuque. The scene of the accident is remote from here, the nearest communication point being Harvey Junction, where the National Transcontinental line crosses the Canadian Northern on the way to Quebec. One of the men killed was Mr. A. H. Johnston, a railway engineer, of Westmount.

Heavy Loss In Explosion.

LONDON, Oct. 13. — A hundred people were killed or injured in Lisbon, Portugal, Saturday night by an explosion at the Lisbon Gas Works, according to a despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from the Portuguese capital. The explosion caused a fire in which the staff of the gas works was trapped. Several tram car passengers and pedestrians were among the victims.

LAST RITES GIVEN SAN GUILIANO

Italian Foreign Minister is Near Death

ROME, Oct. 13.—Minister of Foreign Affairs Di San Giuliano has received his last sacrament and the attending physicians say death is imminent."

Marquis Antonio Di San Giuliano was born in Catania, Dec. 9, 1852. He was appointed senator March 4, 1905. He has served as ambassador in London and Paris several times. He was postmaster-general from May of 1899 to June of 1900 and was Minister of Foreign Affairs in the Cabinet, headed by Fortis, from Dec. 24, 1905, till Feb. 8, 1906. He was again Secretary of Foreign Affairs from the date just mentioned until March 31, 1911, this time in the Cabinet headed by Luzzatti, and again Secretary of the same Department from the last mentioned date till March of the present year in the Cabinet headed by Giolitti, and was again appointed Secretary of Foreign Affairs in the present Cabinet, headed by Salandra.

San Giuliano is strongly pro-German and his death may result in a sharp change in Italy's position.

Ghent Citizens Flee.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 13. — A despatch from Ghent states that the skirmishing which took place Sunday was more southerly and westerly than it was on Saturday. A Zeppelin appeared over Audenarde Sunday and proceeded in the direction of Brussels.

Five hundred Germans encamped at Sottenhem have destroyed the railway bridges at Audenhove, St. Marie, Lierre and Grammont.

The inhabitants of Ghent are commencing their flight toward the Dutch frontier.

NEW KING SWORN IN

King Ferdinand Succeeds Charles of Roumania

LONDON, Oct. 13.—King Ferdinand of Roumania, in the presence of the members of the royal family, the diplomatic corps and other notables, took the oath of office Sunday in succession to his late uncle, King Charles, according to a despatch from Bucharest by way of Amsterdam to the Central News Agency. King Charles died at his country seat in Sinaia on Saturday.

The new King announced the intention of directing his labors to the development of the state.

Prussian Losses 211,000.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The forty-four lists of losses in the Prussian army which have been published, contain a total of 211,000 killed, wounded and missing, according to a Reuter despatch from Amsterdam.

The list do not include losses among the Bavarians, Saxons and Wurtemburgers.

Western Farmers Do Well.

REGINA, Oct. 13. — The business scare, which seized Canadian cities and towns at the outbreak of the war, seems to have been overcome in many cities, including Regina. The farmers are selling their wheat without difficulty and are realizing prices far in advance of those of last year.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—A Havas Agency despatch from Venice says that 27 cases of cholera were reported in Austria on Oct. .

Germany Calling Everybody.

LONDON, Oct. 13. — It is semi-officially announced at Petrograd, according to a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from the Russian capital that owing to the great losses sustained by the German armies all officers and non-commissioned officers who ever have been in the army are ordered to rejoin the colors without regard to age.

Belfort Fears Bombardment.

LONDON, Oct. 13. — The Daily Mail's Amsterdam correspondent says Berlin newspapers are distributing posters announcing that the civil population is leaving Belfort (a French fortified town in the so-called territory of Belfort, in fear of a bombardment.

A Difficult Lesson.

"It is next to impossible for a man to teach a pretty girl how to whistle," said a musician who is a good whistler.

"How is that?" he was asked.

"Well, providing she is not your wife or sister, when a pretty girl gets her lips properly puckered she usually looks so bewitchingly tempting that he kisses her, and the consequence is she doesn't have a chance to blow a note."

Letters For the Front.

GARAGE, CAR AND SHED DAMAGED

Lightning Supposed to Have Started Blaze at Ald. Stratton's House

Fire Saturday night at the residence of Ald. A. H. Stratton, Park street, gutted the garage, almost completely destroyed an automobile and also damaged the residence.

The damage caused to the garage was $800, to the automobile $1,500 and to the house $200. The loss is covered by insurance.

The fire broke out shortly after the fierce lightning storm, and it is supposed the lightning caused the blaze.

Ald. Stratton was absent from the city with the Jack's Lake Hunt Club.

SON'S HANDS CUT OFF AT THE WRIST

London, Oct. 13.—The weekly ministerial prayer service held in the Y.M.C.A. auditorium again was attended by a very large number of local ministers and laymen. The speaker of the day was Rev. W. C. Riddiford, pastor of Egerton Street Baptist church.

In the course of his address Mr. Riddiford mentioned that one of his parishioners had told him of a letter received by a friend of hers in the city from a woman in Birmingham, Eng., in which the latter described the sufferings of a young British soldier invalided into the hospital in Birmingham.

The boy was visited in the hospital by his mother, who, finding him very despondent, tried to encourage him by telling him he would soon be better and able to return to the war.

"No, I won't, mother," the young fellow said, adding, "turn down the bed covers."

The mother did this, and was horrified to see that her son's hands had been cut off at the wrist.

BIG FISH CAUGHT THIS SEASON IN ONTARIO WATERS

The Bristol Steel Rod fishing competition for the largest fish taken in 1914 in Ontario waters, has brought forth many claims for the angler's championship honors. A beautiful fish weighing 28 pounds won premier place in the grey (lake) trout class. This was taken by Mr. Fred. E. Ringwold, of New York, in the southwest arm of Lake Timagami. Second place went to Mr. Frank J. Barber, Georgetown, Ont., with a 20-lb. trout, caught in Ragged Lake, Algonquin Provincial (Ontario) Park, while the third prize was secured by Mr. Lawrence Brown with a 17-lb. trout from Buck Lake, Algonquin Park.

The largest entry of small mouth black bass was that of Mr. C. C. Fox, of Kensington, Pa. This fish, weighing 4 lbs. 4 ozs., was caught in Rock Lake, Algonquin Park, on Sept. 3rd.

All the prize fish, it will be noted, were taken out of waters in the magnificent sporting districts opened up by the Grand Trunk Railway.

FIELDS FOR PLOWING MATCH ARE SELECTED

Fields for plowing match selected

The committee that was appointed to select fields for the plowing match for the championship of the county of Peterborough, which will be held on October 28, have selected two fields on the farm of Mr. Sandy Matchett, in Otonabee. As plowing will be done in both sod land and in stubble, it was necessary to have two fields for the purposes of the match. Mr. Matchett has been able to furnish both classes of soil on his farm. Although the fields are a little apart, those who witness the match will have little difficulty in following the contests in both fields. Mr. Matchett has kindly consented to entertain to dinner the competitors, officers, directors and judges.

The prize list for the competitors is unusually liberal. The officers of the club have received a letter from Mr. James Thompson, M.L.A., offering to contribute a $10 prize, which offer has been gratefully accepted. It is possible that some special prizes will be offered, announcements concerning which will be made later. The judges have yet to be selected.

Demonstration Car To Visit Peterboro

The demonstration car containing the wool and egg exhibits of the live stock branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture, will be on exhibition at Peterboro and other points as follows:—

Peterboro, Oct. 15, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.
Burketon Jct., Oct. 15, 5.30 to 7 p.m.
Bobcaygeon, Oct. 15, 8.30 p.m. to 3 p.m., Oct. 16.
Lindsay, Oct. 16, 4.20 to 10 p.m.
Myrtle, Oct. 17, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

The object in presenting these exhibits is to interest people generally in impoved methods of poducing and marketing eggs and wool.

The wool exhibit has attracted the attention of large crowds at the exhibitions where it has been displayed and contains much useful information regarding the care, uses and manufacture of wool.

The egg exhibit, particularly the candling demonstrations, is of special interest to consumers and producers, and all are cordially invited to attend.

The car is being operated under the joint auspices of the live stock branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture and the Canadian Pacific railway.

EILEN MARIE KEARNEY.

The death took place on Sunday evening of Eileen Marie, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Kearney, 37 Stewart St. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon to Ennismore cemetery.

MISS SUSAN CARLOW.

The death occurred this morning in Douro of Susan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carlow. The deceased was 22 years of age. Left to mourn her loss are four brothers, Raymond, George, Alexander and Edward, and three sisters, Mary, Ida and Annabel, all at home.

Her death will be regretted by a large circle of friends. The funeral will leave the family residence, lot 5, concession 1, Douro, on Thursday morning at 8.30, to St. Joseph's church, Douro, and cemetery.

THOMAS WALMSLEY.

The death took place Saturday evening of Thomas Walmsley, in his 49th year. He was born in Manchester, England, and had been in this city for some time. He had been employed as an accountant with the F. R. J. McPherson Co. for about twp years. Hardening of the arteries was the cause of his death.

Left to mourn his loss, besides his sorrowing wife, are two sons. His death will be regretted by a large circle of friends, by whom he was held in high esteem.

The funeral took place this afternoon to Little Lake cemetery.

ALBERT PARKER.

Albert Parker, a well-known citizen, passed away at Nicholls hospital Saturday afternoon. The late Mr. Parker was 63 years of age. He leaves to mourn his loss his son, Mr. W. A. Parker, 134 Park street, and one daughter, Mrs. Robert Hales, of Parry Sound, also four sisters and three brothers. They are: Mrs. Robt. Pratt, of Harvey; Mrs. John Rowe, of this city; Mrs. I. Eastwood, George street, and Mrs. Geo. Lang, of Midland; Mr. Henry Parker, Michigan; Mr. Geo. Parker, Parry Sound, and Mr. P. J. Parker, East City.

The funeral was held this afternoon from the residence of his son, 134 Park street, to Lakefield.

JOHN SMYTH.

On Sunday morning, Oct. 4, just as the sun was rising in the east, Mr. John Smyth, of Bridgeburg, died of heart failure, at the home of Mrs. David Smyth, Cavan, the township of which the deceased was a long and highly respected resident.

As a citizen he lived a quiet life, daily performing his duties "as becometh a true patriot," and endeavored to "do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with his God."

In religion he was a Methodist, in fact a pioneer layman in this community, he being one of the oldest trustees of the Fraserville Methodist church, and had served as recording steward of the South Monaghan circuit for many years, and for 26 years acted as secretary of the Cavan branch of the British and Foreign Bible Society.

About two years ago he found it necessary to sell his farm, owing to the loss of his arm, and to go and live with Rev. Wm. Smyth, of Bridgeburg, who is now the only surviving member of the Smyth family, who for years lived in this community.

The late John Smyth, as was his custom, had been visiting a numer of his many friends in this section, when he contracted a severe cold, and after an illness of about a week he quietly and peacefully "entered into the rest that remaineth to the people of God."

The service was held on Tuesday, Oct. 6, at the home of Mrs. David Smyh, Cavan, and was conducted by Rev. W. T. Wickett, assisted by Rev. Wm. Buchanan, Millbrook, and Rev. J. N. Clarry, B.A., and Rev. W. T. Crossley, evangelist, both of Peterborough.

The funeral, which was largely attended, gave evidence of the esteem and worth the people placed on the character of a good man.

The remains were interred in the family plot in the cemetery at Fraserville, to await "the resurrection of the just," and as we turned away from the open grave to face once more the work before us, our hearts kept saying,

"Asleep in Jesus, peaceful rest,
Whose waking is supremely blest."

THE MIND OF GERMANY

Two remarkable books on the mind of Germany are now being very widely read. They are "Germay and the Next War," by F. Bernhardi, and "Germany and England," by J. Cramb (John Murray). These volumes have proved to be a correct forecast. Before the war they would have been read with incredulity, but now a veil is raised and the foresight of the authors is vindicated. Mr. Cramb's book is made up of notes from lectures delivered by him at Queen's college, Harley street, London, in the beginning of last year. Unfortunately, the lecturer's health had already begun to fail when he commenced his task, and in October, 1913, he died. What we have here was taken from scattered notes and from reports. Even under such disadvantages the book has distinct value and vitality. The work of General Von Bernhardi is more limited in scope, but it gives in a clear though diffuse style the views of a distinguished German soldier, who represents the fervent faith of tens of thousands of Germans. Behind Bernhardi there is a philosophy derived from Nietzche and Treitschke. Of Nietzche and his views we say nothing. Treitschke is regarded as the Macaulay of Germany. He has written the history of his country, and has had a profound influence on the German mind. Treitschke became almost stone deaf when he was a mere child, and there is something lonely, defiant and remote about his work. But he never leaves us in doubt of his governing idea. That idea is "the greatness of Prussia, the glory of an army which is a nation, and of a nation which is an army." Such, in his view, is the glory of Germany that there must be no rest for the German people till Germany in her shining armour assumes the dominion of the world.

The Chief Obstacle.

The chief obstacle to this consummation is the present world predominance of Britain. That predominance, in the opinion of these German writers, is out of all proportion to the real strength and value and worth of Britain. Britain is a sham which has endured for a time but cannot endure forever. Mean, sordid, hypocritical, corrupt and rotten, Britain is the curse of the earth, and must at all costs be abased in the dust.

In order to accomplish this world-empire of Germany, the accepted morality must be decisively set aside. Bernhardi begins his book by an attack on peace. To him, peace is petrification and stagnation. War is the fruitful field for magnanimity, heroism and mercy. The brutal incidents inseparable from every war are negligible in view of the grand result. The state is not bound by the laws of morality. The end-all and be-all of a state is power, and he who is not man enough to look this truth in the face should not meddle in politics. It is the duty of the state, and almost its only duty, to increase its power. Chief among political sins is the sin of feebleness. The state must not merely defend itself when attacked. It must also attack when there is the the smallest prospect of success. The culture and the religion of Germany entitle her to a place in the sun. Needless to say, the religion of the German ythat is to be is not Christianity. Just as the Christian morality is rejected, so the Christian faith is denied and abhorred. Strauss was a weakling because he clung to the thics of Christianity, while he rejected its doctrines.

Battle of the Future.

In a word, the battle of the future is between Christ and Napoleon, and we are told that "Corsica has conquered Galilee." Christ is dethroned. In Germany Napoleonism, especially in Berlin, has acquired something of the clearness and self-consistency of a formulated creed. The Germans have not forgotten—how could they forget?—that Napoleon was the tyrant of Germany and the oppressor of Europe. But Mr. Cramb tells us that in spite of this, Germans "have gradually acquired a profound and ever profounder reverence for the creed and the religion towards which that great and solitary spirit, perhaps the loneliest amongst the children of men, still struggled amidst the tumults and desolations, the triumphs and the glories, the victory and the disaster of his tragic and brief career—a world-tragedy his, at once the Man of Destiny and the Antagonist of Destiny." When Germany subdues the world, she will, we are told, not confront the twentieth century and its thronging vicissitudes as the worshipper of an alien God and the thrall of an alien morality. It is to be noted that this school is openly at war with democracy—with the power of self-government inhering the people. Bernhardi admits the difficulties in the path of Germany to world power. Austria's weakness is the strong admixture of the Slavonic elements. Italy's antagonism to Austria has run through Italian history, and his hopes of Italy are not bright. But he thinks that England has failed to link her vast empire together either for the purposes of commerce or defence. Her colonies and dominions all tend to separation, and he foresees a great colonial war. He thinks also that we shall be opposed in war not only by the colonies, but by India. He admits the power of the British fleet and fears an alliance between it and the French fleet. As for Russia, she must be isolated by bribes. The next thing is to crush France to the very dust. This accomplished, England must be dealt with when the day and hour arrive. Perpetually we are told that Germany has the genius for empire, and that England stands in the way. She has won one-fifth of the globe by craft and violence, and is the great robber state. To sum up, there is before Germany either world dominion or ruin, and ruin must be risked in the effort after world dominion.

Thus sharply and undeniably are the issues put. Germany, as represented by its dominant thinkers, is at open war with Christ. So Corsica has not yet quite conquered Galilee! The newer imperative is quoted by Mr. Cramb: "Ye have heard how in old times it was said, 'Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth,' but I say unto you, 'Blessed are the valiant, for they shall make the earth their throne.' And ye have heard men say, 'Blessed are the poor in spirit,' but I say unto you, 'Blessed are the great in soul and the free in spirit, for they shall enter into Valhalla. And ye have heard men say, 'Blessed are the peacemakers,' but I say unto you, 'Blessed are the warmakers, for they shall be called, if not the children of Jahve, the children of Odin, who is greater than Jahve.' "

As for public morality, it is at an end. The policy advocated is one of virulent atack on all tose who have held out their hands in friendship. Plain dealing, generosity and regard for human right are antiquated superstitions. It may be wise, sometimes, to affect regard for them in order to serve a purpose, but such conduct is merely tactical. It will also be seen that freedom under the new regime would be wholly at an end. This war is one of life or death for free institutions. The German government is a standing conspiracy against the rights of the people.

If will be seen that we have good reason for fighting and for fighting even to the death. It is a shallow optimism which pretends that there are no great calamities in history. We are now fighting to avert one of them.

DASTARDLY TRICK

There appears to be no limit to the dastardly deeds of the Germans. Their latest is to attach a mine to a boat and turn the craft adrift. When a ship, thinking a disaster has occurred, comes along to render help, her errand of mercy is converted into one of death.

The master of the Grimsby steam trawler Agatha on Wednesday reported that whilst his vessel was fishing in the North Sea a ship's boat was sighted, and, concluding that a disaster had occurred, the trawler sent a boat out, and discovered that the derelict was a ship's lifeboat.

The trawler took it in tow; but directly towing commenced a terrific explosion occurred, luckily too far from the trawler to cause damage. Close examination showed that a mine had been attached to the lifeboat by ropes and wires in such a manner as to blow up any ship which steamed alongside to pick the lifeboat up.

Her Home.

Some years ago, when a part of the Japanese Imperial Palace was burned at Tokio, the Empress was forced to flee to one of the old daimio houses near by. It was not at all comfortable, and, as the story goes, her Majesty, appreciating that her subjects would be much concerned at her living in such a mean place, sat down and wrote them a little poem in which she denied that she had changed her residence. The poem, which was in the best Japanese language, stated that her Majesty's home had always been in the hearts of the people and that neither the flames nor the cold could ever drive her from that dear abode.

Prisoner's Model Airship.

Some of the prisoners of war at Fort Henry, near Kingston, have had some experience in the manufacture of airships. One German, who is handy with a penknife, has amused himself for some days in cutting a model of an airship out of pieces of wood picked up around the grounds inside the walls. A few pieces of wire were used to put the machine together. Pieces of cotton form the wings on the ship. The maker takes great pride in his work, and has the model hanging from the ceiling in the room where he is confined. It is stated that there are other men in the fort who have had considerable experience in the work.

Tributes Paid to Late Constable

Borne to the grave by Masonic brethren, the remains of the late Police Constable Wm. Paterson were laid at rest in Little Lake cemetery Monday afternoon. The attendance of citizens at the cemetery and also at Knox church, where an impressive ceremony was held, with Rev. H. J. Keith officiating, was testimony of the high regard in which the deceased had been held, both as a police officer and a citizen.

At the church service Rev. H. J. Keith was assisted by Adjutant McElhinney. Police Chief Thompson in a short address paid high tribute to the late constable.

Beautiful floral tributes were received from the police chief and members of the police department, the fire department, Masonic brethren, Royal Arthur lodge, Caledonia Club, organist and members of St. Paul's Presbyterian church choir, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. McLean, and Messrs. Elliott, Stocker, Hicks, Denham, Ross, Denne, Montgomery, Lang, McCullough and Bradburn.

The Masons, members of the police and fire departments marched in the cortege.

THE SPORTING WORLD

Tyler

THREE WINS FOR BRAVES

The Boston Braves made it three straight over the Athletics in yesterday's battle, after twelve innings of grand baseball. One of the big features was Gowdy's home run. The count was a tie at the end of the ninth and there was all kinds of excitement in the tenth when the Athletics scored twice and the Braves performed in like manner. Gowdy led the way for a Boston win in the twelfth when he doubled. Mann ran for him from second, and later, when Bush sent a low throw to Barry at third, Mann romped home.

The summary shows: Runs—Murphy 2, McInnis, Schang, Moran, Schmidt, Maranville, Gowdy, Mann. Two-base hits—Murphy 2, Gowdy 2, McInnis, Deal, Baker. Home run—Gowdy. Hits—Off Tyler, 8 in 10 innings; off James, none in two innings. Sacrifice hits—Oldring, Moran. Sacrifice flies—Collins, Connolly. Stolen bases—Collins, Evers, Maranville 2. Double play—Evers, Maranville and Schmidt. Left on bases—Philadelphia 10, Boston 8. Base on balls—Off Bush 4, off Tyler 3, off James 3. First on error—Philadelphia 1. Struck out—By Bush 4, by Tyler 4, by James 1. Time—3.06.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Money is said to be the root of all evil, and many people are quite philanthropic enough to sit up nights to devise schemes to root the evil out.

The winter of discontent that the coal and ice men suffer untold pangs from is sweet, warm and pleasant for the rest of us.

It takes a lot of courage to secure a rich wife, but it is by no means certain that it doesn't take greater to annex one that isn't.

In this world of contrarieties there is no use in trying to have the other fellow get your point of view, for if he were to it wouldn't be yours.

It is a touching sight to see an old acquaintance, and in some pathetic case it is your pocketbook that is hardest hit.

The fellow who gets the worst of it, being wise, swallows his discomfiture, denies its existence and proceeds to claim the victor's laurels through the pages of the magazines.

It is an impossibility to make both ends meet by burning the candle at both ends.

WINNERS OF TROPHIES AT RIVERSIDE PARK

Smoke Wins Ten Mile Road Race With Thorpe Second

The sports yesterday at Riverside Park were well attended, there being a large crowd out to watch the keenly contested events. The program which was of a very high standard was run off without a hitch, every event running with that smoothness characteristic of a well handled meet. In the senior events, Dr. Frank was very prominent in each event. In the road race the time was very good, Smoke had things pretty much his own way. He was never pushed at any stage of the game. Taylor, the other Indian from Chemong dropped out, he being not in condition. The various winners were decided by a percentage basis, there being no final heats. This accounts for a number being tied for different places.

The Judge's Misgivings.

A serious case of highway robbery, tried some years ago before Chief Baron Green on the last day of the Ennis assizes, resulted in an acquittal. The chief baron, addressing the sheriff, said, "Mr. Sheriff, is there any other indictment against this innocent man?"

"No, my lord," was the reply.

"Then you'll greatly oblige me if you don't let him out until I have half an hour's start of him on my way to Limerick!"—London Mail.

Your Height and Foot.

The height of the human figure is six times the length of the human foot. Whether the form is slender or plump, the rule holds good on the average; any deviation from the rule is a departure from the beauty of proportion. It is claimed that the Greeks made all their statues according to this rule.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

THEORY AND PRACTICE.

WE'RE very fond of winter
 In theory, don't you know.
We say it is so healthy —
 To wrestle with the snow.
It's such a splendid tonic,
 The wind that's cold as ice.
But still we always dodge it
 If we have got the price.

To hear us tell the neighbors
 How greatly we admire
A fine, old fashioned winter
 A listener might inquire
If we would eat a ticket
 That called for transport free
To some fair summer climate
 Or pack our trunk and flee.

When August winds are scorching
 And grass is dry and sear
The claim to dote on winter
 May then be quite sincere,
But when we view the picture
 At cooler, closer range
The feelings are subjected
 To something of a change.

It's just a Superstition.
 Some people may declare
They like the cold, but would they Hold up their hands and swear?
If they had wings for flying.
 With leisure, too, were blessed,
Where would they spend the winter?
 That's quite the proper test.

Such a Waste.

Just as we are getting deep into the canal business word comes from Mars that they are discarding their waterways. Perhaps they have taken advantage of the nearness of this season to discover our railroads and imagine they have found something larger in the line of transportation.

If they must go out of the canal business instead of throwing their canals away on the old junk heap it is a pity they couldn't tie a stout string on them and drop them down to us. We might be able to use several second-hand canals for a while just to see how we liked them before digging new ones. Will some of the flashers who were going to do such wonders flash up for quotations?

How They Know.

"Women are always talking about human nature. I should like to know how they know so much about it."

"That is easy."

"Is it? Would you mind elucidating then?"

"Most of them are married to a bunch of it."

Promoting Cheer.

"Did you ever get any encouragement from the eminent official on whom you called?" "Yes, sir," replied the spokesman of the delegation; "he was right encouraging. He called attention to the fact that it's a pleasant day today, and he said he wouldn't be surprised if it was just as pleasant tomorrow."—Washington Star.

Fish Story of Another Kind.

Boy—Bin 'ere long, mister?

Angler—About an hour.

Boy—You ain't caught anything, 'ave yer?

Angler—No, not yet, my lad.

Boy—Ah, I thought so, as there wasn't no water in that pond till all that rain last night.—London Opinion.

An Advocate of Chance.

"So you want your wife to vote?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Meekton.

"What's your reason?"

"Well, after trying a number of other topics I think politics would be the least dangerous subject for a family argument that we could select."

PLACE NAMES IN THE WAR

Chaulnes—32 miles north of Paris and 12 miles from Peronne, is a station on the line from Amiens to Chalons. It has an 18th century church and near the village is a ruined chateau.

Albert—15 miles northwest of Amiens, is an industrial town containing a population of about 7,100. It stands on the river Anere, which here forms a pretty waterfall. The town was at one time named Anere, but it was presented by Louis XIII to his favorite, Charles d'Albert, in 1617, when its name was changed. The church of Notre Dame de Brebiere, which has been recently restored, attracts many pilgrims.

Punta Arenas—Where the arrival of three British cruisers is reported, is the capital of the territory of Magallanes, in Chile, which lies on the Strait of Magellan, and on the east coast of the Brunswick peninsula. The population is about 9,000. There are coal deposits and rye and barley are grown. Punta Arenas enjoys the distinction of being the most southerly town in the world. Its latitude is 53 degrees 10 minutes south.

Ung—The name of a river and a country of Hungary, both situated in the northeast of the country in the eastern Carpathian mountains. The capital of the country of Ung is Ungvar, which stands on the river Ung, and is 80 miles north-northeast of Debreczin. Its population numbers nearly 15,000 and it is the seat of the Ruthenian bishop of Munkaes.

Tamise—Sixteen miles to the northwest of Malines, also said to have been destroyed, is a manufacturing town of over 13,000 inhabitants. Its church contained a sixteenth century tomb of Roeland Lefebre and his wife, and a painting of the Holy Family by Nicholas de Liemaeckere.

Jaslow—Thirty miles southeast of Tarnow, is a Galician town of some 7,000 inhabitants.

Zvornik—Is a Bosnian town on the river Drina, 30 miles from its junction with the Save. The population numbers about 3,000.

Cape Kireli—Near which the British steamer Belgian King is reported to have been sunk, possibly by striking a mine, is situated on the southeastern shore of the Black Sea. The disaster would, therefore, have happened near to Trebizond, from which place the news comes, and which is an active trading port over 500 miles east from Constantinople.

Nauru—An island about 900 miles northeast of the Bismarck Archipelago, where the last German wireless station in the Pacific ocean is said to have been destroyed. Phosphates and leached guano are exported from the deposits found on this and on many other islands of the Pacific. Nauru, or Pleasant Island, is only a few degrees south of the equator.

DIED

NAGASAKI HARBOR

Where the Japanese Women Work at Coaling Ships.

There is at least one place in the world where a woman may earn as much as a man for the same labor and where the two sexes work side by side. This is at Nagasaki, Japan. When a liner comes into port the passengers who have been viewing the beautiful harbor observe a fleet of barges laden with coal which are lying in wait near the anchorage. On most of them are 20 to 30 men and women, the latter predominating.

In contrast with the kimono-clad women at Tokio and Yokohama and Kobe, these wear short skirts with cloth stockings and their heads are covered with thin cotton cloth bearing a peculiar Japanese design in blue print. Some of them have babies with them, and as the ship draws near they hastily bind them on the backs of little girls and boys and make ready for work.

In a trice, it seems, at each of the coal ports a pyramidal series of platforms is rigged up, the lowest level being just above the deck of the barge. Then on each platform two women, or a man and a woman, take their position while a lot of men hurry down to the bunkers of the ship to receive the coal after it has been passed in and stow it away. From the end of the platform a double line extends to where men do nothing but throw a big shovelful of coal in a shallow basket, which holds about a peck or a peck and a half. The basket travels from hand to hand, but part of the effect of gravity is overcome by the forward motion, for the receptacle does not stop from the time it is once in the air until it reaches the ship's side. The empty basket is dropped with the same swing that discharges its contents, and an old woman sitting behind the man on the top platform does nothing but toss the baskets to the barge below.

Nagasaki has the name of being the "fastest" coal port in the world, though the labor here is all done by hand. An army captain tells of being on the transport Thomas at Nagasaki in April, 1912, when she took on 2,600 tons in seven and a half hours.

To count the workers who are engaged on the job is difficult. Fresh barges keep coming up all the time and fresh workers. Often there are as many as 900 men and women at work. They fairly swarm along both sides of the ship. The pay for this labor is by piece. Workmen and workwomen each get one yen, or 50 cents, for a day's work of eight to nine hours.

It is bewildering to watch the workers, for the baskets come up so steadily it looks as though they must be moved by machinery. Practice has taught men and women to make each motion count and the whole effect is that of clockwork.

One Hundred Years From Now.

"On yonder hill," cried the general, scanning the battlefield with his glasses. "I see a black mass of humanity. What are they?"

"Camera fiends," replied the second-in-command.

"And who are occupying that field to the southwest?"

"Those," answered the S.-I.-C., "are operators for the Goahead Picture Comapny."

"I see a battalion with curious-shaped guns."

"They are not guns; they are gramophones and phonographs, in which are to be recorded the roar of cannon and the cries of the wounded."

"'Tis well!" exclaimed the general, fondling his beard complacently. "Let the battle begin."

Thoughtfulness.

"What are you doing?" asked the friend.

"Sending out felicitations on my approaching marriage," replied Baron Fucash.

"Felicitations!"

"Yes. To my creditors."—Washington Star.

Shower a Big Success.

The annual donation day and fruit shower held yesterday at the K. C. Club house in aid of St. Joseph's Hospital was a huge success. The donations of fruit were very numerous, and the various booths were kept busy. The returns from all the booths are not in yet, but it is expected that a handsome sum will be realized from the efforts of the Ladies' Aid.

The ladies are very grateful to their many friends who contributed to make their shower such a success.

The children were treated to many good things yesterday afternoon, after which the adult members of the corps had dinner.

Farm Labor In Ontario.

Applicants for work on Ontario farms have been more plentiful this year than for many years, but much of the labor offering has been unskilled in agriculture, a considerable number of men from towns and cities having this season sought rural employment. The light hay crop, the short, upright straw of the grain crops, and the favorable weather for harvesting have required much less field help at harvesting. Farmers are also utilizing improved machinery more and more in order to save manual labor, and many of them have also developed a system of exchange of work with neighbors which is making them largely independent of casual help. Wages show little change, ranging from $1.25 to $2, or even $2.50 (with board) during harvest, according to skill or locality, and from $20 to $35 per month, with extra good hands commanding as high as $40.

Passed Scores of Warships.

Michael Velario, a vaudeville troupe director, who has arrived in Canada from India, says that on her way to England, from the Mediterranean, just after war was declared, the boat he was on met no less than one hundred and fifty battleships of various kinds, both French and British.

"Anti-German sentiment ran high in Marseilles," he said. "I went into a cigar store and I suppose the dealer took me for a German, for when I asked for cigars, in what I attempted to make my best possible French, I was simply kicked out in the street. They even threw my money back at me."

TO LAY SIEGE TO BELFORT

With Large Force, Said to be Aim of Kaiser

A STRONG FORTRESS

Held Out for Three Months in Franco-Prussian War

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 14. — A Central News despatch from Copenhagen, says Germans are preparing with the largest force they can collect, to lay siege on Belfort, a French fortress counted almost impregnable and which in 1870 sustained a siege of three months.

FEW SOLDIERS LEFT AT OSTEND

Only Small Belgian Force and no English Troops

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 14. — The Daily Sketches Ostend correspondent says only a small Belgian force and almost no English troops remain in Ostend.

Five refugee boats left there yesterday. A number of transports which were in the harbor also have put to sea.

TO SUCCEED PELLETIER

Hon. Chas. E. Casgrain as New Postmaster General

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, Oct. 14. — It is understood Hon. Chas. E. Casgrain is to be sworn in today as Postmaster General in succession to Hon. L. P. Pelletier, who resigns owing to ill-health.

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—Premier Borden this afternoon reiterated his earlier statement that no decision has been reached as to pending cabinet changes but admitted there would be developments within the next twenty-four hours. It is certain Chas. E. Casgrain is to be given a portfolio but it is not so certain as to whether he is to succeed Hon. L. P. Pelletier or Hon. Nantel.

He had a long conference with the Premier and Hon. R. Rogers this morning and afterwards admitted he expected an announcement any time.

ALLIED TROOPS IN YPRES OTHER PROGRESS IS MADE

FRENCH DID NOT MEET DISASTER

Announcement That Germans Are About to Undertake Investment of Verdun is Discredited --- Nothing to Indicate Immediate Advance on Ostend

PORTUGAL IS WAR-LIKE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Oct. 14.—The official communication this afternoon says: After some encounters with Germans in Belgium Monday night and Tuesday, French and English troops have occupied Ypres.

Progress in the direction of Berry -Au-Bac continues. On the rest of the line there is nothing new.

The official announcement contradicts specifically the report of the destruction of two divisions of French cavalry in engagements in Belgium. This did not occur. Losses on both sides were about equal.

Discredit is also thrown on the German announcement that they are about to undertake the investment of the fortress of Verdun. German attempts in that direction have been confined to those of Napoleon against the French field forces in that vicinity, which ended in failure in every case, involving in one instance the annihilation of two German battalions.

ENEMY CHECKED IN ATTEMPT TO REACH AMIENS.

London, Oct. 14.—There is nothing to-day indicating an immediate German advance on Ostend, while farther south the allies have been strengthened and have assumed the offensive.

The occupation of Lille by Germans, it now transpires, means that Von Kluk has thrown his entire army into that city, which has been within the German lines since an early stage in the hostilities.

The enemy has been checked in attempts to reach Amiens, which they particularly desire to occupy, so as to control the railroad lines centering there.

TO VOTE ON MOBILIZATION OF TROOPS.

London, Oct. 14.—Cabling from Lisbon, the correspondent of the Central News says it is reported that the German minister to Portugal and other Germans residing in Lisbon are about to leave for Madrid.

As a result of cabinet meetings and conferences between leaders of various Portuguese parties and the president of the republic, the correspondent continues, it has been resolved to convoke congress for Friday, October 16, in order to pass a vote for the mobilization of Portuguese troops.

London, Oct. 14.—The Central News says Portugal has declared war against Germany. Confirmation is lacking.

FRENCH WIN AND TAKE GERMAN PRISONERS.

London, Oct. 14.—A despatch to Reuter from Ostend, dated Saturday, says: "Following violent engagements near Quatrecht and Melle, more than 600 Germans were killed and large numbers of others were wounded.

French marine fusiliers charged with bayonets and took 400 German prisoners. The enemy was obliged to retire in the direction of Oordegem.

The battle began again this morning in the neighborhood of Lyde."

RUSSIANS EVACUATE LEMBERG !

London, Oct. 14.—An Exchange Telegraph Co. despatch from The Hageu says the Austrian legation there announces that the Russians have evacuated Lemberg, Galicia, after a fierce fight.

Lemberg has been in possession of the Russians since shortly after the beginning of their Galician campaign.

FIFTY THOUSAND GERMANS IN GHENT.

The Hague, via London, Oct. 14.—A special despatch to the Avond Post says 50,000 Germans are in Ghent. Many of them are leaving in the direction of Bruges.

A German officer is quoted in this despatch as saying Ostend was the objective of the German advance.

HINT IS DROPPED AT CONSTANTINOPLE.

London, Oct. 14.—A despatch from Amsterdam to Reuter says the Frankfurter Zeitung has received a communication from Constantinople which says the British ambassador to Turkey, Sir Louis Mallet, asked the women of the embassy last Monday to leave the city.

Questioned by one of his hearers whether this was absolutely necessary, the ambassador replied, "You must accept the hint without asking the reasons."

MILITARY CRITIC ON SITUATION

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, Oct. 14.—The Herald's military critic today says:—Germans have chosen and the allies have been compelled to disregard Napoleon's paramount maxim in tactics, "To hold in reserve a substantial and efficient force." "At the decisive moment, therefore, when the allies appeared fatigued, the Germans were not able to deliver the necessary smashing blow and the allies, occupied in confronting the Kaiser's enormous force with a steel barrier, shutting it off from channel ports, did not have the reserve when their turn came."

Military authorities agree that Germany held through the winter, means Germany beaten in the spring and for that juncture Kitchener is forging a substantial and efficient force, in the shape of the largest and best trained army that will ever have left England.

YEAR OF PROGRESS AT THE PROTESTANT HOME

Encouraging Reports Presented by Officials of the Institution —Number of Inmates for the Year Was Thirty-Eight — Many New Applications

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Protestant Home was held on Tuesday afternoon, in the Board Room of the Home, with the president, Mrs. Rogers, in the chair. In addition to the directors were present, His Worship the Mayor, Rev. Canon Davidson, who conducted the devotional exercises, Mr. Wm. Kemp, Miss Martha Dickson, Miss Flora Davidson and Miss Drummond.

Most encouraging reports of the year's work were presented by the Secretary and Treasurer, also by the Superintendent, Miss Lancaster, and by Mr. Downing, janitor and gardener.

The treasurer's report showed the financial standing of the Home to be in a satisfactory condition as the board had been able to close their year free from debt.

His Worship the Mayor, on behalf of the city, moved a hearty vote of thanks to the directors for the efficient manner in which their work had been carried on. This was seconded by Rev. Canon Davidson, in a few very kind remarks.

The following directors were elected for a term of three years:—

Mrs. Birdsall, Mrs. Suckling, Mr. J. A. Aylmer, Mr. E. A. Mason.

At the close of the general meeting the officers for the ensuing year were appointed as follows:—

President—Mrs. Walter Roger.
1st Vice-President—Mrs. Nicholls.
2nd Vice-President—Mrs. Birdsall.
3rd Vice-President—Mrs. Hazlett.
Secretary—Miss Flora Davidson.
Assistant Secretary—Miss Jean A. Neill.
Treasurer—Miss Sarah G. Robinson.
Assistant Treasurer — Mrs. Robt. Neill.

Secretary's Report.

The Secretary's report was as follows:

The year 1913-14 has been a peaceful and successful one for the Home and its inmates for during it much has been done by the directors, the lady superintendent, and kind friends to make it in every sense a haven of rest for the old people.

The number of inmates for the year have been thirty-eight. Of these four have died and eight have been discharged for various reasons, leaving twenty-seven still in the Home, fifteen men and twelve women. Judging from the number of new applicants the Home will be fully occupied during the winter

Owing to the untiring efforts of Miss Lancaster and her assistants the work of the Home itself has gone on smoothly.

Red Flag For Italy

Austria's Italian Residents Subject of Strict Police Order

ROME, Oct. 14. — (Via Paris.)—The Messagero yesterday published what it claims is a private circular sent by Prince Von Hohenlohe-Schillingfurst, Governor of Trieste, to all the heads of the police in the Italian provinces under Austria. The circular says that in case of war with Italy all male Italian subjects between the ages of eighteen and forty years shall be arrested and sent under close escort to fortresses; that those above forty, and also women and children, shall be ordered to leave the country within 12 hours, and that those suspected of espionage or of carrying on anti-Austrian propaganda shall be summarily tried and, if found guilty, shot. Italians subjects of Austria are also included in the list of proscribed persons. They will be arrested immediately and sent to fortresses. Those from eighteen to forty years of age will be enlisted and sent to the regiments serving in Bohemia.

DEATH AT PICTON.

Picton, Ont., Oct. 14.—W. Harold Williamson, one of the most promising of Picton's younger business men, died at his home here yesterday morning after a short illness, aged 27 years. The late Mr. Williamson was a partner in the insurance business of W. H. Williamson & Son, of this town, and had for the last eight years been actively connected with the business.

To Give up Tsing Tau

Kaiser Said to Have Ordered City's Capitulation

TOKIO, Oct. 14.—The Kaiser has sent word to allow the surrender of Tsing-Tau.

An earlier despatch said: As the result of the communication to him of the Japanese Emperor's desire to spare the lives of non-combatants and neutrals in Tsing-Tau, Meyer Waldeck, Governor of Kiao-Chau, has sent German officers to meet Japanese officers to arrange the details for their departure before the inauguration of the final attack upon the German fortress by the Japanese and British forces.

During an armistice Sunday on the battlefront of Tsing-Tau twenty-two German defenders of the fortress were buried.

The fortress fires 1,500 shells daily.

The German garrison in Kiao-Chau consists of 92 officers, 2,374 German non-commissioned officers and men, and one battalion of the East Asiatic Garrison Brigade. It was agreed that within a zone of 31 miles from all points of the leased territory the Chinese Government should no longer, for the space of 99 years, be entitled to take any steps without previous authorization from the German Government.

ASK FOR PROHIBITION.

Edmonton, Alta., Oct. 14.—A delegation of 150 waited on the provincial government of Alberta in the legislative assembly rooms at noon, presenting a petition signed by 23,000 qualified electors, asking for a vote upon the total prohibition of the liquor traffic in the province.

ALLIES MAKING DESPERATE EFFORT TO GET VON KLUK

Five Battles Along the Entire Line of Contest in France and Belgium Yesterday Resulted in Victories For the Allies.

Whole Northward Movement Probably to Save Von Kluk's Army.

LONDON, Oct. 14. — German Uhlans have occupied the town of Ghent which is undefended, without resistance. This is confirmed by despatches from both Rotterdam and Amsterdam. All communication between Ghent and Holland has been severed.

German aeroplanes yesterday appeared over Ostend and one of the machines dropped two bombs, which fell in the sand dunes near the city and failed to explode. British aeroplanes drove the invaders off without inflicting any damage on the German craft.

Along the entire allied line in France and southern Belgium, there was severe fighting yesterday. From Paris it is reported that the Germans were signally defeated in five battles, in all of which the allies assumed the offensive, save in the region of Apremont where a counter German attack was repulsed with loss of men and ground to the enemy. The severest fighting took place between Arras and Albert, where the Franco-British forces made a tremendous effort to cut off the retreat of Von Kluk, now stated to be under way. Lille, however, has fallen into the hands of the Kaiser, French territorial troops being compelled to retreat before a full army corps.

News from the front is fragmentary. Nearly all of the reports tell in glowing terms of victories by the allies, excepting at Lille. But some of them are sufficiently circumstantial to warrant full credence. Early yesterday, in the neighborhood of Hazebrouck and Bethune, British and French cavalry made a sudden raid on a German cavalry detachment which had seized an advanced position and who were trying to hold their advantage until infantry arrived. They were completely routed.

The most important victory of the day took place at Verdun. This fortress, which has stood out for eight weeks against a severe bombardment, is the apex of the French centre and the special object of German operations. As a result of yesterday's fighting the French command all of the roads leading eastward to Metz, the base of supplies for the German left and centre.

French bayonet assaults as Souain and Berry-au-Bac drove the Germans from their advanced trenches. This was only accomplished after desperate fighting. The French came up again and again under a withering fire and ultimately the defenders fled before the line of glittering steel.

Having failed to penetrate the French lines on the Aisne it is said on good authority that Germany will try a flanking movement in the east. For this purpose guns and men are believed to be en route from Antwerp for the stronghold on the south of the present lines. Belfort has been more or less of a storm centre of the fighting in the Vosges and Alsace. Its fall would tend to throw the French right into distress. The French general staff, it is reported, will profit by the lesson of Antwerp and depend more on field forces to stem the German advance in that direction, rather than on the fortress itself.

The position of the allied armies in southern Belgium are a trifle uncertain. But with the Germans at Ghent the French and British cannot be far away, certainly between them and Ostend. However, German cavalry in force is reported at Hazebrouck, 22 miles northwest of Lille, and at Orchies, 16 miles south of Lille. At Ypres cavalry and infantry is reported. Judging from this movement it would appear that the Kaiser means to drive forward directly to Ostend, Dunkirk and Calais, the two latter towns just over the French border from Belgium and both important ports, within easy striking distance of England. That such an advance will be bitterly contested without saying. On the other hand, the weakness of the German defence at other points yesterday gives rise to the belief that the movement toward the coast is intended to cover the retreat of Von Kluk to new lines in Belgium. In fact, it is actually stated by some correspondents that his retreat is progressing at this moment.

The official communication issued by the French War Department last night says:

"With the exception of an advance of some importance in the vicinity of Berry-au-Bac (on the centre) there is nothing to report."

The communique issued at three o'clock says:

"On our left wing our forces have resumed the offensive in the regions of Hazebrouck and of Bethune against detachments of the enemy composed in large part of cavalry coming from the front along Bailleul, Estaires and La Bassee.

"The town of Lille,, held by a territorial detachment, has been attacked and occupied by a German army corps.

"Between Arras and Albert we have made notable progress.

"On the centre also we have made progress in the region of Berry-au-Bac and we have advanced toward Souain in the west of the Argonne and north of Malancourt.

"Between the Argonne and the Meuse, on the right bank of the Meuse, our troops who hold the heights of the Meuse to the east of Verdun have advanced.

"To the south of the road from Verdun to Metz, in the region of Apremont, we have gained a little territory on our right, and repulsed a German attack on our left.

"On our right wing, Vosges and Alsace, there has been no change.

"To sum up, yesterday was marked by perceptible progress on the part of our forces at various points on the field of battle.

"In Galicia the Austrian corps defeated in Galicia are endeavoring to reform at a point four kilometres west of Przemysl."

Improvements on Line From Belleville Through Peterboro

Work has commenced on improvements to the road bed of the G.T.R. line between Belleville and Lindsay. Two foremen, Messrs. Conners and Shaw, have about eighty men now at work. Heavier rails will be laid.

The G.T.R. contemplates a number of improvements along this line and it is expected that as operations have started, the work will be continued to completion.

DOMINION ELECTION IN SECOND WEEK OF DECEMBER

Government Will go to the Country on the Abolition or Reform of the Senate

(Special to The Review.)

Ottawa, Oct. 14. — There seems little doubt but that there will be a Dominion election this fall. The fact that the Conservative government has been unable to carry out many of the reforms which they desired, owing to the action of the Senate, an irresponsible body, in throwing out several of the bills passed by the people's representatives in the House of Commons, has made an election almost certain. It is believed here that it will be all over by December 15, and not by the first, as a western member has intimated. It has been well understood that had it not been for the war, Premier Borden would have appealed to the country after the last session, on account of the unwarranted action of the Senate in throwing out several of the bills in the people's interests. Premier Borden will now appeal to the country on the platform of the abolition or reforming of the Senate.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1914

A PASTORAL LETTER.

THE Roman Catholic Archbishops and Bishops of the ecclesiastical province of Quebec, Montreal and Ottawa, have issued a pastoral letter to their people, from which we take the following splendid message, which is deserving of wide publicity :

> "England is engaged in this war, and who does not see that the destiny of every part of the Empire is bound up with the fate of her armies? She counts very rightly on co-operation, and this co-operation, we are happy to say, is being generously offered to her, both in men and money. Already, with the reservists of the allied nations, naturalized or living amongst us, several thousands of our own compatriots have volunteered to go to the war, and others, perhaps, will follow."

The sentiment of this paragraph, and of the letter as a whole, puts the Catholic church on record as supporting wholeheartedly the national cause for which the Empire is making such magnificent sacrifices.

THE "CONTEMPTIBLE LITTLE ARMY."

THE KAISER sent out the following army order on Aug. 19 :

> "It is my royal and imperial command that you concentrate your energies, for the immediate present, upon one single purpose, and that is that you address all your skill and all the valour of my soldiers to exterminate the treacherous English and walk over General French's contemptible little army."

Apparently, English treachery consists in daring to oppose the German war lord. As for the "contemptible little army," it requires no excuse or apology for its size or its valour, as exemplified by its deeds during the first two months of the war. It still offers indomitable resistance; it is being strongly reinforced, and has proved a stumbling block to German progress. It may yet bring the German Emperor's vaunted military forces into contempt and defeat. It has already outpointed them.

THE EASTERN PERIL.

THE FOLLOWING ITEM in a Toronto newspaper will open the eyes of many of those who have not hitherto been impressed with the rivalry of the east in industrial matters :

That there is a great awakening of the natives of India, was made evident by the talk given at Chalmers Presbyterian church yesterday morning by Rev. J. A. Sharrard, M.A., B.D., of Indore, India. He told how the caste system is being slowly broken down and the natives are adopting western education. They are sending students to college to study technical matters, and manufacturing concerns and mills in great numbers have been established in the country during the past four or five years.

This industrial upheaval is of vast importance to India, he said. In past years the natives have been dependent for the most part on the crops, and when they prove a failure it directly affects between 80 and 90 per cent. of the population, causing great suffering. The industrial concerns being established have helped greatly to solve the problem of unemployment in India.

The spirit of self-government is awakening in all the eastern countries, he said. He pointed out that this spirit was first manifested in the Russo-Japanese war. The philosophy of the educated Indians, which tells them that nothing in the outside world will do them any good, is being slowly done away with. Although the lower classes are being Christianised much faster than the higher class, the latter are receiving the western education much more readily than a few years ago.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF NIETZSCHE.

NIETZSCHE is a name that has lately been given much prominence in the press. His philosophy has been considered or referred to on many occasions, and his chief book is entitled, "Thus Spake Zarathustra." Nietzsche was one of the prominent philosophers of modern Germany, and has been referred to recently because of the war with Germany. Saturday Night gives the following note concerning his work, which is of interest:

> For the benefit of those who have not read "Thus Spake Zarathustra," or who do not care to wade through that volume of cryptic insanity, it may be explained that the central idea of Nietzsche's philosophy is Brute Force. According to Nietzsche, Christianity is the religion of cowards. A slave morality, he calls it. Meekness, charity, long-suffering, love of one's fellow-man, in fact all the virtues which are the slow fruit of thousands of years of civilization are despised by Nietzsche as timid vices, the outcome of universal fear. Nietzsche sets his face against the lesson of history; he orders back the onrushing tide of altruism; he will have nothing to do with the brotherhood of man. Instead, he exults in the Will-to-Power, the tyranny of strength, the rule of the Superman, whose ways and means are not unlike those of William Hohenzollern.

The Germans have at all times excelled in unthinkable philosophies, but this is the most unthinkable of the lot, because it denies the trend of the ages and announces that human progress is a lie. The Superman, so far as we can decipher him, is the Cave Man with Krupp guns instead of stone axes, a paleolithic ruffian who has muddled his mind with Kant's "Critique of Pure Reason." Pure reason, minus the love and pity that should go with it, leads the Superman to destroy the freedom which the people with toil and pains have achieved in the course of a hundred centuries. The Superman is individualism run wild. It is the Prussian military caste personified. Nietzsche pondered Bismarck's blood-and-iron formula too long, and the result is the Nietzsche philosophy which is greatly admired by little buttoned-up German professors, who dote on the physical force of which they are not themselves capable. Nietzsche did not invent his own philosophy. It was in the air around him. He gave out what he breathed in. He systematized the prevailing madness. As befits the founder of the maddest philosophy of all time, he ended his days in a madhouse, and had the unusual honour of influencing a mad Kaiser to attempt to put his madness into practice.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

ESPIONAGE, says the Westminster Gazette, has long played a prominent part in German warfare, and it can only be said that the Kaiser is living up to the standard set him by Frederick the Great, who boasted that when he took the field he was preceded by a hundred spies. It is arguable that what is being done does not contravene what is legitimate, but this espionage is an ugly thing, and we are glad to know that severe measures are being taken by our commanders to guard against it.

THE Y. M. C. A. athletic meet on Monday was indicative of the good work being done by that institution. The events were well contested, and a fine program was given. It should receive greater public support, and another year should see a much larger number of contestants.

A CORRESPONDENT asks how to pronounce this Russian name—Pzthvichza. This correspondent is stupid. He should go to a sawmill. The correct pronunciation is given by a circular saw. Besides, there isn't such a name.

GERMANY has demanded one hundred millions as a war tax from Antwerp. This sounds like trying to draw blood from stones. If the Germans can get it they've got magic wands beaten forty ways.

SO THE WAR is costing Great Britain $55 per second. If we had to wage modern war on our salaries, we would be obliged to do it under a microscope.

DO YOU THINK the Germans adopted the saw-tooth bayonet to harmonize with Warsaw ?

WE NOTICE the Toronto World has quit advocating its inflated currency policy.

IT WILL BE interesting to know if the Germans will respect Holland's neutrality.

ALONE.

(Kendall Banning.)

In a door in Picardy a lonely woman stands.

* * *

Somewhere, under alien skies, beyond the gleaming strands
Of alien shores, the banners flaunt, resplendent, in the sun,
Above the grim, defiant ranks, ranks that bristle, gun to gun,
The martial trumpets summoned, and lo! the armies came
To write the records of their fame in hurtling sheets of flame.
Somewhere the drums are casting their stern, exultant spell,
To drive the battling hosts into the gaping throat of hell!
And somewhere, on an alien field and under alien skies,
A soldier of the legion sleeps, with stark and bloodless eyes,
Unstirred by the clank of sabres, unwakened by the roar
Of rattling guns and crashing hoofs that he shall hear no more.
Unmindful of the summer's rain, unmindful of the snow,
Unmindful, yea, of peace and war, he shall not even know
The heart cries of the vanquished, the victor's proud commands.

Selecting a Premier.

(Orange Sentinel.)

Sir James Whitney was the choice of the caucus. It would have been better all round if the new premier's nomination had come from the caucus. We are told that it would not have been exactly constitutional. However that may be, it would have been much more satisfactory to the province. It would also have prevented any possible embarrassment in the future. The people of Ontario are apt to resent the interference of Dominion ministers in a matter of this kind, even though the object of their solicitude is a really well qualified person.

Holland's Shipping.

(Toronto Globe.)

The shipping trade of Holland has been hard hit by the war. The number of merchant ships reported as arriving at Roterdam in August was only 224, as compared with 819 in August, 1913. Germany's iron ore for her Westphalian furnaces has been entirely cut off.

Canada and the Empire.

(Belleville Intelligences.)

In this hour of supreme trial for the British people the world over, the Lauriers, the Pugsleys, the Carvells and the rest of that brood have come to realize that there is no room in Canada for the man who seeks to stand between Canada and the Empire.

WISHES

By Walt Mason

The blacksmith labors at his forge and mutters now and then, "By George, I'd like to be a banker ; it's weary work to swing a sledge, and manufacture iron wedge, and fashion plow and anchor. The banker sits around and gloats o'er piles of bonds and stocks and notes, attired in princely raiment, while I must strain my weary thews to meet my Sons of Milo dues, or make some other payment. The banker's girls are wearing gems, his wife has priceless diadems, all gifts the kind gods bring 'em ; but my good wife and girls, alas, have only brooches of plate glass, and they are wearing gingham." The banker, shy of brawn and pith, admires the mighty, stalwart smith, all full of red corpuscles ; he sighs, "Oh, chee, I'd give my wealth, to have that man's abundant health, his giant bones and muscles! I do not doubt that he can eat a side of mutton and repeat, and feel no indigestion ; his stomach takes what it receives, and never balks, and never heaves, and never asks a question. But if I eat a crumb of cake I have twelve kinds of stomach ache, my works will be corroded ; a sirloin steak would knock me cold—so what's the use of all the gold with which they say I'm loaded?" Complaining mortal, be content, and envy not the other gent, whose lot seems so much better; he also sighs for some relief; he has his share of care and grief, as sure as donnerwetter.

WILL NOT FORCE SCHELDT.

Germany Gives Out Statement To Holland Regarding Territory.

BERLIN, Oct. 13. — (Via The Hague and London.) — The Government of the Netherlands has again been officially notified by the German Government that the status of the River Scheldt, the waterway which leads to Antwerp, will be regarded by Germany as heretofore. There will be no question of forcing the Scheldt or using it for purposes not sanctioned in treaties with the Netherlands.

The notification to this effect was sent yesterday morning.

PARIS, Oct. 14.—Le Temps says the daring of German spies is again shown by the discovery of one of them disguised who joined the Indian troops when they left India and travelled with them to Marseilles, where he was detected and captured.

THE MOTHERS OF MEN

By Joaquin Miller.

The bravest battle that ever was fought!
Shall I tell you where and when?
On the maps of the world you will find it not—
'Tis fought by the mothers of men.
Nay, not with cannon or battle shot,
With sword or nobler pen!
Nay, not with eloquent words or thought
From mouths of wonderful men,
But deep in the walled-up woman's heart—
Of woman that would not yield,
But bravely, silently, bore her part—
Lo, there is that battlefield!
No marshalling troop, no bivouac song,
No banner to gleam and wave;
But, oh! their battles, they last
From babyhood to the grave.
Yet faithful still as a bridge of stars,
She fights in her walled-up town—
Fights on and on in endless wars,
Then, silent, unseen, goes down.
Oh, ye with banners and battle shot,
And soldiers to shout and praise,
I tell you the kingliest victories fought
Were fought in those silent ways.
Oh, spotless woman in a world of shame,
With splendid and silent scorn
Go back to God as white as you came
The kingliest warrior born!

Admiral Storey Goes To Coast.

GUELPH, Oct. 14.—Rear Admiral Storey of this city has received word from the Dominion Government accepting his proffer of service and has been appointed superintendent of naval service at Vancouver Island under the Dominion Government, and is ordered to take charge of his position at once. The possibility of German cruisers appearing off the Pacific coast has created some alarm in that section of the Dominion, and it is probable that the services of Admiral Storey have been accepted with a view to the adequate defence of that part of the country.

Troops In Holland.

LONDON, Oct. 14. — A Rotterdam correspondent of the local news agency says that the Dutch Government gives the number of British troops who crossed the Holland border line after the fall of Antwerp at 1,500, and those of the Belgians at 21,500.

Modern Chivalry

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

I was sitting on the porch with Farmer Griggs, while his daughter, Philena, surrounded by a group of children, was reading to them stories of the age of chivalry. Her father and I could hear her, and while she read how Sir Somebody charged upon Sir Somebody Else in a contest for the Lady What's-her-name I noticed that the farmer's eye lit up, and he seemed to be rapt in reminiscence.

"They don't do sich things now that a-way," he said when the story was finished, "but it's jist as nateral for men to fight for women today as it was then. But they're ginirally young fellers, and the gals is young too. I had a scrap like that when I was a younker. I hearn one day that there was to be a dance in a barn six or seven miles down the road. After supper I started to walk it."

"What," I interrupted, "walk seven miles, dance all the evening and walk seven miles back!"

"Oh, I didn't mind a little thing like that then! I was young and tough. I needed to keep my muscles active; there was so much vim in 'em. When I got to the barn some fiddlers was puttin' some boards on barrels to make seats for the people to dance. While they was tunin' up the dancers was comin' in.

"Purty soon they began to dance, but I didn't know any o' the gals, and I was afeared to ask 'em to dance with me. After awhile a black eyed gal, seein' that I was left out in the cold, said to me, smilin', 'Why don't you dance?' and I says, ''Cause I don't know nobody to dance with.' And she says, 'Won't I do?' And I says, 'You bet.' I put my arm around her waist, and we spun around that barn floor like a flywheel of a cuttin' machine with the beltin' off.

"When the music stopped we went off into a dark corner and set till it commenced ag'in. I axed the gal if she would dance with me some more, and she said she didn't mind. We was gittin' up to start off when a feller came up and said the gal was engaged to him for that dance. She said she didn't remember any engagement with him, so I put my arm around her, and we sailed away.

"Not wishin' to take up the bull of her time, when the dance was over I told her I would go and get a cup o' water—jist for an excuse, you know—though I would have liked to stay with her the rest of the evenin'. I hadn't gone far before the feller that said the gal was engaged to dance with him come up to me, and he said, says he:

"'See here, mister, if you want to monopolize the belle o' this yere county you got to fight for her.'

"'I don't want to monopolize any one,' says I, 'leastways any one that don't want to be monopolized, but I don't want none o' your sass.'

"That wa'n't exactly like Sir Something or Other in the story would put it, but I meant jist what he did. The feller didn't throw down his mailed glove, neither, but he was sp'ilin' for a fight, and first thing I knowed he give me a jaw breaker. Then some of the [illegible] o' the bull that was standin' by interfered and said we couldn't fight there; we must go outside. So we went out, and all the men follered us. The gals, findin' theirselves without the men, thort they might as well see the fun, and they come out too.

"The moon was full that night and shone like a big round silver dollar. The feller I was to fight—they called him Buck—was six feet high to my five feet eight. If the gal he was to fight for was the belle o' the county he was the bully. He'd licked every man he could get to fight him just as that Sir What-d'ye-call-him in the story had vanquished all the other knights. I wasn't so big as he was, but I was all fired tough. My arms was like a wildcat's fore legs. When I seen the gals gatherin' around I looked for the one that the fight was about. I saw her standin' with her face squared to the moon, and she give me a smile that put enough vim in me to tackle a grizzly.

"I couldn't give you much of an account of the fight 'cause it was twenty-five years ago and a rough and tumble scrap anyway. Didn't neither of us know how to box, and we just slammed at each other like two windmills whose wings had got mixed from bein' too close together. Onct in awhile when I felt discouraged under a sledgehammer blow the feller got in on me I'd look for a smile from the girl. She'd give me one, and I'd start in ag'in purty nigh as fresh as ever.

"The big feller was more ponderous-like than me, but he didn't have my steel muscles, and he didn't have my wind. After awhile he began to breathe kind o' hard, and at last he was hittin' wild. I was as fresh as ever, and when I saw he was givin' out I jist waited awhile till he got well tuckered, then landed a blow on his jaw that sent him sprawlin' on the dirt.

"Just then a rooster tuk it into his head to crow in the middle o' the night, and everybody larfed. We went into the barn, the fiddlers struck up, and I danced with the gal I'd fought for."

"What became of her?" I asked.

"She's in the kitchen there bollin doughnuts."

"Oh, I see! Quite a romance."

"Not much like them tourneyments but really the same thing after all."

At a dinner one evening a discussion arose about the peculiar customs in foreign countries. One gentleman told of the Chinese customs, which are nearly all the exact reverse of our own "They use white for mourning, black for rejoicing and mourn at a birth while they rejoice at death," he remarked. "The needle of their compass points to the south, and they draw the saw toward them to cut. These customs may easily be accounted for, but there remains one which I cannot explain. Why do they take their soup at the end of the meal instead of at the beginning?"

When Cholera Invaded New York.

There was cholera in New York in 1830 and again in 1832. The disease reached the city in June of the latter year and raged until the last of October, causing 3,515 deaths. In 1849 the cholera appeared again, beginning at the "Five Points" and spreading rapidly. The public school buildings were turned into hospitals. The total mortality for the year was about 5,000.—New York American.

Cliffs of Dover.

The Dover cliffs are being steadily eaten away every year. In 1909 thousands of tons of chalk fell from Shakespeare cliff, and three years previously there was a fall during which the coastguard's watchhouse at the summit was hurled into the waves.

BUSINESS WOMEN'S CLOTHES

They Should Be Plain and Comfortable, Yet Withal Becoming.

Everybody seems to disagree about the question of what a girl in an office or other place of business should look like.

Some think that she is better plain, which seems a little hard upon those whom nature has made distinctly pretty.

Others think that, though perhaps a girl is none the worse for being pretty, she had better dress plainly.

And a third set of people affirm that a girl cannot be too pretty in appearance nor too dainty in dress.

So what is the ideal for the business girl, after all?

A little of all three, judiciously combined, of course. If she is pretty, then by all means let her keep her charm. The only thing is that breeding and common sense suggest she should wear becoming but businesslike clothes. Her beauty need not be hidden by dowdiness, but it should be restrained by simplicity.

There is the consolation that youth triumphs over even sober raiment. Indeed, the demure garments of the Quaker maid show off girlish good looks as few more elaborate frocks and hats could do.

Care of the Finger Tips.

A simple method of keeping hands and nails in good order is to halve a lemon, insert the fingers, and turn them round and round in the pulp. This will tend to prevent the skin from growing up round the nails and hiding the white crescent which should always appear at the base of the nail. After washing the hands well in warm water and soap, the skin surrounding the nails should be pushed down by the fingers, or, better still, by a bunt bone instrument made for the purpose.

Persia's Crown.

The Persian crown is made of pure gold, incrusted with precious stones. The Persians declare that the crown is 3,000 years old and belonged to Saladin. A new emerald is added at each coronation. It was formerly the custom for the crown to be suspended by a chain and for the Shah to stand under it, but now two statesmen place it upon the ruler's head.

Too Much Solicitude.

It is not easy to be a good hostess, especially a good tea party hostess. There are many little things to remember.

The hostess wishes guests to enjoy the good things, but solicitude can be overdone.

The writer once went to a tea where the hostess overdid it badly. She must have thought that her guests had had nothing to eat for days by the way she pressed sandwiches and buns, tea, and more cups of tea, on them.

"No, thank you," and "Really, thanks, I have had a huge tea," and the like assurances were useless. The kind hostess continued offering more.

There's a vast difference between "Won't you have a little more?" and "Do try one of these hot buns!" to Mrs. De Fussy's continued badgering to consume more and more.

After all, they were all sensible men and women, with average intelligence and brains—not a party of children at a school treat.

Cool Looking Decoration.

A clear glass bowl such as is used for goldfish, filled with carbonated water, will, if nasturtiums and leaves are placed in it, soon become a mass of frostlike moisture. The escaping gas in the water creeps over each leaf and flower, making the whole seem covered with dew. For luncheon on a hot day it is the most refreshing bit of coolness imaginable.

New Place Cards.

Original and new are place cards having tiny flat baskets or bouquets of paper flowers at one corner. The flowers are in their natural colors, and the bouquets have lace edging around them.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 13.—Strong markets closing higher were the rule following the holiday yesterday. There was a good cash demand for everything but Nos. 2 and 3 northern, which is going into store. Receipts were very light, but stocks in terminals and Canadian visible show big increases, while shipments were only about half those of last year. Export was good over the holiday, and President Wilson's message guaranteeing safety of American shippers is expected to have a bullish effect.

Wheat options opened ⅝c to ⅞c higher, closing ⅝c to 1c higher. Oats opened ½c higher and closed ⅜c to 1⅛c higher. Flax closed lower, being ¼c to 1⅜c under Saturday's close.

Receipts totaled 517 cars as against 1795 cars last year, and in sight were 325 cars.

Cash prices: No. 1 northern, $1.10; No. 2 do., $1.06¼; No. 3 do., $1.01¼; No. 4, 95¼; No. 5, $1; No. 6, 86¼c; feed, 82¼c.

THE ANTIQUE—UP TO DATE.

She gazed at the tall old clock on the stair,
"Twas a relic of days long fled;
A costly timepiece, a treasure rare,
But lately purchased and placed up there,
"A quaint old gem!" she said.

"Did you stand in some old manor hall,
Where the firelight flickered red
On polished floor and on carven wall,
Where fell the shadows of ladies tall
And straightly stiff?" she said.

"Did you look, perchance, on a winsome maid—
Alas, a century dead,
Softly demure and sweetly staid,
In a tortoise shell comb and a gay brocade
With a very short waist?" she said.

"Did you see her lover, a comely swain,
A-bending his stately head
To touch her lips and to touch again
Till her fair cheek warmed with a crimson stain?
Oh, quaint old gem!" she said.

"Ah, the wondrous pictures seen by you
In the days so long since fled!"
But the tall old clock fetched a grin to view;
"I wonder what she would say if she knew
I was made last week?" it said.

Not an Even Break.

Rex and Tommy had been inattentive the whole morning, and the teacher said that each must write his name 200 times as a punishment. Presently when the rest of the class had gone home Tommy was found crying bitterly.

"It's not fair," he sobbed. "Rex has only got to write Rex Dun 200 times, but my name's Thomas O'Shaughnessy."—Dundee Advertiser.

Some eminently sinless people are the cause of a long list of frailties, peccadilloes and crimes in the lives of others.

A man doesn't admire a clever woman for the same reason that he does not admire a clever man. He is a little afraid of each of them.

The really heroic things that we do, like eating a bad dinner and saying it is good, never get into the medal class.

Probably all's well that ends well, but when the good end is a long way off there's not much comfort in the old and toothless saw.

Height of the Panama Canal.

The middle section of the Panama canal, thirty-four miles long, has a water level of eighty-five feet higher than the two end sections, which are sea levels. Vessels entering the canal from the ocean on either side are lifted to the middle section, a height of eighty-five feet, by three sets of locks, each of which raises the vessel a fraction over twenty-eight feet, making a total of eighty-five feet. These locks are constructed side by side like a double track railway, so that one ship may be going up while the other is going down. Only one ship can be in a lock at the same time, but as the locks are constructed in pairs, side by side, two ships going in opposite directions, one going up the incline and the other going down, may pass each other within hailing distance. Vessels are towed through the locks by electric machinery.—Philadelphia Press.

The First Firearms.

The early history of firearms in the sense of tubes from which missiles are thrown by the action of a detonating compound of the nature of gunpowder is wrapped in obscurity, though it may be inferred from the few early records that such weapons were first employed in warfare soon after the beginning of the fourteenth century, if not some time before. The country of their origin remains uncertain, but it was most probably Italy.

Kidneys Wrong?—

If they are you are in danger. When through weakness or disease the kidneys fail to filter the impurities from the blood, trouble comes at once. Backache, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gravel, Diabetes, Gall Stones and the deadly Bright's Disease are some of the results of neglected kidneys. MR. W. H. HILL,

Dear Sir :

I wish to thank you for the very prompt manner in which my claim was settled by the Fidelity and Casualty Co., of New York.

I have carried accident insurance with this Company for a number of years and have always found them and their representatives courteous at all times.

Regarding my recent claim, the claim papers were filled out and sent in on Sept. 29, 1914, and to-day I received a cheque for the full amount of the claim.

Again thanking you for the prompt manner in which this claim has been handled, I am,

Yours truly,

TALES TOLD BY MEN IN THE FIGHTING LINES ON LAND AND ON SEA

The army chaplain, like the Red Cross nurse, often comes more into direct touch with the wounded than do their comrades who are themselves hit and sent back to the hospital; and it may, therefore, be of interest to state a few expressions from letters received in London from a British chaplain on the line of communications. He says:—

"Some of the Welsh soldiers can understand the language of the Bretons, and one of them asked me yesterday how they got here. What pleases the natives most is our soldiers' affection for children. You see them marching along with the little ones toddling hand in hand, perfectly happy. I saw a group of soldiers sitting round another who was nursing a small baby, cooing away in evident delight and the mother standing by very pleased.

"Our poor fellows nave had a real gruelling at the front. From what I can hear from the wounded French attempt to drive a wedge through Namur on to Liege and the Meuse failed, and the whole German force of more than 600,000 men were launched on to the British force to try and envelop the French operating on our right.

"One of the German officers taken prisoner declared he never imagined anything so magnificent as our retreat and that while the British suffered heavily, the Germans suffered even more. The opinion here is that when the whole story is told the retreat from Mons will rank even higher than the retreat of Sir John Moore at Corruna.

"Major ——, of the Coldstreams, now in the hospital, told me of a most stirring incident. The 3rd were told to hold the town of —— against a large force of the enemy. They saw a body of men marching towards them who they first thought to be British infantry, then Belgians, and it was only discovered when they came breast to breast that they were Germans. There was a rough and tumble, and our men eventually ran back under the protection of the guns. With orders to lie on the ground and keep their heads down, they fired on the enemy. Nearly 700 Germans were found dead in the street the next day.

"Your young friend S——, who said he has often stayed with you, is full of pluck and is very bright and cheery, though his legs are paralysed. He spoke with emotion of the pluck of his own men, and told how one of his greatest pals, an officer of the battalion, had taken up a rifle, and was just drawing a bead on a German, saying, 'I thing I've got this fellow,' when he rolled over dead, shot plumb in the forehead.

"One more incident is worth repeating. It was told me by an officer of the 6th Rifles. He was bowled over by a piece of shrapnel, falling all of a heap, when one of his men, whom I remember at Khartoum, ran to him full of sympathy, and covering him with his body, said: 'Never mind, sir, they shan't hit you again; I'll stand here.' In that supreme momnt Tommy was absolutely Christ-like. One can easily see by the bearing of the German prisoners as they march through that they are, on the whole absolutely glad to fall into British hands, while the rest have the look of dull peasantry, staggered and stunned by forces utterly beyond their control."

KAISER TO HOWL FOR PEACE!

There is a bit of "bally swank" in the following from a lance corporal who was apparently irritated in his letter writing by interruptions from the German guns:

"The Germans didn't give us much time for letter writing. This one has been stopped six times already, just because the beggars were creeping too close, and I had to go out with my bayonet to chase them off before settling down again

"What most of us feel here is that the Germans are staking everything on fighting in France and Belgium, and when they are beaten, as they will be, sooner or later, they will howl for peace to save their own country from the horrors of invasion.

"That's an idea we have got from their prisoners and they think it's a rattling good one. If it were left to the army to settle, you may be sure that we'd vote to a man for giving the devils a taste of their own medicins, and you'll see us crossing their sacred Rhine before long, unless you're the greatest fools in creation.

Many a fellow has called a girl Honey, only to be stung in the end.

YEAR OF PROGRESS AT PROTESTANT HOME

Twenty-five meetings of the Board of Directors have been held, and one general meeting of the board called, when the needed changes in the rules and regulations were discussed.

Services have been held every Sunday by the clergy of the city, which have been helpful to and appreciated by the inmates as very few of them are able to go to the services in the churches. We wish to express our thanks to Dr. F. L. Robinson for providing conveyances for the clergy.

Entertainment.

In October, 1913, the Young People's Societies of the city were asked to provide some form of entertainment for the inmates during the long winter months. We expected that our suggestion would be accepted, but the enthusiasm and efficiency with which they met it, and the resulting enjoyable evenings have reached far beyond our expectations. The piano donated to the Home by them in December has been a source of great pleasure to the old people and will be a lasting tribute of their kindness and good wishes.

A jam and linen shower was held in November, which proved a great success. Owing to the generosity of the friends who attended 165 bottles of jam and pickles found their way to the preserve cupboard, and the linen room was also helpfully replenished.

To the ladies of St. John's Church we are indebted for the pleasure they gave the old people by their invitation to attend their production of the Land of Golden Dreams, and the carriages sent to convey those who were able to accept their kind invitation.

Dr. Helen MacMurchy paid a visit of inspection to the Home, which was followed by a most favourable report from the inspector, Dr. Bruce Smith. He suggested that in addition to the precautions already taken in case of fire by the directors, fire escapes be added to the Home. His suggestion has been acted upon and the fire escapes are now in the course of erection.

Christmas Day, in spite of the memories of bereavements and losses it awakened in the thoughts of the old people, was made bright by the kindness and generous donation of their friends. On Christmas Eve they were given a Christmass Tree, during the evening Mr. Devey and his boys made the Home ring with Christmass cheer and good fellowship, that went straight to the hearts of all those present.

In the early summer the Automobile Society of Pterborough gave the old people a most enjoyable outing; to many of them it was an initial experience and was doubly appreciated. They were driven around for an hour or so, then given ice cream and taken home tired but very happy.

Miss Lancaster has proved her worth to the directors and inmates of the Home by another year of faithful service. Her garden was again a source of great pleasure to every one in connection with the Home. In the early spring we joined the Horticultural Society and the bulbs sent by them have helped to make the garden more beautiful than ever.

Owing to the interest taken in the Home by Mr. Downing the manager, trees have been planted and a root-house built in which vegetables for winter use have already been stored. His kindness to the sick is noteworthy and is very much appreciated.

The Board of Directors wish to take this opportunity to thank all those who have taken an active interest in the work of the Home. To the Misses Nicholls for taking charge of the Home while Miss Lancaster was absent on her vacation; to Mr. Fowler for so kindly offering to keep in repair the eyeglasses of the inmates to the doctors for their courteous attention at all times, to the thoughtful friends who have acted as auditors, and to the press of the city, who have published all necessary matter in the running of the Home, and donated copies of their papers.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JEAN A. NEILL,
Secretary of P.P.H.

A farmer living not far from Boston was disappointed the other day when Mrs. Blank, one of his regular customers, refused to buy any more eggs from him. "They are not satisfactory," she told him. "Some of the last lot were not fit to use." "But, Mrs. Blank," remonstrated the old man, "a hen is bound to lay a bad egg now and again."

A young pitcher making his first appearance in big league company hit the first batter, passed the next two, and made a wild throw in the first inning. As he went to the bench the manager of the team asked, "What's the matter? Are you nervous?" Naw, he said angrily, "but my darn limbs shake."

MUSICAL SOCIETY IS ORGANIZED

At a meeting of a number of musical enthusiasts in the Greene Music House last night, a society was organized for the purpose of studying cantatas, light operatic works, parts, songs, etc. The name "The Orpheus Society" was chosen and the following were elcted as officers for the coming season:

Hon. Pres.—Judge Huycke.
Pres.—Mr. G. O. Cameron.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie.
Sec.—Mrs. W. A. Cameron.
Treas.—Miss Richardson.
Librarian—Mr. D. F. Green.

Executive committee: Mrs. J. Locke, Mrs. McElderry, Mrs. Greenslade, Mrs. Whitehouse, Mrs. Sanderson, Mrs. Ed. Jones, Mr. P. Nash.

The conductor, J. Edward Fisher, a new comer added to the local musical circles is well known in Western and Eastern Canada and has had considerable experience in chorus work, being seven years in Western Canada, organist and choirmaster, Metropolitan Church, Regina, conductor of the University of Saskatchewan Glee Club and various other Philharmonic Societies. The rehearsal nights will be on Monday.

Keep soil moist. Whenever a soupbone is to be cooked save the first water that same is washed with (using a very small amount) and put some on the fern. That will aid in making it thrifty. Accasionally take two or three common sulphur matches and thrust heads well in dirt. This will kill a little worm which is very destructive to ferns.

Coin of 1833 Is Unearthed

Charles Wheeler, one of the foremen on street paving, found an old coin this morning on Aylmer street, in front of the old tannery, where the road is being prepared for the concrete. On one side of the coin is the following :

"To facilitate trade," 1833; also an emblem of a plow. On the reverse side the only word that can be discerned at present is Canada, and on this side is an emblem of a sailing ship. This coin is 81 years old.

ANTWERP IS GERMANIZED

Everybody Has to Salute the German Flag

LONDON, Oct. 14.—"The municipal employes of Antwerp have had to swear allegiance to the German Empire," says The Evening News correspondent at Bergen-op-Zoom, Holland, in a despatch dated Monday. The message continues:

"The policemen were allowed to retain their arms. The police have been ordered to remove the Belgian flag from all houses. The usual regulations enforced at Liege, Verviers and other Belgian towns are being introduced in Antwerp. These rules include the obligation to light the houses at night and to leave the doors open. The imperial standard must be saluted when the army is passing through the streets and soldiers have been seen to strike off with their sabres the hats of persons who did not give such a salute.

Already thousands of fugitives are returning to Antwerp, and shops are very slowly reopening. Many more thousands, however, are hesitating, apprehensive that the Germans' present friendly conduct might change later on.

"Up to this time no war contribution has been exacted, but the town is to supply all requisitioned wares free. For instance, two tons of potatoes were to be provided yesterday. All bakers, butchers, grocery and provision dealers not reopening their shops within five days are threatened with stringent measures.

"The Germans say that there are 125,000 of their men in Antwerp, but this figure seems to be exaggerated. Several thousand of the Landwehr troops and marines will probably remain as a garrison.

"Negotiations for the surrender of the city last Friday threatened to collapse because the Germans insisted upon having the signature of the Belgian commander. They eventually accepted that of another officer, M Weerbrouck.."

"Are you saving up something for a rainy day?" "No," replied Farmer Corntossel. "What we're troubled with out this way is the annual drought. If we had more rainy days everybody would have money. —Washington Star.

INTEREST GROWS IN MEETINGS

Rev. H. T. Crossley Speaks to Large Congregation

The Crossley meetings still continue to grow in favor with the people. Last evening the subject was "The Relation of the Gospel to Heaven." It was thoroughly enjoyed by a large congregation.

The music was specially helpful, and the singing was nearty. Among those present were Rev. R. G. Peever, W. H. Dafoe, Manilla; R. Hargrave, Aspinolite; and Rev. J. C. Walker, of London. The attendance of one of the ladies' Sunday School classes in a body, was one of the bright features of the evening.

The theme for tonight is "The Unpardonable Sin."

If bacon is soaked in water for a few minutes before frying it will prevent the fat from running.

Evangelist Crossley's

last week in St. James' Methodist Church, corner Romaine and Aylmer Streets. Program : Wednesday : "The Unpardonable Sin" ; Thursday: The Last Song Sermon ; Friday: "Seven Royal Proclamations"; Sunday, Monday and Tuesday: three days of grace. Come. Everybody welcome.

Rev. Dr. Buchanan the New Moderator

Toronto, Oct. 14.—The Presbyterian Synod of Toronto and Kingston opened its annual session in St. James' Square church last night and will continue in session to-day and part of to-morrow. There was a fair attendance of delegates at last night's meeting, when the chief item of business was the election of a moderator for the ensuing year to succeed Rev. D. A. Thomson, of Hastings, the retiring moderator. The remainder of the meeting was devoted to devotional exercises, and the sermon by the retiring moderator, who dealt with the spiritual force of Christianity and its superiority to all other religions.

Two nominations for moderator were received, one from the Presbyteries of Guelph and Peterborough for Rev. A. B. Dobson, of Saugeen, who was second choice last year; the other for Rev. Dr. Buchanan, of Elmvale, the later being chosen by a considerable majority.

* * *

Rev. H. J. Keith went to Toronto to-day to attend the synod, and Rev. James Rollins will go to-morrow.

The call to Rev. H. J. Keith from Edmonton will likely be dealt with at a special meeting of the Presbytery.

When You Want to Laugh---Eat !

And If You Want to Eat Without Food Fears Take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet After Each Meal.

Laugh, smiles and mirth never go with a "caved-in" stomach. Fancy a-man-afraid-of-his-food laughing! There is always that haunting feeling that a sick stomach is nothing to be mirthful about.

"My old grouchy days are funny to me now."

Just make up your mind to help nature help herself. Give your body a chance to make good. Heal the raw edges of your stomach and give your blood the tools to make digestive fluids with.

There is only one way to make the body well — give it the chance to make itself well. Harmful and strong medicines handicap the system. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go into the stomach just like food. They are dissolved and they strengthen the weakened juices of the digestive apparatus until the digestion is made normal.

There is nothing mysterious or magical about them. Science has proved that certain ingredients make Dyspepsia Tablets are these concenup the digestive juices. Stuart's trated ingredients—that is all there is to it. One grain of a certain ingredient contained in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest 3,000 grains of food. This illustrates how you aid nature to restore her wornout materials. When a stomach which is filled with food receives a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet, it is more able to digest the food than it would be without it. The work is not so hard nor the task so long.

When the meal is finally assimilated the entire system absorbs more nourishment and harmful food effects are eliminated easily, quickly and with the maximum of benefit.

Every drug store carries Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. To anyone wishing a free trial of these tablets please address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., and a small sample package will be mailed free.

Canadian Red Cross Society

The Red Cross society is an international society, with branches in every civilized country, and works under the authority of the Geneva convention of 1864.

Her Majesty Queen Alexandra is president, and the Right Hon. Lord Rothschild is chairman of the council of the British society.

A Canadian society was organized in 1896, in affiliation with the British society, with headquarters in Toronto.

The Red Cross co-operates in times of war with the hospital service of the armies, renders aid to the sick and wounded and provides money and supplies for this work of mercy and humanity.

The Peterborough branch, working under instructions from headquarters in Toronto, makes an appeal to the public for membership or contributions to enable them to carry on their splendid work. Life membership is $25.00. Ordinary membership is $2.00.

The need is pressing. The call is one of humanity.

The officers of the Peterborough Red Cross committee are : Mrs. J. C. Davidson, convener ; Mrs. Fed Roy treasurer ; Miss L. J. Davidson, secretary.

ARE FLEEING TO BRITAIN

Belgians at Ostend Clamor for Passage Across Channel

LONDON, Oct. 14.—As early as 8 o'clock yesterday morning the harbor station at Ostend was besieged by thousands of people anxious to get aboard the mail boats, according to a despatch from the Ostend correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co.

Members of the Belgian Government, the diplomatic corps and other officials left for Havre on the first two steamers. The later boats were literally stormed by a crowd of fugitives, many even getting on board by way of the luggage chute.

Among yesterday's arrivals at Folkestone and Dover were several hundred wounded Belgian soldiers. It is likely that their number will be considerably increased in the course of the next few days. They are being looked after by the relief committees for wounded allies, and are being sent in small bodies to different provincial cities and towns, where arrangements have been made to provide them with hospital accommodation.

It is estimated that already nearly 600,000 Belgian refugees have landed on these shores. It is feared that the stream of refugees will increase in volume as the German occupation of Belgium becomes more complete.

The War Refugees Committee is at present unable to find accommodations for them. Herbert Samuel, President of the Local Government Board, yesterday issued an appeal asking that committees be formed in various parts of the country to assist in obtaining food and shelter for the strangers, and to help find homes in which they may be placed.

HUNGARY IS SEEKING TERMS

Diplomat Says Offers Are Being Made to Russia

PETROGRAD, Oct. 14.—(Via London.)—The Roumanian Minister to Russia, C. Diamandy, to-day gave out a statement concerning the attitude of his country as regards the war. The statement says in part:

"In view of the conflicting reports and general obscurity surrounding Roumania's attitude since the death of the late king, I will say that at present Roumania is prevented from rendering active assistance to the allies by the necessity of keeping troops along the Danube. I know for a fact of the existence of pourparlers between Russia and Hungary regarding the ceding of Transylvania and the guaranteeing to Hungary of national severance from Austria in return for Hungary's withdrawal of her troops from Cracow. Hungary's attempts are not seriously regarded by Roumania, for we feel that so long as the present Russian Foreign Ministry is in office our interests will be safeguarded. Moreover, the Hungarian conversations are not official, but are instigated by Hungarian prisoners in Russia."

American army officers who went to Europe to observe military tactics are being held in London by the British Government.

RUSSIAN FORCES ARE IN LONG LINE TO MEET THE AUSTRO-GERMAN MOVE

Russian Advices Say the Siege of Przemysl is Progressing and Forts Are Being Demolished by Russian Guns---East Prussian Advance is Slower---Germany is Collecting Equipment of the Dead.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—It is officially announced at Petrograd that the siege of Przemysl is progressing, according to a despatch to a local news agency from the Russian capital. The Czar's artillery is rapidly destroying the forts, which, however, continue an energetic resistance. The Przemysl garrison, it is announced, does not exceed 30,000 men.

Of fighting in Galicia the official reports from Petrograd and Vienna are so directly at variance that there is no reconciling them. Vienna says that the relief of Przemysl is complete, while Petrograd declares that the Russian artillery is achieving great success.

The general opinion gathered from the various reports is that the Russians have withdrawn to a line starting from Sambor, in Galicia, and passing through Przemysl, Sandomir and Ivangorod, and thence to the west of Warsaw, roughly, along the San and Vistula rivers, where they are waiting to meet the advancing Austro-German armies on ground of the Russians own choosing.

The biggest forces are between Sandomir and Ivangorod, which is the centre of the German advance. The fighting thus far is only of advance guard character, or probably, where the Russians are withdrawing, in the nature of rear guard actions.

The Germans seemingly are completely cut of the Suwalki and Lomza districts, but the Russian advance into East Prussia is making little if any progress. Probably both are willing to wait where they are until the bigger battle to the south has been decided. The Germans, it is said, have been surprised by the early setting in of winter, and not being provided with heavy clothing, such as the Russians have, are suffering severely.

In the sinking of the cruiser Pallada by a German submarine the Russian navy has suffered quite a heavy loss. Russia has too few ships as it is, and the loss of a cruiser of the Pallada class is of serious consequence.

A statement given out by the Russian Government says:

"The German losses have forced the German Government to revoke all exemptions to the military service.

"The German army, being short of equipment, an order has been issued to bury the dead soldiers without uniforms and shoes."

Prince Oleg, a son of Grand Duke Constantine, has died of wounds received in action. An official despatch from Petrograd, on Oct. 11, said that Prince Oleg had been wounded during a cavalry engagement.

Warsaw In Peril?

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14. — News from the war in the east is contained in a despatch from the American consul in Warsaw, which says that the capital of Russian Poland is threatened by the Germans, and its fall is expected at any moment. The motive for conveying this information is the consul's expressed request for instructions as to the care of foreign interests during the expected period of German occupation.

Scheme to Rob The Veterans

OTTAWA, Oct. 14.—It has come to the attention of the Department of Militia and Defence that in certain parts of the country persons are endeavoring to collect sums of money from those entitled to the Fenian Raid bounty. The claim is put forward on the pretence of assistance in filling up the claim papers. The Department will not recognize any such attempt to extract money from the veterans, and hopes that no veteran will pay a claim of this kind.

Farmers Are Generous.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 14. — Major Graham's scheme for the distribution among the poor of the city of farm produce being donated by farmers of the district is working out well. The cellar of the City Hall is being used as a receiving station and distributing centre. Farmers and vegetable growers are generous in their contributions. A Lobo Township farmer yesterday offered 1,100 barrels of apples absolutely free of charge.

Paris Now Guarded.

PARIS, Oct. 14. — Two French aerial vedettes patrolled the sky above Paris yesterday watching for German raiders. Other French aircraft were in readiness at the aviation posts to take the air if an enemy was sighted. Crowds gathered in the squares and open spaces of the city to watch the manoeuvring of the French aeroplanes.

The Chicago News remarks that the American trade of the moment appears to be all dressed up and nowhere to go.

Mme. Van der Velde at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Oct. 14.—Madame Lalla Van der Velde, wife of the Belgian Minister of State, was the guest at luncheon yesterday at Government House. After lunch Their Royal Highnesses gave her checks amounting to $600 for the Belgian relief fund, for which she is making a special appeal in Canada and the United States. One check for $250 was given by the duke, another for the same amount by the duchess, and one for $100 by Princess Patricia. Maurice Goor, the Belgian consul-general, was also a guest at the luncheon.

Servian Princes Wounded.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The Star's Copenhagen correspondent says The Vossiche Zeitung of Berlin reports the Crown Prince Alexander of Servia has been slightly wounded and that his brother, Prince George of Servia, has been mortally wounded in the fighting against the Austrians.

Hostile Ships Sighted.

PARIS, Oct. 14.—A strong German squadron, flying the flag of Prince Henry of Prussia, is cruising around the Aland Islands in the Baltic, according to a message from Helsingfors, transmitted to the Havas Agency from Petrograd.

Cardinal Gasparri Is Secretary.

ROME, Oct. 14.—(Via Paris.)—Cardinal Pietro Gasparri has been selected by the Pope to fill the position of secretary of state, made vacant by the death of Cardinal Ferrata.

British Air Raid Costly.

LONDON, Oct. 14—A letter received in Amsterdam from Dusseldorf, says The Daily Chronicle's Amsterdam correspondent, declares that in the recent British aeroplane raid on Dusseldorf, besides a Zeppelin airship being destroyed, four persons were killed and many wounded.

PRECEDENT OF 1870

Mr. Lloyd George in his speech at the Queen's Hall, London, recently brought out one point in the case against Germany. He said:—

"This was not the only country to defend Belgium and her integrity. Russia, France, Austria and Prussia—they are all there. Why did they not perform the obligation? It is suggested that when you quote this treaty, it is purely an excuse on our part. It is our low craft and cunning, just to cloak our jealousy of a superior civilization which we are attempting to destroy.

Our answer is the action we took in 1870. What was that? Mr. Gladstone, was then Prime Minister. Lord Granville, I think was then Foreign Secretary. I have never heard it alleged to their charge that they were ever Jingo. What did they do in 1870? We called upon the belligerent powers to respect that treaty. We called upon France, we called upon Germany. At that time, bear in mind, the greatest danger to Belgium came from France and not from Germany. We intervened to protect Belgium against France exactly in the same way. We invited both the belligerent powers to state what they had no intention of violating Belgium territory. What was the answer given by Bismarck? He said it was superfluous to ask Prussia such a question in view of the treaties in force. France gave a similar answer.

We received the thanks at that time of the Belgian people for our intervention in a very remarkable document. This is in a document addressed by the municipality of Brussels to Queen Victoria after that intervention.

"The great and noble people over whose destinies you preside have just given a further proof of its benevolent sentiments towards this country. The voice of the English nation has been heard above the din of arms. It has asserted the principles of justice and right. Next to the unalterable attachment of the Belgian people to their independence the strongest sentiment which fills their hearts is that of an imperishable gratitude to the people of Great Britain."

That was in 1870. Mark what follows. Three or four days after that document of thanks the French army was wedged up against the Belgian frontier. Every means of escape shut up by a ring of flame from Prussian cannon. There was one way to escape. What was that? By violating the neutrality of Belgium. What did they do? The French on that occasion preferred ruin, humiliation to the breaking of their bond.

The French Emperor, French marshals, 100,000 gallant Frenchmen in arms preferred to be carried captive to the strange land of their enemy rather than dishonor the name of their country. It was the last French army defeat. Had they violated Belgian territory the whole history of that war would have been changed. And yet it was the interest of France to break the treaty. She did not do it.

It is the interest of Prussia to break the treaty, and she has done it. Well, why? She avowed it with cynical contempt for every principle of justice. She says treaties only bind you when it is to your interest to keep them. "What is a treaty?" says the German Chancellor, "a scrap of paper."

Col. Sam Hughes May Lose Auto

OTTAWA, Oct. 14.—Before sailing for England, it is said, Col. Sam Hughes had his automobile shipped to Ostend, so as to facilitate his movements in France when he went over to see war at close range. In view of recent happenings his friends say that it will be a matter of interest to see who enjoys the use of the automobile, the Canadian Minister of Militia, or some of Kaiser William's officers.

THE SPORTING WORLD

J. EVERS HELPED THE BRAVES TAKE CHAMPIONSHIP WITH FOUR GAMES

Boston Captain Singled With Two on in the Fifth, Scoring Brace of Runs

Boston, Oct. 14. — The Boston Braves are world's champions after four games with the men of Mack. It was one, two, three, four and no excuses offered The Braves had the pitchers and the Athletics could not hit. Yesterday's fourth and deciding game was a clean win for the Braves.

Dick Rudolph was sent back to the hill and Boston hopes were realized. The hero of the opening game repeated.

Rudolph started in with perfect control. He got the first two on easy chances. Collins tore a single over second, but Baker raised to centre. Dick pitched only two that were not over in the innings.

Boston went out in order in their first, Baker making two nice plays on the first two up.

Athletics got after Rudolph better than in the first game. McInnis was beaten on a one-hand stab by Deal to open the second. Walsh came through with a smashing drive to left field fence for two bases, but stayed there when Barry grounded to short and Schang was fanned in easy fashion.

Gowdy's walk with two out was the only incident in Boston's second. He stayed on first. Shawkey was pitching nice ball.

Deal's fine pick-up and throw on Murphy halted what looked like a sure hit after Shawkey had struck out in Athletics' third. Oldring followed with a clean single past short, but was headed stealing by a perfect throw by Gowdy.

Athletics Look Good.

With a third of the game over, everything favored Athletics who were hitting much more freely, and only brilliant fielding by Deal stopped them They had been given harder chances than Boston, and the only home man to get on was on a pass. Athletics had a man on in each inning on clean hits, and were hitting much better than they had yet done.

In Athletics' fourth, with one down, Baker's hard hit took a sudden bound and caught Schmidt in the jaw as he ran in to scoop it. McInnis rifled past short, sending Baker to third, but lightning work, Connolly to Deal to Evers, nailed McInnis trying to make second. Walsh fanned. The Athletics did not score, but were forcing Boston to the limit on the defence.

Boston scored in their fourth. Evers opened with a pass. Collins fumbled on Connolly long enough to let Evers to second, but got the batter. Whitted banged hard at Collins, who twisted his ankle as he went for it, and it was safe. Schmidt's grounder to short scored Evers. Gowdy singled to pitcher. Whitted's hit was doubtful, but it bounded badly.

Barry's First Hit.

Barry got his first hit of the series to open Athletics' fifth, a bounder over third, with Maranville all but beat him on. Incidentally Athletics had not failed in any innings to hit safely. He advanced on Schang's grounder to second. Shawkey helped materially with a ripping double to left-centre, evening the score. Murphy couldn't do better than a grounder to second and Oldring fanned weakly with Shawkey on third.

Rudolph started a Boston hitting rally with two out in the fifth. He rifled a single over second, and Moran followed it with a double to left centre.

Evers Scored Two.

Evers stood three and two when he tore a single over second, scoring two. Shawkey certainly made a mistake in not passing Evers up when he got in a hole on him. He pinched him leading off first, but the damage was done. It was the first real hitting Boston had done.

Baker

Maranville made a great play and Schmidt another to get Collins to begin Athletics' sixth. Baker and McInnis could do nothing.

Pennock took up the pitching for Philadelphia to begin the sixth He is a left hander, and Mann, a right hander batted to Connolly. He flied out, but Whitted and Schmidt both singled. It was a man on third and one on first and Gowdy up, but the slugger fanned. Schmidt started a double steal but was collared.

Rudolph gave his first first pass to Walsh to start the seventh. A wild pitch sent him to second. Barry fell down on a strike-out, and Gowdy shot the ball like a flash to Evers to get Walsh off second. Schang fanned.

The seventh gave Boston nothing, though Rudolph pulled a walk with two out.

Mann's Fine Catch.

Evers fumbled on Pennock in the eighth, but got him. Mann dashed across to rob Murphy of what looked good for a double. Oldring popped to second. A pass to Whitted with two out in the Boston's eighth, a steal, and a passed ball gave Schmidt a chance, but he was struck out with the runner on third. The Athletics went out, one, two, three in the ninth.

A letter received from Berlin tells of stories in circulation there, including the destruction of half of London by Zeppelins and the burning of Plymouth.

No. 8 Fell Before Bugle Band Play

The game of indoor baseball at the Armouries last evening proved a big surprise, the Band winning from No. 8 Company to the tune of 11-6, No. 8 Company have been cleaning up all the indoor baseball games at the Armouries. They have a good team, too, but their defeat last evening must be attributed to their overconfidence. It was not for lack of practice for they have been practising very strenuously. It was a big surprise, and the most surprised was No. 8 Company themselves. The batteries for the Band were: Swanson and Grange; for No. 8, Hardell and Turner.

He Didn't Go.

Preparatory School Sports

Old Boys Defeated the Youngsters in Football

Lakefield, Oct. 14. — Lakefield Preparatory School held its annual sports on Monday the 12th. Beautiful weather contributed largely to the success of the occasion. The day began with a football match between old boys and the school team. The Old Boys were particularly strong this year and defeated the youngsters by the score of 23 to 9.

In the afternoon large crowds of spectators watched the boys compete in the various contests of running and jumping. Parents and friends motored from Toronto and Peterboro and the school campus presented a lively and pretty scene with its background of trees gorgeous in autumn coloring and the bordering lake sparkling in brilliant sunshine.

Among those on the field your correspondent noticed Mrs. Wallace Nesbitt, Mrs. Cawthra, Mr. and Mrs. J. Suydam and Messrs. B. Lumsden, D. Fotheringham, J. Harman, E. Morris, all from Toronto, with Dr. and Mrs. Cameron and Miss Hare, Mrs. F. Morris, Messrs. J. H. Burnham, M.P., Mr. Ryerson Ritchie, Mr. R. W. Travers and party and Mr. R. M. Hamilton from Peterboro. For all the events there was a large entry list and keen competition. The pole vaulting should be specially mentioned, a height of 7 ft., 3 in. being reached by a boy of twelve years. The winners were as follows:—

Long jump (inter.)—1 Hewson, 2 Chase.

Long jump (open)—1 Merritt, 2 Patterson.

High jump (open)—1 Patterson, 2 Merritt.

Bicycle race—1 Crawford, 2 Hadley.

220 yds. (jun.) — 1 Langley, 2 Bruce.

220 yds. (inter.)—1 Hewson, 2 Smith.

220 yds. (open)—1 Cameron, 2 Mackenzie I.

The late Col. Sweeny was staff officer of pensioners for many years for the district of Montreal.—Mail and Empire.

More than one hundred people sat down to an old fashioned tea in St. John's school house on Monday evening. The tea was given by the Church Women's Association of St. John's and proved an unqualified success. Judging from the "rapid disappearing act" performed by the various edibles, the pies and other dishes on the menu must have almost equalled those "that our mothers used to make." The hall and tables were prettily decorated and the entire entertainment reflected great credit to all those who took part in it.

A NUMBER FOR WOMEN

There are in the world six countries in which, according to the last issue of the "Canada Life Echoes," women have full parliamentary suffrage, and in a surprisingly large number of countries they have a partial franchise. The article dealing with this matter in the October number of the "Canada Life Echoes" is but one of several that are designd to interest the fenimine reader. The issue takes the form of a number for women, and it is illustrated with many extremely interesting pictures of activities into which the modern woman so largely enters. Several features of the book give it a permanent value. One of these is a comprehensive series of directions for first aid ministrations to victims of accidents. Prompt and intelligent action has frequently been the means of saving lives that otherwise would have been lost. In any case, pain can be ameliorated and the results of accidents can be made less disastrous. Other attractive features make up this book, and it will be sent free to anyone forwarding name and address to W. R. Scadding, District Agent, Canada Life Assaciation Co., Peterboro.

OMEMEE NEWS.

Omemee, Oct. 14.—Dr. Cook of North Bay spent several days in town with Mr. S. Grandy. He arrived here from London, England, where he was during the first weeks of the war. In order to get across the Atlantic, Dr. Cook was obliged to book as ship's surgeon

Mr. W. H. Kennedy of Lindsay, was in town during the last week on business.

The Methodist anniversary last Sunday and Monday was a success. The services on Sunday were conducted by the popular new pastor, Rev. J. W. Down. The choir rendered several anthems. On Monday evening a fowl supper was served in the basement of the church and a short entertainment given in the church. Everyone expressd satisfaction.

GERMAN ADVANCE ON WARSAW REPULSED

MARKED PROGRESS BETWEEN ARRAS AND ALBERT--FOE'S OFFENSIVE MOVEMENT NORTH OF ST. DIE CHECKED

SITUATION TO DEVELOP MORE RAPIDLY ON CENTER AND LEFT

Allies Continue to Make Progress and Several Positions Which Have Been in the Balance Are Now Held by Allies

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Bordeaux, Oct. 15.—A high official of the French government declared this morning that latest despatches from the front showed the military situation was about to develop more rapidly on the centre, in the region of Barry-Au-Bac, and on the left in La Bassee, Estaires and Bailleul district.

The allies continue to make progress, this official continued.

Several hotly contested positions, which had changed hands repeatedly during the past few weeks, were now held strongly by the French and Anglo-French.

The situation was most encouraging.

MARKED PROGRESS MADE.

Paris, Oct. 15.—The afternoon official communication says the Germans have evacuated the left bank of the river Lys. There has been marked progress between Arras and Albert.

Several German trenches have been taken in the direction of Berry-Au-Bac. The French advanced yesterday toward the highway between Verdun and Metz.

The German offensive movement to the north of St. Die has been definitely checked.

GAVE THE POLICE MUCH TROUBLE

ENEMY HURLED BACK FROM WARSAW

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 15.—The Times' Petrograd correspondent wires that Germans approached within ten miles of Warsaw but were thrown back to a distance of thirty miles.

The fall of Przemysle is imminent, the garrison being decimated by cholera and Russians man the forts already taken.

There is no change in East Prussia.

COMPLETE DEFEAT FOR AUSTRO-GERMAN FORCES IN VICINITY OF WARSAW

Austrians and Germans Suffered Enormous Losses and Russians Took Thousands of Prisoners

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 15.—A despatch from Petrograd to the Messegro of Rome says the Austro-German army yesterday was completely defeated in the neighborhood of Warsaw, Russian Poland.

Austrians and Germans suffered enormous losses.

The Russians are stated to have taken thousands of prisoners.

GIVE INSTRUCTION ON HOW TO ACT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 15.—The Times calls on the government to instruct the people and authorities how to act in the event of a German invasion of England, which lack of great success on the continent may lead them to attempt.

These figures are supplied by the consuls of these two nations.

LAUNCH IS HELD

Crew Suspected of Intercepting Wireless Messages

TWO HELD AS SPIES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Nanaimo, Oct. 15.—The ninety ton gasoline launch "Empress Ninth" was captured by Canadian authorities yesterday at Comox spit in Union Bay. The crew, two men and a woman, all giving the name of Kohfe, were taken into custody.

The launch had about nine months provisions and supplies aboard, carried three auxiliary engines and was equipped with wireless apparatus. It is supposed the crew were intercepting messages from the wireless station at Cape Lazo. Two other men, also named Kohfe, were arrested at Campbell River. They were charged with being German spies.

Both parties were sent to Nanaimo to wait further instructions. The launch left Victoria a few days ago without clearance papers.

DREADNOUGHT IS DESTROYED

Six New Torpedo Boats Are Damaged

WORK OF SPIES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 15.—A Central News despatch from Rome says fire in the arsenal at Trieste has practically destroyed an Austrian dreadnought nearly completed, besides damaging six new torpedo boats.

The fire is believed to be the work of spies. A number of workmen have been arrested. The arsenal itself was greatly damaged.

PITIFUL SCENES AT OSTEND MARK APPROACH OF GERMANS

Refugees Crowd Around Docks, Pouring Into Steamers as Fast as They Can be Provided.

OSTEND, Oct. 15.—(Via London.)—Ostend's fate hangs in the balance. The Government has left. King Albert and the main military headquarters left Tuesday, and 60,000 panic-stricken people await the action of the Germans, who are known to have a large force within twenty miles of the city.

The inhabitants are fleeing as fast as ships can be provided to carry them to England; hospitals were emptied yesterday and the docks were lined with injured soldiers. Hundreds were carried on litters, while those less severely wounded hobbled on canes and crutches, supported by Red Cross nurses, doctors, nuns and priests.

The wounded were given preference on the transports provided for the beleaguered city, while 25,000 struggling people were massed upon the docks and terminals in an effort to find a place on the refugee ships.

A German taube flew over the harbor and struck terror to those below, many of whom had made their way here from Antwerp in the fear that the aeroplane might attempt to drop bombs on the docks and the great glass sheds which cover the joint terminals of the railways and steamships.

Last night was a horrible nightmare to the residents of Ostend and the thousands of refugees fleeing before the German invasion. Wounded soldiers were brought here by the score from Ghent. It is reported that they were engaged Monday near Ghent in a serious battle with the Germans. The allies are said to have had a small force against a large German force and were obliged to withdraw toward the west. Consequently there is virtually no obstacle to the German advance on Ostend.

Firing in the direction of Ghent was heard plainly in Ostend on Monday and Tuesday. The terrified refugees who were at the siege of Antwerp blanched as they listened to the bombardment and increased the fear among the residents of Ostend by describing the horrors of that fallen fortress.

The failure of the Germnas to arrive at daybreak on Wednesday afforded only a slight relief to the anxious crowds. Rumors were current that German cavalry was less than 20 miles away, and the appearance of the taube in the sky was taken as an indication that the Germans were perfecting their plan for entering the city.

Practically no government of any sort remains at Ostend; the departure of King Albert and military headquarters left only the civil guard and policemen, who are attempting to preserve order, but there is lack of direction as the burgomaster, head of the municipal government has left also.

The crowds mass about the gangways of the vessels, making the work of embarking the refugees more difficult. Women and children are trampled in the stampede, as of frightened animals, at every rumor. Bundles of clothes, trunks and bags are stacked everywhere in confusion, preventing the free movement of the crowds.

GERMANS TRANSFERRING TROOPS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 15.—The Times' Copenhagen correspondent says that having found the Russians unable to make any progress against them, the Germans are transferring large masses of troops from the Eastern to the Western theatre of war for an advance on Paris. The same correspondent reports a large amount of success among German troops.

CANADIANS HAVE IDEAL CAMP ON SALISBURY PLAIN WOODEN FLOORS IN TENTS

London, Oct. 15.—Situated about 16 miles from the city of Salisbury, the Canadian troops' camp, where 32,000 men will be stationed for training purposes, will be the Mecca for many visitors soon.

Salisbury Plain, where four camps are being prepared, is an ideal place for training purposes, the land being undulating and dry, and the camps, for the most part, are situated on gentle slopes, calculated to let water run off if the wet weather of the past week continues.

Tents are being supplied to the Canadians, the same being furnished with straw stuffed palliases and wooden floors. Thus they will fare better than many of the Territorials, who slept on Mother Earth, wrapped in blankets.

There will be marquees for the officers' messes for the different brigades; also Y. M. C. A. recreation rooms and canteens where soft drinks will be served.

CHARTER GRANTED

Municipal Aid Association is Launched

TORONTO, Oct. 15.—The second piece of special legislation authorized by the Ontario Government because of the industrial conditions prevailing in the province, was passed through the Cabinet yesterday when the charter of the Municipal Aid Association was formally approved. This measure with that which allows appeal to courts in case of mortgage foreclosure, will come before the Legislature when next it convenes, appearing as a private bill and will require merely the formality of adoption.

The movement, which was begun by W. K. McNaught, C.M.G., was designed from the first to provide some means of relief to worthy people who are in danger of being crowded to the wall by heavy financial demands during the winter. Small amounts will be loaned to applicants on the best security which they can offer.

The intention is to extend the idea to all the larger centres in the province and to enlist the co-operation of leading men in industrial life.

SHOT WIFE AND SELF

Double Tragedy Enacted in Winnipeg Store

WINNIPEG, Oct. 15.—After charging his 22-year-old wife with going around with other men, Frank Ward, a teamster, aged 27, shot her dead in the retail butcher shop of the Gibson, Gage Co., 624 Notre Dame avenue, at which she was employed as cashier. He then turned the revolver on himself, and ended his life. The murder and suicide occurred shortly before one o'clock yesterday afternoon. Ward's shots caused instant death, and one bullet into his own neck killed him.

Mrs. Ward was formerly Miss May McFayden, of Manitou, Manitoba, and for a time was a school teacher in the Stonewall district. They had been married eighteen months.

Mayor Thinks Britain Spends Too Much Abroad

MONTREAL, Oct. 15.—On motion of Mayor A. Michaud, the Maisonneuve City Council yesterday passed a resolution protesting against the alleged action of the Imperial authorities, whom the council accused of sending orders to the United States for material which may be procured in Canada at prices which defy competition. A copy of the resolution will be forwarded to Ottawa and to the Imperial authorities in London.

Mayor Michaud referred to many of the local industries which had all but closed down as the result of the stagnation in the business world. This stress, the mayor said, could be relieved to a very great extent by the Imperial authorities giving Canadian companies a chance to supply the present requirements of the Home Government.

CAME TO THE WRONG PLACE

Local Police Make Arrests for Colborne and Regina Authorities

On July 23, 1914, Manuel Hannah, it is alleged, stole a team of bay horses from a farmer, in Avonhurst, Sask. Police Chief Thompson received word to be on the lookout for him. He was described as being 35 years of age, 5 feet, 6 inches tall and about 140 pounds in weight. Last evening Hannah was arrested by P. C. Servante after the man had been in the city only a few hours.. P. C. Servante is evidently wide awake.

The prisoner will be held here until an officer is sent from the West.

Two men and a woman who are wanted in Colborne on a charge of stealing from hotels, have been rounded up here. Chief Constable Jamieson came to the city to take them back to Colborne where they will stand trial.

CITY SOLICITOR TO SECURE EXPERT EVIDENCE FOR THE ARBITRATION PROCEEDINGS

The power committee in a short session last night empowered the city solicitor to secure expert evidence on behalf of the city, for the arbitration proceedings in connection with the expropriation of the Peterborough Light and Power Co.'s property.

There was very little other business to transact as the Utilities Commission have taken a burden off the shoulders of the committee by taking over the operation of the light and power system.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1914

A DOMINION ELECTION.

OF LATE, references to a Dominion election have appeared in various newspapers. Some think the time is opportune for the Conservative Government at Ottawa to make a safe appeal to the people. There is no doubt that if the Borden Government made an appeal now, it would be returned. The Liberals would have really no effective policy to offer in opposition, and it would be practically necessary to retain the present party in power in view of the state of war which now prevails. But, with the information now in possession of the public, such an appeal would be made distinctly for party purposes, and on that score the Conservative Government has no need to make such an appeal. The policy of the Borden Government has received, at least since the war broke out, almost national support. The Liberal Opposition has co-operated with it, and there has been a much-reduced amount of criticism in the Liberal press. We think the Borden Government has met the problems that faced it since 1911 in a most efficient way. Its naval or imperial policy has been justified by the present war. The emergency has been proved to have existed, yet we are glad to say the Conservative party leaders refrained from throwing stones at the Liberals in the present crisis. The people know, and the Liberal party knows, that Sir Robert Borden's statement of the imperial situation was correct, yet contentious arguments were not bandied in the House in view of the imperial need for united action. On the whole, the people of Canada recognize the splendid work done by the Conservative Government, and we think the Conservatives have the support of the people, and that there is no occasion to distrust them by taking a snap verdict in time of strees and trial. When the time arrives for a vote of the people, as provided in the Constitution of Canada, it will be necessary to make an appeal, and if it can be delayed till then, the Conservative party will be avoiding any charge of bending to party expediency.

But there may be just cause for an early election. There may be members of the Government who honestly think that a vote of the people should be taken before further aid be granted to Britain. Already a sum has been voted much larger than that involved in the Borden Naval Policy. Public opinion seems to demand a second contingent, and third if necessary. That means more money bills, for providing military forces is expensive. There may also be important legislative measures in contemplation. Certainly if there is a real need for getting national assent to particular measures, the Government should not be criticized for calling an election. The Ottawa Citizen (Conservative) thinks a referendum should be taken to avoid an election, if a decision as to a legislative measure is required. We do not favour referendums—Yankee subterfuges to get around awkward constitutional restrictions. If the occasion demands it, let us face the music; if not important, no election is wanted. The whole situation depends thus on what the Premier, Sir Robert Borden, has to bring before the people.

SENATE REFORM THE ISSUE.

THE NEXT ELECTION is likely to be fought on the Senate. The Senate has been a bone of contention for a long time. Both parties have for many years put it on their program that the Senate should be mended or ended. In fact, it has been frequently stated that the Senate should be abolished. As a nest for those who demand rewards and a life pension, the Senate has done very well, but as an exponent of public opinion it has, of course, done nothing, and frequently worse than nothing. There are able and distinguished men in the Senate, but that does not excuse the fact that the Senate is an irresponsible body. Canada fought hard and succeeded in getting responsible government. It was the life-work of the Canadian people, and the great fruition of modern civilization. It has always been a mystery why the Senate was retained, as it is at present constituted. It was like the old Legislative Council, which was appointed by the old governors, but was not responsible to the people, and produced continual friction, which ended at last in responsible government for Canada. Now, however, we find that in reforming the old situation we left some very important remnants, which time has shown must be reformed. There is no use whatever in electing a House of Commons if the Senate can quietly take the bills, including money bills, and throw them into the wastepaper basket, and, in addition, have the power accorded to them, not by right, but by remission, to initiate bills of their own accord. The result of all this is that the Senate is vastly more powerful than the House of Commons, and when we see it rejecting the chief planks in the platform of a responsible administration — an administration which went to the country, and on its promises was returned to power — we see how necessary it is to end the conflict, and it remains with the people whether they will end it in favour of the House whose members they elect or of the House whose members they have no control over.

The manifest intention of Sir Robert Borden to go to the country for the further reform of the Constitution, and for the further triumph of the people cannot be criticized.

In the few years since the Conservative party has been in power, no less than seven most important bills have been deliberately thrown out by the Senate, one, strange to say, to which the Opposition agreed, namely the Intercolonial Bill, which provided for the purchase of all the short lines connected with the Intercolonial. This bill was fully endorsed by both sides of the House of Commons. The Opposition approved of it, spoke in favour of it. Even Sir Wilfrid Laurier gave his full endorsation of it. But the Senate threw it out, although the whole press and people of the Maritime Provinces approved of the bill. It was thought to be the fruition of the efforts of the people since the beginning to make the Intercolonial what it ought to be, fully connected with all the sources of traffic of the country through which it passes. This arrangement also provided for the destruction of all monopolies which the owners of these short lines sometimes exercised, to the great loss of the people. These short lines also gave monopolies in certain districts which were very detrimental to the welfare of the producer, especially the farmer. When it was sought by a great reconstructive measure to put the Intercolonial and the business of the Maritime Provinces on a sure and sound footing, the Senate, without excuse, threw it out.

It is not necessary to mention the other bills, such as an increased representation for the West the Highways Bill, and the Naval Aid Bill. To suppose that the Dominion of Canada should spend money on highways without seeing how that money is spent, is too absurd to debate, and, moreover, it is thoroughly unconstitutional. Subsidies are provided for by the Federation Bill, but if the Senate has done right, then the power which the Dominion Government has to build and improve highways is entirely mythical, and this is not true. The more we investigate it the more it will be seen that the Senate is becoming what is known as a block, determined from its high and exalted position to exercise functions entirely repugnant to the spirit and prosperity of democracy. Senate reform will likely be the pre-eminent issue in the next election. The great majority of the Liberal members of the House of Commons spoke recently strongly in favour of protection, the need being all the plainer on account of the recent marvellous industrial development of Asia. The war and preparations for war are not a subject of difference, except, perhaps, in some minor details, but the Senate provides a straight issue between the Liberal party in the House of Commons and the people of Canada represented by the Conservative party. There can be no doubt of the result.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.

WHAT the city of Regina is doing to meet present business conditions might be well imitated by other cities. As is known, business has been exceptionally bad in the West, but this western city has gone ahead with its public works as far as possible, and this tends to relieve the local distress to quite an extent. With this object in view, Regina has decided to rush through to completion the construction of a 5,000,000 gallon reservoir. At the present time about 65 carpenters and 80 laborers are employed on this work. At the base the concrete walls are two feet nine inches thick, tapering to one foot at the junction with the roof. This wall is to be reinforced with a brick veneer one foot in thickness above ground level, and ornamentations in the shape of friezes and panelling will be incorporated in the brick work.

The new Regina power house is rapidly nearing completion. If the work progresses as rapidly in the future as in the past, it will not be a month before the building will be completed. The cost of the building will be approximately $170,000; cost above ground level was $90,000, in addition to $36,000 for steel. The foundations and ground floor were constructed by the city by day labour at a cost of about $40,000. Up to the present time nearly $100,000 worth of machinery has been installed. The city has secured a loan of $320,000 from the Bank of Montreal for financing these improvements.

Altogether Regina is doing good work. Wherever possible, public works should be constructed in times of hardship or when work is scarce. Besides securing cheap labour and materials, there is the much more important item of providing work when ordinary mercantile lines have none to give out. If all places do as well as Regina, the labour situation will be much improved.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE MONTREAL MAIL has just embarked on its second year. It has started well, its handling of one or two questions having given it weight and influence in Canada's largest city. The Quebec Legislative scandal, the Tramways question and the last municipal election were the headliners. The same management has launched the Evening News, and both papers are a credit to Montreal. If the same management can dominate two separate newspapers as well in the future as in the past, and we have always contended that two papers can be so managed, the Montreal Mail and the Evening News should be a power for good in that great city.

FOREIGN NAMES

By Walt Mason

Those awful names of foreign towns, where, in their blood-soaked hand-me-downs, the warriors of Europe scrap—such names should dislocate the map! I'd like to lay all work aside, and to the corner drug store slide, and thered iscuss, with sundry friends, the war, until the bloodshed ends. But every time I start to yawp I strike a name that bnds me stop, that makes me feeble in the knees, until I catch my breath and sneeze. What sense is there, O sacred aunts, in making names of consonants? I pick the paper up at night and start to read about some fight wherein ten thousand men wer slain; the housewife lists, as though in pain the ;children gather round my chair, to hear the story of despair, and granny, so she's sure to hear, inserts a trumpet in her ear. I read perhaps a dozen lines, of forts besieged, exploding mines, and then I quit—the stuff is off—I'm up against "Pzplfwszdtpllshikoff." I murmur, "I can read no more; I'll roll a while upon the floor, and bite some plaster from the wall, and kick the stovepipes till they fall, and maybe when I've got my breath I'll try again that tale of death."

TURMOIL IN SARAYEVO.

Trial of Assassin and Accomplices Produces Reign of Terror.

ROME, Oct. 15. — (Via Paris.)—Despatches received here by way of the frontier from Sarayevo, Bosnia, say that the town is virtually in a state of siege owing to the circumstances surrounding the trial of Gavrio Prinzip, the assassin of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife, and Prinzip's twenty-one accomplices. The men are being tried on a charge of high treason in connection with the assassination.

Terror reigns everywhere in Sarayevo, it is said. The police have taken extraordinary precautions and the whole garrison is being kept in readiness for any emergency. According to the laws the trial is open to the public, but in reality the space reserved for the public is being entirely occupied by police agents in civilian clothes. Telegraphic reports of the trial are prohibited, except those of the official agency.

An Instrument of Providence

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

I was walking on the beach, watching the waves come rolling in before a gale and throwing up driftwood, when a bottle was tossed at my feet. I extracted a paper from it on which was written:

> We are going to pieces. Whoever gets this go to Norman D. Carlisle and tell him he will find my will in my desk in secret drawer.

This was all—no date, no signature, no address as to where Norman D. Carlisle would be found.

That night I went to bed thinking about the message. Suppose it was genuine. Somebody was enjoying property that belonged to another. But it seemed to me that if it were genuine the writer would have given at least the city in which the person for whom it was intended lived. If the perpetrator was doing the thing for sport or to pass the time or because he hadn't any more sense he would have given it.

And yet perhaps that's just what he wouldn't do. He might not like to particularise. On the other hand, a man who is about to be dumped into a roaring ocean might leave something out that he should have put in.

I was impelled to find Norman D. Carlisle. I didn't wish to engage in looking for a needle in a haystack, but I couldn't resist the feeling that it was my bounden duty to do so. There were then some 80,000,000 people in the United States alone. The name was Anglo-Saxon, and the person might be somewhere in the great British countries. Nevertheless when I found that I couldn't let the matter alone I went into it methodically. I put a personal advertisement in one newspaper in every city in the United States whose inhabitants numbered 500,000 or over for the said Norman D. Carlisle. I received several replies signed Norman D. Carlisle, the middle name usually differing. I wrote each of them, asking if he had lost a relative at sea, but they all answered in the negative—that is, so far as they knew.

After six months I put in another advertisement for Mr. Carlisle and received a reply from a Norman D. Carlisle living in a town of about 50,000 people. He had seen the ad. while in the city where it had been inserted. I asked him if he had lost a relative at sea, and he replied "No." I dropped the matter so far as he was concerned, but later he wrote me that he was a lawyer and had had a client who had sailed from Rio de Janeiro in a vessel that was catalogued among missing ships.

After some correspondence he sent me a check for expenses, and I went to see him. He made an engagement for me to meet a lady in his office, and I was introduced to Miss Edith Parks, twenty-one years old and comely. She appeared to be a lady, but was shabbily dressed. I was informed that her uncle had been lost on the missing vessel from Rio. I brought out the paper I had found, which I had carefully kept, and as soon as she saw it she said she believed that it had been written by her uncle. Some of his letters were produced, and all doubt was removed. The message, though scrawled hastily in a trembling hand, was found to correspond with the uncle's writing.

I was then told that Miss Parks had been brought up by this uncle, who was wealthy, he being unmarried and without children. After he had been declared legally dead the courts had set about administering his estate and had already found forty persons who were heirs at law.

Since Mr. Weatherby, the man who had been shipwrecked, had given Miss Parks to understand that she was to be his heir it was likely that the will mentioned in the message gave his property to her. But the desk—where was it? Mr. Weatherby's furniture had been sold a year before. Who had bought the desk? No one could tell.

Since I had gone so far in the matter I did not propose to be beaten now. Advertising having availed, I advertised for the person who had bought a desk at a sale of the effects of Cyrus Weatherby. In due time I received a reply from the purchaser. I wrote him that a niece of the deceased wished to redeem it and asked him to fix a price. He said he would sell it for $100. Miss Parks had no money to pay for it, so I mailed the man a check for the amount. The desk was sent to me, and, taking it into a cellar, I chopped it into kindling wood. Among the rubbish lay the papers in a secret drawer, and, taking this up, I found one marked "Last Will and Testament of Cyrus Blake Weatherby." I read it and found that he left all his property to his beloved niece Edith Parks.

That same evening I called on Miss Parks with the will that changed her condition from poverty to wealth. She sat like a statue staring at the paper as though she were looking through it rather than at it. I asked her what she was thinking about, but she did not hear me. I repeated the question, and, apparently awakening from a dream, she said:

"It doesn't seem possible that uncle, about to die on a boundless ocean, too wrought upon to give my address, could have reached me among the millions of people of the earth."

I did not tell her so, but she soon came to recognize me as the instrument chosen by Providence to find her.

After awhile she rewarded me by giving me herself.

Rattlers In Ontario.

Georgian Bay annals tell of numerous dogs killed by rattlesnakes. There is one story told of a man who was bitten through the boot while fishing, whose leg swelled enormously in twenty minutes, and who drank a quart of whiskey and lay unconscious in his tent for twenty-four hours. Whether it was from the whiskey or from the snake venom it is not known. But the man is alive to-day and blames the snake.

The Indians, who are very superstitious about the rattler, tell of men dying from snake bites, and of many children fallen victims to the reptile.

One old Indian tells of being bitten by a rattler while chasing a fawn through a beaver meadow, in the long grass of which rattlers abound, and he says that after his leg and side had been paralyzed, an old squaw cured him by a mysterious application of pounded leaves.

The rattlers in Ontario will be found in grassy swamps and in regions where boulders and broken rocks abound.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—Fresh activity and a revival of strength developed in wheat today, largely because of higher prices at Liverpool, and owing to a sensational drop in receipts at Winnipeg. The market closed strong at 1⅛c to 2⅜c above last night. Corn gained ⅛c to ⅝c; oats ½c to ⅝c, and provisions 7½c to 25c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 14.—A strong tone in Liverpool caused a strong opening here, with fair cash demand, for all grades of wheat, oats and barley, but flax was not wanted. No. 1 flax sold for less than No. 1 northern wheat during the morning, something almost without precedent. Some 283,000 bushels of wheat were delivered on the option during the morning, mainly No. 2 northern.

The close for wheat was 1⅛c to 1⅜c up, and oats 1⅝c higher.

Cash: Wheat—No. 1 northern, $1.12; No. 2 do., $1.08½; No. 3 do., $1.03¾ No. 4, 96⅝c; No. 5, 93c; No. 6, 88¼c; feed, 84½c.

Oats—No. 2 C.W., 54⅝c; No. 3 C.W., 50½c; extra No. 1 feed, 50½c; No. 1 feed, 48½c; No. 2 feed, 47½c.

Barley—No. 3, 68c; No. 4, 61c; rejected, 58½c; feed, 57c.

Flax—No. 1 N.W.C., $1.11¾; No. 2 C.W., $1.08¾.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Oct. 14.—There was a fairly good demand from overseas buyers for Manitoba spring wheat at an advance in prices of 3d to 6d per quarter, but owing to the further rise of 1⅛c to 1⅝c per bushel in the Winnipeg market exporters claimed that the bids were all out of line.

In sympathy with another advance in prices for oats in Winnipeg of ⅞c to 1⅜c per bushel the local market was much stronger today and prices were marked up 1c to 1½c, but the demand for both local and country buyers continues quiet and the volume of business passing is small. Ontario and Quebec No. 2 white are selling at 53c and No. 3 at 52c ex store. There was no improvement in the demand for flour, and the market is quiet with a firm undertone.

The demand for millfeed is steady.

A fair amount of business is passing in butter and cheese at firm prices.

Eggs were fairly active.

Dressed hogs declined 25c.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Oct. 14.—On the cheese board, 1605 boxes of colored cheese were offered, with the highest bid 15c. No sales were made.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Oct. 14.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 1277 cattle, 1746 hogs, 1372 sheep and lambs and 352 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice cattle sold at $8 to $8.25; good butchers' sold at $7.75 to $8; medium at $7.25 to $7.60; common at $6.50 to $7; choice cows at $6.75 to $7; good cows at $6.25 to $6.50; medium cows at $5.75 to $6; canners and cutters at $3.50 to $4.50; bulls at $5 to $7.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

Prices for stockers and feeders were unchanged. Choice steers sold at $7 to $7.25; good steers at $6.50 to $6.75, and stockers at $5 to $6.25.

Milkers and Springers.

The supply of milkers and springers was not very large and values firm. Prices ranged from $65 to $110 each.

Veal Calves.

Choice calves sold at $10 to $10.50; good at $9 to $9.50; medium at $8 to $8.50; common at $7 to $7.50; inferior, rough, eastern calves, at $5.50 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts were fairly large, and good lambs were firm, but heavy, coarse lambs were slow sale. Sheep, ewes, sold at $5 to $6.25; heavy ewes at $3.50 to $4.50; culls and rams at $2.50 to $3; lambs at $7.30 to $7.90; culls at $6 to $6.50.

Hogs.

Liberal receipts caused the market to be easier, or at least slow sale. Selects fed and watered, $8.25 and $8.50 weighed off cars and $7.90 f.o.b. at country points.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Oct. 14.—About 1000 head of butchers' cattle, 400 calves, 1000 sheep and lambs, and 1650 hogs were brought to the east end abattoir market for sale. There were no really prime beeves for sale and trade was dull with a decline of about ¼c per pound in cattle and ½c per pound in hogs. Best cattle sold at 7½c and 7¾c per pound and from that down to 5¼c per pound for pretty good animals. Common stock 4c to 5¼c, and canners 3½c per pound.

Calves sold from 4¼c to 8¼c per pound. Sheep sold at from 4¾c to 5¼c per pound, lambs 7c to 7⅝c per pound. Good lots of hogs sold at 8¾c per pound off cars.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

HIS HEALTH IN A TERRIBLE STATE

"Fruit-a-tives" Healed His Kidneys and Cured Him

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th. 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My Kidneys were not doing their work and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect, I found more than satisfactory.

Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected.

My Kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am enjoying the best health I have ever had".

B. A. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest Kidney Remedy in the world. It acts on the bowels and skin as well as on the kidneys, and thereby soothes and cures any Kidney soreness.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or will be sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

"Le Royal Canadien."

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—The official authority to proceed with the organization of a French-Canadian Regiment, with headquarters in Montreal, was given yesterday morning at a meeting of the Militia Council, presided over by Hon. J. D. Hazen, acting Militia Minister. The regiment will be commanded by Col. F. M. Gaudet, who is given control of the organization, including the nomination of his officers. It will be called "Le Royal Canadien," if official sanction can be obtained, and will form part of Quebec's contingent.

According to His Opportunity.

"Are you acquainted with the brilliant and beautiful Mrs. Sidestep?" asked the perfect stranger of an unobtrusive little man as that queenly woman dashed through the room.

"Slightly," admitted the little man.

"You ought to know her better."

"I had hoped to once."

"Never had the opportunity?"

"I am afraid not."

"Why not?"

"Well, you see, I married her."

Certainly.

"Do you know why women buy newspapers?"

"Perhaps because boys have them to sell."

"Naw, nor to read either."

"Well, why do they buy them?"

"To see if that little private matter that they know all about has got into them yet."

BOWSER A RESCUER

A Cat Marooned in a Treetop Arouses His Pity

By M. QUAD

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

At the office during the afternoon a caller on business had mentioned that Mr. Bowser was looking ten years older than last month.

Another caller had doubted his integrity.

He had been dunned for his club dues.

A life insurance agent had told him he was too fat to take a risk on.

He had had his corns stepped on while bound for home.

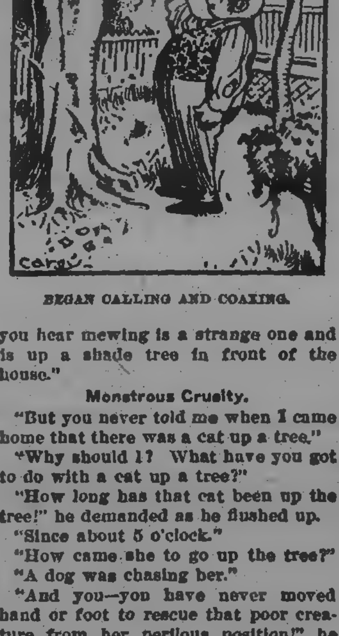
He had to sit beside a drunken man for a mile.

Of course, Mrs. Bowser was to blame for all this, and he determined she should pay the penalty.

Mrs. Bowser, however, seemed to be on her guard, and he got no opening until dinner was over and he had sat down to smoke and read. Then came the sustained mewing of a cat, and after a bit he flung his paper away and asked Mrs. Bowser:

"Do you know whether our cat is in the house or caught in a trap in the back yard?"

"I saw her in the dining room a few minutes ago," was the reply. "The cat you hear mewing is a strange one and is up a shade tree in front of the house."



BEGAN CALLING AND COAXING.

Monstrous Cruelty.

"But you never told me when I came home that there was a cat up a tree."

"Why should I? What have you got to do with a cat up a tree?"

"How long has that cat been up the tree!" he demanded as he flushed up.

"Since about 5 o'clock."

"How came she to go up the tree?"

"A dog was chasing her."

"And you—you have never moved hand or foot to rescue that poor creature from her perilous position!" he thundered as he struck the wall a blow with his fist.

"I'm not climbing trees to rescue stray cats," answered Mrs. Bowser.

"That's you—that's you to a dot. Right in front of our own house a poor creature has been suffering for hours and you have been too stony hearted and indifferent to even inform me of the fact. It's monstrous, Mrs. Bowser, perfectly monstrous."

"Have I hindered the cat from coming down the tree?" she protested. "Do you expect that every time I see a dog with a tin can tied to his tail run past the house I am going to follow him?"

"But you haven't a grain of mercy in your soul," he went on. "It is your utter indifference, your callous heartedness that I complain of. Ah, there is our cat. Suppose she were up a tree over on Beach street and suffering untold agonies. What would you say to a woman who would listen to her plaintive calls for mercy without stirring a finger?"

"I'd say it was our cat's business to keep out of trees!"

Mr. Bowser to the Rescue.

Just then the Bowser cat walked in from the kitchen.

"Heaven help the human being with such a heart as you have," groaned Mr. Bowser as he started down the hall. "That cat is coming down from the tree if I have to get out the whole fire department. In some home near by there are innocent little children crying because she has not come home. They shall cry no more."

He clapped on his hat and went on out. His own cat followed. In a shade tree in front of the gate the starlight showed him the strange cat. He went down to the tree and began calling and coaxing. There seemed to be no good reason why she shouldn't come down, as it is as easy for a cat to descend as to go up, but the feline remained fast to the limb. Mr. Bowser went to the kitchen after a stepladder. As he brought it out and placed it against the tree two men came along and halted. He had climbed halfway up the ladder when three more came along. Then came two boys, and he offered one of them a nickel to go up and bring the cat down.

"I'm no cheap kid," was the reply. "If I go up after dat cat she'll bite me and cat bites mean six months in de hospital. It's 50 cents or I don't go."

"What's the use anyhow?" queried the eighth person who came along. "If a cat is fool enough to climb a tree, let her be fool enough to come down again."

Rebukes Heartless Onlookers.

"Men," said Mr. Bowser as he looked around him, "have you no hearts? Would you deliberately permit the helpless to suffer?"

"But if she is suffering, why don't she come down?" protested three or four voices in chorus.

"Because she's lost her nerve. I wouldn't have believed such cruelty existed in the twentieth century!"

And Mr. Bowser got to the top of the stepladder and hung to the tree and coaxed again. The cat was ten feet away and refused to stir. He increased his offer to the boy to 10 cents, but it was refused. He must either climb the tree or back down, and the reader knows that Mr. Bowser is a man who never gives up unless knocked unconscious.

"Say, you can't climb that tree!" shouted one of the crowd below as he witnessed the preparations.

"But I shall!"

"Bet you ten to one you come down a-flying. You are too fat. Better cut the tree down."

An Appreciative Audience.

The crowd now numbered a score. Of the fifteen different remarks addressed to Mr. Bowser as his feet left the stepladder not one was replied to. He was too busy. His first move ripped his coat under each arm and barked his knees, and the crowd yelled and applauded. There was a momentary hesitation, and then he went ahead and tore a piece of cloth out of one leg of his trousers and ripped two buttons off his vest. The applause that followed was enthusiastic and sincere, and one of the crowd followed it with:

"Well, if any one had told me that that old duffer was such a monkey to climb, I wouldn't have believed it."

By the time the crowd had numbered fifty Mr. Bowser was almost within reach of the cat. His eyes were glassy and his jaw set. He knew that Mrs. Bowser was watching him from a front window and that he had no other sympathizer in the crowd, but he would accomplish his object if death overtook him in the doing of it. He now got a toe hold on a limb and reached for the cat, but the feline spat at him and jumped away, and as he started back the limb broke, and there was a Fourth of July yell from the crowd below. Mr. Bowser descended like a load of brick, but fortunately the step ladder was below to receive him. He struck it in a heap and twisted around until he lay across it on his stomach and heard far off voices saying:

"Go to the drug store and ring for an ambulance."

"Didn't the old duffer know better than to climb a tree? Who knows where he lives?"

"Dere's a woman comin' out, and mebbe she owns him!" called a boy as Mrs. Bowser appeared.

Home Again.

She soon settled all doubts of her ownership. She asked assistance to separate Bowser from the stepladder, and when he had been straightened out as well as possible four men volunteered to carry him into the house. He knew he was being carried, but he made no resistance. He knew when they bumped his back along the hall floor and left him in a disorganized heap in the sitting room, and he plainly caught a voice which said:

"Here he is, ma'am, and, though he ain't dead, he'll probably let cats alone after this!"

Little by little Mr. Bowser recovered from the shock. He opened his eyes and saw the family cat and Mrs. Bowser watching and waiting. He sat up and decided on what he would do, and as he crawled over to the lounge and sat down on it he hoarsely whispered:

"Woman, do you think I'll forgive you if I live to be a thousand years old? Think of me, Mrs. Bowser. Think of the ridicule and contempt."

"The cat came down while they were bringing you in," she quietly replied.

"Do you mean—mean"—

"I mean that the cat came down. She could have come any time. If you haven't any papers to look over in the library and don't want to see your lawyer about a divorce, you'd better go to bed."

And Mr. Bowser went.

HOW WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cleveland, Ohio—"My left side pained me so for several years that I expected to have to undergo an operation, but the first bottle I took of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of the pains in my side and I continued its use until I became regular and free from pains. I had asked several doctors if there was anything I could take to help me and they said there was nothing that they knew of. I am thankful for such a good medicine and will always give it the highest praise."—Mrs. C. H. GRIFFITH, 7305 Madison Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

Hanover, Pa.—"I suffered from female trouble and the pains were so bad at times that I could not sit down. The doctor advised a severe operation but my husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I experienced great relief in a short time. Now I feel like a new person and can do a hard day's work and not mind it. What joy and happiness it is to be well once more. I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for the Compound."—Mrs. ADA WILT, 196 Stock St., Hanover, Pa.

NEWS NOTES FROM KEENE

(Special Correspondence.)

Keene, Oct. 14.—The sale of flags last Wednesday by the young ladies of Keene and vicinity for the benefit of the Red Cross Society amounted to $50.00 clear.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Garbutt of Lakefield, attended the Keene fair and spent a few days with village friends.

Mrs. Andrew Brown of Peterboro visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Edwards a few days the past week.

Miss A. Myers of Peterboro spent the week end at the home of her sister, Mrs. Archibald Kempt.

Mr. William Campbell returned last Wednesday from Toronto where he had been visiting friends.

Rev. G. Harrison and wife of Medicine Hat were guests the past week of Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Harrison.

Mrs. Bert Howson of Peterboro spent a few days the past week with friends in the village.

The anniversary of the Church at Bethel will be held on Sunday, October 25th. The Rev. Robert McCullough will conduct the anniversary services on that day.

Mrs. Thomas Wigmore and family who have been spending the summer with friends in the village have returned to their home at Oxbo.

Miss Isabelle McCarthey, who is attending St. Joseph's Convent at Lindsay, spent the holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel McCarthey.

Mr. Roland Burill of the Royal Military College, Kingston, spent the week end with his aunt, Mrs. (Dr.) Harrison.

Mrs. John Kindred and Miss Etta Webb visited friends at Toronto over Thanksgiving.

Mrs. John Macfarlane spent the week end with friends at Peterboro.

Misses Margaret and Katie Wallis spent the week end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Wallis.

Mr. Richard Skinner was in Campbellford over Sunday.

Miss Irene Thompson and little sister, of Mount Julian, were the guests a few days the week past at the home of their grandfather, at Lang.

One of the worst storms in years passed through here on Saurday night. The large elm tree at the farm home of Mrs. Campbell on the edge of the village, was struck by lightning. Several living in the vicinity sustained severe shocks, but no serious damage was done.

Miss Alice Lumsden spent the week-end with friends in Peterborough.

Mrs. William Wedlock returned home last week from Toronto, where she had spent a few weeks with friends.

Mr. Thos. Howson is moving onto the property he recently purchased from Miss B. Reid, this week.

Mr. George Warner, of Westwood, was the guest at the home of his brother-in-law, Mr. J. J. Dickson, over the holiday.

Mrs. R. N. Johnston is at Toronto this week.

Miss Agnes Lumsden, who spent a few days the past week with her sister, Miss Alice, has returned to Lakefield.

The patriotic concert, given for the benefit of the war fund, by the Keene singers, realized $88.00. The program was a very good one and much appreciated by those who attended. The program was as follows: Chorus, "Rule Britannia"; Chairman's Address, Mr. A. St. A. Smith; Solo, "Hark, the Drum," Joseph McCarthey; Chorus (male), "King and Country"; Solo, "Soldiers of the King," D. Edwards; Solo, Mrs. Wm. McIntyre; Chorus, "Land of the Maple"; Duett, "The Wings of a Dove," Mrs. Wm. McIntyre, Miss Margaret Bryce; Recitation, Mrs. H. McLachlan; Solo, "The King Passeth by," Mr. N. Lightheart; Ladies' Chorus, "Hush-a-bye"; Solo, "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary," Joseph McCarthey; Duett, Miss Margaret Bryce and Mrs. William McIntyre; Male Chorus, "Heroes and Gentlemen"; Solo, Miss N. Bryce; Chorus, "March of the Men of Harleck"; "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," Michael McCarthey; Dialogue, "The Frog Hollow Lyceum," Mrs. W. R. Wedlock, Misses Lola Kempt, Amy Macfarlane, Lillian Wedlock, Bella Macfarlane, and Messrs. Wm. Fletcher, Wm. Stuart, Roy and David Kempt, John and Irwin Wedlock, George McIntyre, and Joseph McCarthey.

A "quilting bee" by the ladies of the W. M. S. of the Methodist church will be held at the home of Mrs. William Wedlock, Sr., on Thursday afternoon this week for the benefit of the society.

About twenty-five of the friends of Miss Lola Kempt spent Monday evening at her home. Cards and dancing were indulged in till the wee sma' hours.

Mr. Robert Dickson of Toronto is spending two weeks on Rice Lake, hunting wild duck.

Miss Margaret Bryce returned to her home on Monday from Peterboro, where she spent the week-end with friends.

Mr. Richard Wedlock and Mr. Greives of Peterboro spent Monday with friends in the village.

Miss Maggie Rennie of Toronto spent Sunday with Keene friends.

The late John Allen was noted for his ready wit and cutting sarcasm. One day while walking down the street he slipped on some ice and fell. The Methodist minister of the town happened to be near and helped the old man to his feet with the remark: "Sinners stand on slippery ground, don't they John?"

"Yes," retorted Mr. Allen, "but I don't see how they do it."

A BIG CONTRACTOR

Mr. Michael John O'Brien, the Renfrew millionaire and railway contractor, whose name was brought to public attention again by the National Transcontinental Railway report is one of the biggest railway builders in Canada. He is now 63 years of age and has been connected with railways in one capacity or another, since he was fourteen, successively as foreman, sub-contractor, and contractor. In the last capacity he has either built or assisted in building several Canadian railroads, including 571 miles of the National Transcontinental Railway. He is president of the Canadian and Gulf Terminal Railway. He was formerly one of the Royal Commissioners in charge of the building of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway; but resigned after the deefat of the Liberal Government in Ontario. His energies have not been confined by any means to railway building, however. He was the chief promoter of the Canadian Graving Dock & Shipbuilding Co., Ltd., and was also a promoter of the Capital Life Assurance Co. He is the owner of the O'Brien mine at Cobalt, Ont., and is also a large holder of timber limits, and has extensive interests in other mining and coal properties. Mr. O'Brien presented the town of Renfrew with an opera house valued at $40,000. He also donated a magnificent silver cup for competition in the National Hockey Association. Mr. O'Brien, who was born at Lochaber, N.S., was the son of John O'Brien, a native of Waterford, Ireland, who emigrated to Nova Scotia.

A want advertisement from a serious French journal reads:

GERMAN FORCES ARE REPULSED ON VISTULA

RUSSIAN VICTORY NEAR WARSAW

LONDON, Oct. 15. — An official statement issued from the Russian War Office last night says:

"The Germans were successfully repulsed yesterday on the River Vistula between Warsaw and Ivangorod. One Russian regiment captured two German companies.

"It is also reported that fighting is proceeding north of Przemysl. It is estimated that the Russians in the Province of Suwalki took 10,000 prisoners and 40 German guns, besides several maxim guns.

"There are no important changes on the other fronts."

Vienna makes the claim that the Russians have evacuated Lemberg, while the Russians yesterday denied a similar report that they had given up the siege of Przemysl. It would not surprise military men if the Russians withdrew from Galicia to concentrate all their forces for the supreme struggle which, with the advance of the Austro-German armies into Poland, is now upon them along the Vistula river from south of Warsaw to their southern boundary.

Nothing new has come through concerning the battles on the East Prussian frontier, but the activity of the German fleet in the Baltic and Gulf of Finland may presage the arrival of German reinforcements, which it was reported some days ago were being embarked at German Baltic ports.

A despatch from The Hague to a news agency here, says that the Austrian legation there has announced that the Russians have evacuated Lemberg after a fierce fight with the re-formed Austrian army. Lemberg was captured by the Russians early in the Galician campaign.

A despatch to The Times from Petrograd says:

"On a conservative estimate the German forces known to be on the eastern frontier number about a million and a half effective men, not counting the Austrian troops, of whom there are about 270,000 on the Silesian front."

ALLIES RACING TO EFFECT JUNCTION WITH BELGIANS

Ostend's Occupation Has Not Been Reported But a Short Time Will Probably See the Germans There.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The occupation of Ostend has not been officially reported here yet, but there is no doubt in London official circles that it will be accomplished within a very short time, despite yesterday afternoon's statement of the Admiralty that it has not yet been occupied. The news of the occupation of Ypres by the troops of the allies is believed to have an important bearing on the situation with regard to Ostend.

With practically all of Belgium in German hands, and with at least 50,000 fresh German troops reported en route to Bruges and Ostend from Ghent, it is generally accepted here that the next move in the Belgian theatre of war will be a race between the allies and the Germans for the remnants of the Belgian army, which is now believed to have arranged to evacuate Ostend at the most favorable moment for a dash to join the extreme left wing of the allies.

Ghent is about thirty miles from Ostend, while Ypres is only about twenty miles away. The former city is east and a little south of the Belgian seaport, while Ypres is almost directly south. If the junction can be made between the Belgians and the extreme left of the allies, which apparently has pushed even north of Ypres, not only will the continuity of the line opposed to the German advance into France be maintained, but greater force will be given to the final attempt to crumple up the right flank of the armies of Generals Von Kluk and Von Boehm, without leaving the coast from Ostend to Calais at the mercy of the invaders.

If, on the other hand, the fresh German troops succeed in cutting off the Belgian forces they will have gained a tremendous advantage in their campaign to occupy the entire coast from the Scheldt to Dunkirk, and possibly even to Calais.

The aim of the Germans on their right wing in France is declared by the French generals to be to dash for Amiens and its railroads, if they can succeed in splitting the allied left. From Amiens they would be in a position to work up to the coast, and if these tactics were successful and the Germans from Ghent should cut off the Belgians in their southward march at the same time, the French military experts admit that the situation would appear very serious.

Gen. Gallieni, military governor of Paris, is reported to have issued a formal statement in which he points out that the only flaw in the German plan is its impossibility of accomplishment, and to this the British naval experts last night added that even if the Germans should get to the Channel ports, which no one will admit is a possibility, their tenancy of the hard-won positions could be made very brief and disastrous by the great guns of the British fleet, which would undoubtedly be sent against them immediately.

Von Kluk Suffers Heavily.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—The exact positions of the bulk of the allied armies are being kept strictly secret, but it is believed that the forces in France and Belgium have joined hands since the fall of Antwerp.

The German cavalry around Hazebrouck, France, which masked a movement of the Infantry, had already suffered a rude check from the allies before the battle at Ypres, because the Germans were unable to operate freely in mass, owing to the nature of the ground where they were virtually at the mercy of the allied infantry and artillery.

Some lively street fighting occurred in Hazebrouck, on which place the Germans had made a daring raid, while at Arras the town hall was burned to the ground during a bombardment.

A portion of the line where the encounters have been the severest has suddenly changed from Roye to Lassigny, where the Germans had tried to make a breach through the allies.

The battle, however, is still progressing there, and Roye has been taken and retaken at least twelve times.

A good part of Gen. Von Kluk's army is reported to be falling back in the vicinity of Lille. The German right wing suffered heavily yesterday, and was forced to give up strong positions along the River Oise. The same is true of the situation around Berry-au-Bac, where a battle was in progress for the better part of the day. Great manoeuvres are under way on both sides, and it seems that a decisive battle must be fought in the extreme north of France and southern Belgium.

Fell 22 Storeys to Death.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15. — Gustav Baumann, president of the Bilmore Hotel, went to the roof of the hotel yesterday to inspect the carpenter shops there. While looking over the ledge he lost his balance and fell 22 storeys to the ground below. When his body was found it was first thought that his death was caused by apoplexy.

Mexican Tramways Seized.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 15. — The seizure of the Mexico Tramway Co.'s lines by the Carranza Government on Monday was made at the point of the bayonet.

The Mexican Tramways Co., Ltd., is a foreign corporation capitalized at $30,000,000. Its home office is in Toronto.

Three More Prisoners.

SARNIA, Oct. 15. — Three more Austrian prisoners of war were removed from here to old Fort Henry, Kingston, yesterday.

Bank Clerk Captured.

MONTREAL, Oct. 15.—After eluding officers of the law for more than a year, W. L. Wyatt, formerly collection clerk at the head office of the Molsons Bank, St. James street, Montreal, was brought to this city yesterday morning from San Jose, California, by Deputy Sheriff Hicks, of that place, and will face trial here on the charge of stealing $2,000 from the bank.

The charge against Wyatt is dated Sept. 13, 1913, when Wyatt left the city.

Villa Confiscated German Property.

EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 15.—Advices reported here yesterday by Carranza officers state that Gen. Francisco Villa has confiscated property belonging to German citizens in the state of Durango totalling in value $1,000,000. Villa is also reported to have ordered the confiscation of all large estates within his territory, whether owned by foreigners or natives.

CANADIANS AT PLYMOUTH

Hon. Geo. H. Perley Announces Safe Arrival of Troops

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—A brief cable was received by the Government yesterday afternoon from Hon. Geo. H. Perley, Acting High Commissioner in London, announcing the safe arrival yesterday at Plymouth of the Canadian troops.

No details were given in the cable, but the fact of the landing at Plymouth is taken here to mean that the Canadians will march straight to the training camp at Salisbury Plains. Previous detailed announcements as to the arrival of the Canadian troops at Southampton were unauthoritative, and, as events have shown, decidedly imaginative.

The trip across the Atlantic has taken practically two weeks, which is about the time expected by the officials here when the transports started. The landing of 32,000 Canadian troops in England takes place within two months from the time the mobilization orders went out from Ottawa.

So far as is known here there were no untoward circumstances connected with the trip across. Shortly after the transports started a few of the horses on some of the ships had to be shot in consequence of being hurt through stampeding in the close quarters in which they had to be confined.

A Canadian Associated Press despatch from London, received yesterday, was as follows:

The Canadian troops arrived today. Sir Edward Ward has been appointed to represent the War Office in all matters connected with the general comfort of colonial contingents, and in administrative action in connection therewith communications should be sent to Scotland House, New Scotland Yard, London.

"The printed page will soon be superseded by the spoken word," declares Mrs. Mabel Dodge, of New York, for she believes "at present too many interesting people meet each other on paper. It is the vital, dynamic talker who influences.

PETERBORO YOUTH AND THREE OTHERS ESCAPE FROM CENTRAL PRISON

Guard Was Knocked Unconscious With Length of Gas Pipe And Quartet Gained Their Freedom by Dropping From Eighteen Foot Wall

Warden Had Ticket of Leave For Schweir Who Had Been Recommended for Parole

Toronto, Oct. 15.—Slashing a guard at the Central prison over the head with a piece of gaspipe and leaving him unconscious, four men escaped from the prison yesterday afternoon and are still at liberty. Their names are Mulhall, Schwier, McLaughlin and Spence. The first three are "repeaters," Mulhall having a bad record all over the province. Spence was serving his first term.

The plan of escape was devised by Mulhall. On the pretext that he wished to replace a pane of glass in the northwest tower, he gained permission from the guard to ascend the ladder leading upwards to the top of the stone wall which surrounds the prison. He took glass and putty and mounted to the tower, which is situated on the top of the wall, almost directly opposite the city stock yards. Then waiting until the guard was looking the other way, he struck him over the head with a length of gaspipe covered with one thickness of canvas. The guard dropped his rifle and fell.

Scaled the Wall.

When they saw that the way of escape was open, Schwier, Spence and McLaughlin, who were watching, made a dash for the wall. All four took the 18-foot drop from the wall to the cinder road running between the railway tracks and the prison. Mulhall carried the guard's rifle. The prisoners ran westward through the Parkdale freight yards, and lost themselves in the labyrinth of cars.

It was not until the guard had regained consciousness at 3 o'clock that the alarm was raised. Two attendants were immediately despatched to search for the prisoners. They traced the fugitives to the C. P. R. freight yards. Yardmaster Bruce, several other yardmen, Car Service Clerk Howard, Car Service Inspector E. J. Downey and several factory employes in the neighborhood had seen the men running through the yard, dressed in the prison garb.

Near the freight office one of the prisoners had stopped and asked one of the switchmen if he wanted a good gun. "If you do you will find one in a box car down there," he said. He then ran in the direction the other three had taken.

Third Term for Schwier.

The prison uniform of blue and gray is not unlike a laborer's outfit, and the switchman thought the man was joking and paid no attention to him.

When the pursuing guards arrived, the C. P. R. officials remembered the occurrence. The guards telephoned from the C. P. R. freight office for assistance to the jail, and the search was maintained throughout the night.

An employe of the Graham Nail Works said last night that he had seen one of the men on Dufferin street.

Of the four men, Mulhall is the most dangerous. He has served a number of prison terms. Schwier was serving his third sentence. McLaughlin is known to the police under a variety of names, including the alias "Carman." Spence was in prison for the first time and would have been at liberty within a few weeks.

When seen last night, Dr. Gilmour, warden of the prison, was depressed over the success of Mulhall's ruse. "Of course, one does not like to place blame too quickly," he said, "but it was a terrible mistake. So long as the human element has to be depended upon, there will be mistakes made, I suppose."

Took Desperate Chances.

Referring to Schwier, he said: "I have a ticket-of-leave on my desk at the present moment for that man. He is young, and of a quiet disposition. He is perhaps the last man you would think of taking such a desperate chance. He first came from Peterborough. I sent him to the farm at Guelph. He ran away. In a short time he was arrested at Tillsonburg and sent down on another charge. He was taken back to Guelph and tried for escaping from the farm. But he behaved well and I brought him before the parole commission, and the commission made a recommendation which was approved by the minister of justice, of commuting a large part of the term he received for escaping.

"I received his ticket-of-leave and our various organizations were working to get him a situation, which is exceedingly difficult under the present condition of the labor market. About a month ago, Schwier cut his bars to pieces, and knowing that this would further suspend his ticket-of-leave, he again took this desperate chance this afternoon.

Guard Badly Injured.

The blow which felled the prison guard inflicted a wound three inches long in his scalp. At a late hour last night he was still in a dazed condition, and only able to tell what happened in terse sentences. Two weapons were found. Both consisted of gas pipe. One is covered by one thickness of canvas, sewed carefully and very tightly, and about two feet long. The other is somewhat shorter, and with the exception of about six inches is covered by several wrappings of soft wool tied loosely.

"AL" PEARSON REPORTS ON WORK AMONG TROOPS

Neetings For the Soldiers Well Attended

Below will be found a copy of the first report forwarded by Mr. H. A. Pearson, assistant secretary of the West End Young Men's Christian Association, Toronto, who accompanied the Canadian troops from Valcartier to England. It was sent to the Y. M. C. A. at Toronto, and as Mr. Pearson is a former Peterborough man, will be of interest to the people here:

"My first three days aboard have been as full of new experiences as an oyster is full of meat. And how God's plan for our work has been manifested!

"I received permission from Col. ——— to hold a service this (Sunday) morning in the second cabin saloon, and found it full of men when I went down at 10 o'clock. They sang 'Rock of Ages,' 'Stand Up for Jesus' and our other hymns with the same vigor and earnestness as has always characterized our soldiers' meetings, and they listened very attentively while I read from the Book and spoke of the great King of Kings who invites us to sign up for life in His army.

"And when the service was over, a young fellow, formerly a motor fire truck driver, attached to the fire brigade of a western city, followed me to my room and told me how his life had been reclaimed from sin and how much the Association meeting meant in his own life. While I am writing this, he is away looking for his brother, concerning whose spiritual welfare he is anxious, and will bring him here that God's plan may be explained.

"Does God answer prayer? He surely does. My allotment of hymn books had not arrived, and I worried a great deal last evening, because I must have a service this morning with 300 men—and only five hymn books. Every plan to secure more ended in failure. I prayed for guidance, but dreamt that I stood before a thousand men, having announced a song service—and no books. But while I was dressing this morning a ship's officer tapped on my door and wished to know if I could use 500 hymn books which he had discovered in some corner. Could I use them? Well!

"And so has He blessed the work in a thousand ways. Here is C——— with his brother, and then there are the boys in the hospital below to visit—such wonderful opportunities! Isn't it worth while?

Preparation For Defence

The following letter from Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., appears in today's Globe:

To the Editor of the Globe—Will you permit me to say that the following paragraph from the Globe shows how necesity compels us to revise our statements, and that the advocacy of peace under all circumstances is impossible. Your statement of October 13 is as follows: "Next time Canada will see to it that their legislators put first things first: rifles before drill sheds." There is doubt that for war purposes rifles are better than drill sheds, and that fact makes it quite clear that a peace propaganda is not being prepared for by your able journal, since preparation for war cannot be called preparation for peace. You are hardly fair to the drill sheds, since they are intended to serve, and do serve popular purposes as well as military. Your war news has been excellent and your war summary is widely read. I like to give credit when it is due, even if my praise may not carry much weight, but as one of the people I can truly say that since the basis of all human laws is enforcement, and not the enforcement of persuasion, but of force, it is gratifying to realize that peace at any price is not contemplated by your able editor, though he is one of the great peace orators of the continent. Reduced to its simplest terms, the facts of the case seem to be that a man is not less a man, and a good man, because he realizes that force is sometimes necessary, and that he must be prepared to exercise it. Whether it be by development of realism or idealism, the fact remains that whilst we may steer by the stars, we must be prepared for the storm.

Peterborough. J. H. BURNHAM.

IMPERIAL HIGHWAY

When the C. P. R. was in the building it was said that it would be a great imperial highway, over which the British government could convey troops to India. That was one of the arguments in its favor; but the commercial one was probably the strongest. At the same time, the company has played an important part in connection with the present struggle—proving that the phrase "an Imperial Highway" was not used in vain. Canada responded to the need of the Empire; but so distant was she from the heart of the latter that the difficulty of instant help was great. The C. P. R. had fortunately made a track from ocean to ocean; the system was able to place 19,000 miles of track at the disposition of the federal government.

This brought St. John and Halifax close to the prairies of the West, and made a journey greater than that between Liverpool and Quebec a matter of hours. By this means, by the rapid transformation of ordinary cars into commissary cars, and by the use which the government was able to make of the C. P. R. fleet the system was able to render, at the moment, a most effectual service not only for Canada but the Empire.

The boats were requisitioned by the government and transformed into auxiliary cruisers, which are now sailing the ocean seeking for vessels carrying the German flag. Then, too, the C. P. R. took an imperial stand with regard to the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

The company itself gave $100,000, while the employes contributed a day's pay, which amounted to $150,000 more. Moreover, the officers, in their individual capacities, made handsome contributions.

The arrangements made by the C. P. R. for the handling and caring for the troops were all carried out without the slightest disarrangement of the time tables. The public were in no way inconvenienced; but a great service was rendered in a great crisis by a system which has been called the largest transportation company in the world.

Origin of "Navvy" Workers.

The seventeenth century canals or navigations gave rise to the "navvy," a term very slowly evolved from "navigator." There are many country public houses in England still existing that testify to the navvy's early designation on their sign, "The Navigators' Arms," which depicts a brawny laborer with a spade in one hand and a foaming pot of beer in the other. But you may search England through and through and you will not find a "Navvy's Arms." Curiously enough, while the navvy who makes our roads now obtained his designation from digging out canals, the canals were all legally classified as roads in a great body of statutes—the "road acts." But what would have been his nickname if railways had come before waterways?—London Globe.

THE CROPS IN P. E. ISLAND

The Prince Edward Island crop report for the month of July shows that agriculture on the Island is in a prosperous condition. Rains have been frequent, and the weather favorable for the growth of grass, so that up to the present there has been no shortage of pasture for the stock. Clover generally was killed out by the severe weather during the latter part of the winter, but the timothy came on, and during the month of July grew very rapidly, so the yield of hay is very good in most districts. There has been considerable wet weather during haying, which will lessen to some degree the quality of the hay made.

The chief grain crop grown is oats. They are somewhat later than usual on account of the late spring, but they have made a strong healthy, vigorous growth, and promise to yield well above the average. Spring wheat and barley where sown have also done well. The acreage devoted to potatoes is large. They have come up with very few misses, and are growing nicely. Turnips in a good many sections were sown rather late, but with an abundance of moisture in the soil they germinated quickly and have grown rapidly. There is very little corn grown on the Island, and the season thus far has not been favorable for this crop.

Strawberries were a fair crop. In a few sections the crop was large, but, as a rule the yield was below the average, due to winter killing of the plants. Bush fruits are very good. Cherries and plums will only be a medium crop. Many plum trees have been destroyed by the black knot. Early and fall apples promise to be fairly abundant. Winter varieties, however, except in a few places, will be a light crop. Spring frosts in some districts injured the bloom and reduced the yield to some extent.

Injuries from insects up to the present have been rather light. The joint worm has been working in a few wheat fields, but the damage has only been slight. Potato beetles are quite numerous as usual. The cut worm and the turnip flea beetle have done a little damage to the root crop. The bud moth and canker worm appeared in some orchards in small numbers, but did not do any extensive injury. Aphids have been noticed at work lately in a few places. Root maggots have been quite destructive in some vegetable gardens attacking onions, cabbages, parsnips and carrots.

The weed problem is becoming quite a serious one on the Island. The ox-eye daisy is common all over and on some farms is very abundant.

Horses, especially the draft type, are in good demand, and bring good prices. Cattle are gradually improving in quality, due to the use of better sires. Sheep are increasing in numbers. The number of pigs on the Island is below that of last year.

To tint curtains cream color mix a bowl of cream starch and another of white. Add a small quantity of the cream starch to the white before each curtain is starched. This makes the curtains all the same tone, which would not be the case were they put directly into the cream starch.

Business as Usual

F. A. Sharpe, representative of the Russel Motor Car Co., West Toronto, who is in the city to-day, speaking of their business, said they are following that slogan of "Business as Usual." Their last season, ending July 31, 1914, was very satisfactory, and from early sales and activity shown by their agents, their present year prospects are very bright for the sale of this Canadian car. The Russell Co. have proved a vital unit in Canadian manufacture, employing 1,500 men, and last year they paid $1,000,000 in wages alone, and for equipment and materials of manufacture they spent $2,000,000, with 1,013 Canadian companies. At present they are employing a full force of men and making delivery of the 1915 models. The Russell Co. have always designed, built and produced a car to meet Canadian road conditions and also the most exacting taste in finish and comfort. How well they have succeeded in their effort, will be found in letters they have received from hundreds of Russell owners from all over Canada, reproduced in book form, entitled, "The Pride of Ownership," which will be interesting to prospective buyers of automobiles and mailed on request.

GERMANS ARE PRESSED BACK

British Force Operating Towards Left of Allies

LONDON, Oct. 15. — The grip of the censor was tighter yesterday than ever before and only the most meagre news was given out in London.

The official press bureau last night issued the following statement:

"British troops have been engaged with the enemy towards the left of the allied line, in France, with the result that the Germans have been pressed back slightly on their flank. The nature of the country in which the fighting has been conducted, being a mining centre, makes rapid progress difficult."

The official communication issued last night by the French War Office says: "The reports received last night, which are in very general terms, indicate no important modifications in the situation."

The French War Office yesterday afternoon issued a long communique which covers operations very comprehensively, and at the same time emphatically denies reports current in the German press and propagated from German sources:

"In Belgium several engagements took place on the nights of the 12th and 13th, in the vicinity of Ghent. On the 13th some Anglo-French troops occupied Ypres.

"On our left wing, as far as the Oise, the military operations continue without incident. In the centre the progress of our troops in the region of Berry-au-Bac is confirmed.

"On our right wing there is nothing new."

SERVIANS VICTORIOUS.

They Have Repulsed Two Austrian Attacks With Heavy Loss.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The following Servian official statement, given out in Nish, has been received by Reuter's Telegram Co.:

"On Sunday night the enemy attempted two attacks on the extreme right wing of the front between Svornik (Bosnia) and Losnitza (Servia). The attacks were repulsed with heavy losses to the Austrians.

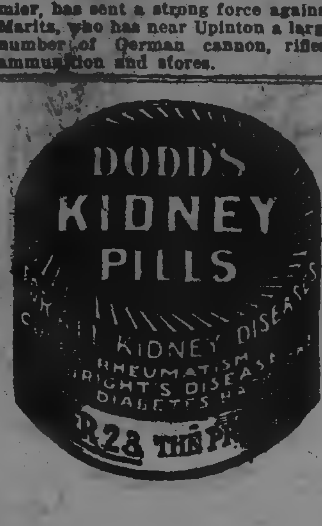
"On Monday morning they attempted to attack the Servians twice on the left bank of the Save river, but were repulsed on each occasion with great loss. Our artillery, by its accurate fire, spread panic in the ranks of the enemy."

A despatch received here from Nish, Servia, relates that, acting on the instructions of the German general staff, Austria has concentrated on the banks of the Drina the greatest army yet sent against Servia in a final and supreme effort to crush that country.

Force Goes After Maritz.

LONDON, Oct. 15. — According to late official reports from South Africa the rebellious commando under Col. Maritz numbers about 500 men, including a number of Germans who have joined him.

Gen. Botha, the South African Premier, has sent a strong force against Maritz, who has near Upinton a large number of German cannon, rifles, ammunition and stores.



SPLENDID SUCCESS OF NORWOOD FAIR

Wealth of Exhibits From all Departments of the Farm --- Large Display of Ladies' Fancy Work Wins Admiration --- Attendance Well up to High Mark of Other Years --- The Prize List

With the weather man smiling in the form of a warm sun and a slight, refreshing breeze, the forty-sixth annual exhibition of the East Peterborough Agricultural Society, held yesterday in Norwood, could not be but a shining success. Monday and Tuesday were cool and decidedly unfit for fair days, but the sun set red on Tuesday evening, and yesterday morning broke as a morning in July. No small amount of anxiety is felt every year by the residents of the Norwood district for the fair is always held on the second Wednesday of October, but the weather man never fails them. Yesterday was but a repetition of the year previous.

'Tis often asserted that the Norwood fair surpasses anything in this section of the province. The assertion may perhaps be a little wide, but it's a certainty that the East Peterborough exhibition is second to few. The exhibits are always very numerous, and yesterday was no exception. Every department was well filled and competition generally keen.

Besides the exhibits, there is another feature which always goes to make up a fair. That feature is the midway. Between thirty and thirty-five stands were present, and they included every form of amusement from hoop-la up. The magnitude of the midway was a big surprise to many visitors.

To estimate the number of visitors would be well nigh impossible. From Monday all sleeping accommodation in the hotels was taken up, and every hour of Tuesday and Wednesday morning saw more visitors arriving. Farmers from many miles drove in with heated horses and dust covered autos revealed the fact that the fair also had an attraction for the city people.

Main Building.

All the exhibits of dairy products, field roots and grains, wild flowers, fruit and ladies' work were to be found in the armouries, utilized as a main building. On entering one was struck with the brightness of the building, and the orderly and artistic manner in which the exhibits were presented. Along both sides and close to the roof large "Maple Leaf Forever" and "God Save the King" streamers were placed, while over the gallery at the end was a display of Union Jacks. Along both sides the exhibits were on tables, separated from the crowds by wire netting. At the end, under the gallery and along the gallery railing, all the ladies' work was presented, while the collections of weeds by school pupils adorned the wall. These weeds were placed on stiff paper and ten inches by eight inches, and were shown to great advantage.

Two long tables, bearing roots, fruits and grains, divided the main floor space into three promenades. The ladies' work and children's collections of weeds and seeds were the greatest attractions in the building. The representatives of the Ontario Agricultural Department have labored indefatigably since being located at Norwood, and the knowledge imparted to the farmers along the line of overcoming weeds appears to be bringing forth good results.

Horses.

As is always the case, the live stock department, which commanded the greatest amount of attention, was the one where the horses were exhibited. Horses of every class were found present, particularly roadsters and heavy draught horses. Entries for the roadsters competition included the horses of H. Dunham, Campellford; A. Marks & Son, Norwood; Joe McCoy, Norham; H. McMillan, Norwood; A. W. Wood, Peterborough; Charles Hendry, Hastings; L. E. Stenson, Hastings; Sargent & Son, Westwood; W. B. Sherwin, Hastings; S. Oliver, Lindsay; R. S. Ivey, Norwood; H. B. Wilson, Hastings; Ad. Humphries, Hastings; W. Beavis, Norwood.

Entries in the heavy draught class: Ad. Humphries, Hastings; Dunham Bros., Campbellford; C. S. Hubbel, Norwood; M. J. Healey, Westwood; Jos. Gardner, Indian River; John Breckenridge, Westwood; Andrew Carmite, Trent River; Sargent & Son, Westwood; R. W. Gardner, Norwood.

Cattle.

From early Tuesday morning till Wednesday noon drove after drove of cattle was placed in the sheds. The exhibit was far in excess of any previous year, and the Review was informed that the standard is becoming higher every year. Among the entries were cattle belonging to Stephen Oliver, Lindsay; H. Williamson, Norwood; Wm. Wilson, Brickley; Wilfred Carew, Roseneath; Andrew Knox, Norwood; J. P. Bolan, Westwood; William Knox, Indian River; Mitchell Bros., Norham; Allen Bros., Norham; Thomas Burkell, Norwood; G. A. Brethen, Norwood; R. Honey, Brickley; A. Marks & Son, Norwood; J. O'Connor, Campbellford; H. B. Peters, Hastings; Chas. Hendry, Hastings; Jos. S. Pickins, Hastings; Mrs. E. Chaplain, Campbellford; G. Kerr, Campbellford; H. Cuthbertson, Norwood; Ad. Humphries, Hastings.

Sheep.

One of the brightest sections of the grounds was the portion set aside for the sheep. At previous fairs the same pens were there, but not so attractive. They drew attention this year, for a coat of whitewash gave them a much brighter appearance. The number of exhibits was about equal to last year and the competition was decidedly keen. Some of the exhibitors were: W. J. Stillman, Peterorough; Chas. Hendry, Hastings; Westington & Lean, Cobourg; C. J. Honey, Warkworth; C. H. Curtis, Walkworth; Wm. Wilson, Brickley; and Gordon Honey, of Roseneath.

Swine.

As in the case of the sheep, the entries for the swine competition were not exceedingly numerous, nevertheless the committee in charge of the department (Messrs. J. Breckenridge, D. Barrie and Jas. Johnston) claimed the class of hogs to be of a very high standard. Te exhibitors were: William Wilson, Brickley; J. O'Connor, Campbellford; A. Humphries, Hastings; R. Honey, Brickley; S. Scott, Trent River; C. Hendy, Hastings.

Poultry.

The poultry was exhibited in the former main building and according to the committee in charge, the department is far in advance of all previous records. A very energetic worker in the poultry line was missing in the person of Rev. P. J. Kelly, lately transferred to Parry Sound. Father Kelly always took a very active part in the poultry section and his absence was generally regretted. It fell the good fortune of a Peterboro man, H. T. Lush, to carry off the majority of the prizes. He had 130 birds on exhibition and secured 128 prizes. Other prominent exhibitors were: W. S. Nelson of Norham; C. H. Curtis, Norham; F. T. Walsh, Warkworth; W. J. Campbell, Norwood; and Hendren and Packenham also of Norwood.

The following is a complete list of the prize winners of those having exhibits in the main building:

Notes of the Fair.

On Tuesday evening the Daughters of the Empire and Women's Institute had charge of the main building. A small admittance fee was charged and Union Jack flags sold. The proceeds, which it was anticipated would amount to $500 are to be used for charitable purposes.

The morning train from Havelock brought between three and four hundred people while a large number of Peterboro people also availed themselves of the opportunity to be present. A special C.P.R. train for Peterboro left Norwood at 7 o'clock in the evening.

On Tuesday evening one very enterprising "coon" had his stand on the main street and made quite a clean-up.

The spirit of "boost the Norwood Fair" was manifested by every school child. Both the public school and Collegiate Institute were closed all day.

F. C. McCrea, representative of the Ontario Agricultural Department had charge of the department where products and clothing for the people of Belgium were donated. Numerous parties signified their intention of assisting Great Britain's ally in this manner. The railway has offered free transportation of the donations to Halifax from where they will be forwarded to the Old Country on October 19th.

The only advertisement stands on the grounds were the ones of Oak Hall and J. J. Duffus' Ford Car exhibit.

The Indian Band from Alderville kept up a continual outburst of popular airs. The Redmen in their elaborate costumes put up a very striking appearance.

The number of persons present at three o'clock could be estimated between five and six thousand.

It was necessary to have two ballots to decide the office of Vice-President, T. A. Fisher being elected over G. G. Beall. All other officers were elected by acclamation.

SPLENDID SUCCESS OF NORWOOD FAIR

Horse Racing.

The horse races, as always, took well with crowd. Two races were a free-for-all and a green race, the latter open to only those horses which had not won money up to October 1st.

In the free-for-all Dr. Johnston's Susie Hal reached the wire in the lead in the first heat but fell back to second in the remaining heats. A local horse however secured first money. He was Jimmie Direct, owned by F. Montgomery. Jimmie came first in the last three heats. The result:

Jimmie Direct	5	1	1	1
Susie Hal	1	2	2	3
Clara C.	4	3	3	2
City Queen	3	5	4	4
Dr. Johnston	2	4	5	5

The result of the green race was as follows:

Phil Ha Ha	1	1	1
Sir Walter	2	2	2
Starlight Dan	3	3	3
Dolly E.	4	4	4

James Frank the owner of Dolly E. has entered a protest on the ground that other horses in the race had won money previous to October 1st. The protest will be settled at the next meeting of the East Peterboro Agricultural Society.

The men in charge of the horse racing were Dr. Fraser, Lakefield; and Dr. Munro of Warsaw.

TO THE VICTORS OF THE SERIES BELONGS THE SPOIL

Boston Braves Are Banqueted and Given Checks for Nearly $3000

Boston, Oct. 15. — The Braves, world's baseball champions as a result of the sensational series with the Philadelphia Athletics were given a banquet and reception by Mayor Curley. Praise for their achievement was sounded by various speakers, and modest acknowledgment was made by Manager George T. Stallings and several of the players.

After the banquet many of the Braves left immediately for their home cities. They were each given cheques for $2708.86 by a representative of the National Commission as their share in the world series receipts. To most of them this meant about $5000 for their season's work. Captain Johnny Evers found the season a big one financially, his income the past six months having been more than $40,000, including a bonus of $25,000 for his signature to a contract, $10,000 in salary, a $3000 bonus for finishing in first place, and his world's series receipts.

The winter will be spent quietly by most of the men. Several vaudeville agents were at Fenway Park endeavoring to sign up some of the stars but it is understood that none was successful.

A teacher in a school was trying to find from a tiny boy the name of his father. He seemed quite unable to think of it, so to help him she asked: "What do you call him?"

"I call him father," was the reply.

"Well, what does your mother call him?" And the response, an eloquent comment on domestic relations in the neighborhood, was:

"She doesn't call him anything—she likes him."

TO KEEP MUENSTERBERG.

Harvard Will Forego Ten Million Dollars If Necessary.

BOSTON, Oct. 15. — That Prof. Hugo Muensterberg formally presented his resignation to the corporation of Harvard University after Major Clarence Weiner of Surrey, England, a member of the Harvard class of 1900, had threatened to cancel a $10,000,000 bequest to Harvard, and that the corporation of the university declined to accept it, was officially admitted at the university yesterday.

The situation now is this: That Prof. Muensterberg will not be allowed to resign, but that Harvard hopes Major Weiner will reconsider his decision to withdraw his bequest. No matter what happens, Harvard will not yield to the demand that Muensterberg go. The trustees feel, in the first place, that he is a man whose place could not be filled, and they feel, in the second place, that he has a right to make the statements in Germany's defence to which Major Weiner took offence.

Christobel Pankhurst In America.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Christobel Pankhurst, daughter of the militant suffragette leader in England, came unannounced yesterday to New York aboard the Red Star steamer Finland. Miss Pankhurst made the voyage under the name of Elizabeth McDonald and did not announce her identity until the Finland was within sight of shore.

"I do not come to America to advocate militant methods," she said, as she stepped down the gang-plank into the midst of a dozen reporters awaiting her.

She expected to remain in the United States for a few months, she said.

MISTAH JOHNSON HEARD OF AGAIN

Negro's Motor Cars Take up Too Much Space

London, October 15.—"You and your motorcars take altogether too much room; there are others in London besides you" a Police Magistrate told Jack Johnson when imposing another fine on the colored heavyweight champion pugilist for obstructing the street. Johnson protested that he could not prevent people looking at him, but the Magistrate fined the negro $10 and significally suggested that he had better not repeat the offence.

Humor and Philosophy

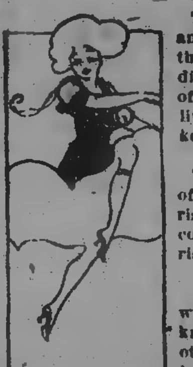
By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

THE smile that won't come off does not justify its name the morning after election when worn by the defeated candidate.

It isn't pleasant to meet the man with the backbone when he is in opposition to your own interests.

Some people have a way of being conspicuous by being persistently inconspicuous.



The really melancholy days are those when your digestion is out of tune and your liver gets off the key.

The specialty of many of the rising generation consists in not rising.

One half of the world oftentimes knows how the other half lives, but in that case it can't see why.

We naturally expect to see a man stumble and go heels over head into trouble who is star gazing either skyward or stageward.

There are people so very fond of themselves that they can't by any chance ever be lonesome.

Not being clever is often the cleverest play that a really clever person makes.

The Good Old Way.

It may be that the doctor
  Can sooner turn the trick
And with his modern powders
  At once relieve the sick,
But I would much prefer it
  When giving pains the chase
To have some ancient auntie
  Come footing round the case.

She may not with her lotions,
  Her herbs and catnip tea
Be very long on science,
  But she looks good to me.
The sympathetic fussing
  Some magic can supply
That does not quite accompany
  The doctor's chilly eye.

Of course for special cases,
  Like breaking of a limb
Or having an appendix
  That one with skill must trim,
The doctor comes in handy.
  For milder cases, though,
I'd rather call in grandma
  And let her have a show.

Too much like mathematics
  I find the doctor's line—
Two drops of this at mealtime
  And three of that at nine.
I'd rather have a woman
  Around my bed to croon
And coddle me and tuck me
  And not get well so soon.

ARIZONA KICKLETS

The Editor is a Tough Customer and Admits it

By M. QUAD.

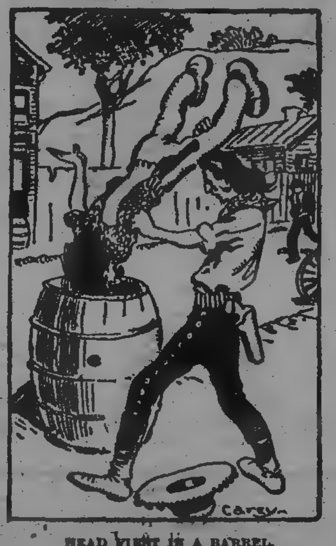
[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

MAJOR BORGARDUS relates that as he was returning from a trip to Lone Jack the other day he was pursued for over a mile by a large cinnamon bear and came near being overtaken. We don't believe the story. We don't say right out that the major is a liar, but, if pinned down to it, we would make affidavit that he couldn't tell the truth for money.

The report published in a rival paper that we had driven every lawyer out of Givesdam Gulch at the muzzle of a gun is, of course, all nonsense. Three or four years ago, before the bar got on to our editorial tactics in the case of a libel suit, we believe we did help a lawyer or two, but there has been no trouble of late, nor do we apprehend any. It is the business of a lawyer to start a libel suit against us if retained for that purpose, and it is our business to call on him and quash the case, and the understanding is so well grounded that no trouble ever arises.

It is now two weeks since Sam Roys went over to Cat mountain to gather geological specimens, and no one has heard from him since the day he left. There is a general feeling that Sam picked up a grizzly bear and that the bear objected.

We were told on Tuesday that the physical and mental wreck whom we were obliged by courtesy to refer to as our esteemed contemporary had threatened again to shoot us on sight—being about the hundredth time in the last two years—but we were by no means prepared for his wonderful feat on Wednesday. He actually did stop us on Apache avenue and pull a gun. For some time we were in doubt whether he would shoot us or himself; but, finding he was liable to accident, we picked him and his gun up and deposited them head first in a barrel in front of Skinner's grocery. The editor remained there, with his heels in the air, until some one extended a helping hand. We shall never draw a gun on our esteemed, although we may jab at him with a toothpick.



HEAD FIRST IN A BARREL.

Our esteemed contemporary in his issue of Tuesday says that he met us on Cochise place Sunday evening and fired five shots at us, but owing to the darkness we escaped. We were on Cochise place Sunday evening. We passed two loving hours with a widow whom we have long been sweet on and after pressing her hand for the thousandth time got under our hat and departed. We walked down to Cheyenne street and from thence to Apache avenue, but did not see even a prowling dog. Our esteemed may have encountered us, but we can't recall the incident. He may have fired upon us, but if so we haven't the least remembrance. We have offered time and again to stand up before him by daylight at any range he may elect and let him blaze away, and why he should put himself out at night is a puzzle.

We believe that forty-nine out of every fifty editors in Arizona will agree we are always ready to extend every courtesy to members of the craft and that we seek to honor and elevate the profession in all we do. Last week Mr. John Baker, editor of the Bad Hill Gazette, sent us a letter at the hands of a man named Stuart. In that letter he called us a bluffer, a coward and a sneak and added that if we would be at Ten Mile Creek Sunday noon he would rid the earth of an encumbrance. As we had never had a word with Mr. Baker we were surprised at his challenge, but courtesy compelled us to say that we would be on hand at the time named. We were there at 11:30 and waited until 3 o'clock in the afternoon, but no Mr. Baker showed up. We intend to make it our business to ride over to Bad Hill some day soon and take his editorial nose between our thumb and finger and pinch it and give it a twist.

Not Her Fault.

An old gentleman, always polite to women, was asserting one day that he had never seen a really ugly woman. A woman with a flat nose, overhearing him, said:

"Sir, look at me and confess that I'm truly ugly."

"Madam," he replied, "like the rest of your sex, you are an angel fallen from the skies, but it was your misfortune, rather than your fault, that you happened to alight on your nose."—Chicago Journal.

THE GREAT DETECTIVE.

He Scores a Triumph Over the Tango Tea Husband.

"SIR," said the great detective, "you may as well confess. I always find out everything I go after—if deduction won't work, I use force."

"But confound it, I tell you," spluttered the banker, mopping his perspiring brow. "I say I have nothing to confess! I have been at my desk every afternoon for the past three months, and I can prove it."

"Well, why don't you prove it?" demanded the great detective.

"Because, no matter how hard the wind blows, she is still his mother," retorted the banker sarcastically.

"Is that a species of the capricornus bunkydory on your wrist?" cried the great detective suddenly.

"Where?" said the banker, and flung up his wrist. Quick as a flash of buttered lightning the great detective seized it, stabbed it sharply with a small stiletto which he had concealed in his hand, and as quickly whipped off his hat to catch the resultant six drops of blood.

In the silence of his laboratory that night he examined them.

"Tannic acid! Just full of it," he exulted. "He could never get himself in that condition without attending tango teas every afternoon for months! Now to identify the brand of tea by the acid, thus locate the hotel that uses it, and in that way discover the woman—and presto, his wife gets her divorce and I get a $10,000 fee—hee hee!"—San Francisco Chronicle.

San Guiliano Worse.

ROME, Oct. 15.—(Via Paris.)—After a slight improvement the condition of Marquis Di San Giuliano, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has again grown grave, with marked weakness of the heart. The Minister retains consciousness, however, and understands perfectly the seriousness of his condition.

Although Premier Salandra has taken charge of the Foreign Office, to this has not been officially announced. He will deal with international questions, having previously reached an agreement with Marquis Di San Giuliano regarding the Italian policy.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

HILL—SANDERSON.

A quiet wedding took place yesterday afternoon at St. Luke's church when Miss Florence Lillian Sanderson became the wife of Mr. Roland W. Hill. Rev. F. J. Sawers officiated.

The bride was assisted by Miss Edith Lean, while Mr. Roland Sanderson acted as groomsman.

After a short honeymoon they will take up residence on Robinson street.

Mr. H. S. Southall, Buffalo, is in the city for a few days.

C. E. Price, Toronto, is here on business.

Mr. J. E. Jordan, Toronto, is a guest at the White House.

Mr. A. Ballastyne, Stratford, is a guest of friends for a few days.

Mr. T. H. Noble, Toronto, is here on a short visit.

Mr J. R. Holden and A. Lindsay, Toronto, are here for a short visit.

Mr. J. E. Herring, Toronto, is registered at the Snowden House.

Miss Ada Thornton, graduate of Galt hospital, returned Monday to her home, 594 Sherbrooke street.

Mr. John Watt has returned to Midland, after visiting with his father and renewing acquaintances.

Rev. H. J. Keith and Mr. Howard Shurter are in Toronto attending the Presbyterian synod, which is being held in St. James' church.

Mrs. J. Knox, 481 Gilmour Street, wishes to thank the board of directors of the exhibition for a cheque received this morning for the use of patriotic work for which she is very grateful.

A very instructive address on Japan was given Tuesday evening at the Charlotte St. C. L. A. by Mr. Gates, president of the literary department. A number of colored slides were used to illustrate the speaker's remarks, which covered a wide range of Japan's growth and history.

The Kitchener Red Cross club has not disbanded or ceased to work for Red Cross purposes.

The work is still being carried on under the direction of the same president, Miss Jessie M. Garrow, 759 Downie street, and the meetings are held in the Y.W.C.A. every Tuesday at 8 p.m. Miss Garrow has been elected a member of the committee of the Peterborough Red Cross Society, of which Mrs. (Canon) Davidson is president, Mrs. Fred Roy treasurer, and Miss Laura Davidson the secretary.

This will keep the auxiliary in close touch with the society and with the needs and requirements of the Red Cross headquarters.

Y.W.C.A. NOTES

It is hoped that no girl or young woman in the city will miss the opportunity of taking the lectures on First Aid by Dr. Sutton on Wednesday nights. These lectures are given under the auspices of the St. John Ambulance association. Certificates and diplomas are awarded.

It would be too bad to miss the good times to be held in the Y. W. C. A. gymnasium this winter. Classes to suit all. Girls' classes Mondays and Thursdays. Children's classes Saturday morning.

The Loyalty club meets on Friday night at 8 o'clock and is open to all girls, especially those from the old country.

This is an event that should be rewarded with a large audience from the music lovers of the city. A collection will be taken for the Patriotic Fund.

Fort Henry In 1837.

In the best of health and 93 years of age, Kingston's veteran citizen, Capt. R. H. McKay, can recall incidents of over three-quarters of a century ago, when prisoners of war were confined in Fort Henry in the years 1837 and 1838. "Little did I think I would live to see the day when the old fort would be used for such purpose again," he remarked.

"I well remember the occasion when two batches of prisoners were brought to the fort. One batch was picked up at Toronto and hurried to Kingston under the charge of a military guard and placed in the fort. A second batch was rounded up down the St. Lawrence River."

Capt. McKay can well remember the sensational escape which thirty of the prisoners made one day. One of them got hold of the plans of the fort, which had been thrown over the wall to him by one of his friends, and by that means he was able to find the places by which a person could get out in case of an emergency.

After scanning the plans over a scheme was arranged and these thirty men made their escape through one of the submarine passages.

THE SUPPLY OF BABIES

What a Procession of Those Born In One Year Would Mean.

It has been computed that about 40,000,000 babies are born into the world each year. The rate of production is, therefore, about seventy per minute, or more than one for every beat of the clock.

With the one-a-second calculation every reader is familiar, but it is not every one who stops to calculate what this means when it comes to a year's supply. It will, therefore, probably startle a good many persons to find, on the authority of a well known statistician, that, could the infants of a year be ranged in a line in cradles, the cradles would extend around the globe.

The same writer looks at the matter in a more picturesque light. He imagines the babies being carried past a given point in their mothers' arms, one by one, and the procession being kept up night and day until the last hour in the twelfth month had passed by. A sufficiently liberal rate is allowed, but even in going past at the rate of twenty a minute, 1,200 an hour, during the entire year, the reviewer at his post would have seen only the sixth part of the infantile host.

In other words, the babe that had to be carried when the tramp began would be able to walk when but a mere fraction of its comrades had reached the reviewer's post, and when the year's supply of babies was drawing to a close there would be a rear guard, not of infants, but of romping six-year-old boys and girls.—London Tit-Bits.

HANGING PICTURES.

The Old Rule and Origin of the Term "On the Line."

People still speak of pictures being hung "on the line" at the Royal Academy, but very few indeed, even among the present members themselves, know the origin of the term. The common belief that it implies a place on the walls on the level with a spectator's eye is more or less correct. But when the exhibitions were held in Somerset House and Trafalgar square the term meant something far more definite. In those days people not only spoke of pictures being hung "on the line," but "above the line" and "below the line." "The line" was then a regular and permanent fixture. It was a horizontal line exactly eight feet from the floor, marked by a projecting ledge that left the surface of the wall below it two inches in advance of that which was above it.

A picture was said to be hung "on the line" when the top of its frame was level with this ledge. "Hung thus," says G. D. Leslie, R. A., in "The Inner Life of the Royal Academy," "the picture, unless a very small one indeed, was exactly at the height to be viewed comfortably by a spectator."

The rule in old times was that all very large pictures, as well as whole length and half length portraits, had to be placed above the line, the bottoms of their frames resting on the ledge which marked the line, but no lower. The line was thus preserved level, no pictures breaking through it either from above or below.

MISSED THE THESEUS BUT SUNK THE HAWKE

A German Submarine Sends British Cruiser to the Bottom in the North Sea

FIFTY OF CREW ARE LANDED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 16.—The British cruiser Hawke has been sunk in the North Sea by a German submarine. Fifty were saved out of a crew of 400. This statement is officially confirmed.

The Hawke was 7,500 tons displacement, a sister ship of the Edgar, Theseus and Gibraltar, launched 23 years ago.

London, Oct. 16.—The Admiralty has given out the following announcement: "His Majesty's ship Theseus, Captain Hugh Edwards, was attacked by a submarine in the northern waters of the North Sea yesterday afternoon, but was missed. His Majesty's ship Hawke, Captain M. P. Williams, was attacked about the same time and was sunk.

"The following officers, with 49 men of the crew, have been landed at Aberdeen from a trawler: Boatswain Sydney Austin, Gunner James Dennis, Acting Gunner Harry Evitt. The remaining officers and men are missing. Further particulars will be published as soon as available.

"The Hawke was a cruiser built in 1889."

Forest Destruction In Trent Watershed

An Example of National Mismanagement and Imprudence

The Trent watershed is a sample area of thousands of square miles in other parts of the eastern provinces, and the conditions in this watershed are by no means extraordinary. They repeat themselves wherever axe and fire have been permitted to destroy the original forest growth, that is to say, wherever lumbering under the license system has been permitted, without safeguarding the property as a producer. The sequence of this mismanagement is everywhere the same. The removal, either of the best or of all timber, without disposing of the debris, leaves a slash which invariably becomes a prey to fire; after this, a loss of interest takes place on the part of the licensee, and, what is still worse, on the part of the government. Nature then attempts to reproduce the forest, only to be followed by a repetition of the fires, which kill the seed trees and seedlings of the better kinds. The ground is then re-covered by aspen and birch for a time; but, through repeated conflagrations, it is finally rendered useless for any productive purposes. A similar sequence takes place in connection with the small-farm portions; at first, through the home market made by the lumbermen, a fair living may be made by the occupant; gradually this market vanishes and the soil becomes worked out; the surface wears away, the rocks are exposed, and the people are left destitute and miserable. —Trent Watershed Survey.

TO AVENGE DEATH OF BROTHER

Lindsay, Oct. 16.—A young Englishman by the name of George Sheppard, who has been working as a farm hand for a farmer near Reaboro, walked in from that village and enlisted with the 45th Regt. for the second contingent.

This young man has had three brothers in the British Army who are connected with the Argyle Light Infantry and a short while ago, one of the brothers was killed in a conflict with the Germans. Mr. Sheppard is therefore very eager to get at the enemy to avenge his brother's death.

TWO BRITISH ENVOYS SHOT

Noel Buxton and His Brother Wounded by Young Turk

LONDON, Oct. 16.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Bucharest says:

"Noel Buxton (member of the British Parliament for North Norfolk), and his brother, Charles Roden Buxton, sons of Sir Thomas Powell Buxton, former governor of South Australia, who had been in Bulgaria to confer with Bulgarian politicians regarding Bulgarian attitude toward the European war, were both shot yesterday by a young Turk, Pachel Hassan.

"The Buxtons were traveling in an automobile with a son of M. Guechoff, former Bulgarian Premier, to attend the funeral of the King of Roumania when Pachel fired four shots at the party from a revolver. One of the Buxtons was shot through the lung. The other was only slightly wounded.

"The assassin was arrested. It appears that he had just arrived here from Salonica. He had a passport which was vised at Constantinople, Sept. 26."

Noel Buxton has traveled extensively in the near east. He is chairman of the London Balkan committee and has actively interested himself in Macedonia. He served with the Bulgarian staff during the war in the Balkans.

Charles Roden Buxton was private secretary to his father in South Australia. He has been interested for a long time in welfare work. Mr. Buxton lived for a time in Texas, where he studied ranching.

The correspondent says it is believed that the wound of neither man is dangerous. He does not say which one of the brothers was shot through the lung.

COL. MARITZ LOSES FIRST

Eighty of His Army Are Captured by South African Force

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, Oct. 16.—Eighty of Lt.-Col. Maritz's Boer rebels have been captured after a brief fight by the union forces.

As a result of Col. Maritz's rebellion in the northwest of the Cape provinces, Gen. Botha, Premier of the Union of South Africa, and commander of the troops of the union, is taking the field earlier than he originally intended to do. Gen. Botha is placing himself at the head of several strong Dutch commands, organised on the old burgher line, which are affiliated with regiments trained by the union defence force.

Commandants, field cornets and burghers who served under Gen. Botha in the South African war, are rallying to his call, irrespective of their political feeling to fight alongside of the British in defence of the Empire, against which, twelve years ago, they were in arms. This fact has had a marked effect on waverers, who are now flocking to Gen. Botha's standard.

The other rebels within the union, having openly declared themselves, the Government considers itself not obliged to deal gently with them out of consideration for certain Dutch people, who, even though they are not strong supporters of the Government, are said to have drawn the line at rebellion.

Gen. Hertzog, who has been one of Gen. Botha's most bitter opponents, has placed his services at the disposal of the Premier.

Mrs. W. H. Evans, wife of a prominent Fort William Broker, attempted to commit suicide by cutting her throat with a razor. Her chances for recovery are slight.

APPOINTED TAX COLLECTOR AND RELIEF OFFICER

W. B. Anderson is Given Position by the North Monaghan Council

A meeting was held at May's school house last night when the members of the North Monaghan council were present. Mr. H. Rush and Mr. F. Miller, a deputation from the city patriotic association, waited on the council in regard to making arrangements with the township for the caring of certain persons in the township. Mr. H. Rush said that the city had been assisting some three or four women and their families, their husbands having gone to the war.

Mr. F. Miller, city relief officer, dealt with the cases individually, and after he had concluded Reeve Howden said that the township had supplied the families in question up to the time they had received their husbands' pay from the government.

W. B. Anderson Appointed.

The various applications for the position of tax collector were then dealt with. The council, after considering the numerous applications for charity, decided it was advisable to appoint some person to act as tax collector and township relief officer. It was moved by Mr. Young, seconded by Mr. Dobbin, that Wm. B. Anderson be appointed tax collector and relief officer, at a salary of $100.

May Erect Poles.

A communication was received from the Peterborough utilities commission asking permission to erect poles, etc., and to carry on their electric light and power business. It was moved by Mr. Forster, seconded by Mr. Robson, that permission be given, but that all poles, etc., erected must be in accordance with directions from the municipal council.

Accounts Passed.

The following accounts were ordered to be paid: Sawyer-Massey Co., crusher, $1,331.50, less 5 per cent. discount, $66.57; less expenses of Howden and Young to Hamilton, $17.; balance due Massey, $1,247.93; C. P. R. freight, $1.44.

Are Still At Large

Toronto, Oct. 16.—Until a late hour last night nothing had been learned of the whereabouts of the four prisoners, Mulhall, Schweir, McLaughlin and Spence, who escaped Wednesday afternoon from the Central Prison. Late the same night a horse and a light express wagon were stolen from the rear of 664 Spadina avenue and have not been found. Mulhall has been sent to jail on several occasions for such an offence as this.

The horse stands 14 hands high, is a dark bay mare and is twelve years of age. It has a light scar on the right shoulder.

French War Office Confirms Progress of French and English Forces

THIRTY-SIX GUNS ARE CAPTURED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Oct. 16.—The French war office official announcement this afternoon follows: "Progress indicated in the communication of yesterday has been confirmed. On our left wing the field of action of the allied forces extends at the present time from the region of Ypres to the sea."

London, Oct. 16.—The Daily Express says Albert and Arras are in the hands of the French, but are still being bombarded. One French army corps has captured thirty-six field guns. Both sides are continually receiving reinforcements.

London, Oct. 16.—A Rome despatch says Berlin confirms the report of a disastrous fire at the dockyard at Trieste.

NO ELECTION UNLESS IT IS ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY

Autocratic Action of Senate Has Been Against Best Interest of the People

"No one wants an election unless there is a good reason for it," replied Mr. J. H. Burnham today when asked by The Review regarding the probabilities for a general election.

"To break into business at this time, when we need not go to the country till the autumn of 1916 is a serious thing unless there is an absolute need of it," continued the federal member.

"There can be no question that the Senate is acting in a purely party manner. The Conservative record to date has been reduced to very little by reason of the malicious acts of the Senate in throwing out our bills—bills which every one knew were in the best interest of the people of Canada.

"Take for example the Tariff Revision Bill. The tariff must be revised; it is good in some parts and bad in others. It cannot be revised except by parliament and when parliament passed a bill to enable it to be done, the Senate threw it out.

"The whole Maritime province region is up in arms over the veto of the purchase of the short line feeders for the Intercolonial. The Intercolonial has no feeders and being a public railway is opposed by all private corporations. Unless it can secure these short line feeders and do business just as the big railways do in Ontario, it cannot hope for success or to be of any use to the country.

The Cry of the West.

"The West has been crying out for increased representation. The Senate would not allow it. Why? Because the Liberal members at Ottawa and Sir Wilfrid Laurier wanted it postponed until it could be of service to them politically. I regret to say, the truth is, that the Liberal leader at Ottawa in the House of Commons and the Senate are vastly more concerned about getting back to power than they are about the best interests of the country.

"There's too much politics in the country. I have had many an opportunity of seeing that and unless parties are told that the country does not exist for the party there will be trouble and perhaps disaster.

Reciprocity or Nothing.

"The Liberal party at Ottawa has never forgiven the Reciprocity defeat. They stand as firmly for reciprocity as ever they did simply because it is that or nothing.

"The fact that prices are higher in Canada for cereals than in the United States, uniformly, makes no difference to politicians when they want power and the fact that at the present time, the United States is in a much worse condition than Canada, industrially, does not weigh with them. They want power and the only way to get it is through the Liberal Senate and this has been their sole and only plan. They have pretty nearly wrecked the Conservative party and I am not exaggerating when I say they utterly defy Government by the people.

"If therefore the Government decides on an election it is only because it is absolutely necessary in the interest of the country. It is certainly not in the interest of the party which has two years yet to run.

The Senate has Ruled.

"There is one feature, I am sure will strike the public very forcibly and that is the Senate not only vetoed big bills but has tampered with almost every small bill that passed the House. "Again, I am not exaggerating when I say that the Senate absolutely ruled the situation in a most contemptible and autocratic style wholly against all right. It allowed us to do the talking but it did all the political shystering.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his friends nearly tore us to pieces in the House and out of it, daring us to go to the country on the German menace, and the emergency which they laughed at, scoffed at and spat upon. Having failed in that they used the Senate as next best weapon and they may not find the Senate any more profitable as a political weapon, than the emergency."

HUGE GRAIN THEFTS

Montreal Commission Robbed in Mysterious Manner

MONTREAL, Oct. 16. — A large quantity of grain, said by some to be more than would fill two of the biggest "tramps" plying out of Montreal, has been stolen from elevators owned by the Montreal Harbor Commissioners. The figure is set by some at 750,000 bushels.

The Harbor Commissioners state, however, that only a few hundred bushels have disappeared.

The first intimation of the thefts was received from England, where a cargo was reported about 10,000 bushels short. An investigation followed and the deeper those conducting it go, the more they are amazed.

The jury at the Fall Assizes at St. Thomas awarded Mrs. Clara Dunn $3,000 in her action against the Wabash Railway Company for damages, for the death of her husband.

SAYS BODY IS THAT OF MAN WHO ASSAULTED HER

Assailant of Little Girl Took Quantity of Arsenic

St. Catharines, Oct. 16.—While nothing has yet been learned concerning R. Knight, whose body was found in the lock-up at Niagara-on-the-Lake after he had committed suicide, the affair has succeeded in solving the mystery surrounding a brutal criminal assault committed upon a thirteen-year-old girl in Grantham township more than five weeks ago.

The victim of that crime went to Niagara last night, and without any hesitation identified the body of the suicide as that of her assailant. The county police for several days scoured the vicinity for trace of the man answering the description of the one wanted. An inquest upon Knight's body was opened, and adjourned until Monday. The post-mortem shows that he swallowed a quantity of arsenic.

To Become A Brigade

French-Canadian Contingent Idea Has Taken Hold

MONTREAL, Oct. 16.—Why 2,000 French-Canadians have already volunteered for active service with the new regiment, Royal Canadien-Francais, and why thousands more should and will volunteer, was made plain at a monster assemblee patriotique in Sohmer Park last night.

The movement started some three weeks ago by Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Mr. L. T. Marechal, Dr. Arthur Mignault and other prominent French-speaking Canadians of this province, back by the Government and Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Lomer Gouin, has already outgrown the original plan for a special French-Canadian regiment. It is now to be a brigade, and there is no doubt but that at least 4,000 volunteers will have offered for service by the end of this month, in addition to the 2,600 French-Canadians now with the first Canadian expeditionary force.

Last night's meeting was for the purpose of stimulating recruiting, although apparently little stumulus is needed, now that the French-Canadians are getting what they have asked for from the first—namely, a chance to serve under the officers they know and understand, in order to preserve the unity of their individual corps. The immense crowd which turned out last night and the response to the appeal showed that the heart of Montreal is in the right place. The fight of Britain, France and Belgium for justice and liberty, for the common cause of humanity as against brute force and the spirit of militarism, has a natural appeal to Canadians who speak the language of France, who know and are jealous of all the principles of British liberty, and who appreciate the heroism of the Belgians.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1914

INDIA IN THE FIGHTING LINE.

WE HAVE just received a copy of the Westminster Gazette of October 2, which says that it is permitted to announce that the Indian Expeditionary Force has landed at Marseilles, a southern port of France, on the north shore of the Mediterranean Sea. But it further says that the news is five days old, so that the landing took place on September 27th. For this reason the despaches ought to contain any day now news of the doings of the Indian force.

It will be remembered that two despatches some time ago created some impossible speculations. One was that a force of 50,000 men was to be brought from India, and the passage of this by the censor was taken to mean that they had already landed. The other was the transportation of 70,000 Russians from Archangel, the Russian port on the White Sea, via Scotland and England, to France. Kitchener has done wonderful things, but he has no Alladin's Lamp, and doesn't transport troops by merely wishing it done. Both despatches led to some wild deductions, but the landing of large bodies of men in Europe, within short range of the scene of conflict, from places so large and so far away as Canada and India, and within the space of two months, is a feat that has no parallel in history. Soldiers from Victoria, B. C., have gone across Canada and the Atlantic. Soldiers from India have crossed that great country and the Indian Ocean, through the Suez Canal, over the Mediterranean Sea, to Marseilles. Soldiers from Australia are on the way, and may even now have landed. So, too, forces are coming from South Africa, New Zealand, Newfoundland. What is wonderful about this feat is the mobilizing of forces drawn from countries thousands of miles in extent, like Canada, India, and Australia. Then the training and transshipment of such large bodies across such great sea distances, all within the very short time of two months. When we consider what this means, the marshalling of transports, the drilling of men, the gathering of horses and of vast quantities of food supplies, the magnitude of the feat is partly realized. Over thirty large steel ships were required for the Canadian force. Imagine thirty ocean vessels gathered in one port for one shipment. Think of the bread required per day for 33,000 men, and the fodder for 3,000 horses, and the ammunition for 33,000 rifles and some 200 large field guns.

But that is not all. This landing of the Indian Expeditionary Force has a profound political and military significance for the people of India, the Empire, and the world. One of the greatest miscalculations of the Germans was the disaffecion in India as well as in other parts of the Empire, and which disappeared quickly when danger threatened the safety of the British domain. Great Britain has a population in India of over three hundred millions, from which to draw troops. The old religious obstacle that a man lost caste by crossing the seas has broken down, as a similar injunction has in Japan. India is a vital resource of the Empire, and her strength is part of Britain's strength as a military and naval force in the world. Further, Great Britain has turned a deaf ear to proposals for autonomy in India. It is true that Indian nations, for British India is made up of several nations, are low in the scale as regards education and other requirements deemed necessary to entrust them with self-government. It is also true that great strides in progress have been made, but Britain felt that the people were not ready to be trusted with their own government, much as a child cannot be trusted with its own training. The action of India in this war has shown on which side she is, and will be a powerful influence in obtaining more extended political concessions for which agitations of an important character have been carried on during recent years. The action of India is a magnificent endorsation of Britain's Imperial policy for governing an empire and a patent proclamation of its great power and almost unlimited resources.

THE FARMERS SHOULD SOW WHEAT.

PUBLIC OFFICIALS have been exhorting the Canadian farmer to sow more wheat this year. But it is doubtful if, even yet, the North American wheat-producer realises fully what an opportunity confronts him. The farmer, of all men, should not share the exaggerated idea of the importance of Canada and the United States as contributors to the world's food supply, which leads many persons to feel that there can be little pinch or shortage as long as the production of these countries continues unhampered. It is rather the actual predominance of Europe as a food producer that renders the situation serious and places a premium on American supplies. The following facts are significant:

Europe leads the continents in annual wheat production, and, normally, raises twice as much as North America, her nearest competitor. She grew over one-half of the record-breaking world's wheat crop of 1913, doubling the combined contribution of Canada, United States and Mexico. European nations now in arms alone grew 42 per cent. of the total yield, while the whole of North America produced only slightly over 25 per cent. On the reasonable supposition that shortage of labour, poor tillage, decreased acreage, and other adverse conditions will reduce the 1914 wheat crops of European combatants by one-third, over half of North America's entire yield would be required to meet the deficiency.

Europe probably carried over into 1914 a fair surplus from her banner wheat crop of 1913. But what of this year's production? Russia's rosiest prospects before the war never promised within 150,000,000 bushels of last year's total, and the war must have caused further huge decreases. Hungary and Italy, great wheat nations, will show a combined shortage of 75,000,000 bushels, while India and Canada fall behind by 50,000,000 and 70,000,000 bushels, respectively, as compared with the 1913 harvest. How will the deficiency be met? Canada's exportable surplus has been cut in two. The bumper crop of the United States will hardly offset the shortage of Russia alone. Consumption must decrease somewhat, but can hardly parallel the sudden shrinkage in production. Canada, United States, India, Australia and Argentine will find every bushel of their 1914 crop required in Europe next spring to meet the shortage of Russia, France, Germany, Italy, and Austria-Hungary. If war is prolonged six months, hindering seeding operations in 1915, the demand will be even more insistent in the spring and summer of 1916.

The moral to the Canadian farmer is simple. Grow wheat. Sow every available acre to a crop of which the world will stand badly in need in the coming months.

CLIPPING ITS WINGS.

WHILST FEW PEOPLE would go so far as to say that we should not have a second chamber to safeguard legislation, nevertheless it is quite plain that it was never contemplated that a second chamber should become more than a mild form of brake to steady the vehicle of State. Perhaps some day the evolution of development of the Constitution (which up to the present has gradually been changed from an unelected form to one entirely dependent upon the will of the people) will result in a single House. The affairs of a city are transacted by one council. The affairs of a province are transacted by one legislature in most provinces. The people of Canada have some valuable precedents to go by, and some day we will have but one House, and that one the expression of the people's will. It is entirely contrary to the wishes of the people that a House, whether a Senate or a Legislative Council, which is nominated for life and is in every sense independent of the will of the people, should thwart the will of the people. Like all human institutions, when it proceeds too far, the Senate becomes a serious injury to democracy. In Great Britain this state of affairs reached a climax recently when the House of Lords had to submit to being amended or to entire abolition. The people expressed themselves to this effect in no uncertain way. Accordingly, when the House of Commons in Britain passes an act, if this act is rejected by the House of Lords, all that the House of Commons has to do is to pass it again, when it becomes law. And thus the true function of a second house is performed, namely, the prevention of hasty legislation, but when hasty legislation can be so easily prevented in such a thorough way, what excuse can there be for the Canadian Senate taking the chief measures of the House of Commons, the only elected body, and throwing them out finally and forever? As has been pointed out, the Intercolonial Bill was endorsed by both sides of the House without dissent, and yet the Senate threw it out. Government in Canada has reached a complete stoppage. The House of Commons is now being defied by the Senate. The Senate, without being responsible to the people at all, presumes to rule the people with a rod of iron. It must be taught a lesson, as in Great Britain, and not only a lesson, but it must be provided with a measure of reform which will compel it to bow to the wishes of the people when it has fulfilled its function of preventing over-hasty legislation.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE BRIGHT DAYS of Autumn may be profitably employed in the raking of lawns, the burning of dead leaves, and in a general cleaning up of yards and gardens, for do not forget that while the city is spending large sums on pavements and in otherwise improving the streets, much depends on individual citizens if Peterborough is to be a healthy, beautiful city.

WE NOTICED the other day an automobile on Hunter street, left with the engine running and no attendant with it. In some places it would cost the owner or driver five plunks to be told that he should not do this.

THE RESIDENTS of East City have a good candidate in G. L. Hay for alderman, and would make no mistake in electing him to the City Council.

NOW is the time to make Hay while the sun shines in East City.

REMEMBER, Hay is valuable, and is much needed in the City Council.

An Artillery Officer's Complaint.

(Westminster Gazette.)

We see that an artillery officer in the Expeditionary Force, writing home on September 19th, says he "thinks Kitchener has had much more difficulty than he ought to have had getting his 100,000." The mistake is quite pardonable, since the appeal for the first half-million men for the new Army was always made by asking for 100,000 at a time. But it is a pity that the officer who on September 19th sorrowed at the backwardness of his fellow-countrymen did not know that by that date Lord Kitchener had got, not merely the first 100,000, but the whole half-million. Let us hope that by this time this officer has been comforted by being put in full possession of the facts.

DREAMS

By Walt Mason

The dreams of youth are most entrancing, they take him where all nature smiles, and birds of paradise are glancing along romantic woodland aisles. And when he wakes, and lies recalling the visions of that fairy shore, the moonlight on its vistas falling, he fain would sleep and dream some more. The dreams of age are fierce and racking, and wear away the old men's lives; in dreams red men my steps are tracking, with tomahawks and scalping knives. Or I am tied upon a trestle, a locomotive drawing near; no matter how I strain and wrestle, I can't escape my doom, I fear. Or forty-seven bulls pursue me, I hear them thunder at my heels, they push their big long antlers through me—how comfortable all that feels! Or I am from an airship falling, and know that every bone will break; the pangs I feel are most appalling, and I'm still falling when I wake. I never sleep, but that disaster comes to me in some tragic form; I'm swimming in a lake of plaster, or torn to fragments by a storm. And when I wake I'm so exhausted, to walk I scarcely have the steam; then by some youth I am accosted, who tells me of his glowing dream!

Spies as Red Cross Aides.

PARIS, Oct. 16. — Five German spies masquerading as Red Cross aides were captured in Paris yesterday. For some weeks the party had been automobiling in the rear of the French lines furnished with forged papers, but when they attempted to enter Paris they were arrested because unprovided with a pass signed by Gen. Gallieni. Two bombs, several rifles, cortridges, maps and sketches were found hidden in the automobile.

Austria Busy Fortifying.

VENICE, Oct. 16.—(Via Paris.)—It is reported from Trieste, Austria, that all able-bodied men in Austria are being forcibly compelled to assist in constructing fortifications. Any man refusing to do this work is arrested. The people are expressing indignation because of this.

Chance For Christmas Gifts.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16. — American railroads may transport free of charge, if they decide to do so, gifts made by the children of the United States for presentation on Christmas Day to the children made orphans by the European war.

This ruling was announced by the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday in connection with the plans of American newspapers to send a "Christmas ship" abroad.

The commission said that the transportation of such articles would fall within the terms of charity and that such transportation was entirely discretionary with the railroads.

Population of Galt.

GALT, Oct. 16. — The assessment roll made public yesterday shows that Galt's increase in population during the past year has only been 34, but it brings the total now up to 12,016. The outstanding feature of the returns is the gain in the total actual value of real property of $309,208. The increase in assessment this year is $216,456.

Portugal Reinforces Garrisons.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Two expeditionary forces of Portuguese troops sailed from Lisbon on Sept. 10 to reinforce garrisons in Portuguese possessions in Africa, which adjoin those of Germany. This was made known yesterday by C. Rangel De Sampaio, Portuguese consul-general at New York, and is the first news to reach this country of any actual military preparations by Portugal for the eventuality of that country's participation in the war.

THE CITY DADS

The amount of taxes to be levied to meet any year's municipal expenditures is a matter of judgment as to the city's needs, on the part of the city officials. There is always considerable pressure brought to bear at both ends of the line, and ordinarily more attention on the part of the public is centred at the city hall at the time of making up the annual budget than at any other time of the year. Heads of departments, wise to the usual attitude of the city council and the heavy taxpayers at such times, generally ask for more money than they expect to receive. Some citizens who are particularly interested in specific activities or measures, are present in force, trying to get extra appropriations for their hobbies. Others, usually representing the happy property owners, are on hand urging cuts in the estimates, arguing against every proposed increase in the taxes, demanding closer economy in every branch of the government, pleading, threatening, cajoling, brow-beating, using every means in their power to keep the taxes at the lowest point, often ignorant of the needs and regardless of the welfare of any other class of citizens but their own. Between these fires the city council treads a dangerous and uncertain path, knowing that criticism and condemnation will be their lot, regardless of their decisions. They know that many of the departmental estimates of expenditures are guesses; they believe that many items are padded or doctored; and they feel that all must be trimmed in order to prove their worth as "watchdogs of the treasury." They can, from their own ignorance of real needs and actual costs, appreciate the feeling of the man who wrote:

"There was a man in our town,
And he was wondrous wise;
He told the City Fathers
They should economize.
He talked about the budget
In a most familiar way,
And said to cut the levy
Was naught but children's play.

That very man was chosen,
Much to his surprise,
To scramble through the brambles
And put the others wise.
But when he saw the job it was,
With all his might and main,
He jumped into retirement—
And never kicked again."

—Hon. C. M. Fassett, in "Pacific Municipalities."

A GOOD MATCH

By F. A. MITCHEL

One of the many peculiarities of human nature is to place little value on what we do easily. A man will have unlimited ability, for instance, as a trader. He considers money making something that any fool should be able to accomplish. He is ambitious to play the piano, and it worries him that he can't tell one note from another. There is a worse phase of such freakishness than this. A man with a single gift, not recognizing its value, will imagine he has another gift that he doesn't possess at all. "I fell into a business life by mistake," says Jones, who easily captured half a million dollars. "What I was made for is farming." He puts his accumulations in a farm, and in a few years there is nothing left of them. Yet no one can convince Jones that he is not a natural farmer. He explains his failure on the ground that there were happenings in his case which would not occur once in a hundred years.

Norman Alsop at school was a perfect scholar. When his report cards came to his parents there was a string of A's against every study, the whole looking like a company of soldiers all of equal height, without a single little fellow in the lot. All he had to do was to read his lessons over once, and then he could go out and play. It pleased him that he could do this, for a reason. He was ambitious to be a fine tennis player, a twirler, an oarsman—indeed, anything and everything that was athletic. But while he was revered by his schoolmates he was looked down upon by them on the fields of sport. Tommy Green, who stood at the other end of the class from Norman, would make a ball do the stunts of a boomerang. Norman would stand looking at Tom wrapt in admiration and wish he could exchange some of the A's on his report cards for Tom's curves.

When Norman was at college it was the same. He took all the prizes away from the other students and was graduated at the head of his class, a disappointed man. Why? Because he had failed to get on any of the athletic teams. He was not big enough or strong enough for football, but he tried for all the rest without a ghost of a show in any of them.

One would suppose that these failures would have cured him of his ambition to be an athlete. On the contrary, after graduating he went off to a summer resort affording every facility for sports, with the determination to "make something of himself," as he expressed it. As for his college course, in his heart he regarded it a failure. At the Pennant, a hotel built on a site expressly fitted for water and land sports, he found just the place that suited him. There were golf, tennis and boating, to say nothing of mountain climbing.

At the Pennant Norman fell in with Julia Damon. She had no business to be at such a hotel, for it was expensive, and she hadn't a cent in the world. The truth is an aunt of hers sent her there to give her a chance to catch a husband. There was no hope that she would snare an intellectual man, for she was inordinately stupid, but her aunt thought it possible she might mate with some rich man's son whose only ambition was to attend horse races and other spectacles, where he would have nothing to do but look on.

Norman was introduced to Julia at the tennis courts. He asked her to play, and she beat him a love set. But Norman was a nice young man and seemed so cut up by his failure that in subsequent games she "played off," permitting him to beat her most of the games of the last set. This made him not only well pleased with himself, but with Julia.

The same afternoon Norman concluded to take a row on the river. He hired a boat and was pulling out into the stream when the current took him in among some tall grass. His oars became entangled, and in his spasmodic efforts to disentangle himself he upset the boat. He was in no danger, though he could not swim, for the water where he was dumped was only three feet deep. But he presented a lugubrious spectacle. Pulling himself up on his feet, he stood looking about him as if for an inspiration as to what to do next, when he saw Julia standing on the landing.

She had the good sense not to laugh at him.

"If I were you," she said, "I would walk back here with the boat, where you can tip it on its side and let the water run out."

"This is the worst place for starting a boat," he said apologetically. "I ever saw. I wonder they put the landing here."

"It's the current and the grass together," she replied soothingly.

He managed to get the boat, which was full of water, near enough to the landing for her to get a boathook on it, and she did the rest. Norman went to his room, changed his clothes and spent the evening with her. He could not get over the stupidity of the man who had built a landing just where the current would take a boat right into the very place to swamp it. Miss Damon agreed with him, but the next morning he saw her shoot out from that very landing in a boat without the slightest difficulty.

As the summer wore on Alsop learned something about handling a pair of oars from Miss Damon, who while coaching him contrived to make him believe that he was coaching her. If he had stuck to a common rowboat he might have got on without any serious mishap. But his ambition to make a boatman of himself was inversely in proportion to his inability to do so. He must paddle a canoe. Miss Damon suggested that he would better first learn to swim, but he said he had tried that and had not got on very well. He had heard of little children being taught to swim by being thrown into the water and forced to clamber out by themselves. Quite likely if he were dumped from his canoe he might "get the hang of it" and in time become a fine swimmer.

It was not long before Mr. Alsop found an opportunity to learn to swim by this heroic process. He was paddling along one day in a canoe, got up in a beautiful bathing suit, when an oarsman came pulling toward him. The man's back being to Norman, he did not see him.

There's a singular tendency in vehicles directed by novices to run into those things that they are expected to avoid. At any rate Norman used his paddle to take the boat in the direction opposite to the one he intended. The noses of the two boats sheered against each other, and the canoe went over.

Mr. Alsop sank out of sight. He said afterward that he thought of a good many things in the few moments he was beneath the surface. He thought of Miss Damon and wished he could exchange all the prizes he had taken at school and college for the ability to go quietly down, then rise quickly and with a few languid strokes reach a point of safety. But in spite of a good deal of kicking, or, rather, writhing, he continued to sink.

The oarsman, feeling a jar, turned his head aside and saw a man in bathing rig coming to the surface, a canoe upside down and a paddle some distance from both. Not thinking that a man in such an aquatic outfit would need assistance, he pulled away.

For a month Alsop had been teaching Miss Damon a peculiar stroke in the water invented by himself. That is, he thought he was teaching her, while she was trying to get him beyond that initial point where a beginner feels he can keep himself for a few seconds from going under. She had succeeded so far that, his life being the stake, he was able to swim the five feet that separated him from the canoe. By a herculean effort he reached it and clung to it, folding his arms about it lovingly.

All this happened within a quarter of a mile from the shore, where Miss Damon was sitting with a book on her lap, trying to make up one of several conditions that stood in the way of her graduation, for if she failed to get a husband it was expected that she would have to teach. There was nothing easy in the book, but to step into the water, "accoutered as she was," swim out to Norman Alsop and push the canoe, with him clinging to it, ashore was just too simple for anything. He spoke not a word till he was on terra firma; then, shaking his fist at the man who had upset him, now too far to hear him, he said:

"You confounded fool, if I didn't know more about handling a boat than you do, I'd stick to dry land!"

Miss Damon sympathized with her friend, who went to the hotel to dress for dinner, while she, after putting on dry clothes, recommenced endeavoring to get into her stupid head a problem in geometry.

It must not be supposed that during this period when Norman Alsop was trying to learn athletics and Miss Damon was trying to make up a multitude of conditions he showed nothing of the intellectual gifts there were in him. If Miss Damon helped him out of the water he helped her with the subjects she was trying to make up. This he did by rendering them so interesting to her that she not only understood them, but could not forget them. Though Alsop did not recognise the value of his instruction nor Miss Damon that she had done something remarkable in pushing him ashore, each admired the other's acquirements. Miss Damon could not understand why her friend could not do a little thing like swimming, something a fish had no trouble in doing, and Alsop could not understand why his explanation to her of the moon's phases was a failure, but neither attached any importance to the other's defect.

When Julia Damon went home in September and informed her aunt that she had captured a man who had swept his university clean of prizes the good lady was dumfounded.

"How about your school conditions?" she asked after her astonishment had worn off.

"Oh, what's the use of my making up conditions when I'm going to marry a valedictorian?"

"Just so," replied the aunt.

Norman Alsop is now a professor in —— university. He has written some philosophical works that have given him high rank as an author. When encomiums are heaped upon him he shrugs his shoulders and says:

"I'm a dead failure. I've never even been able to learn to swim. If you want capability go to my wife. There are lots of real things she can do well. As for me, I can't do anything real. I can only float on an ideal ocean."

And yet when persons mate their friends say, "What a misalliance between a learned man and a fool!" or, "That's a fine match; they have the same tastes."

Alsop reveres his wife for her gifts, and she looks up to him as a superior intellectual being.

Vacation Song.

Vacation time has come, hey-ho,
Skeeters and sunburns and sprains,
And many a man
With a frying pan
Beats it up from the plains,
Into the mountains, up by the snow,
Where the biggest skeeters and wood ticks grow,
Hey-ho,
Where the biggest wood ticks grow!

Vacation time has come, hey-ho,
Board walks and flunkeys and bills,
And many a man
Hocks what he can
And oasts it down from the hills
To the salted sands where the tangoes go
And a square meal costs ten dollars or so,
Hey-ho,
Yes, costs ten dollars or so!

Vacation time has come, hey-ho,
Scatter and chatter and roam.
Let every man
Do what he can
To beat it away from home.
He will wear off his tummy and scatter his dough,
But what is the difference? He's been on the go.
Hey-ho,
You bet, he's been on the go!

—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Limits of Sunday.

Dr. Parkhurst at a dinner in New York said of Sabbath observance:

"There are too many of us who are like the Hempstead woman.

"This woman said to her little boy the other day:

"'You mustn't roll your hoop in the front garden, dear. It's Sunday. Go roll it in the back garden.'

"'Isn't it Sunday in the back garden, too, mamma?' the little boy asked."—Kansas City Star.

Unexpected.

"How was it you allowed the fire to get such a hold on the place? You've got a fire engine, haven't you?"

"Yes, but it's the first fire since it came, and the hose was so wrapped up in wreaths from being used to decorate the streets that we couldn't get the water through."—Philadelphia Ledger.

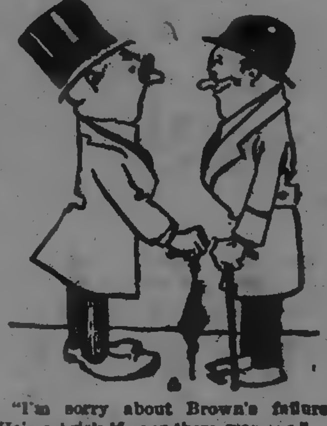
Trials of Parents.

"I haven't had a satisfactory kiss from my daughter since she was two years old."

"How's that?"

"In childhood she always had molasses on her face, and now her make-up is even worse."—Kansas City Journal.

Just the Place.



"I'm sorry about Brown's failure. He's a brick if ever there was one."

"Then it's not unnatural that he should go to the wall."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

SOME DON'TS FOR THE WAR

London, Oct. 16. — In his speech to the masters and boys of Harrow School, Lord Curzon, former Viceroy of India, concluded his remarks with the following "don'ts":

Don't think the war does not affect you individually. It touches every man, woman and child in this country!

Don't be overjoyed at victory!

Don't be downhearted at defeat!

Don't be unnerved by personal or family bereavement!

Don't be frightened at the casualty lists, so long and sometimes so distressing!

Don't think that you know how to wage the campaign, and that the War Office does not!

Don't write to the newspapers telling the generals and admirals what they ought to do, but if you have an opinion that you could do it, much better tell it to as few people as possible!

Don't get nervous because the progress of the war is slow. It can only be slow in these stages.

Don't underrate the enemy!

Don't waste breath in attempting to ascertain what is to happen to the German Emperor in this world or the next!

Don't begin to divide up the German Empire before you have got hold of it!

Don't listen to any one who cries halt before we have carried out the full purpose for which we are fighting!

When the war is over, don't throw away the lessons of war!

RHEIMS AGAIN SHELLED.

German Projectile Destroys Gallery of an Apse of Great Cathedral.

PARIS, Oct. 16.—The Temps says that a German shell fell in the Rheims cathedral on Tuesday and destroyed the gallery of an apse. Three other shells, according to the newspaper, demolished a part of the law court. The Public Attorney was buried in the ruins of the court building. He was extricated, suffering greatly from shock.

German Version.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16. — Count Von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, announced that he had received the following wireless telegram from the Berlin Foreign Office:

"Close to Rheims Cathedral two French heavy batteries have been located. Light signals from one tower of cathedral observed. Of course, all hostile measures detrimental to our troops will be fought down. With regard to sparing cathedrals, France now, as formerly, responsible if venerable building becomes victim of war."

Two Ross rifles and 500 rounds of ammunition have been stolen from the High School at Chesley, where they were stored by the cadets. The thieves left no clue.

Rheumatism
A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It.
In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.
I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 15.—Trading was active in futures on the grain market today and values comparatively steady following the gradual advance of the last few days. The undertone continues bullish, influenced by rapidly dwindling receipts here and good buying of futures by exporters. Wheat opened ⅜c lower to ⅛c higher and closed ⅛c to ⅜c down. Oats were ⅛c to ½c lower and flax advanced ⅜c to ⅞c.

The demand for all grades of cash wheat was brisk, exporters being principal buyers. Oats and barley were also in demand.

Inspections Wednesday, 355 cars, against 1663 last year, and in sight 333 cars.

Cash: Wheat—No. 1 northern, $1.12; No. 2 do., $1.08; No. 3 do., $1.03; No. 4 do., 96½c; No. 5 do., 93½c; No. 6 do., 88c; feed, 84c.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Oct. 15.—The foreign demand for Manitoba wheat was better today at another advance in prices of 1½d to 3d per quarter, and some business resulted with Glasgow and Dublin, but even at the advance bids from other ports were still out of line. The local market for coarse grains was firm with only a small volume of business passing. There was some enquiry from over the cable for spring wheat flour, but as the prices bid for export patent were 2s 6d to 2s 9d below millers' prices no business resulted. The local trade is quiet but firm. There is some cutting in prices going on for millfeed, but no actual decline has taken place. Some sales of bran have been made for export. Cheese was quiet today, but prices in the country were slightly higher. Demand for butter continues fair. Eggs fairly active.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 15.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.14¼; No. 1 northern, $1.08⅞ to $1.11¼; No. 2 do., $1.05⅞ to $1.07⅞; Dec., $1.09⅞.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 68c to 69c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 43¼c to 43½c.

Flour—Fancy patents, $5.70; first clears, $4.60; second clears, $3.15.

Bran—$20.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Oct. 15.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.13; No. 1 northern, $1.11; No. 2 do., $1.08; Dec., $1.11.

CHEESE MARKETS.

KINGSTON, Oct. 15.—At the Frontenac cheese board today 423 boxes of colored cheese were sold at 15⅛c, the highest price ever paid for cheese on the local board.

VANKLEEK HILL, Oct. 15.—There were 807 boxes of cheese boarded and sold on the Vankleek Hill Cheese Board today. The price paid was 15⅛c. The patrons of each factory represented on the board were asked to donate one day's make of cheese for the Canadian patriotic fund. D. McInnes, manager of the Banque de Hochelaga, secretary-treasurer of the fund, reported today that he had received over $1500 with several factories to hear from.

Belgian Fugitives Will Return.

LONDON, Oct. 16. — A despatch from Rotterdam to Reuter's Telegram Co. says that the Belgian fugitives in Holland elected a committee which went to Antwerp yesterday to study the possibilities of repatriation for the refugees. If the report of the committee is favorable, it is likely that there will be a general return of the Belgians to their homes.

HAS PORTUGAL TAKEN JUMP?

Spanish Newspapers Say War Has Been Declared

MADRID, Oct. 16—While the Minister of State remains silent on the authenticity of the report that Portugal has declared war against Germany, the Spanish newspapers say the declaration was made yesterday.

Liberal organs discuss at length the new situation created by Portugal's attitude and declare that the moment has arrived for Spain to abandon her state of passive observation and prepare for eventualities. With Portugal in the field, they go on to say, the operations will not remain confined to France, and in order to strike at Portugal the Germans will not hesitate to invade Spain, just as they invaded Belgium.

Looks for His Daughter After Long Separation

Marquette, Mich., Oct. 16.—Forty-eight years ago Peter Moore, embittered by the death of his young wife, who gave up her life in bringing a little daughter into the world, placed the babe in the arms of his sister and left his farm home near Brantford, Ont., to seek consolation.

Now 74 years old, yet erect, firm, clear-eyed, Peter Moore will set out next week for Detroit, where he knows that years ago some of his relatives lived, and begin a search for his daughter who, if living is nearly 50 years old. From the day Moore left his Canadian home he has not heard a word of his daughter. Forty years ago Moore had a letter from his brother in Detroit. Since that time he has had no communication with any of his kin.

Recently a longing to see his daughter came into the heart of the old man, and he decided to give up his hunting and trapping, and with what money he has saved will start out on his well-night hopeless search. Moore never saw a street car until yesterday. He remembered locomotives as of the old wood-burning kind, with huge funneled stacks.

If he is not successful in finding any of his relatives in Detroit the old man proposes to go to his old home in Ontario to spend the balance of his days.

OBITUARY

MRS. S. PRICE.

The death took place last evening of Mrs. Susannah Price at Nicholls Hospital after a lingering illness. She was born in England and has been a resident of this city for the past nine years.

Deceased was highly respected by a large circle of friends who held her in high esteem. She was 54 years of age.

Left to mourn her loss besides her sorrowing husband are four daughters, Mrs. Henry McAuley, Fort Kennedy, Penn.; Mrs. George Guerin, Brockville; Mrs. Beaumont, and Miss Cassia at home.

The funeral will leave the family residence, 37 Crescent St., tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. J. N. Clarry will conduct the service at the house at 2.30.

PARENTS BEREAVED.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. William Goodwin, 298 Edinburgh St., will sympathize with them in the death of their eight year old daughter which took place this afternoon. Funeral announcements will be given later.

Contributions from Niagara Falls to the National Patriotic Fund now total well over $12,000.

previous meeting. It was moved and seconded that the motion passed at a former meeting authorizing the reeve and clerk to sign their names and attach the seal of the township to Mr. Hurley's plan be rescinded until such time as all interested parties come to an amicable settlement.

Road Repairs.

Mr. Howden reported that the Briton's Carpet Co. had applied to him to have the road leading into their factory repaired. The council after considering the request decided there was no money to do any work this fall.

It was decided by the council that Township Relief Officer Anderson investigate all hospital bills and applications for charity, and orders for provisions only may be granted and only to those whom he thinks deserving, by his application to the reeve for an order for the same.

The clerk reported that the township rate fixed at the last meeting of 3¼ mills would be much easier and more accurately made up if the same was in tenths instead of quarter mills.

It was moved by Mr. Young, seconded by Mr. Forster, that the township rate fixed at the last meeting be rescinded and that the same be changed from 3¼ mills to 3 3-10 mills.

It was moved and seconded that the clerk look after certain poles along the road which are dangerous to traffic, the road having fallen away into the creek, something of a temporary nature to be erected to keep vehicles from dropping into the same.

BAPTISTS REPORT FINANCES OF CHURCH IN GOOD SHAPE

Rev. J. R. Webb is Elected to the Church Edifice Board

Toronto, Oct. 16.—The great bond of sympathy which exists between the United States and the British Empire in the hour of the great European crisis was voiced by Rev. Dr. H. C. Mabie, the noted Baptist clergyman of Boston, who spoke before the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec in Walmer Road Church yesterday, bringing to the delegates the fraternal greeetings of the American churches.

"As both a minister of God and a citizen of the United States," he said, "I thank Heaven that the bond of sympathy between my country and the Great Empire to which Canada belongs is so great that there is no necessity to build great fortifications along the 3,000 miles which marks our frontiers. If the principles of which we, the Baptist Church, stand were thoroughly understood throughout the world, there would be no necessity for arms or for such titanic struggles as we are now witnessing on the bloody battlefields of Europe. There would be the same bond of sympathy and trust throughout the world as is felt between the great republic and the Dominion, who are now celebrating their hundred years of peace and happiness."

The national struggle was also brought before the meeting by Rev. Dr. W. Norton, president of the convention, in presenting the annual report of the Home Mission Board. "In the hour of the National sorrow and anxiety," he said, "the board wishes to express its profoundest sympathy with the British Empire in its great struggle. It is our prayer that God may crown the armies of the allies with complete success, and we hope that peace may again be soon established upon the basis of freedom and righteousness. The influence of the time is such to absorb the mind and heart, and the board would that, as far as possible, every Baptist should practice humiliation and confession before God."

Home Mission Board.

The report of the Home Mission Board was n excellent one, and showed that during the year great gains had been made. Of the 182 fields, including 293 churches and preaching stations, 93 fields reported one, or more, baptisms, while the banner for the largest number went to Marshville and Perry stations. The net gains in membership was 700.

Statement of Finances.

The Home Mission financial statement, presented by Rev. Harry E. Stillwell, of London, the acting treasurer, showed that the finances of the board were in excellent condition. The total receipts for the year amounted to $53,367.33, which is an increase of $4,359.98 over the previous year. The total disbursements, including the deficit from last year, mounted to $69,172.77, leaving a debit balance of $15,805.44. In discussing the report, it was stated by some delegates that many of the mission churches should be self-supporting, and that an investigation should be held to determine which ones should receive supoprt.

The following were elected to the board: For three years—J. K. McDermid, London; Thos. Urquhart, Toronto; Dr. O. C. S. Wallace, Westmount, Que. For one year — Rev. John McIntosh, Oliver Church; Gideon Grant and Rev. H. R. Nobles, Christie Street Church, Toronto.

The report of the Church Edifice Board showed that the income for last year was over 40 per cent. greater than formerly, while the number of contributing churches is increased by 22. The report called attention to the splendid contributions of the Toronto churches and gave the total income for the year as $1,373.83. The following were elected members of the board: — Rev. J. R. Webb, Rev. Joseph Jones, A. McGee, and F. W. Hodgson.

At the morning session Rev. Dr. Truett, of Dallas, Texas, delivered an eloquent sermon on the mission of the Christian Church. After speaking at length upon the ideals of the church and the great necessity of bringing home to the nations of today the teachings of Christianity Dr. Truett said: "The crying scandal of today is the serving of Christ with the scraps of one's life. Neither an individual nor a nation can prosper by doing so and sooner or later the scrap-heap will receive the self-centred people, nations and churches. Wherever religion is easy it play out."

The Book Room.

The Baptist Book Room showed an increase of $315 over last year's receipts, while the receipts of the Superannuation Board showed an increase of $375. The report stated that the total income for the year amounted to $7,820, leaving a balance on hand of $3,260. The board made a plea for increased subscriptions desiring to increase the maximum appropriation to the ministers so that the amount will reach that of $300 per year. At present the largest is only $180.

The following were elected to the Publication Board: Rev. M. S. Gray, Dr. Hughson, E. C. Fox and John Western.

Outlook in India.

That the loyalty shown by the people of India to the British Empire in the great crisis is one of the biggest triumphs of the missionary movement of a generation was stated by Rev. Dr. J. S. Brown, general secretary of the Foreign Mission Board of the Baptist Church, in presenting the annual report to the convention last night.

An interesting item in the report was one referring to the conditions of the Republic of Bolivia following the hostilities of the European nations. It stated that the war is having a most demoralizing effect upon the country. The mines are closed and commerce is almost at a standstill. The cost of foodstuffs has increased greatly, and thousands of people are on the verge of starvation.

The receipts from all sources for the year ending Sept. 30 were given as $135,454.81, made up as follows: Eastern Section, $49,680.05; Central, $70,833.96; Western, $14,935.80. At present there is an overdraft of $22,155.27. The statement was said to be most encouraging, as the year was stated with a deficit of $33,500, which has been reduced over $11,000 after all expenses have been met.

THINK HARD

It Pays to Think About Food.

The unthinking life some people lead often causes trouble and sickness, illustrated in the experience of this lady.

"About four years ago I suffered dreadfully from indigestion, always having eaten whatever I liked, not thinking of the digestive qualities. This indigestion caused palpitation of the heart so badly I could scarcely walk up a flight of stairs without stopping to regain breath and strength.

"I became alarmed and tried dieting, wore my clothes very loose, and used other remedies, but found no relief.

"Hearing of the virtues of Grape-Nuts and Postum, I commenced using them in place of my usual breakfast of coffee, cakes or hot biscuit, and in one week's time I was relieved of sour stomach and other ills attending indigestion. In a month's time my heart was performing its functions naturally and I could climb stairs and hills and walk long distances.

"I gained ten pounds in this short time, and my skin became clear and I completely regained my health and strength. I continue to use Grape-Nuts and Postum and I feel that I owe my good health entirely to their use.

"I like the delicious flavour of Grape-Nuts and by making Postum according to directions, it tastes similar to mild high grade coffee." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

The most perfect food in the world. Trial of Grape-Nuts and cream 10 days proves. "There's a reason."

TAKE NAMES OF NEEDY PUPILS

Teachers Will Co-operate With Parents' Circle

Parents' Circle of Queen Mary school was held on Thursday afternoon, October 15, in the school room. The president, Mrs. Waugh, was in the chair. A general discussion took place as to the best way to help during the winter, and it was decided that much good work could be done through the co-operation of the teachers handing in the names of all needy pupils to the Circle.

A committee was then appointed to take up this work, starting next week. The meeting was largely attended.

WOMAN ADVISED TO TREAD THE NARROW PATH

Italian is Sent to Jail for Stealing a Shirt

In police court this morning Frederick Piper and a woman named Margaret Duncan, whom he had been living with, were charged with causing a disturbance on Brock Street on Saturday evening, October 3. They pleaded guilty. The man was fined $5 to be paid forthwith or 15 days in jail and the woman was assessed $2 or 10 days in jail.

The Magistrate handed some timely advice to the woman showing her the folly of her ways, and said he hoped she would strive to lead a better life.

Phillip Carpoon, stole a shirt, valued at 50 cents, from Jay's second hand store on Aylmer Street last evening. It appears that three Italians went into the store on pretence of buying something and while one occupied the attention of the clerk the other two went to another part of the store and Carpon took a shirt. He was arrested later and was sentenced to a month in jail.

Mr. William Breese, of Chatworth, has been elected President of the newly-formed Liberal-Conservative Association of the new riding of Southeast Grey.

British Columbia Forest Protection

Activity of the Fire Fighting Staff Shows Good Results

The fire protective organization of the British Columbia Forest Branch fully justified its existence during the months of July and August of this year. The report of their work says: "All records indicate that the weather has been drier during the present summer than at any other time during the past twenty years. Streams have run dry which have not been seen dry before. In addition, it has been very hot and windy in the southern portion of the province. Between 2,000 and 3,000 small fires have occurred, and it has been necessary to increase greatly the number of fire patrolmen and guards and to employ numerous firefighters. Fires have been fought regardless of their size or location, whether in settled country, range land, scrub, reproduction or timber lands. The result has been that very few fires got beyond control while those which had done so were brought under control before they had destroyed much merchantable timber. Thus, the total fire loss for the province has been extremely small, although the cost of protection this year has been about $350,000. These results prove the value of elasticity of organization, since the forces could be increased quickly wherever weather conditions made such action necessary. Protection has not been restricted to merchantable timber alone, but has covered the whole country, and fires have not been able to gain a foothold anywhere.—C. L.

ALLIES DRIVE WEDGE INTO GERMAN RIGHT WING

German Sweep of the North Sea Coast Has Evidently Been Circumvented By the Anglo-French Forces—Von Kluk and Von Boehm Are in Danger of Being Cut Off From Von Breseelr's Army.

PARIS, Oct. 16. — Although the fall of Ostend appears to have become a certainty, the German sweep of the North Sea coast to the west evidently has been circumvented by the success of the allies in driving a wedge between the army of Gen. Von Beseler and the forces of Generals Von Kluk and Von Boehm, which compose the German right of the main line of the invaders in France.

Definite information from official sources regarding the movements and the strength of the armies engaged is lacking because of the excessive stringency of the censorship inaugurated with the development of the movement in the Department Du Nord in France and in West Flanders in Belgium, where the two big armies are reported to have met in a great pitched [illegible]—the greatest of the war—in which the fighting already is reported severe.

Evidence that the German assaults are being delivered with less force is conveyed in the intimation that between the Somme and the Oise their artillery attacks are not being followed up with infantry charges. It is possible that they have withdrawn some of their troops from this position to strengthen their advance toward the coast, but this, it is considered, would be risky, as it might permit the allies to break through and interrupt the communications of their armies which are fighting north of the Aisne.

In the centre the allies have also advanced, particularly towards Craonne, and to the northeast of the road from Berry-au-Bac to Rheims and to the north of Prunay, in the direction of Beine, which is slightly to the southeast of Rheims, several German trenches have been carried.

An official statement from Berlin received in London is interpreted as giving the information that a French attack is being directed against Metz, for it denies reports that several of the forts there have been captured by the French.

In Paris it is officially reported that an army is marching between the Meuse and Moselle rivers (Metz is on the Moselle), and that Wednesday this army had reached the highway between Verdun and Metz.

The official communique issued at Bordeaux at midnight last night reports, among other gains along the whole front, the capture of Estaires, 13 miles west of Lille and on the north bank of the Lys.

This, taken in connection with the previous reported occupation of Ypres and yesterday's unofficial announcement that the allies have retaken Lille, indicates remarkable advantage gained by the allies during the two days' fighting.

The official communication issued by the French War Office last night says: "The news of the day indicates gains at several points along the front.

"On the left wing, to the north of the Lys, we have taken Estaires. On the centre to the north and east of Rheims, we have made an advance of nearly two kilometres (about a mile and a quarter).

"On the heights of the Meuse, and in the Woevre region, we have made gains to the south of St. Mihiel, and near Marcheville."

The French War Office made public the following communication yesterday afternoon: "In Belgium, German troops coming from Antwerp are marching toward the west, and on the evening of Oct. 14 they reached the region of Bruges and Thielt (15 miles southeast of Bruges).

"On our left wing the enemy has evacuated the left bank of the Lys. Between the Lys and the canal of La Bassee the situation shows no change.

"In the region of Lens and between Arras and Albert our progress has been marked.

"Between the Somme and the Oise there has been no change. The Germans have cannonaded our line without, however, delivering any infantry attacks.

"On the centre, between the Oise and the Meuse, we have advanced in the direction of Craonne. To the northeast of the highway from Berry-au-Bac to Rheims, and to the north of Prunay, in the direction of Beine, several German trenches have been taken.

"Between the Meuse and the Moselle, after having repulsed on the night of Oct. 13-14 certain attacks to the southeast of Verdun, our troops advanced on Oct. 14 to the south of the highway from Verdun to Metz.

"On our right wing the partial offensive movement undertaken by the Germans in the Ban-de-Sapt, to the north of St. Die, has been definitely checked."

GERMAN FORCES NEAR WARSAW CUT IN TWO

Army Has Been Driven Back After Two Days of Desperate Fighting and 10,000 Prisoners Have Been Taken — Villagers Have Fled Into Warsaw to Escape Conflict

LONDON, Oct. 16. — A despatch from Petrograd to The Evening Courier, says that reports from the Russian field army indicate that the German force which penetrated the Warsaw district has been cut in two and driven back on the Lodz-Pietrokow-Kielce line, after two days of desperate fighting. The Russian advance is being pushed forward. It is believed that 10,000 Germans have been taken prisoners in these operations.

The streets of Warsaw are now filled with villagers, who, for protection, have fled into the city from the surrounding districts, bringing with them their horses and cattle.

The sound of distant cannonading is distinctly heard, and it is believed that a general engagement is in progress. If this is the case, it is expected that it will last for days, possibly weeks.

The Germans have been allowed to advance as far as the Polish river Vistula for strategic reasons. They are thus drawn away from, and will be unable to use, the network of railways on the German side of the frontier.

It is hoped that the enemy will be decimated by the blow, and will be compelled to accept defeat.

The military governor of Warsaw has informed the population that they may remain calm and reassured, as the defence of Warsaw is to be carried to the highest degree of tension.

Advices from the Russian indicate that the main German effort in Poland has been directed at Ivangorod, the tip of an end of the main fighting line. Several days were spent in repeated assaults on this fortress, but the Russians finally checked the German avalanche. The entire front is said to extend from Warsaw to Przemysl and southward to the Dneister.

German aerial attacks on Warsaw were a feature of the combat around that city. But the German air craft were received by a well directed fire, and on Tuesday morning one of the forts brought down a Zeppelin. An airship which dropped several missiles was subsequently captured. Some idea of the fierceness of the conflict raging in this region may be gathered from the announcement of the Russian general staff that for the next "few weeks" the strictest censorship will be manifested.

The announcement from Vienna that the Russian siege of Przemysl, which has been in progress for some time, had been raised, is now passed over hastily by despatches from Berlin. It is believed certain, however, that the advance on Cracow has been withdrawn in order to allow full concentration of forces on the Vistula, where the major operations of the fighting in the east are now transpiring.

The first line of Russian troops who are now under fire is estimated 26 army corps, or about 1,500,000 men; the Austro-Germans approximate 1,000,000 men composed of probably 12 German and 10 Austrian corps.

The purpose of the Russians in giving battle along the Vistula, on their own soil and within easy reach of Warsaw, is believed here to be patterned on the strategy of Gen. Joffre, who made his supreme effort when the Germans were in a hostile country far from their bases of supplies, and when the army was in a more or less disconnected shape because of rapid movements. There can be no question that the Czar's generals are picking their own ground and going about their task leisurely

ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION FOR CANADIAN SOLDIERS

Plymouth, Oct. 16. — (Via London.)—The Canadians received a debarkation order from the War Office unexpectedly last evening. Despite the rain crowds of people turned out to watch the landing and entraining of the troops, which began with a contingent of Strathcona's Horse.

The various contingents were headed through the streets by their bands and pipes. Owing to the difficulty of berthing the transports, in consequence of the neap tide, the debarkation of the Canadians is expected to be slow.

Extensive preparations have been made for the Canadians on Salisbury Plain. The first contingents are believed to have reached there during last night. The movements of the troops have been conducted during the night time in order to avoid delays to other railway traffic.

Plymouth is agog with excitement over the landing of Canadian troops. Right up in the estuary transports are steadily discharging their cargoes amidst scenes of the keenest enthusiasm. The surprise in this famous port was unbounded when the transports suddenly came into this harbor. From south to north the eye traveled up the Hamose following what seemed an almost unending line of masts and funnels until it faded away in the dim light of the higher waters before taking a turn for Saltash bridge.

It was an unprecedented sight, one indeed without parallel in the history of the great western port. Never before has there been such an assemblage of this class of ship in these waters, and it was altogether a most inspiring scene. The rigging and decks of the ships were masses of khaki-clad figures and the company of each ship appeared in the happiest of spirits. Little steamboats, dwarfed almost into insignificance beside these great leviathans, passed in every direction, and added to the din of welcome with sirens and hooters.

As the small passenger steamers passed, those on board waved and cheered to the smiling faces high up above them and acknowledged the greeting in true British fashion. One of the ships had on board some of the kiltie regiments, and as each of the ships passed along the skirl of the bagpipes came over the water and was cheered to the echo by the inhabitants of the three towns. Folk only were allowed to see them at a distance, for much to the disappointment of the public, none of the Canadians was allowed freedom ashore.

Military necessities render it impossible to say anything concerning the many matters upon which the Canadian public will be eager for.

The voyage to England was a delightful one, and on every transport there was maintained the same eagerness and fine spirit which were shown on the days before sailing.

It is understood that there is a clean bill of health, but many horses have died on the voyage.

The task of disembarking such immense numbers of men and material is naturally a tremendous one, but the arrangements are working with complete smoothness.

Strathcona's Horse came in for a gratifying reception. They could be distinguished by a special banner displayed on the liner's bridge.

Colonel von Geck has arrived at Damascus and has taken over the direction of the General Staff of the Servian troops and is also recruiting Bedouins

ALSACE FORTS ARE TAKEN

Muhlhausen and Altkirch Have Been Occupied By French

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Gaul and Teuton met in death grips yesterday on the ground won Tuesday and Wednesday, commanding the roads to Metz, and it is said that the German line of communications to that base is seriously imperilled if not definitely lost. The French War Office will give no information on the subject, but it is stated in well-informed circles that masses of French troops have been moving in the direction of Metz for several days. One report declares that the Germans in the district affected by this new change of tactics have been thrown back beyond Muhlhausen. To support this statement comes a cable from Rome, declaring that messages from Basle say the French have reoccupied Muhlhausen and Altkirch, both strong fortresses, and both taken by the French soon after the beginning of hostilities, evacuated and retaken, but finally relinquished because of pressure in the north.

GERMANY WANTS MONEY

Government Will Ask for War Credit of Two and a Half Billion

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 16—(Via London.)—The Telegraaf yesterday publishes the following despatch from Berlin:

"The Prussian Government will ask the Diet for a war credit of more than $2,500,000,000.

"The Government work on the railways and highways will be proposed in order to cope with the unemployment situation and to give relief to small communities. At a joint sitting of the party leaders it was decided unanimously to support the Government's program. The sitting of the Diet will partake of the character of a war session and will last only a few days."

Carden Denies Interview.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16. — Sir Lionel Carden has repudiated the interview ascribed him upon his sailing from New York recently, in which he was said to have reflected severely upon President Wilson's policy in regard to Mexico.

Austrians Use The Dum-Dums

PETROGRAD, Oct. 16.—The general staff of Kiev has given out a statement alleging that dum-dum bullets are being used by Austrian troops. Eight cases of those bullets have been secured in the theatre of war. The packages in which they are put up bear this inscription: "Uebungspatronen M. T. Weif S. 1914."

According to advices received here many Roumanian deserters are presenting themselves before the Roumanian consul at Odessa and demanding that they be sent home.

Dutch Troops Killed Germans.

LONDON, Oct. 16—An Amsterdam correspondent of The Daily News says that last Friday, when some German soldiers entered Holland, near Roosendaal, and through their commanding officer refused to be interned by the Dutch soldiers, a fight ensued, in which the Dutch troops killed or wounded a dozen Germans. The Germans were interned.

DODDS KIDNEY PILLS

WILL THIS YEAR END THE CAREER OF "NAP" RUCKER

Great Georgian Not Yet Ready to Admit That He is Finished

Brooklyn, Oct. 16.—Among the momentous baseball happenings of 1914—and certainly no year in the annals of the diamond drama has furnished so many thrills as has the present season—is very liable to be the passing of Nap Rucker.

The great Georgian isn't yet ready to own up that he must hang up his war togs in the closet, and is making one last desperate attempt to cure himself of the thing that so greedily handicapped him last season and this year has practically put him hors du combat. "Deltoid bursitis" is the medical name of the affliction which has Rucker on the hospital list. It is an affliction of the nerves of the deltoid muscle, brought on by constant strain.

Rucker has been undergoing a heroic baking proces in the hopes that the muscular contraction he is suffering with will be cured. Nap says: "The old soup bone seems to be loosening up," but the doctors will not yet allow him to throw the ball. Several times in the last two years Nap's arm apparently came around into shape, but each time he suffered a recurrence of the trouble.

Friends of the wonderful pitcher, and Rucker will be remembered as one of the greatest southpaws of the game, fear the Alpharetta marvel never again will be able to mow down the batsmen with that wonderful form he displayed up to last season. It is too bad that Rucker's break came at a time when Brooklyn apparently has a first division team, and needs only pitchers to make it a pennant contender. With Rucker in form, the Superbas would be right up in front to-day.

Of an ideal build for a pitcher, an ideal disposition, both from a managerial as well as a player's standpoint, the big southpaw at his best was one of the greatest figures in the game. The greatest batsmen in the National league feared him, and none could boast that he ever was able to get Rucker's number.

He was born in Alpharetta, Ga., where he still lives, on Sept. 30, 1884. He throws left-handed, bats right-handed, sleeps on his left side, runs with his left foot and is ambidextrous in eating soup. He stands six feet above sea level at the ocean edge, weighs around 210 pounds until the rubber shirt gets in its work in the sadsome spring, oh, no, when he has to reduce flesh, but touches the beam around 180 after he has rounded to form.

Rucker is a staff pitcher as a result of an applied accident. He began his baseball career on a semi-pro team in Alpharetta, and he would probably have remained there or thereabouts had it not been for the accident which came to pass when he was with Augusta, Ga., in the South Atlantic league, in 1905, his whole season among the regular baseball folk.

In addition to his other merits, G. N. Rucker is one of the hardest and most willing baseball workers and talkers extant. He lives and dreams baseball, is always willing to hear some new thing about it or tell some new story. His willingness was well illustrated last year, when he took part in 41 games for a total of 260 innings.

Rucker's best year was 1911, when he won 22 and lost 18, for a percentage of .550, with a team that had a winning percentage of .427. The new-fangled education does not shape up well when a youth who got the rudiments in a little red schoolhouse can pitch 123 points better than his team plays. Among his feats of derring-do was a shutout game against the Nationals in 1908, his second year in the league, and his fanning 16 St. Louis Cardinals in one day of the 1909 strife.

Reverting to Rucker's history for a moment, it might be remarked that before going to Austria, in 1905, where he had Ty Cobb for a playmate, and whence he was drafted by Pat Donovan for Brooklyn in 1906, but did not report until 1907, G. Napoleon Rucker was with Atlanta in the Southern league for two games. He won one and lost one, and was then canned on the ground that he was too green for preserving.

GEORGE O'NEIL WOULD USE FRANCHISE IN TWO TOWNS

London, Oct. 16.—There is a possibility of Canadian league baseball returning to the cities of Berlin and Guelph next season, judging from the manner in which Owner George H. O'Neil, of the Erie club franchise, favors the scheme.

Mr. O'Neil stated that unless he can sell his holding to gentlemen interested in baseball in Montreal, in the event that the Quebec metropolis loses its franchise in the International league, he will retain the club and operate it in Berlin and Guelph.

His plans are to divide the home dates of the 1915 schedule between Berlin and Guelph, furnishing these two flourishing cities with probably two games a week, which would be providing as much baseball of the class B variety as their fans could stand. The combined populations of Berlin and Guelph would furnish the Canadian league with what would be better than one city of that size, since fans in these two cities would strive to patronize their team more under these circumstances than if either one attempted to carry the load.

However, there is a bare possibility that he might be induced to sell out his holdings in the Erie franchise, formerly the Guelph franchise, to a syndicate composed of Berlin and Guelph business men, should such an opportunity present itself. It is hardly possible that the league would sanction the return of the franchise to either one of the cities, but would welcome the scheme proposed by Owner O'Neil, who must sanction such changes.

MILLBROOK NEWS

Millbrook, Oct. 11. — The teachers' convention, held at Cobourg last week, was largely attended. Miss S. Dean, Miss M. Mitchell, Miss B. Hales and Miss L. C. Hawken, of the Millbrook schools, were present. SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

COSTELLO—O'CONNOR.

A very pretty wedding took place at St. Martin's church, Ennismore, on Tuesday morning, when Rev. Father Fitzpatrick united in marriage Miss Helena Marie, daughter of Mr. John O'Connor, of Ennismore, and Matthew Joseph Costello of Peterborough. The groom was assisted by his brother, John, while the bride's sister, Lily, acted as bridesmaid.

A dainty wedding breakfast was served at the bride's home.

After a short wedding trip to western points, Mr. and Mrs. Costello will reside in Peterborough.

At Strathroy on Oct. 10th, by Rev. J. D. McLachlan, B.A., B. H. Marjorie Eleanor, elder daughter of Mrs. Colin Thompson was married very quietly to Mr. Joseph Wearing, M.A., of Peterborough.

Miss Myrtle Coon, Tweed, is visiting friends in the city.

Piano and Vocal Recital Tonight

Announcement is made of a piano and vocal recital to be given in the Conservatory of Music hall to-night by Mrs. James Lock, senior honors, R.A.M., R.C.M., soprano soloist at principal concerts in England. Mrs. Lock will be assisted by Miss Lora Logan, violinist.

This is an event that should be rewarded with a large audience from the music lovers of the city. A collection will be taken for the Patriotic Fund.

Crossley Meetings

Convincing Message Given by Evangelist

Those present at St. James' Church last night were privileged to hear a presentation of the Atonement in a way that was at once convincing and comforting. Mr. Crossley made his message clear and plain. Not a few took advantage of entering into a covenant relationship with Jesus Christ as they heard, believed and were willing to trust in Him.

This was the last song sermon.

Tonight Mr. Crossley speaks on Ten Royal Proclamations. It is hoped there will be a rally of young people as well as those old in years. Nearly every denomination at church, is being represented at these meetings. Mr. Crossley considers this evening's theme one of his strongest sermons.

Mr. James Logan, of Huntsville, engineer on one of the Muskoka boats is visiting friends in Peterborough. He is accompanied by his wife.

Peterborough friends will be glad to learn that Miss Beatrice Blewett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Coleman Blewett, has reached Plymouth in safety. Mr. Blewett received a cable message this morning. Miss Blewett is with the Canadian nurses.

The temperance forces of Ridgetown, which have twice been defeated at the polls, have decided upon a third local option campaign in January next.

TWO WEEKS FOR NEW MEMBERS

Y.M.C.A. Boys Are in Midst of Campaign

The Y.M.C.A. during the next two weeks will endeavor to enroll 300 men and boys as members and collect at least $1000 in membership fees. That this end may be obtained good organizations have been effected in both the senior and junior departments.

The seniors are to have three teams or 33 men and the boys are to have four teams comprising the whole department.

The effort was started last evening as a fine supper which was served to 30 workers by the membership committee. C. M. Meserve acted as toast maker and the captains of the following teams and many of the workers present responded briefly, stating that they intended to break all membership records.

The workers in the senior department are as follows: Captain, A. Theobald, Wm. McKinley, H. Flowers, K. Thompson, H. Mulhern, Bruce Hamilton, Jessie Coleman, H. Coleman, W. Flowers, C. Mann, H. Carte; Captain D. A. Loucks, H. Taylor, P. McCarrell, N. Laing, S. Taylor, E. Raynor, Wm. Rew, K. Brown, J. McNabb, N. Patterson, R. W. Frank; Captain, J. H. A. Harper, Alvin Morrow, Elmer Brown, Alex. Darling, Ray Best, C. E. Sisson, Percy Barland, Wm. Heaslip, Howard Cranfield, Allen Sharpe, Claude Bartlett, Fred Preston.

To put a little ginger into the effort the membership committee has agreed to serve a banquet to the team that brings in the largest amount in membership fees and offers a fine watch fob to the worker bringing in the largest amount of membership fees. The Y.M.C.A. will give to the worker who brings in five or more members an excellent Y.M.C.A. emblem.

As great enthusiasm is being manifested in the effort success is assured.

Germany Tries To Get Trade.

MONTREAL, Oct. 16.—That Germany is making desperate efforts to recapture some of her lost trade is evident from a communication received by the Montreal Chamber de Commerce from one of its correspondents in New York. This correspondent says that he has been approached by a German manufacturer's agent, who had unfolded a scheme for selling German-made goods in Canada. Since it was impossible to do business in the ordinary way, his proposal was to ship as American products goods that had been made in Germany, but on which "Made in Germany" did not appear. This offer was rejected.

Council of Women.

There will be a meeting of the executive of the Local Council of Women in the teachers' room of the public library on Saturday, Oct. 17th, at 3.30 p.m. As there is considerable important business to be discussed it is earnestly urged that all members of the executive be present without further notice.

The Electors of East City.

I have been a resident of the City of Peterborough for many years, and am well known to the residents of the East Ward. I feel, therefore, that I have a right to become a candidate for Alderman in the East Ward, at the request of many electors.

My platform will be, that greater efforts should be made to induce the street railway to enter the East Ward, by the Hunter Street bridge, and I would strongly urge a revote to be taken on the Dalhousie Street bridge, in order that an outlet might be given for the workingmen of the East Ward, to get to the factories, without coming up to Hunter Street to cross the river.

You are aware, that the streets and sidewalks in East City have not received the attention to keep them in a proper state of repair. This should be remedied, and by an energetic campaign, which I can give, East City needs will be brought to the attention of the Council, and sufficient appropriation obtained, to keep the East Ward in a proper state of repair. This is the main thoroughfare for the whole traffic coming from East Peterborough, and from the North side of Peterboro County into the City of Peterborough, and we are entitled to a larger proportion of the city's monies to be expended for the benefit of East City, which will result in the ultimate benefit to the merchants and business men of the City of Peterborough.

If elected, I assure the residents of East City, that I will make every effort to see that the affairs of my Ward are properly conducted and taken care of, that the street lighting is installed to properly light East Ward, and that East City will not have the grounds to complain, by reason of neglect, at the hands of the City Council.

I remain,

Yours truly,

G. L. HAY.

GENERAL DEMAND FOR AN ELECTION

Pressure Being Brought to Bear on Government

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—Enormous pressure is being brought to bear on the Government to re-enact its Tariff Revision Bill, Intercolonial Short Line Bill, Highways Bill, etc., and to take measures to prevent the Senate from throwing them out. This request which is vital to the business interests of the country can only be granted by a mandate from the people to the Imperial Government demanding a limit to the powers of the Senate. Only the Imperial Parliament can amend the B.N.A. Act. All the chief bills of the House of Commons so far have been vetoed by the Senate. The history of Canada fails to show a parallel.

"Fashion-Craft"

MODEL 100

One of Many Shown for Fall

THERE are certain points about Fashion-Craft Clothes which make them different from other Men's Clothing—points which every well-dressed man should be familiar with:—

Fashion-Craft Clothes are carefully tailored, carefully sewn, each piece carefully fitted by skilled workmen and all work done in large, airy, well-ventilated and well-lighted rooms. This costs more than the sweat-shop methods, but it insures careful tailoring even to the smallest detail, and perfect fit after months of wear.

Cut illustrates a well-made, neat, perfect-fitting, single-breasted, three-button Sack Coat, with collarless six-button Waistcoat, and Trousers made on standard lines. Price range varied—workmanship always uniformly the same.

RUSSIAN CHIEF A GOOD SOLDIER

Grand Duke Nicholas, One of Czar's Tallest Men

IS A BORN LEADER

The Czar is nominally the supreme commander of the Russian army, as well as of the Russian navy, and it is understood that when war was declared he was ambitious to place himself at the head of the troops in the field. But he has been persuaded to delegate the supreme command of the army to his cousin, the Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaevitch. The Czar would not be an inspiration to his soldiers, lacking the military appearance and the personality essential to an actual leader of men.

The Grand Duke Nicholas, on the other hand, is a soldier in looks, one of the tallest men in the army, and the finest cavalry officer of the empire, making a splendid appearance on a horse; and a commander of long experience, who was one of the chief officers of the Russo-Japanese war. His executive ability was apparent when he acted as the head of the military commission in charge of the closing operations of this war, and he has been able to cope successfully with revolution in Russia itself.

Probable Regent.

He is the strong man of the imperial family and has at various times been spoken of as the probable regent if Russia should need a regent. The Czar's life is in constant danger frm the bombs of the nihilists, and, as his only son, the Grand Duke Alexis, is still a little boy and credited with having an incurable disease which will make him permanently lame and map perhaps cut him off before he is grown, the Grand Duke Nicholas may some day become regent, and even Czar. The Nihilists do notl ike this idea. He would undoubtedly be a firm ruler and would show them no mercy. They have tried to forestall such a contingency by attempts at blowing up the Grand Duke Nicholas. They have tried it more than once, and a dozen or more of them have paid the penalty upon the scaffold.

Strong Anti-German.

He is the leader in the imperial family of the anti-German faction and has strenuonsly opposed those visits of state which have of recent years taken place between the Czar and the Kaiser, preferring to come out openly as the latter's enemy. But Grand Duke Nicholas might any place be taken for a German, with his blonde hair and blue eyes. They are an inheritance from his German mother, who was a Duchess of Oldenburg, from the family which gave a wife to the Kaiser's second son, Prince Eitel, and an inheritance from his German grandmother. She was Princess Charlotte, the sister of Frederick William III, King of Prussia, and great-grandfather of Kaiser William II. Princess Charlotte became Czarina of Russia by her marriage to the Czar Nicholas I, and her second son was the father of Grand Duke Nicholas.

Influenced by Wife.

The Czar Nicholas I was so friendly to Prussia, on account of his wife, that the Prussian government consulted him about all important matters of foreign policy. Grand Duke Nicholas, who will try to crush the German army in battle, is likewise influenced by his wife, whom he married as a midle-aged man, after a long-drawn-out romance, and who was the Princess Anastasia, the daughter of the old King Nicholas of Montenegro.

Like her younger sister, the Queen of Italy, and the elder sister, who would be Queen of Servia to-day if she were alive, as well as the third sister, who is the wife of the Grand Duke Nicholas, Princess Anastasia is beautiful and intelligent, as well as fascinating. She wasb rought up in Russia by the Czar's mother, and made an early marriage with Prince George Romanovski. It was not a happy marriage and the two were divorced in 1906. Princess Anastasia married Grand Duke Nicholas the following year at Yalta, in the Crimea. It created astonishment, because he was supposed to be already morganatically married to a handsome, rich young widow of Moscow. The story came out later that he had always been in love with Princess Anastasia and was only waiting for her to become free from her first husband.

British Flag 140 Years Old for the Patriotic Fund

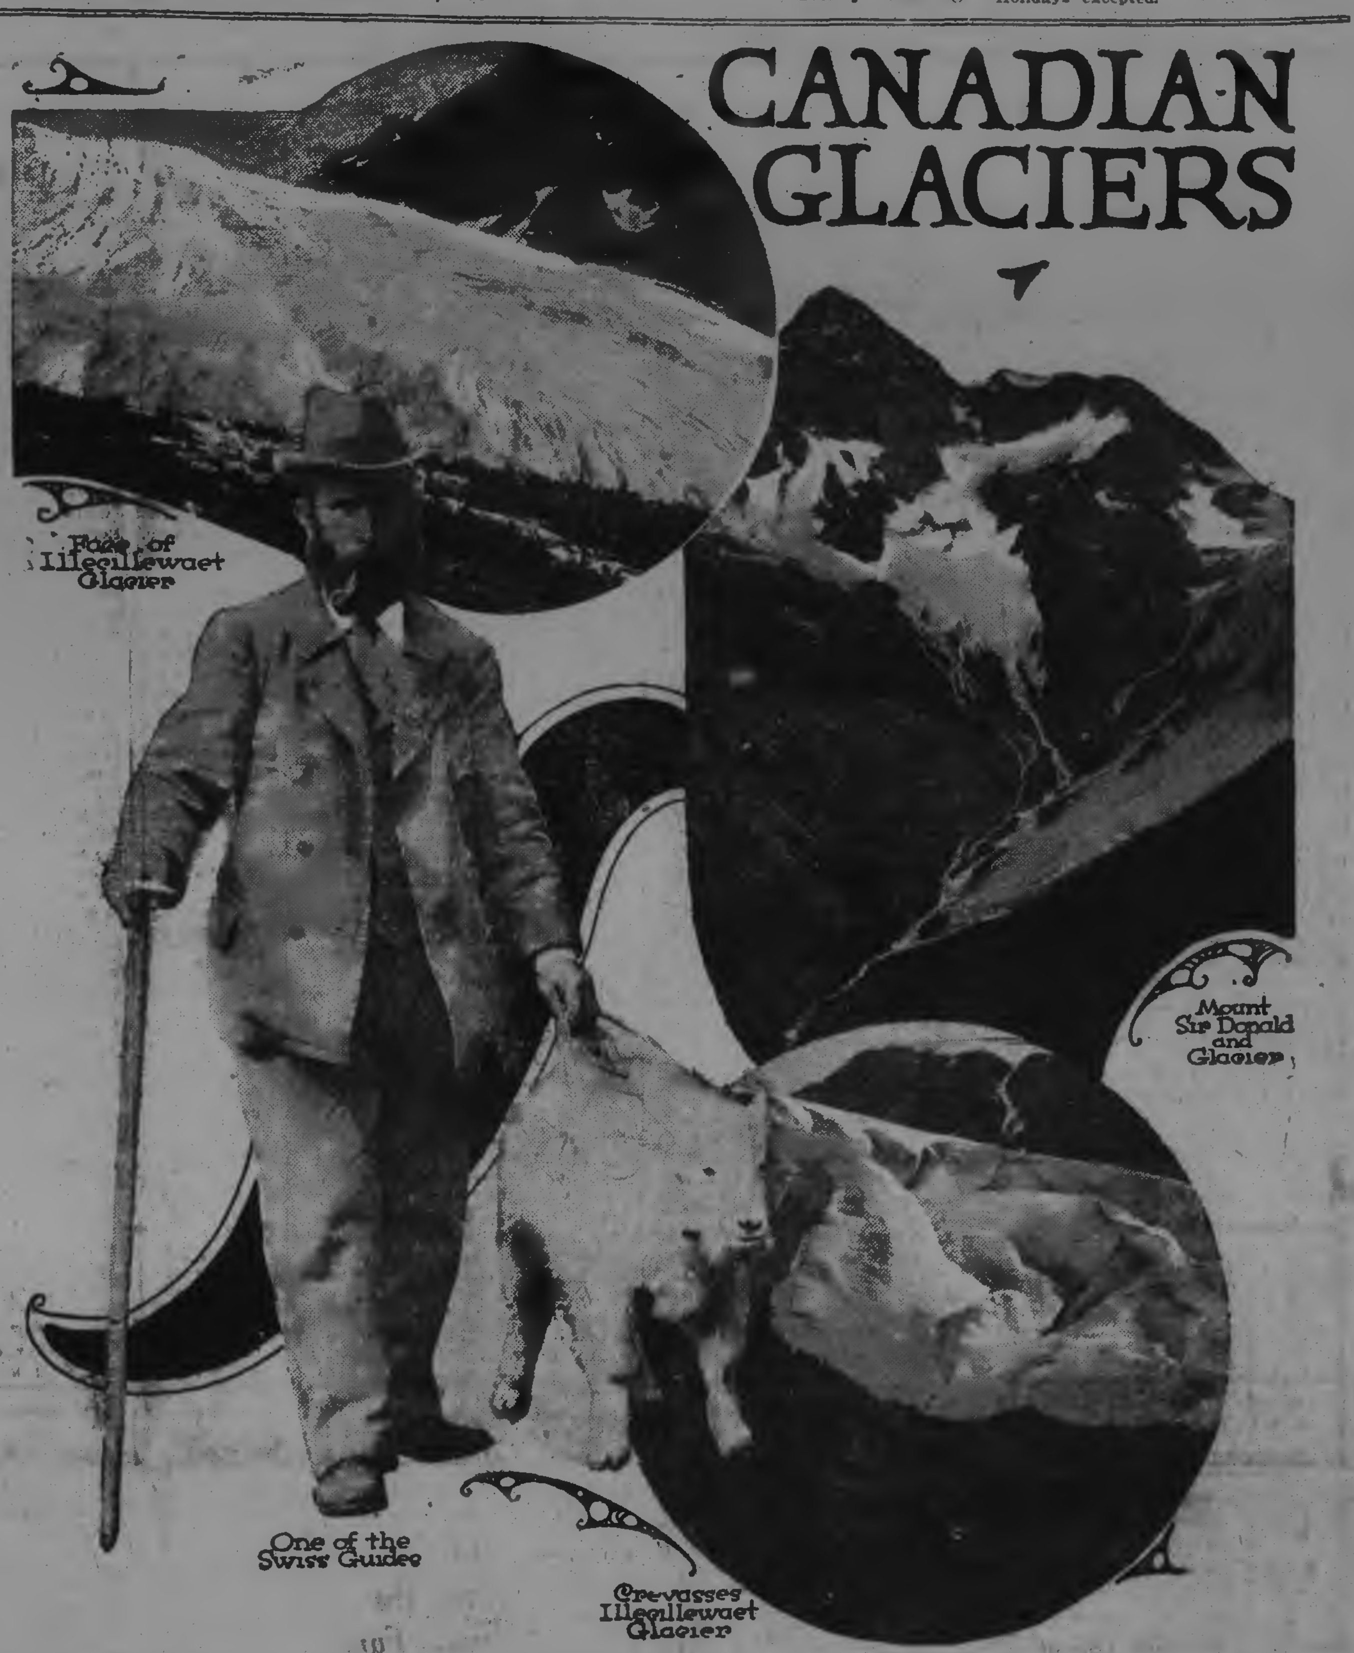
A British flag 140 years old has just been presented under inspiring circumstances to the Patriotic Fund. The donor, Mr. A. McD. Young, although a resident of Milwaukee, is a true-hearted Britisner, as the accompanying letter to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, written Sept. 14tht, testifies:

Dear Sir Thomas,—I have been—as you are aware—a resident here for fifty years, and yet, while gladly bearing witness that those among whom I have so long sojourned are as fine a people as the sun shines on, the fact remains that I am still a British subject. This being so, you will realize how intensely interested I am in the war now going on. I am anxious to do something for the fund Canada is raising. There was held in Milwaukee in 1864, a large fair for the benefit of the then soldiers of this country, and at that fair was exhibited a British flag said to have been captured at Detroit in 1774 (the donor showing data to that effect). I was determined to own that flag, and to that end bought practically all the tickets in the lottery covering it. I did win it, and it has been in my possession ever since (fifty years). When the Lornes were here, it was shown the Princess, who wrote a courteous note, telling me of the pleasure she had in viewing it. Well, now, it struck me to send you this flag, the idea I have in doing so being, that your knowledge of conditions will enable the disposal of this souvenir to the best advantage, for I doubt, unless in some museum, if there exists in Canada a flag of its age. Note the Indian cat gut attached to it."

At a committee meeting in Montreal, the question of the disposal of this flag was discussed. It was felt that a flag of such historic value should not be subject to the vagaries of a raffle or auction, but should be preserved without question of a doubt for the National Museum at Ottawa. It was decided, therefore, that the flag shall be sent to Ottawa with an appropriate inscription recording the establishment of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, and citing the gift of this flag as evidence of the world-wide sympathy and generosity evoked by this patriotic appeal on behalf of soldiers' destitute families.

As a result of the war, Cambridge University opened with only 1,500 students, against 3,500 last year. Pembroke College sent 200 out of 270 men into the army.

CANADIAN GLACIERS



Face of Illecillewaet Glacier
Mount Sir Donald and Glacier
One of the Swiss Guides
Crevasses Illecillewaet Glacier

First it was thought that if one would enjoy really fine mountaineering he must go to Switzerland, the Mecca of all mountain climbers, but now the Alps have come to be the yardstick by which we measure the Rockies of our western world. Apart from their grandeur and beauty as masses of bare rock and verdure, the Rockies have superb and everlasting snowfields and mighty glaciers, making a combination of color and light effect which is seen only in regions of lofty mountains. The magnificent scenery of the Canadian Rockies and Selkirks, which are now easily reached by the Canadian Pacific, is becoming better known each year to tourists. Those best qualified to judge are unanimous in the opinion that, all things considered, this new Alpine region is greater and more beautiful than that of the old world.

The first questions that naturally present themselves are: What are the glaciers and how are they formed? Broadly speaking, the definition is that a glacier is an accumulation of ice of sufficient size and weight to flow down from a snow-covered elevation. It is a river flowing from a lake, the latter up near the summit of a great range or peak, the former pouring down into the valley below, only, it is a lake of snow and a river of ice. The thickness of the ice will vary greatly, according to local condition, and when these are favorable may be as much as 1,000 feet or more. Frequently glaciers extend far below the snow line of the region, because these great masses of ice are so thick that they are not entirely melted during the warm summer months.

In the Canadian Rockies the traveller finds them threading their way down from almost every high peak. Here the mountain chains are narrower than further south, aggregating a total width of less than 500 miles. Where the railway traverses them there are four principal parallel ranges, the Coast range, the Gold Range, the Selkirks and the Rockies. The last two are the highest and most rugged, and it is among their heights that the snowfields and glaciers are seen to greatest advantage.

When subjected to pressure, ice yields and will change its form readily, but under conditions of tension it is brittle and will crack and splinter. This property is one of the causes of the great cracks or crevices which appear in nearly all glaciers. Owing to an uneven bed, change in course, or even the more rapid central flow, great crevasses will form. At times these may be hundreds of feet in length and fifty or sixty feet across.

The meltings from the glacier often flow on the surface for some distance till a crevasse is reached, down which they leap to the rock bed below. In many instances beautiful waterfalls are seen. Sometimes deep wells or moulins are formed, filled with water, or at the bottom of which the sounds of running water may be heard.

When the bed of the glacier is steep, the surface of the ice becomes very much broken, and where lateral and transverse crevasses intersect, ice towers and pinnacles are found. These often attain a height of many feet and are most beautiful, appearing in the sunlight as though made of exquisitely banded white and blue marble.

The power to transport rocks and other material over great distances is one of the most interesting characteristics of glaciers. The rocks which fall on the neve from the cliffs above are soon buried under a bed of snow. This is changed to ice as we have seen, and begins its slow but sure journey to the lower valleys, bearing its burden of rocks. A large part of the melting takes place at the surface of the ice where it is most exposed, so that stones once buried in the neve region gradually come to the surface as the ice above them melts. Here they ride along till deposited at the side or at the end of the glacier. In this way long regular heaps of moraines are formed, from which it is often each to trace many changes in the glaciers. Moraines are designated by their position as respects the glacier, as medial, lateral and terminal. Individual glaciers vary greatly in the amount of material they thus carry down, owing to the proximity and condition of the cliffs above.

From the Chalet at Lake Louise, the Victoria Glacier is prominently visible. It rises on the great white summit of Mt. Victoria, and following down the upper portions of the peak finally avalanches over the rock cliffs to the lower glacier. Paradise Valley lying to the east of that in which Lake Louise is situated, has at its head the Horshoe Glacier. No visitor to Lake Louise, who can spare a day or longer, will fail to visit Moraino Lake, and the Valley of the Ten Peaks, the next valley further east than Paradise Valley. This great glacier extending down almost to Moraine Lake, has been steadily advancing, and it is most interesting to observe how the heavy frost is being destroyed by its resistless force.

The glacier on the side of Mt. Stephen, high above the railroad as the train descends the Kicking Horse Pass to Field, is a source of much interest to and comment by tourists. At places it appears to overhang the track and at times great pieces of ice, which break off from it, roll down the mountain side. The principal glaciers that are visited from Field are those of the Yoho Valley. The Yoho Glacier at the head of this valley, is the source of the Yoho River.

The glacier which is undoubtedly most frequently visited of any in British Columbia, is the Great or Illecillewact Glacier, familiar to everyone who has been so fortunate as to be a guest at Glacier House. Since the summer of 1887 it has been observed with more or less care. At that time it covers the great bed moraine of boulders which now extends from the edge of the ice to the fringe of alder bushes.

Lying at the head of the valley of the same name, the Asulkan Glacier is also favorably located and possibly no valley in the immediate vicinity is more beautiful thau this one. The glacier itself has a very fine ice fall. Its upper portions are buried deep in snow, but are easily reached under the direction of one of the Swiss guides. This glacier is also retreating in recent years with considerable rapidity. Measurements made upon its rate of clow indicate that it is moving less rapidly than the Illecillawaet.

CUPID'S KING OF US ALL

This war is but a black minute of hate; there will follow a whole life of—shall we make it love?—Toronto Globe.

We're falling in love with these Germans.
For the course of true love is not straight.
And we must exchange smacks with the daring Cossacks.
We're mad about each foreign state.

We'd like to hold fingers with Huerta.
Way down by the Mexican Gulf,
Or spoon in the dark with each Austrian shark,
Oh! where is our sweatheart, White Wolf?

My darling's a sailor—von Tirpitz,
And yours is a soldier—von Kluck,
Ofttimes in the night we can hear 'em recite
Something like this—Duckee duck!

Oh! wher is our wandering Kaiser,
To press that moustache would be bliss;
Then gaily we'd stray with our own Enver Bey,
Or give Pancho Villa a kiss.

You say you love dear old von Emmich,
With Moltke he thinks he's in strong.
I am not the same since I last saw the Crown Prince
O, what keeps Carranza so long!

O, send me back my Bethmann-Hollweg,
With us it was love at first sight,
My heart will sure burst if I can't have Bill Hearst,
O, where's the Mad Mullah to-night!

The Globe must have noticed us blushing,
To find love beginning to sprout,
So we'll take a smack at old Editor Mac,"
To show him he wasn't far out.

So farewell my own native country,
I never stay here in the fall,
For I'm the whole works with a swell bunch of Turks,
Since Cupid's the king of us all.

Handling Shells and Powder At a Naval Ammunition Base

Iona island, the United States naval ammunition base in the Hudson river, covers 116 acres. Within its limits are stored about 3,000,000 pounds of smokeless powder and over 1,000,000 pounds of black powder, besides many thousands of shells. This war material is kept in large brick and stone powder magazines and shell houses.

The powder magazines all have four separate fireproof walls and are divided up into compartments in order to prevent a fire or an explosion from reaching or destroying the entire contents. The loaded shells are kept separately from the empty projectiles and are stored in two fixed ammunition magazines. Each shell is weighed and numbered before being put away. The weight is recorded in chalk on the shell.

Magazine attendants inspect the shell houses and powder magazines many times during the day and night. At night each visit is recorded on the disk of the magnetic clock in the administration building. The temperature in the shell houses and powder magazines is kept between 85 and 90 degrees.

Just how many shells for the big battleships are stored away at Iona island is a secret, but there are lots of them. They are expensive. Thus the fourteen inch shells, weighing 1,600 pounds and requiring a charge of nearly 400 pounds of powder, cost about $000 each.

One of the principal activities at Iona island is the manipulation of smokeless powder for charges for the large and small guns of the navy and of black powder for bursting charges for the shells. The powder filling houses are situated at widely separated points. They are small one story wooden structures, isolated owing to the possibility of an explosion. The men working in them are required to wear white serge suits and moccasins; no metal or other articles are allowed in their pockets which might in any way cause a spark.

All the tools, funnels, measuring cups, scales and other appliances used are made of copper. Here the delicate and somewhat dangerous business of weighing out the various smokeless powder charges is carried on. The weighing has to be done very carefully. At the Indian Head proving grounds the naval ordnance experts by tests determine the powder charges best adapted for the various guns, and at the annual target practice the results as to range and velocities of the various charges are recorded. Then slight changes in the composition of the powder lead to changes in the weight of the charges.

Each morning the day's supply of powder is brought from the magazine to the filling houses in lead colored wooden boxes. These are zinc lined and air tight. The boxes of powder are emptied into a long wooden trough and with a copper scoop the powder is dipped out, accurately weighed and tied up in quarter, half and full charges in bags of white muslin.

These bags have several wide streamers for fastening them, and each is tagged with the date of filling and the amount of powder it contains. A small ignition charge of quick burning black powder, to set off the smokeless, is stowed in the bottom of each bag. The bags are then placed in large copper cans and returned to the magazines, where they are held in readiness to go aboard the ships.

The big charges of 400 pounds for the fourteen inch guns are arranged in four charges of 100 pounds each. The bags when piled on top of one another reach to the top of a man's head and present a formidable sight of bottled up destruction.

One of the important operations performed in the magazine houses is loading the projectiles with their bursting charge. For the fourteen inch shells fifty pounds of black powder is used and about thirty pounds for twelve inch shells. To hold the shell steady and to get at the base of these huge steel missiles—some of them weighing 1,600 pounds—they are roped in a sling and hoisted clear of the floor by a pulley and chain. The point is then lowered a foot or so into a stout wooden frame with an opening a trifle larger than the shell. Then a long narrow bag is inserted in the shell cavity and the measured amount of black powder is poured through a funnel into the shell. Some fifty of these huge projectiles can be loaded in a day.

Several of the smaller filling houses are used to assemble the cartridge cases and the bursting charges of the three-inch rapid fire shells.—New York Sun.

The Ingenuous Request of an Old Acquaintance In Distress.

ELMER BATES, erstwhile Cleveland newspaper man, more recently a country journalist, was coming up West Sixth street from the Union depot the other morning when he was halted by an old time pensioner.

"My dear old friend!" cried the o. t. p., seizing Elmer by both hands.

"I'm—I'm afraid I don't quite recognize you," faltered Elmer, not quite truthfully, for this person had held him up for many a piece of silver in the old days.

"Why, yes," insisted the other, "you once saved my life."

"I did?" asked Bates as visions of bread cast upon the waters arose before him.

"Don't you remember? I was trying to get to Chicago to bury my poor old mother. You staked me to supper, lodging and breakfast, got me a ticket to Chicago and gave me $3 for spending money."

"Oh, yes—I remember now!" And more visions of 100 to 1 shots danced before the journalist. "I'm so glad I helped you, dear old chap!"

"Yes, dear old chap," was the answer. "And I knew I'd meet you again some day. Listen; I'm in the same fix again."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A GHOST PILOT

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

Tom Singleton, to use a homely expression, was a boating inebriate. He spent all his vacations on Casco bay, on the Maine coast. There is something more in that bay than handling a boat, and that is handling what the boat is liable to bring up against. The waters are literally full of rocks.

Tom early fell in with a fisherman named Wilkins—Captain Wilkins he was called, as all men who sail their own boats in that region are—who took a fancy to the youngster because they both loved the water. Wilkins usually went out after dark, set his nets and returned about sunrise the next morning. Tom was so in love with the water that he would go out with the captain one or two nights in the week. That's what made the captain love Tom. Both were awed by the solemn grandeur of the starry dome above them. Both loved the mystical moonlight—so Tom named it—and when they got caught in a rising wind and all was black about and above them, if there was not a pleasure in it, there was a pleasure in getting ashore and in the memory of it.

But there was one weather condition that appalled Tom, and it was this that caused him to confine his excursions alone to short sails in fair weather—he dreaded a fog.

And why shouldn't he? Often when the sun shone brightly on a partly submerged rock and the foam of a gigantic wave breaking over it he would exclaim, "Just think of running on to that of a dark night or in a fog!" And the captain would say, "I've been sailing in this bay for thirty years in dark nights, in foggy nights, in all kinds of nights, and I never struck one of 'em yet."

"How do you do it?"

"I dunno. Reckon I do it as you git out of bed in the middle of the night and go downstairs for a drink of water or something, without a light."

One day when the two were sailing together Tom said that so long as he lived he would spend his vacations on Casco bay and if he grew rich he would spend the whole of each season there.

"I won't be with you when you're running your own yacht, Tommy," said the captain, "but if you ever get in a bad fix I'll help you out."

"What! After you're dead?"

"No one dies. We simply change conditions; we don't need legs and boats and such like."

When the mackerel became so scarce that it didn't pay the captain to go out nights he and Tom would cruise about among the beautiful islands of the bay, living aboard the boat. They had butterfish for breakfast, cod or lobster or clams for dinner and mackerel for supper. And as for sleeping when at anchor in a cove, with the wavelets soothing them to slumber against the sides of the boat, they kept awake only because it was so delightful.

Well, the day came when Tom Singleton was able to keep a small yacht of his own and spend the greater part of the summer cruising in her. He took her to Casco bay—he owned a cottage on Bailey's island—and enjoyed sailing to his heart's content.

But, though he knew a great deal more about navigating a boat than when a youngster, he was not up to the rocky bottom of Casco bay. Moreover, he didn't have Captain Wilkins to rely on, for the captain's old hulk was buried in the cemetery on the highest part of Orr's island, where one can see the ocean in many different parts. So Singleton was obliged to sail his own boat, confining himself to fair weather.

But if the yachtsman could tell about what the weather would be he couldn't predict freedom from fog. The coast of Maine is nearly as bad for fogs as the banks of Newfoundland. They come suddenly, and sometimes they stay a long while.

One bright morning Singleton started with his wife and children and a few friends from Bailey's island for Popham beach. They had made the voyage outward and were returning past Seguin light when a fog bank came rolling in from the eastward and enveloped them. Singleton could steer only by compass, and what is compass steering on the coast of Maine? The fog was heavy and promised to be of long duration.

Tom heard a swish of waters to port. He knew the sound and steered just in time to avoid one of the big submerged rocks of that part of the bay. The party passed a couple of hours in terror; then it began to grow dark.

The women and children were mostly in the cabin or on the forward deck. Tom had the tiller. He began to feel a resistance when he turned it, and, this continuing, he yielded to the force. He heard waters surging to port and starboard, but seemed to pass, by some unseen seamanship, between or around all dangers. He let go the tiller, and it moved not by the waves, but apparently by the unseen force.

What was Tom's astonishment at last to find himself in the narrow crooked gut between Orr's and Bailey's islands and going through safely! When he got out into the sound the fog suddenly vanished and he was enabled to steer for the dock.

No one can convince Tom Singleton that a spirit hand was not on the tiller during that perilous voyage. And he remembers Captain Wilkins' words:

"If you ever get in a bad fix I'll help you out."

Money may help the man who helps himself.

He (puzzling over wife's check-book)—Why, my dear, I can't make head or tail out of these stubs. They foot up more than you ever had in bank.

She—Oh, that's all right, dear! I just used the stubs to keep tab on what the things were before they were marked down, so as to show how much I made; don't you see?

SPECIAL CORNER FOR AFTER DINNER READERS

A Salem Witch

She Was a Bonnie Lass From Scotland.

By SARAH BAXTER

One night a coach was driven upon a dock in the Firth of Forth in Scotland. A man alighted and called upon a girl to follow him.

"What are you going to do with me?" she asked.

"Come!" was his only reply.

The girl reluctantly got out of the coach. The man forcibly drew her arm through his and took her on board a ship lying beside the dock. She had been taught by rough usage that it would be useless to resist, and she accompanied the man passively across the deck and down the companionway to the cabin. There he left her and, going on deck, approached the captain, who was giving orders for preparations to sail.

"Here is £20," he said, counting out the money, "for her passage. Take her to the Massachusetts colony and leave her there."

"Is she to be turned over to any one?"

"Leave her there."

With this the speaker produced a bag, opened it sufficiently to show that it was filled with gold pieces and handed it to the captain. The latter took it, thrust it in his pocket, and he who had given it left the ship and was driven away.

Early the next morning the crew cast off from the dock and sailed out into the ocean.

"Who is the wench?" was asked on the arrival of the ship at Salem.

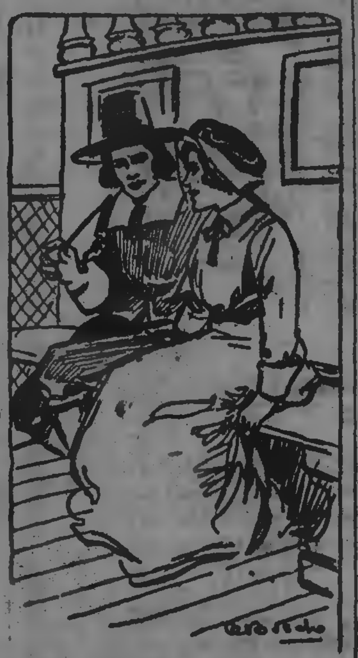
"A Scotch lassie," replied a woman, "who was on the ship with us—she who feared not the storm when it came, but stood out on the foredeck and talked to it."

"And to whom does she belong?"

"To no one. Some one sent her away to get rid of her."

"The lassie must go back in the ship. It is not meant that one so young should be among us without a guardian," said the people.

But the lassie did not go back in the ship because the captain would not take her. One of the women when the immigrants had been settled in their new homes gave Kitty MacAllister—such was her name—a temporary lodging until the chief citizens should decide what to do with her, for the older persons felt it necessary to get rid of her. She was an odd creature. On the voyage she had acquired the name of Stormy Petrel, so happy was she when the wind put whitecaps on the water and shrieked in the rigging. Before the voyage was ended several of the women who had grown sons whispered among themselves that she might be a witch.



KATHERINE AND COVERLEIGH COMPARED NOTES.

If this meant that she had bewitched the young men it was the truth, for they were as anxious that she should remain with them as the older ones were that she should go elsewhere. But when the young fellows began to quarrel over her it was decided that something must be done. Then the mother of one of those who had been bewitched went to the magistrate and made the following affidavit:

"During the voyage to America Katherine MacAllister when a storm raged went out on to the forecastle and, hanging on to the jib halyards, told the storm to wreck the ship. As soon as the said Katherine MacAllister had spoken the words a great blast threw the vessel on her beam ends, and she was only righted by the prayers of pious persons in the cabin.

"And this deponent further states that since the landing she (the deponent) went one moonlight night to the shore and saw the said Katherine MacAllister sailing on the water in a sieve."

Upon this affidavit Katherine was arrested while chasing butterflies and lodged in jail, or, rather, since there was no jail in the settlement, she was placed in the keeping of Deacon Padelford, he being chosen for her jailer since he had no sons for her to bewitch. Then a court was convened to try her.

There were a judge, a jury, lawyers, witnesses—indeed, all the officials and others pertaining to a court just as courts are organized today. And before this court Katherine MacAllister was tried on the accusation in accordance with the specifications laid down in the affidavit mentioned and was convicted of being a witch. Before sentence was passed upon her the judge asked her if she had anything to say in her defense.

"My home, your worship, is in Bonnie Scotland, where all maids are merry and all young men are brave. My father was a laird, and my mother was the daughter of a chief. My father was killed in battle, and my mother died of a broken heart. The good God who brought such trials on them and me gave me a cheerful heart to bear it all, since I must live. After my father and mother were taken away from me my Uncle Roderick shut me up in a room in the castle and one night put me in a coach and brought me to a ship, where he left me. What he did all this unkindness for I dinna ken. But since the good God intended that I should live through all the troubles in Bonnie Scotland I dinna think he'll let you burn me for a witch."

This speech excited the sympathy of all, and had it not been that Katherine had been duly convicted the judge might have had mercy on her. But he did what he conceived to be his duty, sentencing her to be burned at the stake the next day.

Richard Coverleigh, one of the young men whom Katherine had bewitched, heard her speech and, since the Puritans were prone to consider that they were appointed to special purposes by Providence, believed in his heart that he was commissioned to save the lassie he loved in his heart. He was a younger son of a British earl and had been sent to America that he might not disgrace his family by poverty, all the estate being entailed to his older brother. But he was more fitted for deeds of knight errantry than the commonplace duties of the peaceful settlers of a new country, though he had done some service in fighting hostile Indians.

Katherine was confined in one of the two rooms of Deacon Padelford's cabin, which served for dining room and kitchen. The fireplace was one of the olden type, very broad, and the chimney very large. Behind the cabin was a grove, and one of the trees grew so near it that its branches overhung the abode. Near midnight, when Katherine was sleeping serenely, undisturbed by the terrible ordeal in store for her on the morrow, she was suddenly awakened by a hand being clapped over her mouth.

"Be still," whispered a man's voice in her ear. "I have come to save you."

She could not have cried out if she would. The hand was soon removed, and the voice continued:

"Arise and put on your clothes. You will find under the chimney a rope with a loop. Put the loop under your arms, and when I feel by the rope that you are on it I will pull you up into a tree that overhangs the cabin."

"Who are you?" whispered Katherine.

"Ric Coverleigh."

Katherine felt for his hand and pressed it; then he left her, climbed the rope hand over hand and waited, standing on the chimney top. When Katherine had dressed, making no noise in doing so, she put the loop over her shoulders, and Coverleigh, feeling that it was caught, pulled her up to him, and, she catching to a limb of the tree above, he helped her up on it. In a few minutes both had descended the tree and stood upon the ground.

Richard Coverleigh, being fond of the water, had built himself a small boat with a single sail, and any contribution he made to the wealth of the settlement was by fishing. He had in this way gathered some £40, which he would doubtless have spent had there been anything to spend it for. With this money in his doublet he took Katherine to his boat and with muffled oars pulled out to where he caught a breeze; then, raising his sail, he entered upon the broad ocean.

Fortunately the weather was pleasant and the wind favorable for a sail to Boston, not far distant. Ric did not know what he would do when he reached Boston. He relied on the Lord to guide him. He was about entering the harbor in the morning when a ship bound for England approached. He hailed her and asked to be taken aboard, offering the captain all the money he had to carry him and his shipmate with him. The offer was accepted. Ric ran alongside the ship, and the two climbed aboard. Then the boat was turned adrift, and at the hour Katherine was to have been burned at the stake she had begun her voyage homeward.

On the ocean Katherine and Coverleigh compared notes and found that their circumstances were similar. Katherine's uncle had dispossessed her of her estate, he being next of kin and consequently heir at her death. He had given out that she had died, buried a coffin weighted with stones and shipped her to America. Coverleigh on his arrival in England found that his father had died in his bed and his brother had been killed while hunting. He took possession of the title and estate, married Katherine, then went to Scotland with her and dispossessed her uncle.

Various stories were told in Salem of Katherine's disappearance. The one that was accepted by most citizens was that she had flown up the chimney, and a farmer's boy who was out with the dawn averred that he had seen her high up above the cabin in which she had been confined riding on a broomstick.

A WELCOME CALLER.

But the Drummer Was Sore When He Discovered the Reason.

A COMMERCIAL traveler had been talking his hardest, his most eloquent, his most persuasive for nearly an hour to a shrewd old Yorkshire business man. The old fellow seemed convinced and pleased, and the traveler thought he had his fish landed. But the Yorkshire man said: "There's ma lad Jack—Ah'd laike him to hear what ye have to say. Will ye coom this afternoon and go over your talk again?"

"Certainly, sir—with pleasure!" replied the traveler heartily and at the hour appointed presented himself again for the interview with father and son. Again he went over the points of the article he had to sell—forcibly, eloquently, persuasively. Never had he acquitted himself of a finer "selling talk."

When he had finished the old Yorkshire man turned to his son and said enthusiastically: "Do you hear that, Jock? Well, now, that's the way I want ye to sell our goods on the road."—London Tit-Bits.

The Marked Spot.

It was in the Burnet Woods park last summer that a man hired a boat. For almost the entire hour that he was allowed he cruised around on the little lake and then suddenly pulled for the shore.

"I lost my watch overboard!" he shouted as he neared the landing stage.

"Where?" asked the watchman.

"Right here," returned the one in the boat. And, pointing to a deep cut in the side of his craft, "I cut a notch right where she went over."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson III.—Fourth Quarter, For Oct. 18, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Mark xiv, 32-42. Memory Verses, 34-36—Golden Text, Matt. xxvi, 41—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Wholly forgetful of Himself and His approaching sufferings, in a way that we cannot understand, He comforted that little band with the incomparable words of John xiv, xv, xvi and prayed the prayer of John xvii, such a prayer as was never prayed on earth before or since. Then they sang a hymn and went out into the mount of Olives (verse 26). He went forth over the brook Cedron, because His son Israel had turned against Him and would not have Him (Ex. iv, 22; Ps. lxxxi, 11). We cannot but think of His father David going forth over the same brook because his son rebelled against him (II Sam. xv, 23), but as truly as David returned and reigned when the rebellion was over, so shall the Son of David return and reign when Israel's rebellion is over.

Having entered a garden in Gethsemane (John xviii, 1), He said to His disciples, "Sit ye here while I shall pray," and, leaving eight of them, He took Peter and James and John and went a little farther and began to be sorrowful and very heavy (verse 33; Matt. xxvi, 37). Putting the three records together as well as we can, it seems to have been like this: He was withdrawn from the three favored disciples about a stone's cast, saying to them, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful unto death. Tarry ye here and watch with me." Then He went forward a little and kneeled down and fell on His face on the ground and prayed, saying, "O my Father, if it be possible let this cup pass from me; nevertheless, not my will but Thine be done." And there appeared an angel unto Him from heaven, strengthening Him. And, being in an agony, He prayed more earnestly, and His sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground. (Matt. xxvi, 37-39; Mark xiv, 33-36; Luke xxii, 41-44.)

Then He came to the three and found them asleep and saith unto Peter: "Simon, sleepest thou? Couldest thou not watch with me one hour? Watch ye and pray lest ye enter into temptation. The spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak." He went away the second time and prayed the same words, and returned and found them asleep again, and they did not know what to answer Him.

He went away and prayed the third time, saying the same words. Then He came the third time to the three and said, "Sleep on now, and take your rest, it is enough, the hour is come; behold, the Son of Man is betrayed into the hands of sinners." Then He returned to the eight and found them also sleeping for sorrow, and said: "Why sleep ye? Rise and pray lest ye enter into temptation." This attempt at a conservative story of that awful night in the garden may not be quite correct in every detail, but it is helpful even to try to do it. Do it for yourself, and you will be blessed in doing it.

It is clear that He prayed three times, that He found them three times sleeping, that He sweat, as it were, drops of blood, that an angel strengthened Him, that after His agony He was able to rise up and go to meet His enemies.

What shall we say of the favored three who were also with Him at the raising of the ruler's daughter and on the mount of transfiguration and two of them honored to bring to Him the ass' colt and to prepare the Passover? What about their sleeping at His transfiguration (Luke ix, 32), as well as in the garden, and the fact that neither glory nor suffering can keep such mortals as we are awake? What about the boasting of Peter and then his not being able to watch one hour? Oh, the loneliness of it all on His side! "No man knoweth the Son save the Father." How can He continue to love such as we are and ever hope to make anything out of us? May His patience with us make us more patient with each other.

As to His own experience in the garden we may be quite certain that He was not shrinking from death on the cross, nor was He asking to be delivered from that. We know that the devil tried to kill Him as a babe in Bethlehem and by His own townsmen at Nazareth and possibly in the storm on the lake, but he could not, for the time had not come. My own conviction concerning His agony and bloody sweat in Gethsemane is that it was another attempt of the devil to kill Him before the time and thus prevent His great sacrifice for sin on Calvary. The key to it is found in Heb. v, 7, "He offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto Him that was able to save Him from death and was heard." It is the record of His third weeping. He prayed to be saved from death, and He was heard and therefore saved from death, the death in the garden which seemed imminent. An angel came to Him and strengthened Him that He might go on to the cross and finish the great atonement for sin which He came to make. Yet He was willing to leave His work unfinished and die in the garden if His Father should so will it.

The world is a cage in which humanity is tamed.

TAKING A CHANCE.

WHAT'S the use of writing this,
Working on the lines and meter
So it has a graceful swing
And an easy sort of teeter?
Who will read it anyway?
Who will speculate or ponder
On the work in molding it
That the writer has to squander?

Many gems of purest ray,
Some near-gems, too, are a loser
And are wasted on the air
Just for lack of a peruser.
Men with work enough for two,
Women in the kitchen cooking,
Over it may run their eyes
Without for the jewel looking.

That's the way with many things
Into which we put gray matter.
By the wayside they succumb,
Never getting to the batter.
If the world would only pause
As its vision idly drifted
Over this or such as this
It perhaps might be uplifted.

Who will read these simple lines?
Will some soul subdued and stoic
Finish every single word
With a patience quite heroic?
Much obliged if you're the one.
We will ever be your debtor.
Had we but suspected it
We had tried to make them better.

MR. W. H. HILL,
City.

Dear Sir:

I wish to thank you for the very prompt manner in which my claim was settled by the Fidelity and Casualty Co., of New York.

I have carried accident insurance with this Company for a number of years and have always found them and their representatives courteous at all times.

Regarding my recent claim, the claim papers were filled out and sent in on Sept. 29, 1914, and to-day I received a cheque for the full amount of the claim.

Again thanking you for the prompt manner in which this claim has been handled, I am,

Yours truly,

R. G. STURGEON.

BRILLIANT EXPLOIT OF A WISCONSIN LUMBERMAN

In the spring of 1864 a Wisconsin lumberman by a brilliant exploit saved the Red river fleet of the Mississippi squadron from destruction. To thwart the intrigues of Napoleon III., who had sent a French army into Mexico, the federal government desired to gain a strong military foothold in Texas. To this end it was planned to send an army and fleet into interior Texas by way of the Red river, which was navigable only in the spring.

The army under General Banks, supported by Admiral Porter's fleet of gunboats, began the ascent of the river. But matters went badly almost from the beginning. The leaders quarreled among themselves, the preparations made were inadequate, and, worst of all, the Red river suddenly began to fall, when by all precedents it should have risen. Admiral Porter, fearful that his fleet would be caught in the shallows, hurriedly descended the stream, and the army, already savagely handled by the opposing Confederate force, followed after.

At Alexandria, in central Louisiana, the retreating federals found themselves face to face with a crisis. At this point the Red river is broken by a mile of rapids; the stream had fallen so quickly that the gunboats could no longer navigate the channel. The water was but three feet four inches, whereas Porter's larger gunboats drew at least seven feet. Here was indeed a desperate situation—the army far from its source of supplies, the victorious enemy pressing in hot pursuit, and the $2,000,000 fleet marooned by falling water. It seemed to almost every one that the only course open was to blow up the vessels.

But Lieutenant Colonel Joseph Bailey of the Fourth Wisconsin, who was serving at the time as acting engineer of the Nineteenth army corps, came forward with a plan for bringing the ironclads to safety. It was to raise the level of the water above the rapids by constructing a great dam across the river. When a sufficient depth of water had accumulated he proposed to break the dam in the center, thus forcing the vessels with the outrushing flood through the shallows and into the deep water below. Before the war Colonel Bailey had been a lumberman and had often seen this scheme employed in the Wisconsin pineries to "lift" stranded rafts of logs to safety. The project was at first received with ridicule by Colonel Bailey's superiors. It was declared impossible of achievement by the best engineers in the army.

But there was nothing else to be done, and at length the Wisconsin lumberman was dubiously granted permission to put his project to the proof. His first step was to requisition detachments of "pinery boys" from the Twenty-third and Twenty-ninth Wisconsin regiments, who understood what was to be done and how to go about it.

In all 3,000 men were employed in the enterprise. Hundreds of men were set to felling trees, other hundreds toiled in the quarries that were opened for the occasion, and two or three hundred wagons were engaged in the essential work of transporting the materials for the dam. Up to their necks in the swift current, which swept over the rapids at the rate of nine miles an hour, under the blistering southern sun, the men toiled.

At the end of eight days the river was sufficiently high to permit three of the lighter gunboats to pass the upper falls, where they had been held, and come down to a position immediately above the dam, ready to pass the lower rapids. One more day and the dam would be high enough to permit all to come down in readiness for the final attempt.

On the morning of the ninth day, however, the steadily increasing pressure of the water caused two of the stone barges in the middle of the dam to swing aside, and through the opening thus created the accumulated torrent swirled. The three lighter vessels that were in position to make the passage, together with a fourth that had meanwhile come up, promptly took advantage of the break and, passing the remaining rapids on the flood tide, safely reached the deeper waters below.

Somewhat encouraged by the escape of at least four of the vessels, the men bravely set about repairing the damage that had been done. Within three days the break had been closed and in addition two wing dams constructed on the upper falls. The remaining gunboats, somewhat lifted by the backwater of the wing dams, were now hauled over the upper falls, and on May 12, amid the tumultuous cheers of 30,000 soldiers lined up along the shore, made the perilous passage over the lower falls to the deep water below.

On June 11, 1864, congress adopted a resolution of thanks to Lieutenant Colonel Bailey. A few months later the officers of Admiral Porter's fleet presented him with a beautiful sword and loving cup, and before the year was over he had been promoted by order of the war department to the rank of brevet brigadier general.—Frederick Merk.

A Word to Poultry Keepers

(By F. C. Elford, Dominion Poultry Husbandman.)

The indications are that new-laid eggs will be as scarce this winter as usual, and if extra attention is not paid to getting the laying stock into condition and housed early, the supply of eggs may not be as plentiful even as they were last winter.

Though the present is too late to begin to prepare for early winter eggs, it is a good time to make the best of what we may have by getting everything ready before the cold weather comes. The beginning was made last spring when the early pullets were hatched, for only the early pullets can be depended upon to give eggs during November and December; the hens, as a rule, will not lay many eggs until the end of January or February; it is therefore from the well-matured pullets that the high-priced eggs may be expected, and in order to get the most out of these, care must be taken, as from now until laying time is a more critical time in the life of the pullet than most poultrymen imagine.

How to Get Ready.

1. Keep no stock that will be nonproducing. Kill off the old hens that will not lay until the spring. Market the immature pullets and all surplus cockerels as soon as they are ready. Give the rest of the pullets every opportunity to develop and get into laying condition before winter sets in.

2. Put these pullets into their winter quarters early. The unnecessary handling or changing of pullets from one place to another just when they are about to begin to lay is disastrous, and in some cases will retard laying for several weeks. Give the pullets every chance to get acquainted with their winter quarters in plenty of time, and feed liberally so they will start to lay before the cold weather.

3. Do not feed sparingly, but judiciously. Though feed may be high, it does not pay to stint the layers. Feed them grain in a litter on the floor, and as the weather gets colder increase the quantity of litter. In addition to the grain, see that they have either a hopper, with dry mash constantly before them, or if preferred, give it in the shape of a moist mash once a day. Have the house clean, preferably whitewashed, and allow plenty of sunshine in. We have found that with a shed-roofed house, a board protection along the front of the house as high as 18 inches from the floor, is an advantage; from this up, glass and cotton in the proportion of one of glass to two of cotton, make the most ideal front for the average Canadian house.

Why Not More City Hens?

Many town and city people could not only produce sufficient eggs to keep their table going, but have enough eggs left over that would go a long way towards supplying the household with groceries, etc. There are comparatively few city lots where a small flock of poultry could not be kept, and enough scraps find their way into the garbage can to provide a large proportion of the food. No male birds should be kept, as they are both a nuisance and an expense, which, if done away with, and the house kept clean and sanitary, there is absolutely nothing about such a plant that could possibly annoy the neighbors. If say one in every one hundred city families would produce even enough eggs for their own table, it would reduce the number of those who only consume, and add that many more to the list of producers.

Canada Imported Eggs Last Year

During the fiscal year ending 31st March, 1914, over 11½ million dozen eggs were imported into Canada. These came from Great Britain, Hong Kong, China, Japan, New Zealand and the United States. Surely Canadian poultry keepers can supply the demand this year. If all help in this matter there should be no lack of eggs, and if care is exercised in the production, there should be a good revenue to the producers, and the consumer ought not to pay such exorbitant prices as sometimes have been asked in the time of scarcity.

Better Have the Cost Low Than the Sale Price High.

Owing to the high price of feed, it may cost more this year than usual to produce new-laid eggs, but by careful management the average cost of one dozen of eggs might be kept as low as usual. It is at the production end that producers should aim to economize, and it is better to save at this end than to expect extreme prices. This is always the case, and especially will it be so this winter when everything the consumer has to buy will be dear and money to pay for it scarce. It will be a loyal act to study how cheaply the eggs can be produced rather than how much can be charged for them.

Prof. Edward Brown, the veteran poultryman of England, made a suggestion the other day to English breeders, which suggestion even from this distance sounds good. He thought that as so many poultry breeders in Great Britain had done business with Belgian poultrymen who in all probability were killed, or who at least have had all their stock destroyed, that these English breeders, as soon as the smoke of battle had cleared away, might donate to their old customers and friends in Belgium sufficient breeding stock to start up again. This suggestion of Prof. Brown's is worthy of a Britisher, and though Canadian poultry breeders may not be able to do this they can show their loyalty by producing as many new-laid eggs as possible this winter and at the least possible cost. Strictly new-laid eggs in the winter time are worth a good price, and the man who can produce them deserves credit and extra remuneration, but let us hope that this winter, by better care and management, we will have enough new-laid eggs that we can supply the consumers at a price which is within the reach of those who must have them.

OYSTER SHELLS.

Once Little Valued, They Are Now a Boon to Oyster Growers.

Ten years ago any stranger could spot the shore location of an oyster fishery by means of the mammoth piles of oyster shells. These were heaped up on the shore in great stacks sometimes from thirty to forty feet in height. These shells were considered of little value. In many places they were actually given away and they were used to be crushed up and spread over road beds and they were also burned in order to get the lime from them.

Today these piles have disappeared and if you wanted a ton or so of them you would have to pay a pretty good price, simply because the owners want to dump them back into the sea.

There used to be a great deal of difficulty in preparing oyster beds for breeding purposes. Then it was discovered that the best possible breeding place for the embryo oysters was on the smooth inside surface of the adult oyster shells, and so every year the shells from the shucked oysters are taken out and scattered over the beds. The baby oysters attach themselves to these surfaces and thrive mightily.

There are experts today who know nothing of fishing for oysters or marketing them, but who devote all their time to the preparation of artificial oyster beds. This has become a recognized part of the industry. After the shells have been properly spread over the bottom of the water the spawn is liberated upon them and they are left to fight their own battles with the crabs, periwinkles, starfish and other enemies.—Boston Herald.

A Long Shower.

The patriotic Scotchman had induced two Lancashire friends to go to Argyllshire for a week's holiday. On their return he met them.

"Well, how did you enjoy yourselves? Did you have good weather?"

"There was just a shower on our first day," replied one of them.

"Didn't I tell you it was all lies about the Highlands being wet?"

"That shower hadn't ended when we came home," was the severe retort.—Manchester Guardian.

Halcyon.

Halcyon is the Greek for a kingfisher, compounded of "hals," the sea, and "kuo," to brood on. The ancients were of the opinion that the kingfisher laid its eggs and sat on them during the fourteen days just before the summer solstice, throughout which time the waves of the sea were always unruffled; hence the "halcyon days"—the days of happiness and peace.

CAMPAIGN TO RAISE $675,000 FOR MISSIONS

Dominion Wide Movement to be Inaugurated by Methodists

Toronto, Oct. 17.—The Methodist Church of Canada will launch immediately a Dominion-wide campaign to raise $675,000 for the Church mission work. At the meeting of the General Board of Missions last night arrangements were completed, and it was stated that the committee would co-operate with the interdenominational Laymen's Missionary Movement as far as possible.

The campaign will be conducted to meet the financial situation resulting from the great European war. Owing to the crisis, the regular sources of income of the board have been curtailed, and in order to bring the work to a successful standard it was necessary for the Church to take unusual measures.

The campaign, which will be held in every General Conference of the Methodist Church, will be under the following general board: Dr. J. W. Flavelle, N. W. Rowell, J. H. Gundy, Hon. E. J. Davis, H. H. Fudger, Rev. Dr. Endicott, Rev. J. H. Arnup, Rev. Jas. Allen, and Rev. C. E. Manning. Besides this, the General Conferences will be called to appoint committees in their various districts.

The announcement was also made that a Dominion committee would be called within the coming month, which will be attended by representatives from the east and west, when the final plans for the campaign will be completed. It is planned to send out a detailed statement of the situation, and to canvass every church member in Canada personaly.

The India mission work was again discussed, and a resolution passed requesting the Dominion Government to call a conference of all workers among the Indians to consider the best methods of dealing with the question. The following provincial superintendents of the home mission field were appointed:

British Columbia: Rev. Dr. White; Alberta, Rev. Arthur Banner and Rev. T. C. Buchanan; Saskatchewan, Rev. Oliver Darwin, and Rev. Jas. A. Doyle, for the European foreigners; Ontario, Rev. F. L. Brown; Maritime Provinces, Rev. L. Steels; Newfoundland, Rev. Dr. Fenwick; superintendent of work among Orientals, Rev. Dr. Osterhout, of Vancouver; superintendent of Indian work, Rev. Thompson Ferrier.

A message of encouragement to the various missionaries in China and Japan was also sent out by the board. The regular anniversary meeting will be held in Elm Street Church on Monday night, when Rev. J. H Arnup and Rev. Oliver Darwin will speak.

Newest Ruling Family in Europe --- On Roumania's Throne

"Sweetest Royal Family in The World" — People Say

The beautiful new queen in Europe, Marie, wife of King Ferdinand of Roumainia, is a granddaughter of Queen Victoria and a first cousin of the Czar of Russia. This fact, with the marriage of her son, Crown Prince Charles, to the daughter of the Czar, is expected to carry even more surely the sentiments of the new Roumanian government toward the allies in the present conflict.

King Ferdinand inherits the Roumanian throne not only as nephew to the late King Charles and his childless queen (Carmen Sylva), but as the adopted son whom they have long cherished as their own.

His wife, Queen Maria, is considered the most beautiful woman in any of the reigning families of Europe, as well as the most charming to meet, the best-dressed, and the cleverest. In fact, she is worshipped by her people as a veritable paragon of all the qualities of nobility. She is even an excellent business woman, and some time ago started a big toothpick factory, which is said to turn out annually some 25,000,000 tooth picks.

The new crown prince is their son Charles, now 21 years old, a lieutenant in the Roumanian army. He has one brother, Prince Nicholas, 11 years old, and three sisters, the Princesses Elizabeth (named after her great-aunt, Carmen Sylva), Marie, and Ileana, who is only six years old.

It is said that there is not a sweeter royal family in the world than that of these five beautiful children and their well-loved parents.

GIVEN BENEFIT OF THE DOUBT

No Conviction Against McGarvey on Theft Charge.

John McGarvey was acquitted yesterday in county court on the charge of stealing $85 from Harry Hamilton. The evidence was practically the same as that given before Magistrate Dumble about 10 days ago.

One witness gave evidence that she found McGarvey's purse under his pillow a couple of days before the Chinaman lost his money, and she remembered when counting the money of seeing one Bank of Ottawa and one Bank of Montreal $10 bill amongst the money.

Judge Huycke in summing up the evidence said that it was impossible for him to make a conviction on the evidence submitted. He said there was a doubt, and he would have to give the prisoner the benefit of it.

EMPRESS HOTEL WILL BE POPULAR

Is Equipped With all Conveniences For Travelling Public.

The new Empress Hotel which opens its doors on Monday to the travelling public is a very modern and up-to-date hostelry. From the time one enters it until he leaves again, he is struck with the luxury and grandeur of everything within its doors. The rotunda is large and commodious and with its tile floor and many comfortable chairs, it is bound to find favor. On the same floor is the dining and grill room all nicely furnished, and very cosy and homelike indeed. Just off the rotunda is the writing room, all finished in fumed oak.

On entering the kitchen one is inspired with all the modern conveniences for culinary department. There are a number of steam cookers, as well as a large gas range, where all eatables will be done to suit the many tastes. There is installed a Blakesley dish washer, in which speed and cleanliness are the essentials. There is also on the ground floor a ladies' lounging room, and downstairs a billiard room is fitted up. Upstairs there are 70 rooms with hot and cold water and thirty of the rooms have the bath. The rooms are all that can be desired. Each one has a telephone. One of the outstanding features of this hotel is its eighteen sample rooms which will fill a long felt want with the travelling public in this city. One is struck with the richness in design of the carpets which were supplied by the Brinton Carpet Company.

The clerks are Art Graham, and Harry Carr, while Mr. William Coates of Hamilton is steward, and Consteen Ditka will act as chef.

Lord Roberts to Review Canadians on Monday

Many of the Soldiers Have Not Reached Camp as Troops Travel Only at Night---Some Difficulty Met in Handling the Horses.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Salisbury Plains, Eng., Oct. 17.—Before noon Friday Canadian troops ceased to reach camp here, as they are travelling only in the night time, in order not to dislocate the railway service. Lord Roberts will review the Canadians on Monday.

The only incident marking the first day of the Canadians in camp was a broken leg received by a trooper from a kick from a horse.

The horses, reaching camp after the long sea and train journey, were so skitish at being on ground again that they gave the recruits as much as they could do to handle them.

The animals are a strange mixture of solid farm horses of Eastern Canada and mustangs of the West, but according to a lance-corporal of the Army Service Corps, who until a short time ago was a brakeman in California, the farm horses caused most trouble, because they understand only the French language and refuse to obey orders given in English.

It is not expected that all members of the contingent will reach here before Monday. The camp has not been completed yet.

WOUNDED ARE IN ENGLAND

Thirteen Thousand Belgians Being Cared For.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The directors of the Belgian Red Cross arrived in London yesterday with 600 wounded soldiers, the last of 13,000 who have been brought to England.

They left Ostend Wednesday morning, at which time 25,000 refugees, besides townspeople, were hoping to get away.

As the Red Cross steamer left a Taube aeroplane dropped two bombs, which fell in the water a few yards from the vessel.

No satisfactory arrangement has been made for the return to their homes of those Belgians who crossed the frontier into Holland, although the Germans continue to try to induce them to do so.

There are many Antwerp refugees among the crowds at Dover. When some of these were asked if they would be willing to return to Antwerp in case arrangements for their repatriation can be completed with the German Government, they declared emphatically that they never would return so long as the Germans were in possession.

The captains of ships which already have docked declare they saw hundreds of persons leaving Ostend in small rowboats, hoping to reach some point on the French coast. Hundreds of others boarded little trawlers and sailboats, which are still straggling into Dover. Their passengers often have been without food for 36 hours. Many small boats from Belgium are also putting into Lowestoft and Folkestone. These craft are maned mostly by volunteers, who know nothing of the British ports, and head in wherever they can see docking facilities.

Closing Meetings Of Campaign

One of the best meetings held so far in the campaign at St. James' church was the one last night. The royal proclamations were for the backslider, the professing Christian, for the parent, for young men and boys, for the unconverted husband, for everyone, and for those not Christians. Many took advantage of the opportunity to enlist as soldiers of the Cross. Mr. Crossley sang his Muskoka song, "Flee as a Bird to Your Mountain." There remain three days of grace, then the evangelist passes on to another campaign at Clinton. To-night there wil be no service, but to-morrow Mr. Crossley will speak at 11 a.m., 2.30 p.m. and 7 p.m. To all of these services the public are invited and will be made welcome. At the evening service he speaks on "Wrong Views of Hell."

London Theatres Dark.

London, Oct. 17.—Owing to the restricted lighting of London, consequent upon the threatened attack by German Zeppelins, the theatres are only giving two night performances weekly, but with six matinees, thus reversing the usual custom.

RAIDS BY ZEPPELINS

Contrary to Instincts Self-Respecting Nations.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, Oct. 17.—Passengers on the steamer Olympic, which arrived last night, met aboard ship and passed resolutions concerning the contemplated wholesale raids by Zeppelins on Paris and London as being contrary to the instincts of self-respecting nations, certain to alienate every particle of sympathy from the German cause, and as being not only cruel but without any military object.

These resolutions were entrusted to Hopkinson Smith, the well-known author, who forwarded them to President Wilson, accompanied by a personal letter urging the president to intervene to prevent these raids before too late.

Mr. Smith told the press that Germany had gone into a fight against civilisation, that they were rushing work on an enormous fleet of Zeppelins and aeroplanes, that they are boasting that they do not need to capture Paris, but will burn it and London, so that Berlin shall have no rival, and that the menace threatening London is very real and imminent.

Austria to Cede Trentino And Avlona

In Return For Italy's Neutrality.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 17.—The Daily Telegraph publishes a report wired from Stockholm which it suggests should be received with great reserve, that Austria and Italy have reached an agreement whereby in return for Italy's neutrality, Austria will cede to her Trentino and the permanent occupation of Avlona.

Gulfs Mined as Act of Defence

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Petrograd, Oct. 17.—The Russian Government announces that the work has been completed of placing mines in the Gulfs of Finland and Riga as a defensive measure and these waters are now closed to non-combatants.

REGARDING METHODIST BOOK ROOM.

SINCE publishing the article in the editorial columns of the Review of October 9th headed "That Vote of Censure on the Book Room," we find that certain statements made therein regarding the Methodist Book Room, and regarding methods of business which it was alleged were employed in its publishing department, have been complained of and should not have been published. The information which led to the writing of the article in question, came to the Review from sources which we deem authoritative, and the article was published, as we believed, in the public interest. Since it is the policy of the Review to attempt to be just at all times, we hereby apologize for anything which may have been misstated, and trust that this explanation will be a means of removing any injury to the Book Room and its supporters which may have been caused by our editorial.

CANADIANS LAND AT PLYMOUTH.

IT NOW transpires that those special cables saying that the Canadian troops had landed at Southampton were wrong. The latest authentic despatches report their landing at Plymouth. A resident of Peterborough has received a telegram from his daughter, who accompanies the contingent as a Red Cross nurse, confirming her safe arrival. Nevertheless, the first despatch was quite bona fide. Some transports with reservists on board, having reached Southampton were mistaken for the Canadian force, and hence the despatches. This mistake, while revealing how scarce real war news is, also shows the efficiency of the news services in distributing every scrap of news that contains at all real authentic facts.

Reports say that never in the long history of famous old Plymouth were there such wildly enthusiastic scenes as when the long line of transports, each accompanied by a steam tug, drew into the harbor and cast anchor. Tremendous cheering arose from crowded docks and the tops of buildings, and were answered, time and again, by Canadians who swarmed the decks and ratlines of the vessels. The bands on board played popular airs and echoes of distant cheering drifted shoreward from ships far out to sea in the line of transports. Plymouth was the harbor from which the renowned Drake sailed to attack the Spanish Armada. It has witnessed many historic events, numerous reviews of the fleet, numbers of embarkations of troops for service on the sea and in the field, but never had it witnessed the landing of so large a force, the largest that ever crossed the Atlantic. This force comes from Canada to help Britain fight for the integrity of the British Empire. It comes from Canada, be it remembered, 33,000 strong, from a country that Gladstone was willing once to barter for some eastern possessions, and which was long regarded by Englishmen as a country of no value and a millstone round their necks. Time has proved the value of British colonies, and, above all, the efficiency of Britain's policy of treating them generously. Self-government has not broken the Empire, but, on the contrary, it has made it stronger, more united, more an identity than it ever could have been under a system of military domination. That is what the landing of the Canadian contingent means.

THE FARMERS' BANK.

ANOTHER reason why we should have an election is that the Senate killed the Farmers' Bank Bill. It is true that the motion in the Senate to disallow this bill was made by Senator Power of Quebec, a Liberal. It is also true that the Liberal Opposition in the House of Commons fiercely opposed the Farmers' Bank Relief Bill, but it is also true that a few Conservatives in both Houses opposed it. That, however, made no difference. The bill was Sir Robert Borden's bill, and the Conservative party did their best to put it through. The Senate, however, both with Liberals and Conservatives in the opposing force, opposed the bill and threw it out. There never was a fairer bill than the bill for the relief of the depositors of the Farmers' Bank. If a government is for the purpose of administering the affairs of the people, when it fails to do so it must suffer the consequences. Mr. Fielding is no doubt an honourable gentleman, but he was no match for the sharpers, and, like every other employee who fails to use ordinary common sense in the discharge of his duties, he should have been dismissed and the Liberal Administration should have made the loss good. The Examiner of Peterborough, for reasons of its own, which everybody understands, bitterly opposed the relief of the depositors, and quoted in its editorial column triumphantly an article from Saturday Night which met with its approval. For this act alone the Senate is deserving of censure, but what shall we say of it in the face of wholesale slaughter of Government bills by an irresponsible body?

THE POWER OF CANADIAN INDUSTRY.

THE POWER of Canadian industry, greater than that of war, depends upon the army of industrial workers being kept together in a common cause. The nation with power plants idle half the year and its payrolls of men on half time, is less than half efficient in the business of overcoming the earth and building up the economics of civilization.

A smokestack on a factory is worth a thousand smokestacks on warships. But the smokestacks of prosperity can only be kept going in this country as long as the people of Canada stand behind the industrial workers and the manufacturers of Canada. The people who believe in the triumphs of peace must prove their belief by spending their money for the goods made by their fellow-countrymen. Those who most deprecate war are those who do most to build up their own country in a time of peace and thereby make war impossible.

The dollars of Canada spent in purchasing goods made by Canadians will be the determining factor in the great struggle of this part of the world against the huge economic waste of war.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

REPORTS from the West have not been encouraging by any means for some time, but conditions seem to be changing for the better. The business scare which seized Canadian cities and towns at the outbreak of the war, seems to have been overcome in many cities, including Regina. The citizens of that city are now very optimistic and have good reason to believe that the West will benefit immensely. The farmers are selling their wheat without difficulty and are realizing prices far in advance of those of last year. The Provincial Government statistics show that, although the crop was not as large as in 1913, the amount the farmers will realize will be far greater than in 1913.

A CLERGYMAN from Michigan claimed to have been robbed of $4,500 in a Western Ontario city. The story now turns out to have been a fabrication. A very pertinent question is, will this man still be allowed to proclaim the truth from the pulpit or to instruct his flock in morals?

LAST WEEK a friend was urging M. B. Tudhope to get up at an unearthly hour to see the comet, and the answer was, "Oh, no; you can't comet over me." This appears to be a case for the war office to deal with.—Orillia Packet. Precisely. Let him be court-martialled without delay.

THE ORILLIA PACKET says we can't see a joke. We admit we can't see them sometimes. as we are without a microscope, but we may say the Packet cannot see a joke sometimes too We are glad to know that it does not question our statements and also—a matter of more consequence—that it has no need for references.

A CORRESPONDENT is told that there is no trade paper in Canada connected with the barber's occupation. An enterprising publisher should start one, filled with clippings and cuts—especially haircuts.—Montreal Mail. May we suggest shavings instead of cuts.

IT IS SAID that two hundred teachers of London, Ontario, have given $4,000, or an average of $20 each, to the Patriotic Fund, and yet they say teachers are not well paid. It may be so. The case is clearly one of unbounded generosity or of fabulous salaries.

REPORTS in the papers the other day show that the production of the Rand gold mines in South Africa are at a rate approximating two hundred million dollars for this year. Now, why should money be tight?

MR. HAY is running for alderman in East City. That fact should be enough for the people there if they want a good man to represent them.

LET East City gather Hay into the Council. That's where the need is.

The Vision of a Poet.

(Victor Hugo.)

A day will come when the only battlefield will be the market open to commerce and the mind opening to new ideas. A day will come when bullets and bombshells will be replaced by votes, by the universal suffrage of nations, by the venerable arbitration of a great sovereign senate which will be to Europe what the parliament is to England, what the diet is to Germany, what the legislative assembly is to France. A day will come when a cannon will be exhibited in public museums, just as an instrument of torture is now, and people will be astonished how such a thing could have been. A day will come when these two immense groups, the United States of America and the United States of Europe, shall be seen placed in presence of each other, extending the hand of fellowship across the ocean.

Questions Examiner's Sincerity.

(Orillia Packet.)

The Peterborough Examiner quotes the Toronto World as "a staunchly Conservative journal." But the Examiner knows better. The Peterborough paper itself is not more Radical that Billy Maclean, or, at heart, more hostile to R. L. Borden and the Administration at Ottawa.

Why Not Ship Apples.

(Monetary Times.)

A campaign to sell more Canadian apples in Canada is good, but we fail to understand yet why Canadian apples cannot be sold in Great Britain almost as usual. Wheat is being shipped; why not apples?

The Important Part.

"Never mind the footwork, professor. Just teach me the holds."

POLITENESS

By Walt Mason

I kicked an agent from my porch, but did it so politely, he handed me a ten-cent torch, and said I acted rightly. With bows and becks and wreathed smiles all working well together, I handed him some forty styles of alligator leather; and he felt honored when he hit the walk and rolled upon it, and gathered up his peddling kit, and went away, doggone it. And thus a smile will take the sting from each unpleasant action; instead of rousing ire, by jing, you're giving satisfaction. It's easy, friend, to make a foe—you'll make a new one hourly, if you insist on saying "No," abruptly, sternly, sourly. It's just as easy, when a guy comes 'round, your horse to borrow, to greet him with a twinkling eye, and answer, "To my sorrow, old Dobbin has a festered ear, and also yaller janders, and he has symptoms, too, I fear, of chickenpox and glanders. 'Twould please me to accommodate, and let you have my charger, if he were fit to pull his freight—just ask me something larger." And then he'll leave you feeling good, and say you are a dandy; "I know he'd help me if he could," he'll tell his wife, Mirandy.

ITALIAN STATESMAN DEAD.

Foreign Minister Passes Away After Month's Illness of Heart Failure.

ROME, Oct. 17.—The Italian Foreign Minister, Marquis Antonio di San Guiliano, died at 2.20 o'clock yesterday afternoon after a long illness.

The marquis was taken ill a month ago with an affection of the heart. His illness attracted international attention, because of its possible bearing on the attitude of the Italian Government toward the war. The marquis is understood to have been friendly to Germany and opposed to the demonstrations that occurred in several parts of Italy some time ago in sympathy with the allies, but more particularly in a spirit of hostility toward Austria.

The Italian Premier Signor Salandra will assume temporarily the portfolio of Minister of Foreign Affairs, made vacant by the death yesterday of Marquis Antonio di San Giuliano. This was decided upon at a council of the Ministers this afternoon. Nothing is known as to the intentions of the King or the Premier regarding a permanent successor to the office. It is stated from an authoritative source that the death of the marquis will not affect the foreign policy of the Government.

It is reported that the German ambassador to Italy when he heard of the death of the marquis, said:

"This is perhaps the greatest misfortune for the central empires since the war began."

The doctors say that the war did not cause the death of the Foreign Minister, but say that the end certainly was hastened by the strenuous work to which he submitted his already weakened constitution.

Clever.

"That's a clever dog you have."

Murder at Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Oct. 17.—The badly mutilated body of Michael Franco, an Italian resident of this city, was found by John Scott yesterday in a cave near the Maid of the Mist landing on the Canadian side, and near-by was an oar bespattered with blood, indicating murder. On the face are cuts supposedly inflicted by a blunt instrument, the blow having fractured the skull. There are indication by a trail of blood stains that the body had been dragged over the rocks in an attempt to remove it from the cave.

READY FOR "THE DAY"

But London Police Raided German's Fortress.

LONDON, Oct. 17,—The police have found at Willesden, a suburb to the northwest of London, a building occupied by Germans, with foundations and roof of heavy concrete. They arrested 22 Germans on the premises. The premises were being used by C. G. Roeber, a German music publisher, as a factory. The police laid their plans and conducted a successful raid. In large force they surrounded the building and then entered. The factory is of one storey.

Within they found very thick concrete foundations, and it was discovered that the roof also was of concrete and between three and four feet thick. The site of this factory at Willesden commands several important railroad junctions.

The Paris premises of this same firm were blown up recently on orders issued by the French Government.

ARE FIGHTING WITH VIGOR

Assurance of Success Shows Itself in Allies Work.

ON THE BATTLE FRONT, Oct. 17.—Belief in their final success appears to have taken a firm hold on the allies. All the men display confidence in their commanders, who are doing everything possible to spare their troops. The allied soldiers are fighting with vigor. They often perform marches which seem beyond human power, while on the battlefield their ardor is unrestrainable.

This is made evident often when small detachments act apart from the main bodies. French dragoons recently were entrusted with the task of covering the passage of a river by artillery. They met a party of German Hussars in a clash. Both sides charged simultaneously and the melee lasted ten minutes, during which the men slashed and pierced each other with swords and lances amid the crack of the officers revolvers.

Belgian Rulers Are Heroic.

HAVRE, Oct. 17.—(Via Paris.)—Queen Elizabeth of Belgium is with her husband at the headquarters of the Belgian army, and is his constant companion except when King Albert approaches the firing line to encourage and direct his troops.

M. Huismans, Belgian Minister of State, in announcing the above fact yesterday, added that King Albert was showing great stoicism, and that Queen Elizabeth was sharing his perils and giving an example of dignity and courage worthy of classic times.

MAGNIFICENT FIGHTERS ARRIVE FROM BRITAIN'S GREAT DOMINION

The Coming of the East Indians

(Westminster Gazette.)

The arrival of the Indian troops at Marseilles, which we are now permitted to mention, is described to-day by newspaper correspondents in France with many picturesque details.

"I have seen the troops of one of the world's most ancient civilizations set foot for the first time on the shores of Europe," says the Times correspondent. "I have seen proud Princes of India ride at the head of thousands of soldiers, Princes and men alike fired with all the ardour of the East, determined to help win their Emperor's battles or die. And, of far greater significance to my fellow-countrymen than the mere making of history, I have seen welded before my eyes, as it were, what may well prove to be the strongest link in that singular and wonderful chain which we call the British Empire.

"With a precision and expedition that made every observer marvel, the armada of transports swung into harbor and moored alongside the appointed quays (the correspondent continues). A French officer was lost in admiration. Afterwards he confided to me with delightful frankness that the British Army and Naval authorities were the finest organizers in the world, and that Great Britain alone of all the nations was capable of carrying out a project of the kind with such success.

"Hour after hour fully a score of steamers discharged their cargoes, and I am certain happier fighting men never landed in a country where death or glory was to be their goal. Had not the Emperor of India paid them the highest tribute in his imperial power by asking them to join his white soldiers in crushing the military despotism that was rendering impossible peace and progress in Europe, and therefore upsetting the political balance of the empires and kingdoms of the whole earth? Yes, the King-Emperor had done this, and the soul of every Indian of every race represented in that mighty throng was filled to overflowing with a pardonable joy.

"Not the least extraordinary feature of this wonderful expeditionary force is that not only is it an army from another continent, but an army complete in every detail and ready to take its place in the firing line at a moment's notice. How it will immediately make its presence felt and prove of immense help to the allies can best be realized by those who, like myself, have seen it on the march. I have been an observer of most of the European armies in peace and in war, but never have I seen troops with a finer 'entrain' than those who swung past me on the roads in the environs of Marseilles this afternoon. It is no exaggeration of language to say that the regiments brought over from India are composed of noble and majestic specimens of manhood.

"Everything necessary for campaigning has been brought, even to the shovels and picks to dig the trenches, paraffin lamps to light the sleeping places, and praying mats.

"Men, mountain battery mules, and officers' horses marched along under the very awnings of the cafe 'terrasses,' men and women meanwhile standing on chairs and tables waving hats, sticks and handkerchiefs, and expending every ounce of lung energy in shouting 'Vivent les Anglais, Vivent les Indiens.' The quick-witted Indians voiced their gratitude by replying 'Veeve France,' and by making repeated use of a phrase in Hindustani, the intonation of which was suspiciously reminiscent of the British soldier's dearly beloved 'Are we downhearted? No!'

"Our Indian troops, comparable as they are to any martial force in the world, have only one fear, and I have done my best to explain to them that it is absolutely groundless. It is that the war may be over before they get to the front!"

From Mr. Douglas Crawford's article in the Daily Mail we take the following description of the scene in the town in the afternoon, when the troops marched through to the different camping grounds:

"Every man, woman and child in Marseilles turned out, their numbers were swelled by the people who had rushed in from the surrounding country districts, and the streets were seething masses of highly excited humanity. The excitement of the high-strung Latins rapidly spread to the Indians, and it was a unique experience to see hundreds of martial warriors, bearded men whose hair was shot with gray, and beardless youths, jump a yard high in the air for sheer joy. The officers looked on with lenient eye.

"Old women fought with men for the honor of shaking hands with the bronzed soldiers, whom they impartially named 'Anglais' and 'Hindous,' and young women and girls threw sweet-smelling flowers in their path or pinned pink roses in their tunics, in their turbans and even stuck them into the Indians' long hair. In response the dark Eastern eyes beamed a great content, and rows of marvellously white teeth flashed from laughing mouths. The ranks were broken as I am certain they never will be by an enemy, and as hour after hour column after column of soldiers and service wagon after service wagon moved slowly past, a wonderfully impressive picture was presented.

"The enthusiasm of the populace became ecstacy, when a band of swarthy Gurkhas struck up the 'Marseillaise' and played it enchantingly on a weird collection of gourd-like instruments. As one man the crowd crushed the troops on to the pavement, and down a long avenue they marched — horses and mules as well —between the curb and the cafe terraces.

"By evening they were all encamped in picturesque parks, with rocky heights, reminiscent of their far-away hills, around them, and in the moonlight groups of Marseillais stood on all the adjacent roads watching with unflagging interest the strange Eastern rites of these magnificent fighting men from Britain's Great Dominion."

THE FALL WEATHER HARD ON LITTLE ONES

Canadian fall weather is extremely hard on little ones. One day it is warm and bright, and the next wet and cold. These sudden changes bring on colds, cramps and colic, and unless baby's little stomach is kept right the result may be serious. There is nothing to equal Baby's Own Tablets in keeping the little ones well. They sweeten the stomach, regulate the bowels, break up colds, and make baby thrive. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"Fruit-a-tives" Keeps Young And Old In Splendid Health

SCOTLAND, ONT., Aug. 25th. 1913

"Fruit-a-tives" are the only pill manufactured, to my way of thinking. They work completely, no griping whatever, and one is plenty for any ordinary person at a dose. My wife was a martyr to Constipation. We tried everything on the calendar without satisfaction, and spent large sums of money until we happened on "Fruit-a-tives". I cannot say too much in their favor.

We have used them in the family for about two years and we would not use anything else as long as we can get "Fruit-a-tives".

Their action is mild, and no distress at all. I have recommended them to many other people, and our whole family uses them".

Riddles.

Why is a man just imprisoned like a boat full of water? Because he requires bailing out.

Why is a bald head like heaven? Because it is a bright and shining spot and there's no parting there.

What constitutes a genuine frontier costume? The outskirts of civilization.

Why are quinine and gentian like Germans? Because they are two tonics (Teutonics).

Why is my cup of tea stronger than yours? Because it is all my tea (almighty).

What is that which is invisible yet never out of sight? The letter S.

Why is a comprehensive action an affectionate one? Because it embraces everything.

If a man saw his sister fall into a well, why could he not rescue her? Because he could not be a brother and assist her too.

Which are the two most disagreeable letters if you get too much of them? K N (cayenne).

Birds in the Bible.

There are more than forty species of birds spoken of in the Bible. We recall the frequent references to doves, several kinds of them being mentioned. David was hunted as "a partridge in the mountains;" he was "like a pelican in the wilderness," so forlorn did he feel. Again, "I am as a sparrow alone on a housetop;" "As for the stork, the fir tree is her home." Who will not recall the words "wings of the morning," "wings of a dove," "wings of the wind," "wings of the Almighty?"

The Old Woman.

There was an old woman who lived in a hat.
She had a bulldog and a fat tabby cat;
She gave them some broth and a piece of rye bread
And patted them both and sent them to bed.

FOR HOUSEWIVES

Remember that the success of frying depends upon two things—having enough fat to completely cover the articles cooked in it, and having the fat smoking hot.

A good way to use old underwear is to cut them in squares and sew together and make a batting for quilt or lightweight comfort. This is fine and saves the price of batting.

After use all pudding cloths and jelly bags should be washed in very hot water, and when they have been well rinsed hung up to dry where they are exposed to a good draft.

Never throw away cake no matter how dry—but the next time you bake a custard slice it on top before putting into the oven. This makes a delicious caramel crust.

The Kind Of Government He Liked

By JOHN G. LARNED

"In any event, the crown prince must not be exposed," said Von Bernstein.

"Which means that I must lose myself to the world."

The reply was made by Count Esterhoff, on whose person had been found a pack of marked cards. A party of young noblemen and the prince had been playing baccarat. His royal highness had lost heavily, and Esterhoff had won. In order to force the latter to return his winnings the prince, who sat near the winner, slipped the marked pack into his pocket and then accused him of having won his money by cheating. To prove his accusation he demanded that Esterhoff be searched, and the cards were found.

No one was deceived, nor was it intended that any one should be deceived. The scheme was to effect the return of the money the prince had lost to Esterhoff without the heir apparent being obliged to demean himself by accepting it as a gift.

"There is a way out of it if you choose to avail yourself of it," said Bernstein.

"What way?"

"Give up what you have won to the prince and the matter will be hushed up."

"That would be to acknowledge myself guilty. I prefer to appear guilty to the world and preserve my own self respect."

"Nonsense, count. It is our duty to preserve the sovereign from reproach. He belongs to the people. Let them lose confidence in him and what follows? Anarchy."

Esterhoff stood firm. He was excluded from the prince's set on the ground that he had used marked cards. He gave his winnings to the poor, which was considered a proof that his conscience had in the end got the better of him. Under the name of Peter Esterhoff he went to America. His family estates had been lost by his father, and it was his ambition to make money and redeem them.

Twenty years rolled by. The crown prince had become king under the title of Oscar VIII. He had remained a gambler and a spendthrift, though the ill success to recoup his losses with Count Esterhoff had kept him from trying such a method again. During the two decades that had since passed he had become personally bankrupt. All that saved him was that the wealthy nobility, fearing that if he collapsed he would carry the government and them down with him, kept him afloat.

A wealthy American came to the capital and took a residence. He was unmarried and lived entirely alone. Nobody knew why he had come, why he remained or what he did with himself. Bankers knew that he had brought with him unlimited credit from America, and it seemed to them that the money he drew was expended for something, though they did not know what.

One day the king received notice from a lawyer that one of his notes which was due must be paid at once. Oscar forwarded the note through his chamberlain to a noble who had been appointed by the other nobles to take care of the king's debts. The amount was paid, but other similar notices came pouring in so fast that it was found impossible to take care of them. His majesty was informed that there was danger of a public scandal. Many of these claims were for money advanced for illegitimate purposes. The king asked who was pressing them and was told that an American multimillionaire was supposed to be at the bottom of it all.

One morning the American received a "command" to appear at the palace. He replied that he had no wish to visit the king; if the king wished to see him he would find him at home. The next day the royal carriage stopped at the American's house; the king alighted and was received in the drawing room.

"I have called," said Oscar, "to learn the meaning of your having bought up claims against me and pressing them for payment."

"Perhaps your majesty may remember when you were crown prince slipping a pack of marked cards into my pocket."

"Your pocket?"

"I am Count Esterhoff."

The king blanched.

"I have kept those cards," continued Esterhoff, "and would like to sell them to your majesty."

"How much do you ask for them?" inquired Oscar after collecting his faculties.

"Two hundred thousand American dollars for each card."

"Great heavens, man! What do you mean?"

"I mean that in my youth I lived under a system wherein the chief men and women found it to their interest to support injustice. If your people still feel the same in this matter let them raise $10,400,000 and buy the cards. I hold your notes to that amount, and the notes will go with the cards."

After a great effort those whose fortunes depended on the stability of the government raised the amount. As fast as the money came in they would redeem one or more cards and corresponding notes till all were taken up. Then Esterhoff instead of redeeming his family domains went back to America. He said he had no use for a government except of the people, by the people and for the people.

GLIDING o'er the waters blue
In his swift but frail canoe,
Billy Perkins went with Sue—
Sue was rather haughty
He besought the radiant miss
For a teeny-weeny kiss
(Some young men are just like this Though, of course, it's naughty!)

Sue refused him, please take note,
Struggled, overturned the boat
(Dangerousest craft afloat!)—
That was some disaster!
Sue, remember, couldn't swim,
And her chances seemed pretty slim,
But she got a hold on him
Like a sticking plaster.

Billy Perkins rescued her.
She said, "Thank'ee kindly, sir!"
(Still a-sticking like a burr).
Billy Perkins tarried.
"Sweetest girl I ever met,
You are now my one best bet!"
Danger? She has got him yet.
Yes, those two are married.

Fried Vegetables.

The flavor of fried vegetables is much more delicate than that of raw. To prepare them heat two tablespoonfuls of butter for one pint of vegetables cut in cubes. Stir together over the fire until hot; then set where they will cook slowly for one-half hour, stirring often. Place on the hot part of the stove and cook for a few minutes longer. Drain butter and add vegetables to the dish they are to flavor. The herbs most frequently used for seasoning are parsley, chervil, chives, thyme, sage, summer savory and bay leaf. Wash well, place on a clean board and mince fine with a knife. Add to soups or sauces just before serving.

FARMER'S WIFE ALMOST A WRECK

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Her Own Story.

London, Ont.—"I am a farmer's wife and a very busy woman. Last summer I was taken with severe pains in my back so bad that I could not get up or scarcely move without pain, and my periods were painful. My husband called in a good doctor and I was under his care for some time, but he did me little or no good.

One day a friend of mine told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she had been greatly helped by it. I began taking it and soon got well, and my periods became natural again. Since then I have had perfect health. In fact I have never felt so well in my life. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine many women need. If you think this letter will help other women please publish it."—Mrs. K. C. YOUNG, Tambling's Corner, London, Ontario, Canada.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Red Cross Heroines

Folkestone, Oct. 17. — (Despatch to the London Standard)—The few of us who succeeded in escaping from Ostend were rushed and buffeted in the prolonged struggle to reach the boats. Attempts were made to rush the hospital ships in the harbor to which the wounded were being taken from the Kursaal and other hospitals, where Miss Mauder, Miss McNaughton, and other English women were in charge of them. The gendarmerie worked magnificently to preserve order.

Miss McNaughton, who is the well known author of "Rab and His Friends," only arrived in Ostend on Sunday, after a terrible journey from Antwerp. She was a member of the staff of Mrs. Vobart's field hospital, which was installed in the summer concert hall at Antwerp during the heavy bombardment of last Wednesday night, with Dr. Mabel Ramsay, of Prymouth; Miss Deyne and the wounded, and we got them all away somehow next day.

"That awful night," she said, "with shells bursting above and all around the concert hall leaving pits in the garden, our staff was hard at work. One brave girl carried three wounded men on her back down to the cellar. Two men died on the journey west, but we saved the rest. The building was mainly of wood and was in many places chipped and splintered by shell fragments, but not set on fire."

Miss Deyne, having got away the last of the wounded, was left alone at the hospital. Looking over the gate in the twilight of the evening of Thursday—the rest of us had gone with various parties of wounded loaded upon any vehicles we could get hold of—she had almost given up hope of getting out of Antwerp, when a British motor-bus packed with stores rushed past. She hailed the driver, and he, of course, found a place for her. That bus was the last vehicle across the river before the Belgians, retreating, blew up the bridge."

Dr. Renton, of London, another Red Cross worker, who was at the battle of Quasrecht, near Ghent, on Friday, where the Germans left 600 killed and wounded, returned to England with a Red Cross worker who was gravely hurt, himself carrying a wounded man under fire for nearly three miles with Dr. Renton.

"The Germans made no attempt to avoid hitting us," he said. "In fact, they seemed deliberately to fire at us, but we got our man away."

Guns in Trees.

Light guns have, apparently, many advantages, in retreat. In the Galician operations Germany lost several of this class. They had housed them in trees. On retreating the men simply dropped from the trees, leaving the guns in good order, with ammunition below. The Russian invaders then turned these captured Maxims on their former owners.

IN SUPPORT OF THE UNION

Boer Commandants Say Revolt is Blot on Transvaal.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Petoria says:

At a meeting of commandants representing all the free state north of Bloemfontein held at Kroonstad, a resolution was unanimously adopted denouncing the rebellion started in the northwest of the Cape provinces by Col. Maritz as a blot on the honor of the free state. The resolution pledged the fullest support of the commandants to the Government and requested a mobilization of the burghers to crush the rebellion.

"Gen. Jan Christian Smutz, Minister of Defence, thanked the commandants for their tender of support. He explained, however, that a mobilisation was unnecessary as it would put more men in the field than would be needed.

"The action taken by the Kroonstad meeting is considered significant in view of the fact that hitherto the people of the Congo Free State were lukewarm regarding the campaign against the Germans."

LIST ENORMOUS

Casualties Among British Officers Totals 1203.

LONDON, Oct. 17. — An officers' casualty list, which embraces the losses from Sept. 29 to Oct. 5, shows a total in killed, wounded and missing of 116 men.

Added to the previous totals up to Sept. 29, and deducting for wounded men who have died and missing men who have been accounted for, the record shows that since the beginning of the war Great Britain's casualties in officers amounts to 1,203 men, of whom 280 were killed, 625 were wounded and 298 are missing.

BRIGHT, HEALTHY, ATTRACTIVE GIRLS

This Condition Can Only Be Maintained Through Rich, Red Blood

It makes all the difference in the world to a girl whether she develops into a bright, healthy, attractive woman or sinks into a sickly, unhappy, suffering semi-invalid.

The girl whose blood is poor and scanty—who is anaemic, as the doctor terms it—starts life under too great a handicap. She is weaker and more frail than her companions who have rich, red blood. She is more easily fatigued in body and mind, and work of any kind exhausts her. In time her health breaks down. She becomes pale, looks worn out, is languid, irritable, and nervous. Her heart palpitates violently at the least exertion, and she falls behind other girls in looks, health, and a capacity for enjoying life. Abundant rich, red blood is the only thing that can restore good health to the many thousands of such girls. This rich, red blood can only be obtained through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They have given thousands of weak, white-faced, bloodless girls robust, vigorous health and high spirits. Here is a bit of proof. Miss Olive Gauvreau, St. Jerome, Que., says: "I have reason o be more than grateful to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for they restored me to health after more than one doctor and many medicines had failed. I suffered as so many girls do from anaemia. I was all run down, tortured with headaches, could not stand any exertion, and had no appetite, though of course I had to force myself to eat. I was in this condition for nearly two years, and although doctoring constantly, seemed to be steadily growing worse, and I was very much discouraged and despondent. Finally a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I discontinued all other medicines and did so. In the course of a few weeks there was no room to doubt that I had at last found the right medicine. My appetite returned, the headaches began to come less frequently, and color was returning to my face. The continued use of the Pills for a little longer fully restored my health, and I have since been as healhy and acive as anyone could wish. I cannot too strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to other wea kand ailing girls."

You can get these Pills through your medicine dealer or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TEN THOUSAND CHOLERA CASES

ROME, Oct. 17.—A despatch to the Giornale d'Italia from the Austrian frontier says that cholera has assumed frightful proportions in Galicia and Hungary.

"Wednesday in a large town and district in northern Hungary," the despatch says, "there were 10,000 cases among the soldiers and persons having been in contact wth them. The epidemic is extraordinary violent and a large percentage of the stricken persons die after a few hours.

It is asserted that the withdrawal of the Russians from Hungary was due to a desire not to expose themselves to the contagion.

CROWN PRINCE CUT OFF LINE IS BROKEN AND HE MUST FALL BACK

Allies Are Operating Right at Gates of Powerful German Base and Kaiser's Eldest Son is in Serious Danger.

LONDON, Oct. 17. — In distinct contrast to the tragedy of the sea comes most encouraging news from France. All troops of the Kaiser that had penetrated beyond Ypres toward the sea have been driven out of that district, which is now held by strong allied armies. A late report, however, says that a German advance squadron has arrived at Blankenberg, eleven miles north of Ostend.

It is stated positively that the allied line in Belgium extends from Ypres to the coast, thus blocking all attempts at Dunkirk and Calais, over the French border.

On the east of the French line distinct successes are reported. One of these claims that the army of the republic operating in Lorraine is almost within cannon shot of Metz, the great German base.

The position of Crown Prince Frederick William's army is described as extremely perilous. His tenacity in refusing to evacuate St. Mihiel, following his stubbornness before Vitry-le-Francois, has given the French commanders an opportunity to isolate him on at least two sides. On his left flank a huge mass of French troops threatens his line of communications in a grave way. In fact, it is not improbable that he is no longer in touch with Metz.

Being unable to form a juncture with the forces of the Duke of Wurtemburg after the position at Vitry-le-Francois became absolutely untenable, he has occupied a most unfavorable position east of the Argonne since the battle of the Aisne began. Each of his attempts to retrieve the situation has been beaten off, and it now seems that the French have turned their attention to the proud heir of the German throne with a vengeance.

With his front resting on St. Mihiel, on both sides of which the German line is bent backward, the French hold all of the roads from Nancy to Bagny, on the Lorraine frontier, the direct route to Metz. The capture of these roads has been progressing several days, and it would appear that a crisis impends in that region. The town of Etain remains in the crown prince's hands, and it is believed that an attack on that point is even now under way. Its loss to the French would force him to a hurried retreat on his advanced front. He could do nothing but fall back towards Luxemburg.

The following French official communication was issued here last night:

"On our left wing the action continues vigorously. Everywhere we have held our own. At certain points we have gained ground and have occupied Laventie, at the east of Estaires, in the direction of Lille.

"There is no important incident to mention on the other parts of the front, except an unsuccessful attack by the Germans in the region of Malancourt, northwest of Verdun."

The French official announcement of yesterday afternoon follows: "The progress indicated in the communication of yesterday has been confirmed.

"On our left wing the field of action of the allied forces extends at the present time from the region of Ypres to the sea.

"In Russia, on the left bank of the Vistula river, the Russian troops during the day of Oct. 13 repulsed the German attacks on Warsaw and Ivangorod.

"A battle is going on south of Przemysl."

A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Basle says that fierce fighting has taken place in the Vosges passes, in which a German column was hurled back with heavy losses.

The French army is ringing with the stories of their 149th Regiment of Infantry, which has won imperishable glory. After capturing a village at the point of the bayonet, they were driven out by a devastating artillery fire. The regiment retook the village on the following day and maintained themselves, despite a steady cannonade. Finally, German infantry came forward to dislodge them. They were thrown back after a sanguinary conflict and 160 of the attackers taken prisoners.

Not satisfied with this achievement, the same regiment a few days afterward took another village whose defenders had baffled several attacks by other contingents. It was a vital point in the French advance, and only fell after the gallant 149th advanced by yards, digging themselves in as they came, and then pushing on a few more rods. The regiment, particularly deft with the bayonet, finally made a rush for the German trenches, and with their long, wicked bayonets threw the Germans back in a rout. The regiment has been named in orders.

A cable from Copenhagen conveys the information that 300,000 fresh troops are being rushed to the western line of the Germans, the same being new levies which have been raised and trained from material not included in the regular mobilization.

The despatch says that these troops are en route in twenty-eight trains, and that they consist of infantry and artillery, including many horses.

It is stated that the trains bearing these troops were seen at Brandenburg.

AUSTRO-GERMAN ARMY ACTIVE ALONG VISTULA

Fighting Has Taken Place Within Eight Miles of Warsaw and Germans Seem to Have Retrieved Some of the Austrian Disasters—Preliminary Fighting Has Little Bearing Until Main Armies Meet.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The following official communication from the chief of the Russian General Staff was given out in St. Petersburg last night:

"Small engagements have taken place on the front in East Prussia.

"The Austro-German troops on Oct. 15 assumed the offensive all along the front between the Vistula river and Galicia.

"South of Przemysl we captured three Austrian companies and six officers."

The Germans are before Warsaw—in fact fighting has taken place only eight miles from that city—and while their advance to the Niemen was a failure, the forces of Emperor William apparently have retrieved some defeats of the Austrians in Galicia, and advanced as far as Jaroslau, 17 miles northwest of Przemysl.

The German plan seems to be to have two armies advance within the course formed by the Vistula river on the left bank of the river, while two other armies advance round on the right bank to take the defenders of Warsaw on the flank. This, according to Russian accounts, suits the Russian General Staff, who are said purposely to have withdrawn to the Vistula so that they would have the railways at their back, while the roads which at this time of the year are little more than quagmires.

Both sides claim to have gained advantages in the preliminary fighting, but these victories and defeats can have little effect on the general result of the battle in which it is estimated nearly 5,000,000 men are engaged. The Russians, it is said, have 2,500,000 men and the Austro-German force is declared to total nearly 2,000,000. The armies cover a front of nearly 300 miles.

Battle Will Last Weeks.

PARIS, Oct. 17.—The Austro-German army which is moving against the Russian army in Poland consists of nearly 1,200,000 men, according to the following Petrograd despatch to The Matin to-day:

"Four columns, including one of Austrian troops, are marching against the Russians. The first is moving via Lodz against Warsaw, the second toward Sandomir, the third against Ivangorod and the fourth (made up of Austrian troops) along the Vistula.

"There are twenty German army corps and eight Austrian army corps in the advancing host. Against these forces more than one million Russians are under arms.

"The battle is expected to last for several weeks, but furious fighting is already under way. The Germans have suffered one reverse."

Girls Dug Trenches.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—A despatch to the Reuter's Telegram Co. from Petrograd, says:

"To the local peasantry, among them many girls, is attributed, in part, the failure of the German attempts to cross the Vistula during the recent fighting. The girls aided the Russian soldiers by digging trenches."

NEUTRALITY VIOLATED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, called the attention of Acting Secretary of State Lansing yesterday to alleged violations of neutrality in the Philippines, where, he said, the British Government believed various German ships had been coaled at sea from Manila. Enquiry was directed immediately by the State Department to the authorities at Manila.

Swam the Vistula.

A gallant feat is recorded of 40 Russian scouts, operating against the retiring Austro-German forces. Under cover of darknes they swam the river Vistula, a wide stream, and set fire to large quantities of the enemy's supplies, especially commissariat laden on barges. This feat was one of the causes of distress of the retiring Austrians, who were compelled to depend on the three days' emergency rations which each man carries.

PLEASED TO BE ASHORE

Canadian Troops Give Vent to Delight.

PLYMOUTH, Oct. 17.—Residents round the railway stations at Plymouth, who sought their beds before the small hours, had a strange lullaby in the uproarious demonstrations of the Canadian contingent, who were being packed into troop trains and sent inland. The men were half frantic with delight at release from the troop ship.

The work of entraining went on right into the small hours. None of the men were aware of their destination.

In a leading article on the arrival of the Canadian troops, The Daily Mail pays Canada a splendid tribute. "What Plymouth was privileged to witness was something more than the arrival of so many thousands of hardy natural soldiers." The paper says it was a living picture of the Empire in action, the scattering of all illusions of imperial disintegration with which the Germans have amused themselves. This was a spectacle hardly to be paralleled since the Crusades.

"The presence of this splendid body of men," says The Daily News, "is an an inspiration and assurance that however long the war lasts there can be but one end to the struggle. These Canadian troops are the practical embodiment of Empire devotion."

Everybody Loves A Lady Fair

And a Lady Can Have a Fair, Clear Complexion by Using Stuart's Calcium Wafers After Each Meal.

You women ought to hear some men rave over a beautifully clean and shell clear skin. There is nothing that so charms a man or a woman as this. Where there are pimples, blotches, liver spots, etc., the blood is diseased and filled with impurities. Clean the blood and these effects disappear at once. That is what Stuart's Calcium Wafers do almost beyond belief.

"She Was a Pimply Person Once Upon a Time."

Stuart's Calcium Wafers are known to hundreds of thousands of men and women. Perhaps some of the faces you admire now were made beautifully free from skin blemishes by Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

You won't be always worrying about what your friends and strangers think of your "broken-out" face, if you give these wonderful little wafers a chance.

That's because they go right to the seat of the trouble, the blood, driving out all impurities, strengthening it, toning it up. And when the blood is clear the skin is free from blemish.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers are perfectly harmless and may be taken freely by any one. They contain absolutely no mercury, no poisonous drugs, no opiates.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers contain Calcium Sulphide, and a mild alternative — every doctor prescribes them a hundred times a year. They are the most effective blood-cleansers known to man.

It doesn't matter whether you have blackheads and pimples "something awful," or boils, tetter, rash, carbuncles, eczema, liver spots or a muddy complexion, try Stuart's Calcium Wafers and get a surprise in a short time.

Buy a box from your druggist anywhere. All druggists keep them in stock. Price 50 cents. A small sample package will be mailed free to any one who will address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

TORONTO MAN PRESIDENT OF BAPTIST CONVENTION

Mr. Jas. Ryrie Succeeds Rev. Dr. Norton — Delegates Pray for Universal Peace

Toronto, Oct. 17.—A special devotional service, lasting 45 minutes, was held at the opening of the afternoon session of the Baptist convention yesterday, in Walmer Road church, to invoke special intercession on behalf of the Empire during the days of its perilous national crisis. The service was conducted by Rev. T. T. Shields, of Jarvis Street church, who read an appropriate lesson from the Scriptures, and called upon Canada to await the ultimate result with patience and a firm faith in God that truth and righteousness and freedom would triumph. Several fervent prayers were also made by the ministerial delegates.

The feature of the session was the election of a new head of the church for Ontario and Quebec to succeed Rev. Dr. Norton, whose term expires this year. The unanimous choice of the convention was Mr. James Ryrie, of Toronto, who was returned amid great enthusiasm. Mr. Ryrie was formerly second vice-president.

The following were also elected as officers: First vice-president, Rev. W. T. Graham; second vice-president, C. Book, Brantford; secretary-treasurer, Rev. C. E. MacLeod.

The report of the senate and board of governors of McMaster University was delivered by Chancellor McCrimmon. The total enrollment of students was given as 556. The chancellor called attention to the fact that the attendance was smaller than last year, and called for an enthusiastic co-operation between the church and the university. The report of Moulton College also showed a slight decrease in the number of students attending, while it was stated that the receipts were about $100 less. The total university receipts were given as $132,000. It was announced that there was a deficit in the current account, which came to about $2,000. There was a slight increase in the amount given by the churches.

"There was an impression abroad that the educational work connected with the church would not require funds," said Dr. Sanderson, "but that is a false impression. The church must stand behind its university, colleges and educational institutions at all times, and especially during this time of financial depression. Only 50 per cent. of the churches made any offering for Christian education last year. There should be an annual contribution from this source of at least $10,000."

The following were elected to the board of governors: A. A. Ayer, W. E. Robertson, B.A., S. J. Moore and F. Sanderson, M.A., L.L.A. At the conclusion of the elections Miss Ellis, principal of Moulton College, was introduced to the convention.

Christian Education.

An eloquent address was given by Rev. Dr. Truett, of Dallas, Texas. He spoke on the theme of "How to Know Jesus Better." The speaker paid high tribute to McMaster University and declared that Christian education was even more essential than secular education. In concluding, Rev. Dr. Truett gave a strong evangelical message to the convention.

The report of the committee on social service was presented by Rev. M. C. MacLean, who explained at length the principles for which the movement stands. It was decided to pass a budget of $1,500 for this department. The treasurer's report showed that the receipts for the preceding 11 months amounted to $1,550 and the disbursements to $1,000.

"We all pray that a great nation of Europe may be saved from suicide—strategic, moral and intellectual suicide," said Rev. Dr. Mabie, of Boston, in opening his addres to the morning session. Rev. Dr. Mabie spoke on the "Old Testament Testimony to the Missions." He also said that the Baptists should be praying that Europe might be saved from itself and that a permanent peace should follow the great war.

The report of the western mission board showed that there was a membership of 16,866 in 250 churches. It dwelt upon the recent financial stringency, and said that it was felt more severely in the west than in the east, and said that it would be necessary for the eastern churches to assist the struggling prairie missions.

The following were elected to fill vacancies on the board: Rev. D. Brown, N. Mills and Rev. A. MacLean. Rev. A. Cooke was elected to fill out the term of the late Dr. Grant.

The report of the Grande Ligne mission board was presented by Rev. D. W. Terry, who declared that the work accomplished during the year was excellent.

German "Culture" Condemned.

The Kaiser and the militant party of Prussia were severely arraigned by Chancellor McCrimmon, of McMaster University, in an address delivered at the evening session of the Baptist convention on "Christian Education."

Chancellor McCrimmon spoke first on the British empire's Estimate of the Kaiser, and of the ideals for which he stood. The religious platitudes which he included in his messages to his family were strongly condemned. "The war is the result of the insatiable ambition of one man," said the speaker, "and this one man has succeeded in filling the hearts of his party with the lust of conquest. On the hearts of the German people is written the words, 'Conquerors of Europe,' but on the heart of the Kaiser is written, 'Conqueror of the World.' He imagines himself a second Napoleon, but a Napoleon who succeeded in his dreams of founding a world-wide empire."

The speaker condemned the Prussian "culture." He said that the government had the universities and colleges under its control, and that they wielded public thought to suit its desires. The reason that the people of Germany so cheerfully followed the lead of the militant party was that the heart of Prussian culture was wrong. The educational system, said the chancellor, does not rise higher than the philosophy from which it springs, and if God is not in the philosophy, He is not in the education. In the young man who knows how to organize his own soul after the philosophy of God is to be found the future savior of the nations."

DECISION FOR NEGATIVE SIDE

In Debate at Meeting of the Normal School Literary Society

President Rorke presided at the regular meeting of the Normal School Literary Society yesterday afternoon, and in a debate "resolved that in the last fifty years, railroads have done more for the world than steamships" the negative speakers, Mr. Poast, Miss Mowat and Miss Parker were given the decision. Mr. Walker and Miss Rannie were the judges.

The affirmative was upheld by Mr. Copp, Miss Williamson and Miss Taugher.

A vocal trio by Miss Pillsworth, Miss Nickols and Miss Ruttan and an instrumental selection by Miss Wragg, were enjoyed.

Merchants Object to Assessment

Many Appeals Before Court of Revision.

The court of revision will be held on Novemer 3 at 8 p.m. in the council chamber, when all appeals against city assessments will be heard. The list of appeals is made up mostly by the members of the Retail Merchants' Association. This organization intends making a strong bid for the lowering of the assessment in the business section of the city. At a meeting of the council some time ago City Solicitor Gordon was instructed to secure the services of efficient valuators and uphold the assessment as made by the assessor. This year's sitting of the revision court will, it is expected, prove exceedingly interesting.

HIS SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY

Dr. Walmsley Has Been Successful in Osteopathic Treatment

Dr. A. G. Walmsley, osteopathic physician, is to-day celebrating the seventh anniversary of his coming to Peterborough. Possibly not a dozen people of Peterborough knew anything about osteopathy—the treatment of disease by spinal adjustment—when Dr. Walmsley came here seven years ago. To-day nearly everybody is familiar with the word osteopathy and knows something about the treatment.

Dr. Walmsley is the pioneer osteopathic physician, not only of Peterborough but of Central Ontario. He is a graduate and post graduate of the American School of Osteopathy—the parent school—under the founder of the science, Dr. A. T. Still.

Dr. A. T. Still celebrated his 86th birthday on August 6 last. He enjoys good health, notwithstanding his advanced age. He is president of the American School of Osteopathy of Kirksville, Missouri, and takes a deep interest in all that pertains to the welfare of the profession.

Osteopathy is practiced in all parts of the civilized world. The practice is protected by legislative enactment in every state of the American Union and in several of the provinces of Canada. Dr. Still announced his discovery of osteopathy to the world in 1874, but it was not until 1892 that he started the American School of Osteopathy. There are now seven colleges known as the Associated Colleges of Osteopathy, all of which are situated in the United States. Since the founding of the first college there have been graduated betwen 8,000 and 9,000 osteopathic physicians, of whom about 7,000 are now in active practice. There are now 2,000 students in osteopathic colleges.

Dr. Walmsley has found educating the people of Peterborough and surrounding country as to the merits and scope of osteopathy uphill work, but his efforts have been rewarded by a constantly increasing practice. In fact his practice has grown to such an extent that a few months ago he found it necessary to look for larger offices. He is now in the Sun Life Building, corner Hunter and Water streets, where he has a large and splendid suite of offices.

In adition to the seven colleges of osteopathy mentioned, the American Osteopathic Association has established a large Research Institute in the city of Chicago. The object of this institute is to examine into and prove the merits of old as well as new theories and methods of treating disease. The A. T. Still Research Institute is endowed and supported by the osteopathic profession. It is the only research institute in the world that is supported solely by members of the profession it represents.

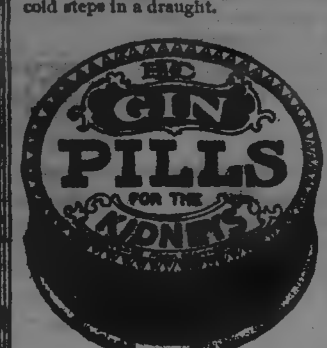
Fine Old Gentleman Suffered 40 Years With His Kidneys

He even had Hemorrhages from the Kidneys, so you may know how bad he was. Yet today, at 67 years, Mr. Allen is able to do a good day's work or enjoy a long drive without the least pain. This is what Gin Pills did for him. They will do as much for you if you have any Kidney or Bladder Trouble.

Port Elgin, N.B. November 12th.

"I feel it my duty, for the sake of those afflicted with similar troubles, to send you these few lines about Gin Pills. I am about 67 years old and have been troubled with Kidney Trouble since I was 25 years old. This was brought on by my getting over-heated and then sitting on cold steps in a draught.



At last, I had Hemorrhages of the Kidneys. I went to three doctors and tried most everything on the market but got no relief. I got very weak, had pain and lameness in the Back; often, I had to lie down during the day and it hurt me to be on a waggon. I began to think there was no help for me. The bleeding continued for 16 months until I just happened to try Gin Pills which has now put an end to the trouble.

Now I can look back over 15 months at my relief from suffering and anxious care. I can do a lot of chores, drive all day, have no pain, although I am still taking 2 pills a week as they seem to make things easier."

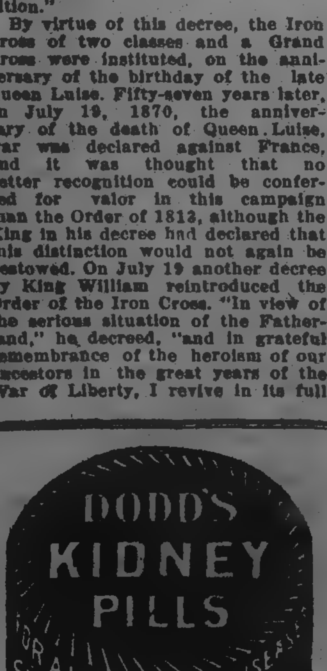
IRON CROSS SAID TO COME FROM CAPTURED GUNS

Kaiser's Decoration is Similar in Design to the Victoria Cross

It is reported that already 38,000 German soldiers have received the Iron Cross for conspicuous gallantry in the field. This German decoration, which is similar in design to our Victoria Cross, is said to be cast out of guns captured in war, and in this connection carries its resemblance to our decoration a little further, inasmuch as it is said that the Victoria Cross is made out of guns captured in the Crimea. The Prussian Order was instituted on March 10, 1813, by Frederick William III. Its inception was due to Gneisenau, who in 1811 proposed to the King a general rising against Napoleon, and suggested that all men who served with distinction in the field should be decorated with a black and white scarf or a national cockade. The King, however, favored an emblem in the shape of two pieces of black and white ribbon sewn in the form of a cross on the breast of the coat. The designs against Napoleon did not mature until after Moscow in 1813, and in that year the Iron Cross was instituted, as it was thought that a decoration of metal would be more suitable. On March, 1813, the King of Prussia decreed that "in the present critical state of affairs, on which depends everything for the country, the brave spirit which the nation has so grandly shown deserves to be honored and to be commemorated by some special form of recognition. We have therefore resolved specially to distinguish the merit which in the war now about to break out shall be displayed, either in actual fight with the enemy, or in the field or at home, in connection with this great struggle for freedom and independence, and after this war not again to bestow this special form of recognition."

By virtue of this decree, the Iron Cross of two classes and a Grand Cross were instituted, on the anniversary of the birthday of the late Queen Luise. Fifty-seven years later, on July 19, 1870, the anniversary of the death of Queen Luise, war was declared against France, and it was thought that no better recognition could be conferred for valor in this campaign than the Order of 1813, although the King in his decree had declared that this distinction would not again be bestowed. On July 19 another decree by King William reintroduced the Order of the Iron Cross. "In view of the serious situation of the Fatherland," he decreed, "and in grateful remembrance of the heroism of our ancestors in the great years of the War of Liberty, I revive in its full meaning and importance the Order of the Iron Cross instituted by my father, now in rest with God. The Iron Cross will be given without distinction of rank or position as a reward for merit, gained either in actual fight with the enemy or at home, in connection with this war for the honor and independence of the beloved country."

Both classes of the Iron Cross have a precisely similar black cross of cast iron with silver edging. On the front there is not any inscription. The front face of the cross of 1913 is bare of any insignia. On the reverse of the cross of 1870-71 is a crown and th date 1870. In the centre is a "W.," the initial of the Christian name of the then King of Prussia. The cross of 1813 bore the initials "F. W." In the centre of the cross are three oak leaves, and the presence on the Order today of the dates 1813 and 1870-71 indicates that the soldier upon whom it is conferred participates by right in the honors of the previous wars. The Grand Cross can only be received by a commander who has been victorious in a decisive battle after which the enemy has evacuated his position, or who has captured an important fortress, or by a commander who has unflinchingly defended a fortress which has not fallen into the enemy's hands. The Iron Cross is borne on the standards and colors of the troops, and, like the Victoria Cross in our army, its bestowal is not confined to any one rank. In the campaign of 1813 331 first-class and 6,639 second class crosses were awarded, and six years later it was reported that the cross was worn by 9,136 soldiers and that there were 6,813 inheritors of the decoration. After the Franco-German War of 1870 the number of crosses distributed totalled nearly 50,000. Of this number 3,000 were crosses with the white ribbon with black edging, indicating that they had not been awarded for services against the enemy.



SUNDAY SCHOOL FORCES OF ONTARIO TO MEET

The Sunday School forces of Ontario will meet this year again in Dual Conventions. It is the 49th Anniversary. The two sections for 1914 will be (Section A) at London, October 27-30, and (Section B) at Kingston, November 4-6. These conventions of the Ontario Sunday School Association are becoming so popular that 82 applications for credentials (delegates' privileges) were on file in the Association office before any specific advertising material was issued.

The plan of programme this year is calculated to undertake fewer things and do them more thoroughly. Four phases of the work of Sunday Schools is to be thoroughly dealt with:— the Elementary Division (under 12 yrs.); the Teen Age; The The general tone of programme is minister, and the Superintendent, strong on lines of evangelism.

The Provincial talent available is supplemented by Mrs. H. M. Leyda, who for over ten years led the Elementary work in Illinois State, and John L. Alexander of the International Sunday School force, Chicago, Ill. Mr. Alexander has recently issued three books on "The Sunday School and the Teens," and is recognized as a leader without superior.

IS SENT UP FOR TRIAL

Story of Fatal Shooting of Frank Hartley

St. Catharines, Ont., Oct. 17. — Police Magistrate Campbell committed Private Frank Hartley for trial last yesterday afternoon on the charge of murdering Private Theodore Burgoyne of 19th Regiment, while on guard duty on Welland Canal, October 7th.

Sergeant Clarence Burgoyne, brother of the victim, said he heard a shot behind the lock house on the canal and running down saw his brother lying dead on the ground. "I jumped on Hartley and choked him, but they pulled me off," said the witness.

Corporal John Johns, who took Hartley to headquarters after his arrest, and Corporal David Ballantyne, another member of the squad, both asserted that Hartley said "I did not know the gun was loaded." Ballantyne added that Hartley turned to Private Wellens, another guard, and said, "If you're an Englishman, save me."

Burgoyne Said "Shoot."

Private Leonard Washer, who was present at the shooting, said Hartley complained to him that Sergeant Burgoyne "had a pick on him." He said Teddy Burgoyne came up and asked what was the matter. Hartley told him he was an Englishmen and nothing could be put over on him.

"Well, I'm a Canadian and proud of it," said Burgoyne.

"I'll shoot you," said Hartley, and raising his rifle he shot the boy dead, according to this eye-witness.

Private Albert J. Martyn said he heard Hartley say "I'll shoot you." Teddy Burgoyne came to attention and said "Shoot away."

The "Wrong" Burgoyne.

Hartley took him at his word and fired. Martyn showed that there was an indicator on the rifle to show whether it is loaded or not. It was strictly against the rules to have rifles loaded except in case of emergency.

Chief of Police Greene testified that Hartley after being warned told him he had shot Burgoyne, but that he had got the wrong Burgoyne.

CROP STATISTICS FOR DOMINION

Fall Plowing Will be Greater Than Usual

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—A bulletin issued by the Census and Statistics Office gives provisional estimates of the yield and quality of the principal Canadian grain crops, and also the condition of root and fodder crops, as compiled from reports of correspondents made on September 30.

In general the reports confirm the statement issued last month, the average yields per acre being about the same as then estimated for wheat, but being somewhat less for oats, barley and flax.

The total yields for Canada of the principal grain crops in bushels are as follows: Wheat 158,223,000, oats 311,426,000, barley 34,491,000, rye 2,258,000, peas 3,537,100, beans 823,400, buckwheat 9,159,000, flaxseed 7,533,000, mixed grains 16,458,000, and corn for husking 14,732,000.

The average quality of the grain crops at harvest time, measured upon a percentage basis,—100 representing grain well headed, well filled, well saved and unaffected to any appreciable extent by frost, rust, smut, etc.,—is for the whole of Canada as follows: Wheat 78, oats 79, barley 76, rye 82, peas 75, beans 82, buckwheat 81, mixed grains 90, flax 64 and corn for husking 80. For wheat, barley and oats the figures are considerably below the excellent record of last year, the averages this year being reduced by the prolonged drought in the Northwest provinces. In these provinces the points for the quality of wheat, oats and barley range from 48 for barley in Saskatchewan to 78 for spring wheat in Alberta.

In the Maritime Provinces both the yield and quality of the grain crops are excellent.

The condition of root crops at September 30 is for all Canada about equal to last year, being 75 per cent. of a standard or full crop of potatoes, 78 p.c. for turnips, 80 p.c. for mangolds, carrots, etc., 89 p.c. for sugar beets, 90 p.c. for fodder corn and 76 p.c. for alfalfa. In Manitoba and Saskatchewan the condition of the root crops is low owing to the drought. In Northern Alberta, where the season was of more normal character, these crops make a fair showing.

During September conditions have been generally favourable for harvesting and threshing, and in the Northwest provinces a great deal of threshing was completed by October 1. There are indications that the amount of fall plowing this year will be greater than usual.

Yawning Fish.

The mouth of the turbot is twisted to one side, rather as if it had belonged to a round fish which some one had accidentally trod on and squashed half flat. The yawn begins at the lips, which open as if to suck in water. Then the jaws become distended, and it is seen that this is going to be a real, genuine fish's yawn. But the yawn goes on, works through the back of its head, distending the plates of the skull, and comes out at the gills, which, open, show the red inside and are inflated for a moment, and then, with a kind of stretching shiver of its back, the fish flattens out again.—London Mail.

TALES TOLD BY MEN IN THE FIGHTING LINES ON LAND AND ON SEA

WORSE THAN THE RACK.

Corroboration of the shocking ill-treatment of our wounded soldiers by the Germans is supplied in a letter sent by an officer in the British Army. The letter says:

The R.A.M.C. has suffered terribly in its loss of officers. The Berso fired upon the Red Cross; but one would have expected something different from the "higher civilization" of "William's gentlemen." We have had to contend with the most inhuman treatment of our wounded. These Prussian "hogs" not only fire upon our ambulance convoys, but loot and maim our wounded. We have found them with bayonet thrusts through wrists and ankles, and in many cases "hamstrung." The poor fellows have admitted being attacked by these prowlers as they lay wounded. After the battle of Meaux one of our surgeons—familiarly known as "Dare-devil ——" put paid, with but five men, to a looting party of ten Germans, Capt. ——was in charge and a convoy of wounded and ten men, when he spied these wretches busily engaged upon their awful business. The doctor called a halt, and they were immediately fired upon by the Germans. One of the doctor's party dropped. This decided our "dare-devil." He ordered the wagon forward under four men, and with his five remaining gave chase. The Germans fired on the little party at random; then fled for their lives—but too late! Our little party accounted for nine; the tenth man got away. The doctor's share, I believe, was two, but he doesn't care to be reminded of it. He can use a sword as deftly as he would a lancet! Poor chap, he was shot out of the wagon —through the horses bolting later— and badly injured. Invalided home, I believe.

AGONY OF THE DUM-DUM.

An English nurse in charge of an Antwerp hospital ward writes:

We were prepared to take in up to 50 wounded, but on Saturday morning there was a terrific battle just outside the town; 1,900 wounded were brought in in a steady stream. From 10 a.m. Saturday till 2.30 Sunday we never stopped preparing beds and lifting wounded on to them. I don't think anything in the way of horrors will ever turn us after this experience. The pluck of some of these men is marvellous. One man, who had the whole palm of his hand shattered by a dum-dum, never flinched while it was being dressed—the only sign he showed of his agony was to gradually get paler and paler, until he was at the point of fainting. By then the hand was finished, so he was kept going with brandy. One poor officer boy who came in was shot in about 20 places, absolutely shattered, and died almost at once.

SANG HYMN IN THE SEA.

A finely-built fellow from H.M.S. Cressy saved not only his own life, but that of the Commander of the Hogue, says a Harwich correspondent.—

"I was floating about four hours," he told me; "clinging to a stool, for we had thrown nearly everything overboard to the crews of the Aboukir and Cressy, and had little left for ourselves. I was hanging on to this stool and saw the commander.

"I seized him, and together we hung on to the stool. He was about done up, but I told him we were all right; we should soon be picked up. I helped him all I could, but thought more than once that he would have to let go. We were both picked up, but he was about finished. He shook me warmly by the hand and took my name and rating."

"That was nothing," the sailor went on. "What upset me more than anything was the sight of about a dozen fellows clinging to a piece of raft. They were holding on to one another, and were all singing "Nearer my God to Thee." I saw a wave strike this raft, and when I looked again I could see only three men there. That sight almost finished me."

Dry or tough meats can often be made tender and of a good flavor by braising. They are shut in a close covered pot, with salt pork, stock and chopped vegetables, and cooked slowly in the confined steam.

When baking meats the oven should be very hot at first, and then the heat should be slowly lowered to allow the cooking to be done slowly. Keep a piece of asbestos on hand to interpose between a dish and the hottest part of the oven when there is danger of burning.

Equipment Holds Up Second Force

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—Numerous inquiries have been made as to the date of publication of the list of officers of the first Canadian division. They were selected, at least provisionally, at Valcartier and the list has since come to Ottawa but it is now intimated that it may not be published until advices are received from England as to the classification of the different units and the corps to which the officers will be assigned following training there.

The department has received no further advices respecting the second force. It is apparent that the second contingent of 22,000 will not be mobilized or sent abroad before January. It is not that so much time is required to enlist the men, but the equipment is what calls for delay. Clothing, blankets, rifles and many kinds of equipment have to be manufactured and dealt out before the contingent can go.

FEDS STILL ALIVE AND KICKING SAYS GILMORE

St. Louis, Oct. 17.—James Gilmore, president of the Federal League, who attended a show-down meeting of local Federals, held here, is quoted as saying:

That the St. Louis Federals lost $45,000 on the season, not counting their holdings, but would fight it out next year. No change or transfer of franchise is contemplated.

That Brooklyn, Kansas City and Pittsburg clubs of the Federal League also lost money, while Chicago, Buffalo and Baltimore got by with profits.

That the Federals have secured the signatures of fourteen players now with the major leagues to contracts for next season.

That the league is not ready to quit, and that it will force recognition from organized baseball, although not seeking it.

That Cleveland alone in the American League lost more money than all the Federal League clubs combined.

That the Feds. have obtained minor league affiliations for next season.

That the new organization will be every bit as fast a league as it was before.

Before the meeting it was rumored that the meeting was about to witness the retirement of the St. Louis club from the field. This rumor is steadfastly denied, and supplemented by one which declares the team is here to stay.

HANK GOWDY STARTED IN AS BAT BOY

Tried out by Manager McGraw of the Giants, found wanting and sent to the International League, only to be yanked back to fast company when George Stallings took charge of the Braves last season, is the record of Hany (Henry) Gowdy, the big batting noise in this year's world's series games between the Bostons and the Athletics. And to think of it! Only a few years ago Gowdy was the bat boy for the Columbus American association league team. It was then that Hank dreamed of some day becoming a big league star, but even in his most rosy dreams it is doubtful if he ever imagined himself being the hero of the world's championship fight. Hans probably limited his dreams to picturing the days when he would be a member of a major league club—and let it go at that.

When Gowdy—he should be called Rowdy Gowdy because of the rough way he wields the bat—came to the Giants he was a first baseman. He was too big and clumsy to navigate around the first sack, so the Little Napoleon started remodelling him into a backstop. But John had too many catchers and didn't have time to await Gowdy's developments, so he soon elected him to the membership of the Order of the Can.

Gowdy's wonderful batting in Monday's game and also the opening affair in Philadelphia will probably go down in baseball history as the best ever. At any rate his stock work on Monday is the best in the annals of the world's series games. Two two-baggers and a home-run, all of which figured in the run-getting, is his record for the occasion. He makes Home-run Baker's showing with this stick against the Giants look tame in comparison.

Hank's parents went all the way from their home in Columbus, Ohio, to see Monday's game. It was against Hank's expressed wish, too. He wrote them that he would be nervous if he knew they were in the stand—they "sneaked" into the game—that's how they put it—and when their red-haired son cracked out the hits that enabled his side to score their third straight victory, they were the proudest parents on earth.

Mr. Gowdy is a real fan. He once played professional ball in Cincinnati. He and Mrs. Gowdy refer to Hank as "the boy."

"He's a 'home boy,'" said Mrs. Gowdy. "When he's at home he helps me with the dishes and is such a comfort. Now don't you tell him we're here to see him play. We're going to tell him today after the game."

LOUIE SCHETTLER HANDS DEFEAT TO THE PIRATES

Louis Schettler, the Peterborough twirler, held the Pittsburg Pirates to seven hits and beat them 10 to 6 in a game at Greenville on Wednesday. Schettler pitched for the Greenville club, while Mully Miller, the Peterborough catcher, was behind the bat. Curly Blount also played right field for the Greenville team. Schettler was only scored on in two innings. In the first inning the Pirates scored two runs, and in the seventh, with the score 10 to 2 against them, Kelly hit a home run with the bases full. Curly Blount scored three of the ten Greenville runs. The Pirates are barnstorming through Pennsylvania at the present time.

Hungarian Clergy Flee.

VENICE, Oct. 17.—(Via Paris.)—At the first approach of the Russians into Hungary, many bishops and members of the clergy fled from the threatened districts to Budapest. The prince primate of Hungary, Johan Csernoch, has now addressed a circular to the clergy strictly forbidding them under any circumstance to leave their posts.

Tried To Wreck Train.

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 17.—An attempt was made to wreck the evening train leaving Ogdensburg in the south on the N. Y. C. R., a short distance out of the city, when a tie braced with planking, was placed across the rails. An employe noticed the obstruction in time to clear it before the arrival of the train.

FELL BEFORE BETTER TEAM

But Individually the Athletics Hold First Rank

The Athletics were not a better baseball team than the Braves in this series, says Sanborn in the Chicago Tribune. They were and still are a great team, but the Stallings' machine proved its superiority beyond question. That does not mean that the Braves outfit is composed of greater ball players than the Mackmen are individually. Stop and think how many of the Athletics you would trade even up for the corresponding players on the Boston team if you owned the Shibe outfit. You probably would be glad to swap Bender and Plank for Jones and Rudolph. No sane manager would decline to give Schang for Gowdy on the strength of their showing this week and last, but Schang was almost as startling a youngster a year ago as Gowdy is today.

There was no denying that fighting spirit. It was bound to prevail over the phlegmatic Mackmen and it did prevail, because there was never one instant's let up; never a second in which the Braves seemed to think they had a game clinched until the last man was out.

Chicago, Oct. 16. — From practically every standpoint the baseball season has been a bad one. The standard of performance on the diamond and of discipline among the players was below that of any previous year for more than a decade. The public was quick to detect the difference, and in connection with the business depression accentuated by the European war, this produced a decrease in patronage which was noticeable from the start.

The increased salaries made necessary by the baseball war waged by the Federal League added to the cost of operation, while receipts were reduced, and the result was a deficit in the exchequers of all except a few of the clubs of both major leagues and most minor leagues.

Managers have found it difficult to enforce discipline either on or off the diamond on account of the existence of an "outlaw" league eager to tempt players to its clubs. A still greater force for disorganization among players has been the players' fraternity, which has given the players a club to wield over the heads of their managers whenever punishment has been inflicted for getting out of condition or failing to "try" on the playing field.

MONTREAL BOY MASCOT.

Newsboy Who Stowed Away on Transport Seeks To Be Bugler.

SALISBURY, Eng., Oct. 17.—When the supply convoy first hove into view here yesterday a tiny wisp of a lad was discovered on one of the caissons. He was blowing lustily on a battered bugle, the cracked notes flaring up in a strange crescendo. Around his shoulders was a big overcoat loaned him by a grizzled sergeant. The youngster is a Montreal newsboy who stowed away on one of the ships and who has become the pet of the contingent. He put in every spare moment on shipboard practicing the bugle and hoped to qualify as a performer on that instrument in order that he may follow the troops to France.

German Demands on Antwerp.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The Amsterdam correspondent of Reuter's sends a despatch in which he quotes Councillor Langnor of Antwerp as describing the situation in Antwerp as follows:

"Antwerp now has a garrison of 17,000 marines and 200 officers commanded by an admiral. As a war contribution the Germans demanded 300 hundredweight of potatoes daily, 2,000 bottles of wine, bread for the whole garrison, 85,000 cigars, 8,500 kilograms of meat, and pay for the officers and soldiers estimated at $10,000 daily."

German War Fund Appeal

Here is the appeal in which Germans were urged to subscribe to the national war loan, as published in the Berliner Lokal-Anzeiger of Sept. 10, in the first uneasy days after the check of the movement against Paris:

"We stand against a world in arms. From the neutral countries abroad financing help worthy of the name cannot be expected. For the creation of money also we are thrown upon our own strength. This strength exists, and will prove itself, even as it does out in the field before the enemy, also within the orders of the German Fatherland, now when it is necessary to provide funds wherewith to carry on its battle for existence and for its place in the world.

"The victories already won by our splendid army in the east and in the west justify the hope that this time, as in 1870-71 the costs and burdens of this war will finally fall upon those who have Empire.

"But for the time being we must help ourselves.

"Great things are at stake. The enemy still hopes for salvation through our supposed financial weakness. The success of this loan must destroy that hope.

"German capitalists, show that you are inspired with the same spirit as our heroes who shed their life-blood in the battle! German savers, show that you have saved not merely for yourselves, but also for the Fatherland! German corporations, institutions, savings banks, companies—you who have grown up and flourished under the powerful protection of the Empire—show the Empire your gratitude in this hour so heavy with fate! German banks and bankers, show what your brilliant organization, your influence upon your customers, can accomplish.

"It is not even a sacrifice that is being demanded of you. There is being offered to you at cheap rates securities of conspicuous safety with excellent interest.

"Let no one say that he lacks liquid assets. Through the War Loan Fund ample provision has been made that the necessary moneys can be made liquid. Every German with a mind devoted to the Fatherland must take upon himself without the least hesitation at this time a passing loss of interest. The German savings bank will generously waive toward depositors who withdraw their moneys for this purpose, their right of deduction for premature withdrawals."

Under the auspices of various German newspapers in Berlin and other cities, collections of coins gathered by Germans throughout the years are eing turned into a "Dead Capital" fund, which is to be converted into "Live Capital" for the relief and comfort of the soldiers in the field, according to an announcement in the Lokal-Anzeiger. The newspaper appeals for the collection of canes for the convalescent wounded, pointing out that the walking sticks will prove far more useful in supporting those who have been injured in defence of the Fatherland than in dandified flourishings along the avenues and boulevards.

Ottawa Gets Fire Chiefs' Convention

Stratford, Ont., Oct. 17.—The Ontario Fire Chiefs' Association yesterday morning elected the following officers:

President — Chief Earl, Milton; Vice-President, Chief Graham, Ottawa; Secretary, Ex-Chief Finch, Guelph; treasurer, Chief Keyes, Galt.

Directors: Chief Aitken, London, Chief Armstrong, Kingston, Chief Thompson, Toronto.

Ottawa was selected as the next place of meeting.

Chief Aitken, London, will represent the association at the International Fire Chiefs' Association.

"George," said Hilda, looking up from the morning paper which she was reading, "it says here that another octogenarian's dead. What is an octogenarian?"

"Well, I don't know what they are, but they must be very sickly creatures. You never hear of them but they are dying."—Kansas City Star.

The directors of the Protestant Home intend holding a jam and pickle shower on Tuesday afternoon, October 20th, from 4 to 6 p.m. Tea will be served and this occasion will furnish an excellent opportunity for all to pay a visit to one of Peterborough's finest public institutions. It is expected that this winter will tax the resources of the Home to the utmost and for this reason it is to be hoped that the public will be even more generous than usual in their kind donations.

MRS. LOCK'S RECITAL.

To write intelligently about any subject one must know something about it especially if details are considered. For the reason that we have little knowledge of music we cannot report authoritatively the concert given by Mrs. James Lock in the Conservatory last night with a reference to such terms as technique. We can say however how the concert appealed to us.

It was a good recital. Mrs. Lock plays exceptionally well and the pieces selected were very fine compositions. There were difficult finger manipulations especially in the Sonota by Beethoven in which plaintive and deep tones of grief, the solemnity of funeral marches and reconciliation with events were well expressed. The opening piece, "Antonine by Charninade expressed in fine musical terms the patter of rain and chilling winds. The selection from Chopin was brighter than most we have heard from that author. Miss Logan added distinctively to the program by her violin playing especially in the first selection which was entitled Legende by Bohn. The other two selections played were the Nuit Etoilee by Charninade and a Scotch Lullaby by Von Kumits.

The vocal numbers by Mrs. Lock were much appreciated and indicated a highly trained voice with exceptional range. Solveig Song, Grieg, With Verdure Clad, Haydn Valse Song, Gounod were the selections sung.

Miss McKee, of the Conservatory staff was accompanist.

Considering the bad night there was a good audience. The proceeds from a collection were to be devoted to the Patriotic Fund.

OBITUARY

MRS. A. W. TAMBLIN.

The death took place in Nicholls hospital at noon to-day of Hannah Marin, wife of Albert W. Tamblin, in her 31st year. She had been ailing for about two weeks with typhoid fever. She was born in Stanhope, Ontario, and had resided here for the past 12 years.

Left to mourn her loss, besides her sorrowing husband, are three children, John Henry, Prudence Elizabeth and Ina Jane.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the residence of Mr. Robert Davidson, 56 Victoria avenue, to Little Lake cemetery.

DOUGLAS ROBERTSON.

The death of Douglas Robertson occurred today. He was 26 years of age and the son of Mr. John Robertson, 588 Bonaccord St. He had been in poor health for some time, and his death will be regretted by his large circle of friends by whom he was held in high esteem. He was a young man of stirling qualities and his bright disposition made him a favorite with many.

Left to mourn his loss are his parents and a brother Robert.

The funeral will take place from the family residence on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery.

Pleasures Of Reading

Philosophy.

A few days since I was looking over a shelf-full of books relating to Philosophy. They were mostly works of old authors and the dusty condition of the covers was sufficient evidence that they were not at the present time, if they ever had been, particular favorites with users of the Library. And as I looked, a saying of the poet Coleridge came to my mind, "If you are not a thinking man to what purpose are you a man at all?" It was a disquieting, even an humiliating thought, for I could not help realizing to how great an extent we mortals are slaves to Unreason and what an incalculable number of hours wasted in idleness and lack of reflection can be cast in the balance against the sum of the world's philosophical and ethical labours.

We are so prone to consider ourselves reflecting beings, however, that the chances are that any of us would be highly indignant if charged with being void of the faculty. But the fact remains, that apart from a few select souls who give themselves over to serious meditation and study there are none who seem to desire to adapt their brains to sustained and coherent reading.

Hundreds of people have passed and re-passed those musty-looking tomes since the Library was opened and probably not one in a hundred has bestowed more than a careless glance at the titles of the books and the names of the authors. Yet, it is largely owing to the labours of those very men that civilization today owes its advancement, showing it in a clearer outlook on life and in great nobility of individual and national character.

The lives of these writers were passed in the quiet and seclusion of their libraries. They took no part in the active affairs of their respective countries, but, notwithstanding this, they wielded more influence than the astutest of statesmen, the mightiest of warriors, the most eloquent of orators. They were enabled to do this by the power of their pens and because a certain percentage of thinking men and women saw the wisdom of their words and acted as evangelists of their doctrines. Surely, no truer remark was ever made than that by Sir Arthur Helps, author of the once well-known book "Friends in Council" when he wrote the words "The mill-streams that turn the clappers of the world arise in solitary places."

The outbreak of the great European war furnishes a very apt illustration of the power of Philosophy. Nine-tenths of the present vast Germanic army have probably never read or heard of the works of their countrymen, Trietschke and Nietzche but the other tenth has and unfortunately it is this tenth that has had the power to inflict its will on the balance of the people. Both these men preached the dogma that Might is Right and this idea carefully and systematically disseminated throughout the entire empire has produced its ghastly harvest of misery and bloodshed. Luckily, there is a philosophy of Peace as well as of War, a philosophy that preaches that Right is Might and if History is any criterion there can be little doubt as to which will emerge triumphant from the present conflict.

It would be foolish to advise everyone to read Philosophy. There are certain minds absolutely incapable of understanding the differences between inductive and deductive methods and whose intellectual powers would be brought perilously close to the breaking point in the effort to do so. But there are very many who only need a stimulus along the rightp ath to enable them to take a really lively interest in such a study, and for whom it would prove a profitable and delightful occupation, if entered upon with discernment and humidity.

It will be easily seen that these lines are addressed to those who have a natural liking for the more serious branches of literature. It is not probable that they will appeal to such as look entirely to fiction to rest their jaded brains to the individual who thinks nothing of taking home two books on the Higher Criticism, one on Natural Science and one of sermons as the weekly pabulum for himself and the family circle. Such a being is altogether beyond the domain of human direction and guidance. It would be an insult to him to cast a doubt on his ability to satisfactorily digest even throughout the whole course of the fall and winter months, the amount of literature that he devours in one week. These words are not for such as he, but for those who possess finite minds and know it and can content to grow wise by degrees.

A TRIP TO THE ALLIES

By automobiles, on the afternoons and evenings of Thursday and Friday, October 22nd and 23rd. The autos leave "Canada," the home of Mrs. S. Clegg, 295 Stewart St., at 3.30 o'clock each afternoon for the several countries, and will continue to leave at regular intervals until 5.30 o'clock, and each evening from 7.30 o'clock until 9.30 o'clock. The itinerary includes the following countries: "British Isles," the home of Mrs. A. F. Lane, 422 Rubidge St.; "Japan," the home of Mrs. (Dr.) Morrison, cor. Park and Hunter Sts.; "Russia," the home of Mrs. A. Parker, 384 Park St.; "France," the home of Mrs. M. W. Lyle, 317 Park St.; "Belgium," the home of Mrs. Jos. Walsh, 317 Margaret Ave.; "United States," the home of Mrs. A. F. Bookhout, 297 Maitland Ave.

Entertainment and refreshments representing the character of the countries will be provided.

The cost of the round trip, including refreshments, is 25c.

Passports must be obtained from Canada.

The Electors of East City

I have been a resident of the City of Peterborough for many years, and am well known to the residents of the East Ward. I feel, therefore, that I have a right to become a candidate for Alderman in the East Ward, at the request of many electors.

My platform will be, that greater efforts should be made to induce the street railway to enter the East Ward, by the Hunter Street bridge, and I would strongly urge a revote to be taken on the Dalhousie Street bridge, in order that an outlet might be given for the workingmen of the East Ward, to get to the factories, without coming up to Hunter Street to cross the river.

You are aware, that the streets and sidewalks in East City have not received the attention to keep them in a proper state of repair. This should be remedied, and by an energetic campaign, which I can give, East City needs will be brought to the attention of the Council, and sufficient appropriation obtained, to keep the East Ward in a proper state of repair. This is the main thoroughfare for the whole traffic coming from East Peterborough, and from the North side of Peterboro County into the City of Peterborough, and we are entitled to a larger proportion of the city's monies to be expended for the benefit of East City, which will result in the ultimate benefit to the merchants and business men of the City of Peterborough.

If elected, I assure the residents of East City, that I will make every effort to see that the affairs of my Ward are properly conducted and taken care of, that the street lighting is installed to properly light East Ward, and that East City will not have the grounds to complain, by reason of neglect, at the hands of the City Council.

I remain,

Yours truly,
G. L. HAY.

ATTACKS REPULSED, ADVANCES ARE MADE

AUSTRIAN SUBMARINE IS SUNK---TYPHOON TAKES LIVES AT KAIO CHOW

FRENCH CRUISER SINKS AUSTRIAN SUBMARINE BY WELL DIRECTED SHOT

Two Boats Had Been Sent Out to Attack French Fleet But Were Quickly Sighted

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Cettinje, Montenegro, Oct. 19. — An Austrian submarine was sunk in the Adriatic today by a French cruiser. Two submarine vessels went out from the Bay of Cattaro to attack a French fleet which was making its way along the Delmatian coast.

They were quickly sighted, however, by French lookouts, and well-directed shots sent the leader to the bottom.

The other submarine escaped.

TURKEY DECLINES TO DISCHARGE GERMAN CREWS

Matter Declared a Domestic Question, is Shelved by Government

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Constantinople, Oct. 19. — The Porte has declined to discharge the German crews of cruisers Goeben and Breslau which have been in Turkish waters since early in the hostilities and which are said to have been sold by Germany to the Turkish government.

This reply was given in answer to British representations regarding the continued presence of Germans on board these vessels.

The government has now shelved the matter declaring it to be a domestic question although it had previously given repeated assurances that these Germans would be repatriated.

Canadian Troops Reach Avonmouth

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Avonmouth, England, Oct. 19. —A well known Atlantic liner arrived here today bringing a large number of Canadian troops to augment those already encamped in England.

The first news the townspeople had of their arrival was the sound of the fife and drum in the streets. Men entrained immediately for a destination not announced.

CRITICISMS ARE ANSWERED BY CHURCHILL

Antwerp Defence Could Have Been Maintained for Some Days

A STRATEGIC MOVE

London, Oct. 19.—First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Spencer Churchill sent a message to the Royal naval division on their return from Antwerp. This is evidently Mr. Churchill's reply to the Morning Post's bitter attack on him, charging that he sent an inadequate force to Antwerp, and sent even that too late to prolong the defence of the city when it would have been better tactics to have allowed the Belgian army to withdraw at least a week earlier. It may be said that this attack on Mr. Churchill was practically still-born. No one of any account followed it up.

Men of higher rank in both services unanimously express regret at the attack, pointing out that at any rate the despatch of this force put the British fighting side by side with the Belgians, who for so long had been looking for actual, practical fighting support of the allies. Moreover, the despatch of this British force, even if inadequate for the preservation of Antwerp, has at least one great tactical advantage from the point of view of the attack made on it. The sending of the British troops caused the Belgians to maintain the defence of the place, which they had recognized to be doomed until it became a risk whether the defending army would escape. The event has proved that the bulk of both forces got away in good shape, and the delay in the surrender of Antwerp kept the German force about a week looking after Antwerp instead of being able to move to the support of the German right wing.

Mr. Churchill's statement, with these points explained, is convincing. He starts with an expression of his appreciation of the conduct, discipline and courage shown by the naval brigade, many of whom were recent volunteers.

The next paragraph of Mr. Churchill's statement must go without comment. "The naval dvision was sent to Antwerp," the first lord of the admiralty says, "not as an isolated incident, but as a part of the large operation for the relief of the city. Other and more powerful considerations prevented this from being carried through. The defence of the inner lines of Antwerp could have been maintained for some days and naval division only withdrew when ordered to do so in obedience to the general strategic situation, and not on account of any attack or pressure of the enemy."

Then comes an indication of the practical value of the mere sharing of the strife on the part of the British, namely, the destruction of ships and the delay of the besieging force from going elsewhere, while the last paragraph suggests the extreme

ALLIES REPULSE ALL ATTACKS, ADVANCE AS FAR AS ROULERS

Troops Have Been Fighting More Than Ten Days Without Respite North and South of Arras---Left Wing Marching in Direction of Lille.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Oct. 19.—The official afternoon announcement says: In Belgium, German heavy artillery has cannonaded without result fom Nieuport to Vladsloo. The Allies, notably the Belgian forces, have repulsed all recent attacks and advanced as far as Roulers.

On our left wing, we have advanced in the direction of Lille.

Between LaBassee, Ablain and St. Nazaire, we are fighting our advance from house to house. North and south of Arras our troops have been fighting more than ten days without respite.

In the region of Chaulnes, we have repulsed a strong counter-attack and have gained some ground.

In Alsace our advance posts are on a line betwen Bon Somme, Paris and Sulzern and we still occupy Thann.

KAISER'S COAST MOVE CHECKED BY POWERFUL FORCE OF THE ALLIES

British Troops Have Driven Enemy Back For a Distance of Thirty Miles in Northern Area ---News of Crown Prince's Flight is Scanty But He Was Seriously Threatened Saturday.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Sunday was an eventful day along the fighting line in France. With the allied front resting on Nieuport, a Belgian town near the coast, and thence southeastward to Ypres, the effort of the Kaiser to swoop down on Dunkirk has missed fire. Between the German hosts and Dunkirk is a formidable army composed of French, British and Belgians. Up to the present the fighting in this zone has been between cavalry for the most part, but both infantry and artillery have come up on both sides, and a stubborn contest is under way.

Ostend in the last point to fall into German hands, and it is not believed that their advance along the coast can continue further until a major operation takes place. It is probable that British warships will participate in the coming engagements near the shore line, the powerful guns of the fleet being able to command a radius of several miles.

The British official press bureau issued the following announcement last night: "The British troops have made good progress during the last few days. In the northern area the allies have driven the enemy back more than thirty miles."

The official communication issued by the French War Office last night says: "During the course of last night (Saturday) two violent attacks were attempted by the Germans to the north and east of St. Die. These were repulsed with serious losses to the enemy.

"No other report of any importance has yet been received on the operations of the day."

The French official statement issued yesterday afternoon says: "The Belgian army in Belgium has vigorously repulsed several attacks by Germans at crossings of the River Yser.

"On our left wing, north of the Canal La Basse, the allies occupy a front on Givenchy. Allies from Fromelles have retaken Armentieres.

"To the north of Arras Saturday was marked by a notable advance on our part.

"Between the region of Arras and the Oise we have progressed slightly at certain points.

"In the centre and on our right wing the situation remains stationary."

Arras is again the centre of a great contest. The French have made important advances in the neighborhood of that town, pushing the German line eastward, and taking a number of strong positions. They have taken Fleurbaix and the approaches to Armentieres.

From Rheims to Soissons the situation remains comparatively quiet, the Germans holding only forces sufficient to maintain their lines along the centre. Considerable numbers of troops have been taken from this region to bolster up the assault on the allied front further west and in Belgium. Snow is falling around Ardennes, which will add to the difficulties of the German centre.

Little information came through yesterday concerning the French movement against the crown prince's army, and practically none at all of the operations toward Metz. It is stated that desultory fighting has occurred in Alsace, two recent reports from Basle, Switzerland, telling of German reverses in that province. From Berlin it is stated that the French fortress of Belfort, on the eastern frontier of the republic, is now on fire from German mortars.

The crown prince's army was beaten Saturday in the vicinity of St. Mihiel, following an attempt to check the French advance. The armies of the republic have captured several positions within ten miles of Metz and an attack on that fortress seems imminent. A considerable force is engaged in an assault on Etain, the key to the crown prince's line of communications. The Kaiser's heir is almost isolated on his eastern front and it is thought that he must quickly retire from St. Mihiel, his most advanced position. Otherwise, huge reinforcements will be required to hold that town, where stubborn fighting is in progress.

The fighting in the region of Laventie is extremely sanguinary and it can be positively stated that all efforts of the Germans to advance have met with repulses. In fact, along the entire 360 mile front of the allies, extending from the sea coast to the Swiss border, the situation is satisfactory.

OFFICERS ARE COMMENDED

Gen. French Forwards Long List of Officers Deserving of Praise.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Gen. French in his report to the Minister of War gives a long list of officers, non-commissioned officers and men who have been recommended for special mention by army corps commanders and heads of departments.

Gen. French expresses his agreement with these recommendations and draws attention to the valuable service rendered by Generals Sir Horace Smith-Dorren, Sir Douglas Haig and Wm. Pulteney-Pulteney, commanders of the First, Second and Third Corps respectively.

Of Major-Generals E. H. H. Allenby and Hubert de la P. Gough, Gen. French says:

"The undoubted superiority which our cavalry has attained over that of the enemy has been due to the skill with which they have turned to best account the qualities inherent in the splendid troops they command."

Mention is also made of Gen. Sir David Henderson, commander of a flying corps, Gen. Sir Archibald Murray, chief of staff, and other officers.

Capt. Frederick Edward Guest of the East Dorset Regiment; Lt.-Col. H. C. Lowther of the Scots Guards, former secretary to the Duke of Connaught, Capt. T. R. Traill, Lieut. Prince Maurice of Battenburg and Major Prince Arthur of Connaught also come in for honorable mention.

Of Prince Arthur of Connaught he says: "His intimate knowledge of languages has enabled me to employ him with great advantage on confidential missions of importance."

ORDERS TO RECRUIT FOR NEW CANADIAN FORCE

Infantry to be Raised First and Twenty Thousand Will be Mobilized at Once — Recruiting Headquarters in the Large Cities

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—Orders went out from militia headquarters to-day to various district centres to proceed at once with recruiting for a new Canadian expeditionary force, under change of plans announced last night.

Each division will have to provide a certain numer of men, the exact strength of each quota not yet being determined, but within a year or less it is expected to have a hundred thousand men under arms.

At first only infantry is to be raised, and about twenty thousand will be mobilized immediately. Headquarters where recruiting will take place will be at London, Toronto, Kingston, Montreal, Quebec, Halifax, St. John, Winnipeg, Calgary and Victoria.

OTTAWA, Oct. 19. — An official statement given out last night by the Prime Minister, Sir Robert Borden, announces that the Government will proceed at once with the organization of Canada's second expeditionary force, the first installment of which consisting of 10,000 men, is to be despatched in December. Sixteen to twenty thousand men are to be immediately enlisted, under the supervision of the commanding officers of the various military divisions throughout Canada, and as soon as equipment, rifles, etc., are available the Government will keep continuously under arms and in training a total force of 40,000 men, including some 10,000 needed for garrison and outpost duty in Canada. The Prime Minister states that this force will be maintained as long as the war lasts, or as long as the War Office wants them, and a continuous stream of reinforcements will thus be available for service at the front.

The Prime Minister's announcement which follows extensive conferences with Col. Gwatkin, chief of staff, and Col. Denison, adjutant-general, says:

"The first concern of the Canadian Government is the defence of our own territory, including our ports and harbors. For this purpose about 8,000 men are now under arms in Canada, and are serving on garrison or outpost duty from the Atlantic to the Pacific. At important points on both coasts the defences have been strengthened and guns have been mounted. Other coast and harbor defences, the nature of which it is not desirable to publish, have also been prepared. Expert military advisers of the Government advise that this force could be very rapidly increased from the active militia at a few hours' notice, and they consider that every reasonable safeguard against successful attack has been provided.

"As to the organization and despatch of further contingents the following conclusions have been reached:

"(1) From the present time until the end of the war, so long as the War Office shall deem it advisable, Canada will keep continuously in training and under arms (in addition to the eight thousand men above mentioned) 30,000 men.

"(2) As soon as arms, guns and equipment can be provided for a force of ten thousand men that force will be despatched to Great Britain as the first instalment of a second expeditionary force. Thereupon additional men will be enlisted, so as to keep the number under training continuously at 30,000. This process will continue from time to time. That is to say, as soon as each force of 10,000 men is armed, equipped and despatched another force of 10,000 will be enlisted to take its place, and to bring the number in training up to 30,000.

"(3) It is anticipated that the first force of 10,000 men will be despatched in December, and thereafter at regular intervals similar forces will be continuously sent forward as rapidly as they can be armed and equipped.

"(4) Including the forces on garrison and outpost duty, we shall thus have under arms or in training about 40,000 men in Canada, and, until the end of the war, or until the War Office advises that further expeditionary forces are not needed, a steady stream of reinforcements will go forward from our shores to the seat of the war.

"(5) If the expected communication from the War Office should make any modification in the above arrangements necessary, that modification will be announced at a later date.

"(6) The Government is informed by its military advisers that it would be impossible to supply arms, guns and equipment on a larger scale than that laid down in these proposals.

"(7) Pending advices from the War Office as to the composition of the second contingent, which have not yet been received, infantry to the number of 16,000 or 20,000 will be immediately enlisted, and the organization and training of infantry units will be proceeded with throughout the Dominion from Halifax to Victoria.

"(8) As soon as the expected instructions arrive from the War Office immediately arrangements will be made for enlisting such cavalry, artillery, engineers and administrative units as the War Office may advise."

WHY A MANDATE IS SOUGHT BY THE GOVERNMENT.

WHEN the present Conservative party in the Dominion Parliament brought into the House its proposals for Imperial aid, the Liberals called frantically for an appeal to the people. They flaunted an election in the face of the government party and courted an immediate appeal. This was not done; the government proceeded with its legislative measures, and carried them in the House of Commons, only to have them killed in the Senate. In view of this procedure the Conservatives have their hands tied until the course of Nature removes by death enough of the Senators to give the Conservatives a majority in the Upper Chamber. Such a condition means stagnation in the work of the government for most of the first term of five years. It means that the people of Canada pay for a Parliament that is ineffective, that they must see wise legislation postponed for no good reason, and that members spend their time and energy without accomplishing their work. Now, when the Conservatives see how far the Senate has stretched its powers, and are seriously taking steps to apeal to the people, the Liberals are afraid of an election and saying it is unnecessary.

It is true that the Liberal party at the emergency session gave an undertaking, through its leaders, not to oppose such measures as the government might deem it advisable to bring in for defence purposes, says Beck's Weekly in dealing with the question of an imminent general election. But the war was then young, and the measures which were then in view were very moderate and inexpensive in comparison with what is now becoming necessary and what threatens to become necessary next year. Conservatives regard it as extremely questionable just how far that neutrality agreement by the Liberal leaders would hold good. More important still than the position of the Liberals in the House is the question of the irresponsible but intensely partisan Senate. Experiences have shown that that Senate cannot be bound by any agreement made with its fellow-politicians in the House. Conservatives, for example, were confident that when they allowed the Liberals in the House so large a share in the drafting of the new Redistribution Bill, they had thereby secured their consent to an immediate increase in the membership of the Senate; but the Senate had no such views, and threw out the Senate Amendment Bill with contemptuous haste. And on the particular question of defence it is on record, in the shape of the abortive Dreadnoughts vote, that the Senate had no hesitation in overriding the decisions of the representative House when they run counter to the ideas of the Little Canada faction in the Liberal party,

The Government therefore feel that the only way to tie the hands of the Senate (seeing that it cannot be governed by any agreement made with Liberals in the House) is to secure a direct mandate from the people for a heavy additional vote for war purposes. The emergency session unanimously voted fifty million dollars. It is expected that a vote of at least a hundred million dollars will be required shortly. The Government desires to be able to head off all obstruction to the mandate from the people of Canada. There can be, of course, no question as to the result of an appeal made on such grounds. The people of Canada desire an energetic and vigorous prosecution of the war and are at present entirely satisfied with the Borden Government's conduct of it; while they naturally hold the Liberal party responsible (perhaps even more than is justly due) for the failure of the proposals for timely Canadian aid to the Imperial fleet.

The Liberal reply to the Government's reasons for holding an election in the middle of a war will be that there has not been and is not the slightest prospect of any opposition to the Conservative measures for defence, and that there would be plenty of time to hold an election if the Senate did undertake the suicidal job of interfering with a war budget. To which the Conservative rebuttal might be that in British parliamentary practice it is usual to hold elections when they are desired by the party in power, and not when they are desired by an irresponsible body dominated by the party which is a minority in the country.

MAKE FARM LIFE ATTRACTIVE.

THE MONETARY TIMES of October 16 said, in part, as follows:

> "In short, farm life is not attractive. The farmer cannot afford to make it attractive to his help, because the price gap tends to prevent. We must burnish the attractions of the farm. The rural depopulation will then be lessened and some of the good stock which has drifted to the cities will return to the land."

By "price gap" is meant the distance between the grower and the consumer that the goods of the former must traverse. It is true that this transition of goods might be improved a great deal, but a reference to actual farm production seems to us to show plainly that the farmer can afford to make it attractive. It is not a case of money or production, of selling or marketing, so much as management and attitude of mind. The actual production of one hundred acres of land, the prevailing acreage of farms, is capable of producing an income sufficient for quite comfortable living. The trouble is few farmers understand financing as business men in cities do who conduct concerns of a similar investment. We have seen one farmer put up a fine house where another farmer was to all intents and purposes a failure. That is common in all lines, however, but a general survey of the farms shows that they are capable of providing an attractive living. It is not the farm, nor the market, so much as the desire to get something out of life besides dollars, that will regenerate farm life. With flowers, fresh air, good houses, rural mail, automobiles, labour-saving machinery, economies of production, rural education, and such things, farm life should be as attractive as any other. It's a matter of training and culture.

THE EMPIRE AS A FACT.

THE WAY in which the present war has drawn the British Empire together has been a marvel to the world. It has shown that the British Empire has meaning—that it is by no means the ramshackle affair that a great many thought it was. The following paragraph from the Pall Mall Gazette is inspiring in its realization of the Empire as a potent fact in the world:

> "The meaning of the British Empire stands clear before the world to-day—clearer than most gifted pens have ever written or the most informed minds have ever known. Whatever the burdens of the war may be to ourselves, its reward will outstrip in magnitude and durability the utmost sacrifice that we could lay upon duty's altar. In such an hour may we not rejoice to know that they are the rewards of courage, of honour, and of every impulse that spurned the meaner and the weaker way? As the crown of Empires shines brighter in its jewels of strength, justice and devotion, let us be thankful that the will to do right regardless of the cost or consequence has given us the title to wear it proudly before the world."

The Queer British Empire.

(Chicago Tribune.)

What a queer, queer thing the British Empire is when you come to think of it! In ordinary times you would naturally judge from the way Ireland and the dominions and colonies talk about Great Britain that the poor old country didn't have a friend on earth. In ordinary times some part of the British Empire is always berating the Home Government. In times of peace everybody feels at liberty to assume a possible revolution in India; separation of the dominions, and all sorts of other disastrous things. In times of peace the Empire is always more or less "doomed," according to the statements of many gloom-laden British subjects. But in time of war how suddenly things look up in that queer, queer British Empire. "I haven't a thing to take back," says Ireland, "but under the circumstances kindly show me the enemy as soon as possible. I want to get at him." "Yours of recent date received," says Canada. "Am sending men as fast as they can be gotten ready and transportation secured." "Reserving for a more auspicious time any hatred a part of our population justifiably bears to England," says South Africa, "we are prepared to do our utmost in the present war." "Serious local dissatisfaction will arise, sahib, unless Indians are permitted to give their lives for the honourable Empire, now that it is at war with a foreign nation," says India. It's everywhere the same story. In peace it's "Confound your stupid, unreasonable, fat-headed, doomed, arrogant soul!" In time of need it's "Count on us to the limit!" Which is why we say that the British Empire is a queer, queer institution!

Terrific Strain on the Soldier's Nerves.

(American Review of Reviews.)

Although that tactician has discovered ways of protecting infantry from rifle fire, it must not be supposed that the soldier of today is less brave than one of Napoleon's veterans. Indeed, he is put to a severer strain; for he is under fire sometimes for more than twelve hours at a time. To crouch in a trench or a covered bomb-proof from dawn until dusk, to hear the incessant whistle of thousands of projectiles, to mark the little clouds of dust kicked up by bullets as they strike the ground near the trench or shelter, to start at the bursting of shrapnel shells, each containing 200 or 300 bullets which are scattered over many yards, is a test of human nerves which Napoleon's Old Guard was never called upon to withstand.

The Test of German Temperament.

(Pall Mall Gazette.)

The Kaiser and his satellites dare not let it be realized that they are not infallible and that their resources are more than matched by their opponents. They cannot indefinitely keep the power of events at bay, and when their fetish is broken we shall see German temperament exposed to a test which it has not known for half a century. It may still be some distance off, but it is awaited with curious interest by all who concern themselves about the psychology of nations.

Being at Loggerheads.

(National Monthly.)

Neighbor's Little Girl—When did you get back, Mrs. Browne. Did you have a nice time?

Neighbor—Why, I haven't been away, my dear.

Neighbor's Little Girl—Haven't you, really? I'm sure I heard mother say you and Mr. Browne had been at Loggerheads for a week!

How Could He?

(London Evening Standard.)

"You've read 'The Heavenly Twins'?" asked an Englishman of an Irishman. "Yes, I have." "And 'The Sorrows of Satan'?" "Yes." "And have you read 'Looking Backwards'?" "How the divil could I do that?" said Pat.

SOME OF THE POOR

By Walt Mason

So many have no roofs or doors, no sheets to cuddle under! You hire some men to do your chores, and then you cease to wonder. Alas, it is so hard to find—he takes so much pursuing—the worker who will keep his mind on what he may be doing. I hire a man to saw some sticks, to keep the fire a-going, and he discusses politics, in language smooth and flowing; the saw grows rusty while he stands, the welkin shrinks and totters, as he, with swinging jaws and hands, denounces Wall Street plotters. When I go home, as dusk grows dense, I hear his windy rages, and kick him sadly through the fence, when I have paid his wages. I hire a man to paint the churn and hoe the morning glories, and when at evening I return he's busy telling stories. "That toiler is no good, I fear," remarks the hausfrau, Sally; I take him gently by the ear and lead him to the alley. I hire a man the stove to black, and fix the kitchen table, and when at evening I come back, he's sleeping in the stable. And thus we suffer and endure the trifler's vain endeavor; we do not wonder that the poor are with us here forever.

OWNING A HOME.

The Real Estate Man Presents His View of the Question.

The public has no better friends than the real estate agents, although individuals may sometimes think that they are a trifle persistent in their efforts to induce one to make a purchase.

In reality, however, this is where they do the greatest good, not only for the city in which they live, but for the man to whom they sell property, and this is especially true in the case of a home.

The great majority of people are too slow to realize the importance of becoming home owners, and the efforts of the real estate dealers have induced thousands to purchase who otherwise would have let splendid opportunities pass.

It is especially important that all young people become home owners at the earliest time possible, because in the strength of their youth they will have no trouble meeting the payments on a home, and in a few years they will have it paid for. On the other hand, if they fail to buy the years will pass and find them living up all they make.

Because of taxes, insurance and depreciation many people figure that it is cheaper to rent than to own a home, but since the man owning the property is willing to make that kind of investment it is pretty evident that in the long run it pays the owner.—National Real Estate Journal.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

MR. HAY'S POLICY.

Editor Review:

Dear Sir,—I notice in Mr. Hay's letter to the ratepayers of East City that he advocates "among other things," better lighting of this ward. I am pleased to note this, and also pleased to know that Mr. Hay is not afraid to state his platform. I like a man that has convictions and is not afraid to express them. I hope the ratepayers will elect Mr. Hay, and I trust that one of the first things he does is to see that we have a more adequate lighting system in this ward.

I have been a resident and taxpayer of East City for over 25 years and I have noticed that we have been badly neglected on this side of the river this last few years.

I do not advocate the expenditure of more money in our city (our taxes are plenty high enough), but I do advocate a more equal distribution of the city's monies, and if that is done I know that there will be a much larger amount spent in this ward.

We want bright, energetic, influential men to represent us in the city council, and in Mr. Hay (one who has spent nearly all his life in the city) I feel sure we will have a live, wide-awake representative.

Thanking you very much, Mr. Editor, for the use of this valuable space.

Respectfully,
EAST CITY RATEPAYER.

MISSED THE TRAIN.

It Was Not the Agent's Fault, Either, Only His Misfortune.

The real estate man from the city was eager to close the deal for Uncle Billy Weatherman's forty acres, which would front on a beautiful lake after the big White river dam in the Missouri Ozarks was built.

The papers lay on the table awaiting Uncle Billy's signature. The real estate man was impatient. He was in a hurry to get back to Hollister, the nearest railway station, so as to catch the only train that would get him back to Kansas City the next morning.

"Now, if you'll sign right there—on the dotted line," he said, handing a fountain pen to Uncle Billy.

Uncle Billy took out his spectacles and read the papers carefully.

"I reckon I'd better not be in too big a hurry about this hyar," he temporized, with the shrewdness of the Ozark mountaineer. "I don't read as peart as I used to. I b'lieve I'll have my sons read them papers, mister."

"It would be a great favor to me, Uncle Billy," remarked the Kansas City man, looking at his watch, "if you could manage to see them in time to finish up this transaction by noon. You see, I've got to get away today. How many sons have you, anyway?"

Uncle Billy scratched his head a minute and said, "Eighteen."—Youth's Companion.

"What is a promoter, pa?"

"A promoter is a man who knows absolutely how you can get enormously rich."

"Does he really know?"

"Yes."

"How does he know?"

"Because if he did not know it would make you rich he wouldn't draw a salary, and he has to have that."

She Was Curious.

"I never loved any but you."

"Didn't you?"

"No."

"Honest?"

"Honest."

"Well, what did you call the other cases?"

A Change of Commander

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

In the olden time, when the buccaneers infested the Spanish main, an English pirate named Ricketts, finding that the Atlantic was becoming poor hunting ground on account of the number of skull and bones flags on it, concluded to betake himself to the Pacific. Having weathered the Horn, he turned his course northwestward in the hope of falling in with merchantmen among the many islands lying directly south of the equator and east of Australia.

Ricketts, though fifty years old, had never sailed in any except Atlantic waters. He had been an officer in the British navy and during the long period when the duties of British warships were to prey on Spanish commerce with Spain's possessions in the new world had acquired a taste for piracy. This induced him to go into the business himself. He knew the north and south Atlantic, their winds, their currents, their periods of storms, their fogs and protracted calms. But the Pacific was to him an unexplored tract.

None of his officers had had any more experience in the Pacific than the captain, but one of them had heard from sailors who had spent much time on it that many of those indications which foretold a change of weather were different from those on the Atlantic. The captain, who had all a Britisher's confidence in himself, scouted the idea that a man who knew the Atlantic had anything to learn on the Pacific, and a man who rules a pirate ship is not to be contradicted.

While approaching the Marquesas islands Ricketts fell in with a ship which he appropriated and compelled the crew to walk the plank. There was a gentleman aboard from the colony of New York named Fletcher, with his wife and daughter, and being British subjects, Ricketts concluded to spare them. There was also a young sailor, Dargan, whose vigorous appearance pleased the captain, and he gave him his life on condition that he join the pirate crew. Dargan was an American, but all his time was spent at sea in voyages between the East Indies and Philadelphia.

Dargan, by pretending to sympathize with the pirates and on account of a masterful way he had with him, acquired an influence over the pirate crew. The captain was a tyrant, and the men hated him. Nevertheless they were ignorant of navigation, a knowledge their captain possessed, and required his superior intelligence to keep them from being swung at the end of a rope. For these reasons Ricketts maintained his ascendancy and felt so confident in it that he did not notice the influence Dargan was gaining over them.

One afternoon Ricketts was pacing the quarterdeck, now and again sweeping the horizon with his glass in search of prey, when he heard a voice amidships sing out in stentorian tones:

"Man the weather braces!"

The captain turned with a scowl to see who except himself dared give an order on the ship he commanded and saw Dargan and the men running for the braces. Before Ricketts could recover from his anger and collect his faculties the braces were manned and the sailors stood ready for the next order.

"Drop those braces!" cried the captain in a fury.

"Hold the braces," said Dargan calmly but firmly.

Every man's face turned from Dargan to Ricketts. A few dropped the braces; the rest held them. Whipping a pistol from his belt, the commander fired a shot at Dargan which grazed his cheek.

"There's a hurricane coming, men," said Dargan. "If you drop the braces we are lost."

This steadied the men amazingly. The captain's pistol contained but one ball, so he could not fire another. The wind suddenly dropped, and the sails flapped. Ricketts looked at the water to leeward and saw a black line coming.

"Haul taut! Haul, every man of you, for your lives!" cried Dargan.

The yards swung round so as to take the coming wind. Then suddenly the stillness was broken by shrieks in the rigging above, and the pirate ship careened till the water poured over the lee gunwale. The crew clung to what they could catch; the captain was pitched against the rail and lay still with a broken leg.

The storm was over in a few minutes, and the sun came out, a harbinger of changed conditions for the pirate ship. Dargan, who was obeyed as commander, agreed with the crew that if they would assent to taking the ship into port he would secure a pardon for every man except the captain. A course was then laid to New Zealand, where a surrender was made. The New Yorker and his family supported Dargan's story, the crew were pardoned, and the captain was hanged to the yardarm.

When Mr. Fletcher found a ship to take him and his family to New York, so grateful was he to Dargan for the work which had been instrumental in saving all their lives that he invited him to go with them. Fletcher was a China merchant and owned ships. He offered Dargan the command of one of them. Dargan accepted the invitation and the offer. He finally married Miss Fletcher and became a large shipowner.

Strictly Logical.

Prof. Sudbury, who was extremely nearsighted, went to the barber's, sat down and allowed himself to be shaved. When the artist was done with him he did not move, and for awhile nobody disturbed him. But other customers began to arrive, and the chair was needed. The head barber, suspecting that his learned patron had fallen asleep, asked his boy to wake him. The professor heard him.

"No, my good man," he said, "I am not asleep. The fact is I am frightfully nearsighted. When I took my glasses off just now I was no longer able to see myself in the mirror opposite. Naturally I supposed I had already gone home."

A Novel Ship.

Much interest was aroused on the Mersey a few days ago by the appearance of the train carrier and ice-breaker, the Leonard, which has been built at Messrs. Cammell, Laird's, says London Tit-Bits. The owners of the Leonard are the Transcontinental Railway of Canada.

Accommodation is provided on the main platform of this novel ship for three long trains at the same time. Trains can be taken aboard at any state of the tide, and in addition to carrying this great burden she can, by reason of her ice-breaking equipment, plough her way through almost any ice-field. A train weighing about 1,4000 tons can be lifted at the rate of one foot per minute to a height of 20 feet.

Train ferries are not unknown in Britain, one being in use on the Clyde. The Leonard has two funnels on each side of the wide platform, and her tremendous deck, together with the flying navigation bridge, gives her a unique appearance.

SOURCE OF SHELLAC.

Insects Producing It Are Victims of Their Own Industry.

Scale insects of the group coccidae are responsible for one of India's most interesting exports, lac, the export value of which amounts to nearly $9,000,000 annually. Lac is the resinous exudution of the insect. The insects live upon the twigs of certain trees, and soon become covered with a resinous secretion that increases in thickness, protecting the body and the eggs.

When a colony, consisting of a few adult females and one or two males, find their way to a new branch, they attach themselves to the bark, and, having pierced it with holes through which they draw up the resinous juices upon which they feed, they become fixed or glued by the superfluous excretion, and after a time die, the females forming by their dead bodies little domes or tents over the myriads of minute eggs which they have laid. In a short time the eggs burst into life, and the young, which are very minute, swarm over the twig in such countless numbers as to give it the appearance of being covered with blood red dust. Generation after generation dwells upon the same twig until it is enveloped in a coating of the resinous exudation often half an inch thick.

In the beginning the insect was much collected for the dye it contains. Later when the use of the resin became known the demand for the dye began to diminish, until now it has been almost completely displaced by coal tar colors. After separating the resin from the coloring matter the former constitutes the shellac of commerce.—Argonaut.

RECORD FOR ALL NATIONS.

Late Sir Benjamin Stone "Snapshotted" All Over the World.

Sir Benjamin Stone, dean of photographers of public events, who has just died at the age of seventy-six in England, represented East Birmingham in Parliament for fifteen years. At a complimentary luncheon given him by members of the House of Commons he once was called "photographer-in-chief to the Speaker and the House of Commons."

From youth he was a great traveler and his difficulty in purchasing scenes of the places he visited was what turned him into a photographer himself. As long ago as 1868 he began a pictorial record of the life of the nations. He interested others in this work, and the immense stores of photographs in the British Museum are the direct result.

In the course of the sitting of the first sitting of the First Parliament of which he was a member he took a picture of every member and of officials and journalists as well.

On the occasion of the Coronation of King Edward, Sir Benjamin took about 300 photographs, which were very useful to the officials who prepared the ceremony when King George succeeded.

Sir Benjamin's most amusing traveling experiences was when he went to Brazil to photograph the eclipse of the sun. He stayed for a time at Sears, and while he was there a revolution broke out. The governor had become unpopular and the soldiers rose and "fired" him out. Sir Benjamin made arrangements with a photographer to get pictures of the incidents, and the way the soldiers posed for the camera was quite like comic opera. They had placed cannon across the streets wherein the governor's palace was situated, and when they were ready to begin the attack they all stood up and posed for the picture. When the governor had bolted and they had secured the battered palace, they sent back for the photographer to come and take more pictures.

Another adventure was in China. He had been "taking" a temple when he noticed that a large crowd had gathered, so he turned round in order to get a picture of the mob. There was a great murmuring, which grew into a hubbub. He asked the guide what the matter was and he replied, "They say that you have taken their spirit from them." "Nonsense," Sir Benjamin retorted, "I have taken nothing from them." "Haven't you got their likeness in your box?" the guide inquired, and when this was admitted he remarked triumphantly, "Then, how can you say that you have taken nothing?" It was an opportunity for black mail not to be missed, and the photographer had to distribute large sums before he was allowed to depart in peace.

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.—Peers Davidson, K.C., of Montreal, yesterday afternoon received instructions to act for the Government in the prosecution of Israel Shaefer, of Montreal, charged with high treason by assisting Austrian reservists to return.

A Change Of Garments

By JOHN G. LARNED

One morning Lita Giuccioli, an Italian girl aged eighteen, was placed in a railway train at Naples by her father and mother, who bade her goodby with many kisses. She was going to Rome to visit an aunt. The compartment she entered was occupied by one person only—a man. He was small and clean shaven, and the train had not gone far into the country when he began to notice Lita, as if taking note of her height and weight. Presently he said:

"Signorina, will you please take off your hat and give it to me?"

Lita looked at him as if she did not comprehend his meaning. The man jerked her hat off her head and put his own on hers. By this time she was thoroughly frightened and made no resistance. The man forced her to exchange her outer garments with him, and when this was done he pulled a veil down over his face.

"When we make a stop," he said, "I will get out—that is, unless I see danger. If you betray me I will kill you. I am a bandit. I have been making a rich haul in Naples. The police got on to my being there, and I am surprised that they have permitted me to get out of the city. Indeed, I suspect some game on their part, and I should not wonder if they were on the lookout for me."

Lita was thoroughly cowed. Indeed, it was all she could do to keep from fainting. But she kept up till the train reached the first stop, hoping then to be relieved of him. When the train pulled up at the station the man looked out, but drew back immediately, and Lita saw that she would not be rid of him. The conductor came to the door of the compartment and put a woman into it. Lita noticed that she tipped him for finding her a seat. The newcomer was a comfort to the poor girl, though she wished she had been a man. She noticed, however, that the woman was big and strong, while the bandit was small, though wiry.

The train had scarcely pulled out of the station when the new passenger began to look scrutinizingly at Lita. As for the man, he leaned back in a corner with the veil over his face, and no one would have had reason to suspect that he was not a woman.

"Where are you going, signor?" asked the woman of Lita in a coarse voice.

"To Rome, signora."

The woman looked intently at the girl, evidently being somewhat mystified at her appearance and especially at her voice, which was thoroughly feminine.

"When the train left Naples," continued the woman, "was there not a man in this compartment?"

Lita, whose eye was fixed on the bandit, saw his fingers twitching. She interpreted it to mean that she must reply in the negative.

"There was no one, signora, except we who are now here."

There was a pocket in the woman's dress, and Lita noticed that she kept her right hand in this pocket. When she asked the question she looked at the figure leaning back in the corner, apparently asleep.

"Signora," called the new passenger, "can you tell me the hour this train reaches Rome?"

The only reply was a snore.

Lita would have warned the woman that the person she addressed was a man and a bandit and begged her to let him alone, fearing that he would murder them both, but she dared not do so. The woman made no further attempt to extract information from the sleeper; instead she began to look Lita over, her attention being riveted on the girl's figure that looked different from a man's.

"You're not a man," she said; "you're a woman."

Lita made no reply. The man in the corner snored on. The woman turned her attention to the sleeper.

"Signora!"

The man stirred, then asked what was wanted in a feigned voice.

"At what hour does this train reach Rome?"

"I do not know."

"What's the matter with your voice? Have you got a cold?"

"Pardon me. I am sleepy. I have been up very late every night for a week."

"Was there a man in this compartment when the train left Naples?"

"Yes; the young gentleman opposite you."

"She's not a man; she's a woman."

"Well, I have nothing to do with that, nor do I care what she is."

This was said angrily, and the bandit, losing control of his voice, betrayed his sex. Suddenly the woman's hand came out of her pocket and with it a cocked revolver, with which she covered the bandit.

"Throw up your hands, Andrea Carpi!"

The hands went up at once. The woman leaned forward and snatched away the veil.

"You are very smart, Signor Carpi, but you can't fool us carabineers all the time. I thought that by changing sex I could bag you and have succeeded. I see that you have changed clothes with this young lady."

He threw off his cloak and displayed the uniform of the national police.

Lita breathed a breath of relief. She regained her clothes, and the bandit returned with his captor by the next train to Naples.

Distribution of the Patriotic Fund at Orillia

The following item taken from the Orillia Times will be of interest to all interested in the Peterboro Patriotic Association:

The committee for the disbursement of the Orillia Patriotic Fund wish to inform the contributors that they have decided upon the following arrangement for the families who have lost bread winners through the call to the colors. The intention is that each family shall be in the same position financially as if the bread-winenr were at home. The government allowance to the wife is $20 per month. The committee have considered that the household expenses would be at least $10 less with the man away. For instance: Private A gets $37.50 a month from the Government. The Government allows his wife $20, the fund gives $15 and anything Private A should send home out of his own earnings would be so much to the good. In the case of a sergeant, the pay received is higher, and if he only sends home half, the family with the Government allowance would be better off, in most cases, than if he were at home. In these cases, however, the committee allow $10 a month.

The committee have felt that the arrangement would be perfectly satisfactory to those concerned, and that this statement would be welcomed by the public. Payment of the fund runs from August 14, and will be made hereafter by cheque every two weeks, on the 1st and 15th of each month.

GEN. HAMILTON AMONG KILLED

Distinguished Soldier Heads Latest List of Casualties

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The name of Major-Gen. Hubert I. W. Hamilton appears at the head of the latest casualty list, as killed in action. The names of ten other officers come under this category, and twenty-five others are listed as wounded.

Gen. Hamilton was 53 years of age, and had been mentioned in despatches by Field Marshal French during the fighting around Mons. He served in the Egyptian and South African campaigns, and was military secretary to Lord Kitchener when the latter was commander-in-chief of the forces in South Africa. He held the same post when Lord Kitchener was commanding in India.

Gen. Hamilton was in command of the North Midland Division since 1911. He was 53 and a son of Lieut.-Gen. Henry Mead Hamilton.

What Happened to the Cats?

Not long ago the U. S. Gov't. made some experiments to determine the poisoning qualities of caffeine (the drug in tea and coffee).

Twenty-seven healthy cats were given an average dose of 5 4-5 grains of caffeine — about as much of the drug as is contained in 2 or 3 cups of tea or coffee.

What do you suppose happened?

The Cats all Died!

See Gov't. Bulletin No. 148, Bureau of Chemistry.

Of course, they were only cats.

But there are plenty of people who dose themselves with enough caffeine every day to kill a cat and Cripple a Man, not at one blow, but by little blows repeated daily.

Of course, some systems are strong enough to stand all kinds of abuse, but most systems are not. And when a man or woman observes a growing nervousness or sleeplessness, heart trouble, stomach, bowel or eye disturbance, it is time to quit both tea and coffee and turn to a real food-drink, free from the drug, "caffeine."

It is easy to shift from tea or coffee to

Not Flattery but History The Whole Truth and Nothing but the Truth

Dr. Gordon Says He Comes to Peterboro to Speak Definitely and Plainly --- Large Congregations Heard Him Inaugurate Two Weeks' Campaign

Using the words of Wendell Phillips, the American orator, Rev. J. L. Gordon told a large congregation at George Street Methodist church last night: "You can have history or you can have flattery, but I'm here to give you history and not flattery." These words, the preacher explained, were used by Phillips on one occasion when a large gathering had hissed him. Then as he proceeded the hissing gave way to cheers.

He did not come to preach, he said. There were good preachers in Peterborough. "I've come to speak to you definitely and plainly. If you don't want to hear plain things, don't come. Our covenant is: "We'll tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

This, by the way, is the oath which is taken by a person in the witness box. Incidentally, Dr. Gordon uses many illustrations. This makes him a difficult speaker to report. A verbatim report of a sermon such as he delivered last night would not be the most interesting matter one might find, and it would not do him justice.

Dr. Gordon must be heard, and he is worth hearing. He is an effective speaker, and last evening he held the close attention of his congregation from beginning to end.

First, he said, it was a mistake to sneer at the grand old book, the Bible. The young man who sneered at the Bible was an ignoramus. He does not know the Bible is the grandest piece of literature produced.. In Peoria, Ill., from where Ingersoll left on a lecture against the Bible, the people raised $100,000, tore down Ingersoll's building and erected a Y. M. C. A. building. That was one instance to show that Christianity was not dying out—that the Bible was not losing its grip. An educated man would not sneer at the Bible.

It was an inspired book. It was infallible, and it infallibly points to an infallible Christ.

Profanity was another mistake. It was such a cheap thing. It was also a mistake for a young man to hide his religious conviction. "Young man, if you have a conviction fixed on the Eternal, breath it out," urged Dr. Gordon. Still another mistake was made when the young man believed that money was more than manhood. The man who exchanged character for cash was a failure, first, last and always. All the money in the banks in Canada would not make a bad man a success. The poorest man in the world was the man who had wealth and nothing else, and, said the preacher, "it's time we got through worshipping a man because he is rich."

Lacking decision of character was a mistake. The young man would never win unless he had an educated will. Napoleon was told that he would never cross the Alps. He replied, "There will be no Alps," and he swept over. The young man should not ignore the claims of Eternal Life and the Eternal World. The preacher's testimony was: "There is a God, the Bible is the truth. God rules." This life was but the vestibule of the Eternal and the Everlasting.

One of the greatest mistakes was trampling underfoot a mother's love—a love that was deeper than depth, wider than width and higher than height.

Such are the mistakes which a young man makes and upon which the preacher dwelt in a very impressive manner. His final appeal was: "Young man go home and in your room think it over, weep it over, and pray it over."

At St. Paul's Tonight.

Dr. Gordon spoke at St. Paul's Church in the morning and the campaign will be continued at St. Paul's Church every night of this week and at George Street Church next week. The subject tonight will be "The Greatest Mistake in the Life of a Young Woman."

Assisting Dr. Gordon are Albert Greenlaw, a very pleasing singer and Edouard Hesselberg, a pianist of recognized ability.

Mr. Greenlaw was heard in several churches yesterday and delighted everyone. He will sing at every meeting, which will be preceded by a song service starting at 7.45.

THE CHURCHES' WAR MANIFESTO

A Reply to the German Theologians

(London Daily Mail.)

A reply to the recent appeal of the German theologians on the war has been issued by leaders of the Churches in the United Kingdom.

Among the forty-two signatures are the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Archbishops of York and Armagh, the Bishops of London and Winchester, Rev. R. J. Campbell, Dr. John Clifford, Dr. F. B. Meyer, Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, and Sir W. Robertson Nicoll. The reply was:

"It fills us with amazement that those who occupy the positions held by the signatories of this appeal should commit themselves to a statement of the political causes of the war, which departs so strangely from what seem to us to be the plain facts of this grave hour in European history.

"We unite whole-heartedly with our German brethren in deploring the disastrous consequences of the war, and in particular its effect in diverting the energies and resources of the Christian nations from the great constructive tasks to which they were providentially called on behalf of the peoples of Asia and Africa.

"But there must be no mistake about our own position. Eagerly desirous of peace, foremost to the best of our power in furthering it, keen especially to promote the close fellowship of Germany and England, we have nevertheless been driven to declare that, dear to us as peace is, the principles of truth and honour are yet more dear.

"To have acted otherwise than we have acted would have meant deliberate unfaithfulness to an engagement by which we had solemnly bound ourselves and a refusal of our responsibilities and duties in regard to the maintenance of the public law of Europe."

NEW MEDAL ISAPPROVED

Decoration for Distinguished Service in Lower Ranks

LONDON, Oct. 19. — The Official Press Bureau last evening issued the following statement from the Admiralty:

"King George has been pleased to approve the establishment of a medal, to be called the Distinguished Service Medal, to be awarded to chief petty officers, petty officers and men and boys in all branches of the service of the royal army, to non-commissioned officers and men of the Royal Marines and to all other persons holding corresponding positions in his Majesty's service afloat, for distinguished conduct in war, in cases where the award of conspicuous gallantry medals would not be applicable.

"His Majesty has further approved of an award of the Conspicuous Service Cross, to be designated in the future the Distinguished Service Cross, to all officers below the rank of lieutenant-commander, in addition to the officers previously eligible for this decoration."

New Commissioner For Salvationists

Has Been Connected With Army for Thirty-six Years

London, Oct. 19.—As already cabled, General Booth has appointed Commissioner William J. Richards to command the Salvation Army in Canada, in succession to Commissioner David Rees, who perished in the Empress of Ireland disaster.

Commissioner Richards has been connected with the army for 36 years. He is a Cornishman by birth, a Welshman from early training, and is regarded as a most energetic and resourceful administrator. In one of his early appointments he earned the title of "The Mad Preacher," and aroused so much interest that one Sunday a procession of Salvationists marched to the parish church, filled the building and overflowed into the graveyard. Six years after the late General Booth launched his Darkest England scheme, Commissioner Richards was given a post of considerable responsibility in connection with it. He was subsequently sent to command the army in Denmark, and afterwards in South Africa. For the last two years and a half he has been in command in New Zealand.

Four sons of Commissioner and Mrs. Richards are serving the army, one in the Dutch East Indies, another in South America, a third on the European continent, and a fourth at the headquarters in London.

The Man Who Put it Over

General Sir John French is undeniably the hero of the first chapter in the Great War. A plain, modest soldier, he is direct, swift to act, and slow to talk. His reports are military classics, and what he has done in France and Belgium will live in history. In October Canada Monthly Captain W. Robert Foran, who served with him in South Africa, tells how he outwitted the Boers at their own game, and was always where they did not expect him to be. Captain Foran says:

"My first meeting with French took place in the Orange River Colony when Lord Roberts' army was marching victoriously towards Pretoria. I had ridden into the camp of French's cavalry Division bearing despatches for the little General. The Division was camped at a Boer farm house, which had been deserted the day before by its owners on hearing that the "Kerel" French was coming. The Boers feared him even more than they did Roberts, for was not French the slimmest of the slimmest, had he not played them at their own game and gone one better?

GENERAL SIR JOHN FRENCH.

"The little farm house was a strangely altered scene from what it had been in the morning. Where at sunrise a few oxen grazed quietly, now the veldt was covered with a great division of men and horses. As I rode up, red-lapelled staff officers came hurriedly through the rooms and passed back and forth on missions from the General. Now and then a very dapper little man in brown riding-boots walked out on to the stoop, and said something that caused men to spring to take papers from his hand, mount, and ride away at breakneck speed. It was French. I knew that at once from descriptions that had been given of him.

"A very anxious looking staff officer dismounted stiffly from his horse, handed the reins to an orderly who had ridden with him, and staked inside the house. A few minutes later he appeared with the dapper General, both of them talking quickly in low tones. French held a half-unrolled map in his hands, seated himself on an empty biscuit-box, spread the map out flat on his knees, and used his forefinger as an emphatic pointer. He appeared to be insisting upon something of the utmost importance. The staff officer finally smiled and nodded, whereat a look of pleased satisfaction spread over the brick-red, square-featured face of the stout little general. With a cheery all right. Good night! he strode inside the house once more, and the staff officer rode rapidly away in a cloud of dust. "Johnny" French, I assured myself, must have another of those wonderful movements of his simmering in his active brain.

"A few minutes later I was ushered into the great man's presence and delivered my message. He was all courtesy, very businesslike, and wasted no words. I had a chance to see him then closer than at any other time.

"Somehow French does not strike you with any idea of his being the wonderful man he really is, smart and quick to move—except when you take particular notice of his shrewd, twinkling little eyes that seem to take in everything about him. He most certainly does not look the ideal cavalry leader. There is nothing of a Brigadier Gerard in his appearance. He is short, dumpy, jaunty, sitting a horse rather like the proverbial sack of flour. If you were to see him booted and spurred in Aldershot town during manouevres, you would be justified on appearances in planing him as a colonel of infantry, who had learned to ride from a Red Book in a riding school, only acquiring the slight knowledge at considerable effort. And yet, I know he is a great fox-hunting man, and rides straight to hounds over everything."

CANADIANISM AND CONTINENTALISM

STUDIES IN CANADIAN IMPERIALISM

Written exclusively for The Daily Review, by J. P. Laycock, M.A.

The old time annexationist, actively, aggressively, openly seeking annexation with the Unites States, is either dead or in hiding. It has become a platitude for writers of every color to assert that Canada will no more enter voluntarily the American Union than the latter will try to compel compulsory entrance by force of arms; but at the same time that any remnants of an almost extinct species of political thinkers keep their private thoughts for private utterance, a new school of thought has arisen that declares that silently, steadily, insidiously the forces of the American continent are at work, the spirit of America is at war with the spirit of the United Kingdom, and the Dominion is likely to become American in spite of itself. The heir of the annexationist is the continentalist.

Few, indeed, of Native Canadians, French or English, desire such an outcome, though many, more in private than in public, betray anxiety, whether a Canadian imperialist fearing for his imperialism, a Canadian decentralizationist anxious for that desired "practical independence," of a French Nationalist dreading Republican antagonism to the principle of laissez faire as applicable to nationalities within empires? Those who believe openly in the triumph of Americanism in such a subtle form are limited to over-anxious imperialists of the All-British school, superficial European observers diligently searching for signs of decay within the empire, or Americans, like Emerson Hough, frank exponents of geographical and economic annexation, whether political absorption follows or not.

So-called Literary Subjection.

Canada is portrayed as the literary adjunct of the United States. Not only do American newspapers flood the Dominion, but native dailies are written, edited, and printed after the southern model. From the editorial pages to the sporting news, it is asserted, Yankee idioms and Yankee slang have intruded their inferior presence. Cablegrams mainly originate from New York, furnished by a syndicate presided over by a notorious Anglophobe. Domestic or comic supplements, and other syndicated material, often stressing American history and the American point of view, reach the Dominion through the same or similar channels. Greater space is devoted to the American than the British election, to the crisis in Mexico than the crisis in Ireland. Publications of the character of "Life" spread the perverted American ideas of humor throughout the provinces; those of the type of the "Saturday Evening Post" or the "Ladies' Home Journal" propagate southern political, economic, and domestic ideals, while the cheaper American magazines, through their specialization of illustrated advertisements or "special write-ups" call Canadian attention to bargains in jewelry, clothing, patent medicines, household necessities, safety razors, fountain pens, typewriters, automobiles, agricultural implements, anything for which there is a demand, even if inferior to the British substitute.

So-called Americanization of Canadian Amusements.

This subjection of the Canadian during moments of cultural enjoyment, is alleged to extend to moments of pleasure of leisure. The "movies" display the American flag, the father of his country, the conflicts of the civil war; the theatres, associated with the American circuits, satirize the English type for the edification of Canadian audiences. Cricket is largely confined largely to British immigrants, soccer has never won supremacy, rugby gravitates, in Universities, High Schools, and cities, more and more to the American system, and even the Canadian national game of lacrosse dwindles before the invasion of baseball.

Invasion of American Mercantilism.

In industrial life the same cry is heard. Commerce is largely one; the railways are inter-related; trade unionism in the two countries is inseparable; and labor crosses the boundary without restraint. The coinage is similar, the methods of doing business are similar; the hotels are similar; the very fashions in clothing are similar. The cigars smoked and the liquors drunk are American. Everywhere throughout Canada the Americans have established their branch factories and machine shops, built and worked their mills, sunk and operated their mines, cleared, plowed, sown, and reaped their lands.

The Political Similarity.

In the political sphere the peril is also seen. The Canadian politician is the imitator of the American His political system even in its impurities is the copy of the southern. The same problems in federal, provincial and civic corruption exist, and the same remedies are sought from the same source, civic government by commission, initiative, referendum, and recall, or other expedients.

American Immigration and the Asserted Danger.

But when the topic of American immigration into the prairie provinces is approached the plaint becomes a wail, the bonds of common outlook, of common tastes with the mother land are declared undermined, the integrity of the empire threatened, and the separation of the Canadian west predicted. The open invasion of a hundred years ago has been succeeded by a more silent subtle effective inroad. Saskatchewan and Alberta are declared already Americanized, and Manitoba largely so. They buy American goods, want American reciprocity, and American ways. Their invasion calls to the mind of the European immigrant the presence across the border of a nation constructed, more and more, of cosmopolitan elements and hence a useful associate in developing a common democratic empire. They add to the geographical and commercial differences between east and west the racial difference.

A French writer sees in French Canada the only antidote to Americanism. Some British thinkers have declared the problem insolvable, and advised the United Kingdom to revise the land laws in order to prevent emigrants leaving for Canada, there to cease to be British and become mere appendages to the United States; others have asserted that the Dominion's destiny lies between imperialism and chaos, that the American and the cosmopolitan inflow must be stemmed, and the balance of the land of the empire retained for British immigrants alone. All have failed to read the times.

Factors to Consider Reasons for American Success.

The underlying causes must be sought, and the remedies judged accordingly. If this be the whole case, what should it reveal? What, but that there must be certain reasons for American progress, reasons which largely suggest the cure? The seeming success of the American newspaper, current magazines, and novels, is due in the one case to the fact that the British high class weekly assumes a superior literary and political tone, appealing to a limited class, while its competitor is more versatile in seeking to satisfy the multiple desires of the average mind; in the second place, to the inferiority of the cheaper English magazine which concentrates on fiction and other diverting matter, but fails to treat with the social and political issues in that superficial, free-and-easy American manner which appeals to the man on the street; and lastly, to that similarity of circumstances throughout Anglo-Saxon America which makes for a similarity in reading tastes. Largely then, the cure to this state of affairs lies in the adoption of a cultural imperial preference through cheaper postal rates by the British and Canadian Governments, and also by the development in Britain of a new type of publication in addition to that in existence. It should also be remembered that as the circulation of the Canadian press increases through the increase in population, the creation of a type of newspaper suitable to the Canadian mind and to Canada's position in the empire will proceed, and the dependence upon the Republic will decrease.

Already the reaction against reliance upon the American moving pictures is resulting in the formation of Canadian companies to supply Canadian needs. In the field of drama and the stage the tours in recent years of leading British and Australian actors have created a favorable impression and tended to cement the social bonds of empire, and to add additional impetus to the creation in Canada of Canadian theatrical companies. While it is true that in the realm of sport certain American games have tended to displace the Canadian, it should be remembered that this is largely a Canadian temperament and of the value of the games themselves. The latter factor has caused a great Canadian invasion of the United States in the case of hockey, and it is noteworthy that Canadian patriotism for its national games has led to a revival of interest in lacrosse during the last few years, has caused the recent invention of ice-lacrosse, has always resulted in Canada adopting its own rules where possible, as in Canadian rugby, and is at the present time causing a renaissance of the British imperial game of soccer.

Territorial proximity has much to do with any American success in the industrial field. Although England invests more money in the Dominion, the United States reaps a greater harvest, for while British capital, apart from mines and real estate, is chiefly devoted to preference shares and debentures giving a moderate and steady income, American money is employed in controlling factory and retail businesses. Anxious to develop home industries, the Canadian government has established its high tariff, and Canadian cities have offered cheap sites, low taxation, and even cash bonuses as inducements to new corporations. Compelled by the one, aided by the other, while British interest have been dormant, the big American firms have established their branch factories in order to save custom dues either by manufacturing in Canada, or by shipping in as "semi-raw material" goods mainly prepared in the factories over the border to be pieced together in the Dominion. In locating these branch industries in the Dominion American manufacturers have been aided by the published reports of the numerous United States consular agents who in reality have thus constituted a commercial intelligence staff, a work which is recently being done on behalf of the British capitalists by a British commercial agent appointed by the British government. Obviously the remedy is partly in English hands, in their taking advantage of American experience to reilaze more fully the value of Canadian markets, Canadian branch factories, and scientific advertisment in the Canadian press and magazines.

The political peril is a shadow. Canadian parliamentary institutions are based upon the British rather than the American model, the similarity in details and in policies being due to the similarity of the problems to be met. The American immigrant, far from being a problem, trained in agricultural experience on the prairies, along with the native Canadian, has been the pioneer of the plains, revealing the value of the west to British settlers who have followed in his wake. Aside from the political aspect, as Americanization is but one step removed from Canadianization the contact of the American with the Continental European immigrant has greatly aided the native Canadian forces at work, while the fact that old countrymen and Eastern Canadians, loyal to the core, different from the American pace of life, the higher cultural interests, the greater stress of class and caste, occupy the majority of the places of trust, are in fact the framework of western society, prevents any danger of the alienation of the prairie provinces from the British connection.

So-Called Continentalism Part of a Larger Tendency.

It is surprising that the alarmist has not tried to warn the whole world of its danger of becoming Americanized. In Jamaica, Nassau and the other islands of the British West Indies the comparative withdrawal of British military protection, the greater frequency with which American warships are seen when an earthquake or festive occasion demands their presence, the ture of higher wages at the Panama excavations and in the States itself, and the growing commercial and social ties linking them to the republic, has caused the astute (?) foreign observer, who has failed to observe such counter movements as the desire for closer trade with Canada, to believe that these tropical oranges will fall into the open mouth of the United States, skin and all. Likewise the tendency in Australia to follow more and more the custom and fashion of New York in clothing and eating, to patronize American books and publications, to hail alike American actors and pugilists, to trade more and more with the republic, to consider in her law courts American as well as British precedent, to make the very constitution of the commonwealth a second edition of the American, and all this in spite of the wide ocean between, drives the same individual to conclude that the distintegration of the British empire is at hand, rather than to see in these signs the growing reconciliation in every line of human activity of the two divisions of the Anglo-Saxon race. Doubtless if the same gentleman had looked deep enough he might have discovered that the sacred soil of the United Kingdom has not been free from the American contagion. Doubtless, some decades ago he would have seen in the presence of the Japanese student in the American seats of learning the infallible signs of the absorption of the Mikado and the Mikado's by this same America. Doubtless he would have observed in the conversion of China into a republic another ill-fated land the prey to American commercial and political union. Doubtless he would now see in the wonderful influence of the returned immigrant to Europe socially and economically the inevitable attraction of even this continent to a minor place in the orbit of the United States, and would sound the slogan that the whole solar system is eventually to furnish the satellites revolving in ceaseless glory about the American sun. In fact, all this scenery is but one side of the picture, is but one more proof that the development of science is making the world smaller, bringing the remote nations of the globe into inter-relationship, a relationship which is influencing the United States as much as the others.

Causes of Greater American Influence in Canada.

At present it is undeniable that for many years the United States has been exercising a greater influence on Canada than that exercised by Canada on her. Geographical contiguity, similarity of conditions upon both sides of the border making for similar results, these explain why there should be an interaction, but not why one should influence more than the other. But when the more rapid social, economic, populational development of the republic, a progress inevitable, is considered, it will at once be understood why a nation of a hundred million should at present exert greater pressure than that of only eight million; and why in all probability the lesser community will become more powerful in its radiating influence as the years pass and as the economic, social and populational predominance of the other diminishes. Especially when it is considered that this Dominion of Canada is not only influenced by the continentalism of America, the gift of geography, but also by the continentalism of the British Empire, made possible by scientific progress, one will realize why the Dominion has resisted as successfully as she has the natural encroachments of the United States in the past, and why the time will come when the Dominion in its turn will be a greater power for good or evil in the republic.

Common Work of Canada and the United States.

In spite of separate problems, political, social, economic, solved separately, Canada, as part of the British Empire, and the United States have a common work to do. The American experiment has taught the world the strength of democracy in homogenous world states.; the Dominion of Canada has instructed the other dominions of the Empire and the earth at large the practicability of the principle of autonomy within autonomy, of state within state; together they show that the dream is realizable of nations within racial empires, of racial empires within a common cosmopolitan state enforcing international law. Shoulder to shoulder, the two Anglo-Saxon giants must stand in a united effort to achieve this ideal, even though temporarily Europe runs with blood, even though another Attila, another "Sccurge of God," sacks now the temples of learning and of religion.

The Balance Between Americanization and Anglicanization.

It should be Canada's ideal, while retaining what is best in her own traditions and institutions, not only to look for their perfection from the dictates of her own experience, but also to hearken to what the European immigrant and Europe itself can tell us, to what our neighbor to the south can teach us, and, most of all, for the sake of similarity within the Empire, to what the motherland and her daughter dominions can bring us. It is to her advantage, through artificial methods, to give the British standards more equal opportunity in this competition with the American with their geographical advantage, so that she herself can develop a higher standard from contact with both. Canada, more and more, should remember that her peculiar position in the North American continent, enables her to act the part of the loving sister in the reconciliation of the long estranged son and the long estranged father. Through her largely, if ever, Anglo-Saxon unity is to be brought about.

VENGEANCE WAS SWIFT

Four German Destroyers for Loss of the Hawke

OFF DUTCH COAST

British Met With Slight Loss in Sea Engagement

LONDON, Oct. 19. — The British navy has accounted for four more German destroyers, which was encountered off the Dutch coast Saturday afternoon by a British cruiser and four torpedo-boat destroyers were engaged and sunk.

According to a statement made by the Secretary of the British Admiralty, the British vessels in the action were the light cruiser Undaunted and the torpedo-boat destroyers Lance, Lennox, Legion and Loyal.

Thus the British sailors have taken a quick revenge for the sinking by a German submarine on Thursday of the British cruiser Hawke.

The sinking of the warships Saturday makes six torpedo-boat destroyers that have been sent to the bottom of the sea by British gunfire since the beginning of the war, and seven when the torpedo-boat destroyer which was sunk by the submarine E9 is counted.

In this number and without counting the converted merchantmen, such as the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse and the Cap Trafalgar, the score now favors the allies, they having sunk six German and one Austrian cruiser and seven German torpedo-boat destroyers, while there have been unconfirmed reports of the sinking of several Austrian destroyers in the Adriatic Sea. The Germans have sunk eight British and one Russian cruiser, while Australia has lost a submarine by accident. The Russians also claim to have sunk two German submarines, but this the Germans deny.

Up to this afternoon Berlin had not heard officially of the sinking of the British cruiser Hawke, which indicates that the submarine which accomplished it has not yet returned to port.

The cruiser Undaunted was commanded by Capt. Cecil H. Fox, who commanded the cruiser Amphion, which, after sinking the German armed cruiser, Koenigen Luise, was itself destroyed by a German mine on Aug. 6. The Undaunted, a vessel of 3,200 tons, carries two 6-inch and six 4-inch guns.

FINANCING BY SHORT TERM DEBENTURES

Other Cities Following the Example of Peterboro

The Financial Post, a Toronto weekly publication which is a recognized authority on financial matters refers as follows to action recently adopted by this city:—

During the past few days some buying of municipals has been done by the United States. The price obtained under the circumstances was reasonable. Better still is the fact that more inquiries are coming from private sources from across the way. The cause of this undoubtedly is that Canadian municipals can be had to yield over five per cent. Locally also there has been a slightly better demand. We are speaking for the whole of Canada. One house said that for a week they had been able to make expenses.

In some districts, notably Peterborough, the city itself has offered its bonds to its own citizens. Mr. Frank Adams, treasurer of the city of Peterborough, says that "about a month ago it was decided by the city to issue about $150,000 worth of 6 per cent. short term debentures to obtain funds to pay for the street paving, amounting to about $80,000, and construction of outfall sewer, costing about $70,000. Of the amount to be disposed of I have sold to date $80,000 worth. There are inquiries being received daily for more of them. I confidently expect that the whole issue will be taken up locally, as the money is required."

Of course, 6 per cent. debentures, of short date, are very attractive. Other cities are following the example of Peterborough, but not all of them have been equally successful.

The question of financing by short term debentures on a yield basis similar to that of Peterborough has some advantages. Of course, the cost of the money is high, and it is an open question as to whether it is the most economical course to follow. A month ago, however, it was doubtful if the debentures even of an old-established city like Peterborough could be disposed of at all. It was simply the question of getting the necessary cash. To get it at a cost of 6 per cent. cannot, in view of the world's crisis, such as we are at present passing through, be considered bad financing.

Loans by municipalities from the banks are certainly increasing. At the end of August they aggregated over $40,000,000, and that sum was increased, we understand, during September. This fact, however, need not cause alarm. Most of the municipalities are borrowing against incoming taxes, and it is quite possible that within the course of a month or two the municipal loans will show a material contraction.

One of the leading bond houses in Toronto drew the attention of The Financial Post to the fact that practically all the municipalities in Canada were economizing very strictly. The result was that the crop of bonds for the next year or so would not be heavy. At the present time the great pressure is from the larger municipalities, but with one or two notable exceptions new expenditures have ceased. When, therefore, the present supply of bonds in sight is diminishd it will not be substantially added to by new issues during the next year. What new issues are sanctioned will be on a smaller scale. Meanwhile ratepayers are turning down by-laws wholesale. New Year elections will no doubt see many proposals defeated.

RELIEF FUND IN U.S.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19. — The Belgian legation announced that the American relief fund for the stricken people of Belgium now on hand totals $13,000, and that new branch relief committees have been formed in San Francisco, St. Louis and New Orleans. They are also about to be established in Portland, Maine, Richmond and Louisville.

Berlin Claims 260,000 Prisoners.

BERLIN, Oct. 19. — The Minister of War publishes the following list of prisoners up to and including Oct. 1: French, 2,050 officers and 123,000 men; Russian, 2,150 officers and 92,000 men; Belgian, 470 officers and 30,850 men; British, 180 officers and 8,600 men—a total of 4,850 officers and 254,450 men, or 259,300 in all.

OBITUARY

MRS. FRANK SMITH.

A very sad death occurred last night at 10 o'clock, when Mary Robson, beloved wife of Mr. Frank Smith, blacksmith, passed away after an illness extending over a period of three months. The deceased was a daughter of the late Ralph Robson. She was in her 68th year and had lived all her life in Peterborough and vicinity. Her sterling qualities made for her a host of friends, who will be grieved to learn of her demise. She was a member of George Street church and Sunday school, and in the home she was a loving and affectionate wife and mother. She leaves to mourn her loss her sorrowing husband and two daughters, Miss Nellie Smith and Mrs. G. R. Holt; also one sister, Mrs. M. Moore; and three brothers, Messrs. John T., Andrew R. and Robert D., all of the city. The funeral will take place on Tuesday afternoon, October 20, at 2.30. Service at the family residence, 575 Gilchrist street, at 2 o'clock. Rev. R. G. Peever will officiate.

JOSEPH JEFFERSON.

The death took place yesterday morning at St. Joseph's hospital of Joseph Jefferson, aged 28. He had been a resident of this city all his life and was a valued member of the fire department.

He was also a member of St. Peter's T. A. S. and Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Left to mourn his loss is his sorrowing mother. He was highly respected by a large circle of friends, for his cheerful disposition.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 133 Aylmer street, to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock, to St. Peter's cathedral and St. Peter's cemetery.

MRS. ELIZA LEAVIS.

The death took place in Toronto yesterday of Mrs. Eliza Janet Leavis. The funeral will take place from Belleghem's undertaking parlors on Wednesday morning to Dummer Cemetery.

COL. GREY CAPTURED

BERLIN, Oct. 19. — (By wireless telegraphy to Sayville, Long Island.) —A British aeroplane has been brought to the ground near Peronne, France, by a well directed shot. Both the airmen were taken prisoner. The aviator acting in the capacity of observer, was later found to be Col. Grey, a brother of the British Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

German Mines In Scheldt.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 19—(Via London.)—The Germans, according to The Handelsblad, have laid mines in the River Scheldt, near Antwerp. Skippers bound for Antwerp have been requested to ask instructions how to proceed at Hansweert, a port in the Estuary of the Scheldt.

Austria Calls On the Unfit.

VENICE, Oct. 19.—(Via Paris.)—The Austrian and Hungarian Governments have decided to summon to the colors all men between the ages of 24 and 36 liable to service in the Landstrum who hitherto have not served owing to physical disability or other causes.

COLONEL MARITZ WILL RECEIVE SHORT SHRIFT

The action of Colonel Maritz and his commando in joining forces with the Germans in the North West Cape Province of South Africa has naturally created surprise among the Boers. Doubtless Colonel Maritz's action was stimulated by the resignation of General Beyers of his position as Commandant General of the Union Defence Troops. General Botha has taken supreme command of the South African Expeditionary Force and, as an overwhelming majority of the Boers are loyal to Great Britain, Colonel Maritz will receive a short shrift. In tendering his resignation to General Smuts, Minister of Defence, ex-General Beyers stated that to his utmost surprise, parliament confirmed the resolution adopted by the Government namely, to conquer German South-West Africa without any provocation towards the Union from the Germans. Government must be aware that by far the great majority of the Dutch-speaking people of the Union decidedly disapproved of their crossing the frontier. The fact that these Ministers of the British cabinet had resigned showed that, even in England, there was a strong minority who could not be convinced of the righteousness of a war with Germany. It was said that war was being waged against the barbarity of the Germans. He had forgiven but not forgotten all the barbarities perpetrated during the South African war. With very few exceptions all farms—not to mention many towns—were so many "Louvains."

The allegations made in Parliament — namely, that the Germans have already violated their frontier, were ungrounded. Apparently the Government longed for some transgression by the Germans in German South-West Africa, but had been disappointed in this, for so far not a single German soldier had crossed our frontier.

The reply of the Minister of Defence emphasizes in the most complete and unquestionable manner the crushing contempt of the South African Government for the insignificant number of malcontents, represented by men of the Beyers and Maritz type.

Fairness of British Rule.

Penned by a man who, fifteen years ago, was one of the most active of the Boer Generals against the British forces it is all the more remarkable in its vindication of the fairness of British rule. General Smuts wrote as follows under date of Pretoria, September 19th:—

Sir,—It was with regret that I received your letter of the 15th instant tendering your resignation as the Commandant General, Union Defence Force, and as an officer of the Union.

The circumstances under which that resignation took place and the terms in which you endeavor to justify your action tend to leave a very painful impression. It is true that it was known to me that you entertained objections against the war operations in German South-West Africa, but I never received the impression that you would resign. On the contrary all the information in the possession of the Government was communicated to you, all plans were discussed with you, and your advice was followed to a large extent.

The principal officers were appointed on your recommendation and with your concurrence, and the plan of operations which is now being followed is largely the one recommended by yourself at a conference of officers. My last instructions to you before I left for Cape Town to attend the special session of Parliament were that in my absence you should visit certain regiments on the German border, and it was well understood between us that immediately the war operations were somewhat further advanced and co-operation among the various divisions would be practicable, you should yourself undertake the chief command in German South-West Africa. The attitude of the Government after this remained unchanged, and was approved by Parliament after full discussion. One would have expected that that approval would make the matter easier for you, but now I find that you anticipated that Parliament would disapprove of the policy of the Government, and that your disappointment in this became the reason for your unexpected action.

In order to make your motives clearer, the reasons for your resignation were explained in a long political argument which was immediately communicated to the Press and came into the hands of the Government long after publication. I need not tell you that all these circumstances in connection with your resignation have made a most unpleasant impression on my colleagues and myself. But this unpleasant impression have even been aggravated by the allegations contained in your letter. Your bitter attack on Great Britain is not entirely baseless, but is the more unjustifiable coming as it does in the midst of a great war from the Commandant-General of one of the British Dominions. Your reference to barbarous acts during that South African War cannot justify the criminal devastation of Belgium and can only be calculated to sow hatred and even division among the people of South Africa.

You forget to mention that since the South African war the British people gave South Africa her entire freedom under a constitution which makes it possible for us to realize our national ideals along our own lines, and which, for instance, allows you to write with impunity a letter for which you would without a doubt be liable in the German empire to the extreme penalty.

As regards your other statements, they have been answered and disposed of in parliament. From these discussions it will be apparent that neither the British Empire nor South Africa was the aggressor in this struggle. War was in the first instance declared by Austria-Hungary, and thereafter by Germany, under circumstances in which the British government employed its utmost powers to safeguard the neutrality of Belgium.

So far as we ourselves are concerned, our coast is threatened, our mail boats are arrested, and our borders are invaded by the enemy. This later does not occur, as you say, in an involuntary manner, and with an apology, which latter, at any rate, was never tendered to the government. Under these circumstances it is absurd to speak about the aggressive action on the part of the Union, seeing that altogether with the British Empire we have been drawn against our wish and will and entirely in self-defence into this war.

As regards your insinuation concerning the loan of £7,000,000 which the British government was kind enough to grant us and for which the public of the Union, as evidenced recently in parliament, are most grateful, it was of such a despicable nature that there was no necessity to make any comment thereon. It only shows to what extent your mind has been obscured by political bias.

You speak about duty and honor. My conviction is that the people of South Africa will in these dark days when the government as well as the people of South Africa are put to the supreme test, have a clearer conception of duty and honor than is to be deduced from your letter and action. For the Dutch speaking section, in particular, I cannot conceive anything more fatal and humiliating than a policy of lip loyalty in fair weather and of a policy of neutrality and pro-German sentiment in days of storm and stress. It may be that our peculiar internal circumstances and our backward condition after the great war will place a limit on what we can do, but nevertheless I am convinced that the people will support the government in carrying out the mandate of parliament, and in this manner, which is the only legitimate one, fulfil their duty to South Africa and to the Empire, and maintain their dearly-won honor unblemished for the future.

Your resignation is hereby accepted.

(Sgd.) J. C. SMUTS.

WOULD CURB PRESS

Western Canada Germans Resent Tone of Papers.

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.—A petition to the Government which will hardly be acted upon has been received from the German-Canadian Alliance of Saskatchewan, requesting that certain restrictions be placed on the English press of Canada. The petition sets forth that the press "is not doing justice to German civilization, but is bound to do harm in this country by stirring up race hatred and ill-feeling.

"The work of upbuilding must be endangered if the press should without restriction continue unnecessarily to hurt the feelings of a considerable section of the Canadian people."

Demands of the Inner Man.

The military maneuvered. All afternoon the attackers had attacked and the defenders defended with conspicuous lack of incident or bravery. Operations were beginning to drag horribly when the white flag went up.

The officers in command of the attackers started in amazement.

"A flag of truce!" he exclaimed. "What do they want?"

The sergeant major endeavored to cover up a smile.

"They say, sir," he reported, "that, as it's tea time, they'd like to exchange a couple of privates for a can of condensed milk—if you can afford it."—London Answers.

Clever Wives.

"Every time Billinger goes in bathing he gets cramps."

"I should think it would worry his wife."

"It did, but she's fixed him all right. She made a bathing suit for him and declared he must wear it every time he goes in."

"Well?"

"And now he won't go near the water."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Even.

Two little six-year-old girls who had been former neighbors, but who had moved to different parts of the city, met after a lapse of six months and were swapping the news.

"I have a surprise for you," said one little girl. "Our cat hatched four kittens."

"That's nothing," replied the other little girl. "Our dog laid four puppies."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

An Early Underground Road.

London's underground railway stations are decidedly different from what they were when first built. A writer in London Society of May, 1863, described Farringdon street station as resembling "a family vault on a large scale, with a series of hip baths introduced diagonally into it for light and ventilation. The hip baths are lined with glazed tiles, and to keep the resemblance to their prototype we find the leakage drained off at the end into a vessel something like a soap dish. A dense fog filled the place when I was there, and, as the people waiting for the trains were seen wandering up and down the platform, one might have imagined them ghosts of the great unwashed condemned to linger in sight of those lavatories they neglected in their mortal life."

Acclamation Is Assured.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Oct. 19. — It has been definitely decided by the local Liberal executive committee that there will be no contest to oppose the election of Hon. Finlay G. Macdiarmid, Minister of Public Works, who will on Wednesday next, Oct. 21, be nominated in his new capacity of Cabinet Minister. On that evening a public reception will be given him here. It is expected the following will be present: Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor; Hon. I. B. Lucas, Provincial Treasurer; Sir Adam Beck, David Marshall, M.P.P., and Andrew Brower, M.P.P.

Winter Tents For Soldiers.

CORNWALL, Ont., Oct. 19.—Acting under instructions of the officer commanding the third division at Kingston, Col. MacDonald, Cornwall Canal, has purchased twelve large tents, ninety-three double-decked iron cots and fourteen Quebec heaters, which will be utilised in housing and making comfortable the troops now protecting the Cornwall Canal during the winter.

Hospital at Dinard.

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—The Government has received a cablegram from Hon. Geo. H. Perley, stating that the French Government has decided to establish at Dinard, on the west coast of France, the hospice Canadian, which is to be provided and maintained by Canada.

London Prepared for Kaiser's Zeppelins

What the facts, as Britain is aware of them, of the possibilities of a German air attack on London? There is a rumor that the Germans are secretly building a large number of Zeppelins, but this is an obvious impossobility. Zeppelins, like warships, take time to build. Before the war began Germany's entire stock of Zeppelins numbered perhaps 12, and approximately half of this number have been aleady put out of action. The most generous estimate would not give the Gemans now more than five or six Zeppelins in various stages of completion.

Bomb Dropping.

In the light of an attack, what are the comparative advantages of the dirigible and the aeroplane? The dirigible, in the form of a Zeppelin, could easily make the journey from the continent to London and back. Fair weather, however, would be an absolute necessity. An airship of this type is capable at the most of carrying a cargo of from three to four tons, which, in the form of explosives, would prove a distinct menace.

The advantage of the dirigible over the aeroplane for bomb-dropping principally lies in the fact that she is able to hover over a position and release her missile vertically but this advantage is to a large extent negatived because she must remain at a high altitude for her own safety, and, in consequence, accurate aiming is not easy. With the aeroplane, hovering over a target is an impossibility. She relies entirely upon her speed for her support in the air, and this disadvantage makes accurate aim problematical.

On the supposition of an attack by German aircraft over London, what is there to fear? The missile the aircraft will carry will most likely be large and small bombs filled with large explosives, steel arrows, and possibly bullets of shrapnel size. An accurate-aimed bomb would be capable of doing much damage provided it hit the right objective. Dropped on a magazine, for instance, the effect on the material would be sufficient to cause a more or less violent explosion. Dropped among other buildings the effect would be purely local, and not of much consequence probably.

Deadly Weapons.

So far as the individual is concerned, what is more dangerous is the likelihood of being hit by the smaller missiles. The steel arrows used by German airmen are said to be released in clusters of 500 at a time. The discharging mechanism employed so contrives the distribution of the arrows that they fall over as wide an area as possible. In the case of these arrows and bullets it is sufficient to release them without any initial momentum, because the speed which they gather in flight, due to gravity, ensure their reaching the earth with considerable velocity, which increases in proportion to the altitude attained by the aircraft.

If a Zeppelin flying at a height of 5,000 feet—where, by the way, she would be a ready target for our own anti-aircraft guns—released her arrows and bullets, they would reach the ground with a velocity of about 450 feet per second. In the case of shrapnel bullets, weighing, say, twenty to the pound, this would mean a striking energy of about 160 foot-pounds. As an energy of sixty foot-pounds is considered by experts to be sufficient to put a combatant out of action, we can readily see that falling missiles from aircraft constitute a real danger to the individual. At an altitude of a little over a mile the arrows and bullets would drop with a velocity of about 630 feet per second, with a proportionate increase in death-dealing effectiveness.

So it must be said of the power of the dirigible and the aeroplane if they were ever allowed to be in a position to drop missiles on London. It will not be easy for them to approach the city, however, because our authorities have not been slow to recognize the necessity and provide means of defense. Besides the operations of our own craft, designed to meet the sky marauders in their own element, we have at various important strategic points small but powerful guns, capable of firing at high altitude.

Speed of Shrapnel.

The size and capacity of these guns are not definitely known to the public but it is certain that they are quick-firers of small caliber. The heaviest projectile they fire would probably be about eight pounds in weight and two inches in diameter, with a muzzle velocity of say 2,500 feet per second. Such a shell would be capable of reaching 3,000 feet vertically into the air at which height it would still retain a very high velocity.

If shrapnel shell were fired and burst at such a height a rain of bullets would spread over a large area, making it extremely dangerous for either dirigible or aeroplane. Owing to the rapid motion of aircraft it is essential that shell should reach the target in quick time, but even at the great altitude of 6,000 feet such a shell as that mentioned would take less than three seconds to reach its objective.

Even rifle fire is of great service in repelling aircraft attacks. A bullet from our service rifle, fired at an airship 3,000 feet above the ground, would still retain more than sufficient energy to kill the aviator or to damage his engine irreparably. The bullet would reach such a target in about three seconds. At the height of a mile, which the bullet would attain in less than six seconds, it would still possess sufficient power to give the aviator a knock-out blow.

Despite all the rumors which have recently gained currency, therefore, London is more than ready to meet the enemy's airships.

Charlie Banks' Car Takes Exceptions to Surroundings

(Lindsay Post.)

People near the corner of Kent and William streets yesterday afternoon about four o'clock had a few thrills and some fun watching an automobile in difficulty. It was a car belonging to C. R. Banks, 324 George Street, Peterboro, but the owner was not with the car. The man who was with it stopped near McCarty's jewelery store and didn't seem to be able to get the car to move although the engine was running beautifully. It was like a balky horse,—breathed and switched its tail but snorted and stopped when an attempt was made to move it.

Chief Short advised the driver to move to some garage, which he proceeded to do by backing still further carrying out the balky horse idea. It seems the forward gears were worn out, but the reverse ones were alright.

A wide detour was made crab fashion up Kent St. till near the Post Office, down to William St. and around the corner north to Thomas Garage, where instead of entering the driver backed against the curb at the far side of the street and was only prevented from backing through L. Wickett's tailor shop window by the heavy beam beneath it.

The inner works of the car are being repaired and the Peterboro man will take a visit here in a day or two to drive the car home.

LOCALS DEFEAT LINDSAY BUT LOSE TO PORT HOPE

A fairly large crowd were present at Nicholls Oval on Saturday afternoon to witness the two teams of the Peterboro Collegiate Institute do battle on the rugby field with teams from T.C.S., Port Hope and Lindsay. The L.C.I. had their first team matched against the first team of the local institute and for the first time in a number of years the visitors were made to bite the dust, the locals winning by 23-11.

The game was one of the best exhibitions of rugby witnessed in this city for some time. Clean and hard fought from start to finish, it afforded excitement for the fans who have been more or less deprived of seeing good rugby for quite a period. The Peterboro team showed everything that goes to make up a good team. Clever running, good kicking and nifty tackling. Although Lindsay secured the first tally the P.C.I. boys hit their stride and soon took the lead. At half time the score was in their favor by 11-6. After half time the work of the halves was brought into great prominence. Smyth tore off several long runs as did Jobbitt while the booting of Long kept the visitors in their own territory. The final score was 23-11.

The P.C.I. team was as follows:—flying wing, Huycke; halves, Jobbitt, Long and Smith; quarter, Knapman; outside wings, Carmichael, McNeeley; middle wings, Eastwood, Austin; inside wings, Smith, Canniff; scrimmage, Crawford, Stevenson and Kirk.

Officials: Brown referee; Weeks, judge of play.

P.C.I. II. Outclassed.

The game between the P.C.I. seconds and the team from Trinity College, Port Hope, was rather a disappointment as the visitors to be T.C.S. seconds instead of T.S.C. thirds with whom the game had been arranged. It was all T.C.S. for the locals were powerless against the weight and size of their opponents. At half time the score stood 40-1 and when the final whistle blew it was 45-2 in favor of the Port Hope representatives. The only tallies for the Peterboro team were made from O'Brien's punting.

The teams:—

P.C.I.:— flying wing, Theobald; halves, O'Brien, Frost and Skuce; quarter, O'Connell; outside wings, Lafferty, Cunningham; middle wings, McLelland, Lyle; inside wings, Common, Austin; scrimmage, Welsh, Byers, Williamson.

T.C.S.:— Flying wing, McLaughlin; halves, Reid, Bruce, Johnston; quarter, Southerland; outside wings, Harstone, Campbell; middle wings, Haultain, Chapple; inside, Rice, Kelk; scrimmage, Copeland, Clarke, Smith.

Officials: referee, Hone; judge of play, Reid.

"No," replied his wife sweetly, "I've come back for something I remembered."

COMMENT As You Like it

The fans thus far have demonstrated very little interest in the rugby attractions presented by the Collegiate Institute teams. Papers of the larger cities reveal the fact that Peterboro boys are winning prominence in the leading rugby organizations of Canada yet very few local enthusiasts watched any of them chasing the pig skin. The chance to see future stars in the early stages is now open. Attend the P.C.I. rugby games, encourage the boys and see the Pete Campbell, Frank Heffernan, Dick Sheehy, Ross Craig and Harold Hill of tomorrow in action.

It is to be regretted that the officials of the T.C.S. rugby teams do not keep their word. It was an understood fact that the P.C.I. second would meet the T.C.S. thirds on Saturday but the T.C.S. second team was brought up and naturally walked away with the locals. That sort of work has a tendency to hurt the game which is now enjoying a new life in this city.

The scribe who is dodging the censors and pounding out the "random notes on current sports" in the Toronto Star is heralding before the public that McGill has no honor and is imbued with the "win-at-any cost" spirit. It seems hardly necessary for the Star to attempt bringing about changes in Montreal. There are many much needed reforms in Toronto sporting circles which could and would be brought about with the newspaper assistance.

Austro-German Army Tries in Vain to Cross the Vistula

PETROGRAD, Oct. 19.—The London Telegraph's special correspondent says: "So far the battle of the Vistula has gone in favor of Russia. The Austro-Germanic armies at all points have failed to force the passage of the River Vistula. Everywhere the enemy has been compelled to assume the defensive. There is nothing to justify the assumption that anything like a finally decisive result has been attained. The enemy retired in god order, without forfeiting any integral portion of his strength. The Germans made a very determined and pertinacious fight to get a footing on the right bank of the Vistula. With an enormous mass of artillery they kept up a terrific bombardment day and night. Under cover of an incessant rain of projectiles attempts were made to throw pontoons across the river at no fewer than eighteen separate points. However, all efforts were in vain. The Germans were repulsed everywhere. Large quantities of bridging material were destroyed. The enemy's losses must be very heavy.

"The attempts of the Germans to cross the Niemen, near Druskeniki, cost them about 20,000 men. On the East Prussian front the operations have taken the character of a siege, the Germans offering a stubborn resistance along a carefully prepared line of retrenchment. They had been reinforced from East Prussian garrisons. The recent fighting in this region has been of a most determined and sanguinary nature. The difficulties of the troops had been rendered much more severe by the torrential rains which fell during several days and nights almost without intermission. Many bogs, in which the region abounds, have been transformed into lakes. Those portions of Suwalki government which were occupied by the Germans were completely denuded of all means of subsistence, so it is impossible to rely on local supplies."

SOME SHARPSHOOTER!

Senegalese Soldier Met German Patrol and Bagged Party.

FROM THE BATTLEFRONT, Oct. 19.—(Via Paris.)—As an instance of individual courage among the native troops, a French Senegalese sharpshooter, acting as the servant of a French general, was ordered to proceed to a certain place near the front at a certain time within the general's automobile. He arrived at the stated time with the machine piled with lances, swords, accoutrements, saddles and helmets.

The native had encountered a German patrol in the road, stopped his machine, jumped out with his rifle and killed the entire party.

No Details of Contingent.

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.—Details of the composition of the second contingent have not yet been received from the War Office. The Canadian Government is urging that these details be furnished without delay, in order that organization, preparation and training may proceed immediately. It is expected that the War Office will forward these details within a few days.

Modestly we would call attention to the fact that in August we selected Kelly, Mitchell, Bierbauer, Trout and Kelly Harris as the men in the Canadian League who would be drafted. The list has been announced and the only change is Baldwin of Hamilton instead of the fighting Erie outfielder. At that the fans will agree that Kelly Harris had a good year and looked very promising. It wasn't a defect in his ball playing that kept him down.

With the passing of Louis Bierbauer into another league one of the most popular firstbasemen in the Canadian League will be absent next season. Louis had friends in every centre and carries the good wishes of all. He goes to Lincoln in the Western League.

It is generally thought that Kelly, the Peterboro backstop who has been drafted, will be on the pay roll of one of the clubs in the Western League. Trout will be found with the Leafs.

Humor and Philosophy

A PROBLEM.

WHAT would you do with a million or two—
Spend it or lend it or give it away,
Have a good time to the very last dime,
Making a splash and a corking display?
Maybe you would burn it up doing good,
Giving a boost to the ones in distress,
Lifting the pack from some suffering back,
Being first aid to the weak, more or less.

That would be cash for a sizable dash,
Only a million or two, but enough
If you were careful and did nothing rash
On it to tack quite a peach of a bluff.
You might cavort as a bit of a sport,
Wearing a suit that was loud as a band,
Feeding your face at the highest priced place,
Living on only the fat of the land.

Would you remember the friends who were true
When you were busted and shorter than short,
Sticking to them like a dime's worth of glue,
Passing perfectos and things of that sort,
Or would you pose with the end of your nose
Up in the air like a flag on a pole,
Shunning the guy, with a shine on his clothes
When you had reached that delectable goal?

How do you know what you'd do with the dough?
Calm yourself. Never a chance you will get.
You may have money, a dollar or so—
That is a safe and a sensible bet—
But it's a pleasure to go in a trance,
Thinking of what you would do with the dross,
Though you despair of a ghost of a chance,
For but a fraction to e'er come across.

Looking Ahead.

"I have just telephoned to our new neighbors to ask them if there is anything we can lend them," said Mrs. Scrimpins.

"Aren't you getting wonderfully generous?" asked her husband.

"Oh, it's just as well to be neighborly. Most of our stuff is pretty well worn, and as they moved in I saw a lot of things that will be worth having when it comes our turn to borrow."—Washington Star.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

We are ready to forgive the most heinous offense when our rights are in nowise touched by them.

It sounds easy when we hear people say that a child should be trained in orderliness, but before one gets half through with the job one's own nervous system is in an alarming state of disorder.

I'VE GOT AN IDEA!

Don't tell your ailments to your friends unless you want them to get back at you by insisting upon your accepting their remedies.

Finding fault with your neighbors sometimes is only your sly way of boasting of your own qualities.

It is a good deal easier to raise a disturbance than it is to raise the revenue to defray the costs.

It is the experience of most of us that we go blithely along our way imposing day after day upon the rights of our fellow creatures and trampling on their feelings until some day for some trifle light as air they turn and rend us. Then we wonder what makes them so narrow and irrational anyway.

Some minds appear to be irrational because they are quick and others entirely logical because they are stupid.

It doesn't take any of us long to tell all we know. It is what we think we know that takes time, energy and hot air.

The Natural Way.

A good story is being told on Alderman Rounder—you know, that big, fat one who sits over on the right hand side and votes for all of the franchises. He would rather vote for a franchise than eat, and, indeed, that is how he is able to eat so well.

The other day he had occasion to go home during the middle of the day to get some important papers. But, although he knew the general directions and went to the right street without a guide, he couldn't find the place.

Did he ask the police to help him or look in the city directory? Not much. He knew an easier way. He waited until nightfall and then went straight home. He knew it in the dark.

Appeal Allowed In Cordage Case

At Osgoode hall, Toronto, on Saturday, Judge Lennox gave judgment allowing the appeal of S. T. Medd, acting for the liquidator, against the report of Judge Huycke made here on August 22, which struck off the name of Hugh Ferguson from the list of contributories to the Canadian Cordage and Manufacturing Co., now defunct. E. L. Goodwill, of this city, represented Ferguson.

PARSONS HAD NO KICK ON SUNDAY

Majority of Citizens Went to Church

Peterboro citizens were on their good behavior yesterday and the church services were largely attended.

Accommodation at George Street Church was taxed to capacity when Dr. Gordon spoke last evening and many chairs were used. Those who failed to go early and avoid the rush, could not get a seat and as a result Rev. R. Pogue noticed quite a number from George Street in his large congregation.

Large congregations heard the messages of the Rev. H. T. Crossley at St. James' Church and at the Anglican churches where St. Luke's Day and Children's Day were observed, unusually large congregations were present. At the Sunday School session at All Saints' Rev. H. J. Keith gave an address to the young people on the Union Jack.

At Charlotte Street Methodist Church, the litany for the army and navy was sung by choir and congregation at both services. At the evening service at St. Andrew's Church, Rev. Jas. Rollins spoke on A few Business Principles applied to Religion.

Interest was added to the services at Park Steet Church, by a rally of the Sunday School, and an address in the evening by Mr. Jos. Wearing.

MISSION AT ST. JOHN'S

Will Commence Tuesday Evening, With Bishop Mills Presiding

His Lordship Bishop Mills, of Kingston, will arrive in the city tomorrow to conduct parochial mission services in St. John's church, beginning tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. These services will be of an entirely informal nature and will be largely of an educational character, in regard to the integral principle of religion as applied to daily life.

The mission's object will be not to make any sensational appeals or to use startling methods, but to set forth clearly the spirit life and to endeavor to build up, renew and vitalize our sense of communion with God. There will be an afternoon service, starting with Wednesday, from 4.30 to 5.30. People who attend are at liberty to go and come when they like. The mission will close next Sunday. Bishop Mills conducted the St. George's Day service here last spring. He created a profound impression by his powerful appeal. For a bishop he is a comparatively young man. He was consecrated some three or four years ago. He is English by birth and education. He has worked in this country for about 15 years. He was head master of the Boys' College in Lennoxville, Quebec.

$100,000 Church At North Bay

Yesterday was a red letter day in the history of North Bay. His Lordship Bishop Scollard blessed the basement of the new French Roman Catholic church, which is in course of erection. It will be a number of years before the main body is finished, and in the meantime the basement will be used for services, as will be the case in the Church of the Immaculate Conception in East City. The new edifice at North Bay will cost one hundred thousand dollars and will be the largest in the north country.

Regina Officer is Here for Prisoner

Thomas Dann, of the provincial police, arrived here this morning to take back to Regina, Saskatchewan, Manuel Hannah, who was arrested here on a charge of horse stealing. The officer leaves in the morning with his man. He will arrive in Saskatchewan about Thursday night. Mr. Dann served on the mounted police for a number of years.

Activity At Camp

Canadians Are Getting Down to Hard Work

LONDON, Oct. 19. — Sunday has been anything but a day of rest on Salisbury Plains. The camp begins to wear the aspect of great liveliness. The weather has been rather chilly so far. There has been no rain, thanks to its situation, though even weeks of downpour would not render the camp permanently uncomfortable. The general health among the contingent is excellent. A few minor casualties have been reported, chiefly among the men handling horses. The steeds were all tethered in the open and badly needed grooming.

Every department is working smoothly, the men having an ample supply of wholesome food and comfortable bedding.

The Sunday papers contained many appreciative references to the arrival of the Canadians as well as photographs, though the photographer so far has had a rather lean time among the Canadians where the man with the camera who ventures near the dock approaches has about as short a life as a rat in a crowd of terriers. A small regiment of camera fiends journeyed especially to Plymouth, eager to glorify the first Canadian to step ashore, but all such hopes were dashed by policemen impregnably supported by the inexorable attitude of the superintendent towards press representatives of every kind, despite the official intimation that descriptive accounts of the landing of the Canadians would be welcomed.

The Weekly Despatch cartoonist has a happy effort yesterday depicting Germany and Austria as babes in the woods with the Canadian robin bringing a maple leaf to assist at their burial.

One Sunday paper writer observes: "When the troops were landed, one of the things that struck the onlooker was the freedom of good fellowship among them. On the shore the officers and men fraternized, and some were seen arm in arm, but when on duty the discipline is of the strictest kind."

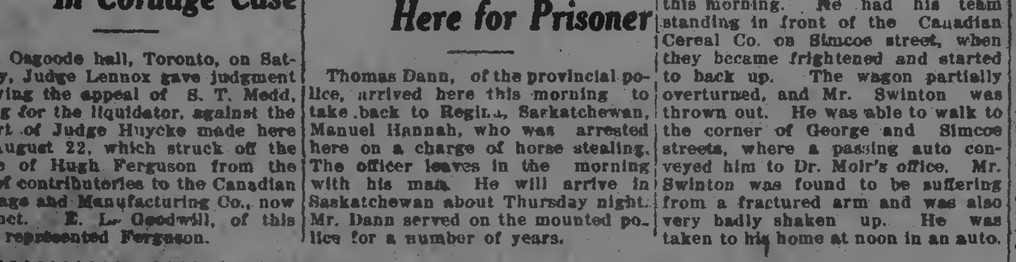
Good Reasons For an Election

The local Federal member having received an urgent request from a distinguished Toronto Liberal begging him to frown upon all thoughts of an election, replied as follows:—

"Dear sir,—Seven of our chief business measures have been killed by the Senate. The East is furious and so is the West. We have been literally kicked to pieces by a hostile Senate. This will be the issue at the next election whether it is held now or some other time. If the war is not made an issue as it cannot be and will not be why should we not ask the people what they have to say about the Senate? No one can deny that it is a most critical time in our constitutional history apart altogether from the war. There is no use in going on holding sessions and if the Government at this time can change three ministers surely the country can change them all if it sees fit. Therefore it cannot be pleaded that we are taking advantage of the war. What objection can there be to asking the people at this time or at any other which they want—rule by the Senate or rule by the people? I admit that if this question is not vital there should be no election but who will deny in the face of a wholesale and malicious partisan slaughter by the Senate that any possible time is a proper time for dealing with such an enemy of popular rights?"

Accident to Wm. Swinton of Smith

Mr. William Swinton, a well-known resident of the township of Smith, and father of Miss J. Swinton, book-keeper at the city treasurer's office, had the misfortune of meeting with a very painful accident this morning. He had his team standing in front of the Canadian Cereal Co. on Simcoe street, when they became frightened and started to back up. The wagon partially overturned, and Mr. Swinton was thrown out. He was able to walk to the corner of George and Simcoe streets, where a passing auto conveyed him to Dr. Moir's office. Mr. Swinton was found to be suffering from a fractured arm and was also very badly shaken up. He was taken to his home at noon in an auto.



"ENGLAND EXPECTS EVERY MAN WILL DO HIS DUTY"

Tomorrow night is the eve of one of the greatest of British victories, the Battle of Trafalgar. Tomorrow night in Peterborough an effort is being made to swell the fund, which has for its object the care of the wives and children of the brave men who are fighting for their country. The Peterborough Choral Society have been working hard to put on the oratorio Judas Maccabaeus, a work full of inspiring martial music. The principals are giving their services gratis for this occasion. Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons have also given the Opera House free for this night. Peterborough's representatives in both Dominion and Provincial Houses will be present; also His Worship the Mayor and the city aldermen. There should not be a vacant seat on Tuesday night so secure yours now. Remember, Peterborough expects that every man will do his duty.

A Hunting Trip.

The hunting season is now at hand; the wild duck may be found feeding in marsh and rice bed, and partridge and other game abound in the woods. Sportsmen are planning their hunting trip and many will visit the game lands of Ontario. No better hunting territory is found in the province than the woods and streams reached by the Canadian Pacific Railway. Ticket Agents of the company will gladly furnish detailed information regarding routing, fares, etc., to various points, or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

FIRST TRAVELLER TO REGISTER AT EMPRESS

Mr. W. G. Coburn, a well-known, and popular traveller, from Toronto, was the first one to put his autograph on the register at the new Empress Hotel. Mr. Coburn has something of interest to tell to the rest of the "boys" on the road.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

Sunday afternoon the boys' department held their annual Bible study rally, when a large and appreciative audience of boys listened to H. B. Cowan speak on the value of Bible study. Mr. Cowan's talk to the boys will be one that will be long remembered by them, and the advice and instruction they received from the address will be a great help to them in the making of the all-round man, physically, mentally and spiritually. There are Bible study groups for the collegiate, intermediate, business boys and school boys, all taught by competent teachers.

This week the boys of the city will have the privilege of seeing the work done by the association for the boys of the city. The rooms will be open from 4 to 6 in the afternoon and 7.30 to 9 p.m. in the evening to visitors. All boys of the city will be made welcome and shown through the building by the staff.

The membership campaign is in full swing now and the boys are working to increase the membership by one hundred by the first of November.

CRITICISMS ANSWERED BY CHURCHILL

value of Mr. Churchill's policy from the sentimental view.

"The prolongation of the defence, due to the arrival of the division," the statement says, "enabled the ships in the harbor to be rendered useless, and many steps of importance to be taken. It is too early now to judge what effect the delaying even for five or six days of at least 60,000 Germans, Antwerp may have had upon the fortunes of the general battle to the southward. It certainly was powerful and helpful apart from the military experiences which have been invaluable. The division have been the witnesses of ruthlessness of the German foe towards a smaller and innocent enemy. These facts inspire all ranks to fit themselves in the shortest possible time for service in the field, not merely as fortress troops, but as mobile units. The Belgian people will never forget that men of the Royal navy and Royal marines were with them in their darkest hour of misery, as, please God, they may also be with them when Belgium is restored to her own by the armies of the allies."

CANADIAN HOSPITAL IN FRANCE

Ottawa, Oct. 19. — The Government received a cable from Hon. Geo. H. Perley stating that the hospital of fifty beds offered by the Canadian Government to France will be established by the French Government in the Casino at Dinard, on the west coast of France.

The Electors of East City

I have been a resident of the City of Peterborough for many years, and am well known to the residents of the East Ward. I feel, therefore, that I have a right to become a candidate for Alderman in the East Ward, at the request of many electors.

My platform will be, that greater efforts should be made to induce the street railway to enter the East Ward, by the Hunter Street bridge, and I would strongly urge a revote to be taken on the Dalhousie Street bridge, in order that an outlet might be given for the workingmen of the East Ward, to get to the factories, without coming up to Hunter Street to cross the river.

You are aware, that the streets and sidewalks in East City have not received the attention to keep them in a proper state of repair. This should be remedied, and by an energetic campaign, which I can give, East City needs will be brought to the attention of the Council, and sufficient appropriation obtained, to keep the East Ward in a proper state of repair. This is the main thoroughfare for the whole traffic coming from East Peterborough, and from the North side of Peterboro County into the City of Peterborough, and we are entitled to a larger proportion of the city's monies to be expended for the benefit of East City, which will result in the ultimate benefit to the merchants and business men of the City of Peterborough.

If elected, I assure the residents of East City, that I will make every effort to see that the affairs of my Ward are properly conducted and taken care of, that the street lighting is installed to properly light East Ward, and that East City will not have the grounds to complain, by reason of neglect, at the hands of the City Council.

I remain,

Yours truly,
G. L. HAY.

To the Electors of Ward Five

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

Having been nominated as alderman for ward five to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of ex-alderman Anderson I hereby solicit your vote and influence in my behalf.

I desire briefly to state that I am in favor of all facilities that will obtain for the residents of East City easy and speedy access to all parts west of the river.

If I am elected and the people who placed me in the council are not satisfied with my representation of them they can find an easy remedy at the next elections.

Yours truly,
ARCHIE WEIR.

THE JAPANESE DESTROY A GERMAN TORPEDO BOAT---RUSSIA WILL BE DRY

ELEVEN OF THIRTEEN MUNICIPALITIES VOTE FOR HYDRO RADIALS

Co-operation in York County Project is Assured by Heavy Majorities Polled For Initial Publicly-Owned Road — Newmarket and Uxbridge Township Are Against.

TORONTO, Oct. 20.—With the exception of the town of Newmarket and the Township of Uxbridge all the municipalities along the route of the proposed Toronto and northeastern district Hydro-radial gave substantial majorities for the bylaw submitted yesterday, which empowers their municipal councils to enter into an agreement with the provincial commission for the construction and operation of the road. According to the terms of the bylaw each municipality will issue debentures covering the proportion of cost for which it will be responsible, and these debentures will be deposited with the commission as security in financing the undertaking.

Sir Adam Beck does not anticipate that it will be necessary for the municipalities to make any actual payments, as interest and sinking fund charges will be amply covered by revenue received from the railway and the sale of power along the route of the radial.

Now that the electors have endorsed the bylaw it only remains for the municipal councils to give it the third reading and the commission will then be free to start the construction of the line.

Some subdivisions had not been heard from at a late hour last night, but these are not likely to make any serious alteration in the result.

RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT WILL NOT AGAIN MAKE OR SELL ALCOHOLIC DRINKS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Petrograd, Oct. 20.—The Russian government will never again embark in the manufacture and sale of alcoholic drinks. The Russian Union of Abstinence addressed to Emperor Nicholas the solicitation that he forbid forever the sale of spirituous liquors in Russia.

His Majesty replied in a telegram sent in the name of the Grand Duke Constantine, and addresesd to the president of the Alliance, in which he said: "I thank you. I long ago decided to interdict for all time in Russia the sale of alcoholic drinks by the government."

German Torpedo Boat Falls Victim to the Japanese

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Tokio, Oct. 20.—It is officially announced that the German torpedo boat S 90, which escaped from Tsing Tau under cover of darkness, has been found aground and destroyed by the Japanese 60 miles south of Kiao Chow Bay.

Peking, Oct. 20.—A despatch from Tsing Tau says the Japanese cruiser Takachiko was sunk in Kiao Chow harbor the night of October 17 by the German torpedo boat S 90.

EDISON TO BUILD NEW SUBMARINE

West Orange, N. J., Oct. 20.—Edison is studying the habits of fish in a tank in his laboratories at Llellwyn Park, to aid him in his experimentts for the making of a new type of submarine. In company with the secretary of the navy, Mr. Daniels, the noted inventor recently inspected a submarine at the New York navy yard. Later he declared that he would build a submarine that would startle the world because of its ability to stay beneath water indefinitely.

"Have to Take His Chances"

Yesterday according to invitation Bob Hicks, Contractor Bogue, Dr. King and a few others were inspecting the fine new Empress Hotel, and when the rotunda was reached, it suddenly occurred to Mr. Hicks that the front of so much magnificence was no place for his uto, which, by the way, would have been much improved in appearance by an application of water.

Turnng to the affable and ever ready Art. Graham who was behind the office counter, Mr. Hicks asked:

"Art, have you any objection to my little Ford standing in front of such a fine place?"

"Oh, well," Art replied, "You can take your chance; we found two of them in the carpet sweeper this morning."

ARE TRYING TO MAKE TROUBLE

Pro-Germans in Russia Are Answered by M. Sazonoff

PETROGRAD, Oct. 20. — (Via London.)—M. Sazonoff, the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, yesterday in a statement to the Associated Press clearly defined Russia's attitude toward the allies, and her stand against German. The statement, M. Sazonoff said, was made because of attempts by the reactionary party in Russia to bring discord and awaken anti-British sentiment.

M. SAZONOFF.

Recent avowals by this small element, as reflected in a few reactionary journals, M. Sazonoff declared, went so far as to compliment Emperor William and laud the Hohenzollern family. They alluded exultingly, he said, to the fall of Antwerp as the approaching end of the war, adversely criticized England by stating that she was setting other countries to fight her battles, and also plainly forecast an Anglo-Russian rupture.

"This small German element," said M. Sazonoff, "is wholly unrepresentative of Russia, and negligible, as far as Russian policy is concerned."

Trains Carrying Soldiers And Refugees, Collided When Broken Wire Released Danger Signal

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 20.—A despatch to the Chronicle from Pas-de-Calais, dated Monday, says between forty and fifty passengers were killed and eighty were injured in a train wreck Saturday between Calais and Boulogne.

Two trains carrying soldiers and refugees collided when a broken signal wire released the danger signal.

TEST CASE UNDER WORKMEN'S ACT

Widow's Husband Was Killed by Lightning While at Work

Montreal, Oct. 20.—Just how far a company is responsible for the vagaries of lightning under the Workmen's Compensation Act is likely to be decided in a case brought against the Canadian Pacific Railway, where damages are claimed for a man who was struck by lightning and killed while working for the company. The action was brought by Dame Annie Lajoie, widow of the late Wilfrid Martel, who claims $2,025 damages under the Workmen's Compensation Act for the death of her husband. It is claimed that Martel was working for the C. P. R. last September, and that while engaged in his work he was struck by a bolt of lightning and killed, the fatality happening at Drummondville, in Arthabaskaville County. The case, which is unique in Canadian jurisprudence, will now go on, permission to sue under the Workmen's Compensation Act having been granted by Mr. Justice Bruneau.

While actions under the act have been taken for damages to workmen injured by frost and other natural phenomena while in performance of their duties, this is the first case in which lightning has been involved, and the hearing is attracting much interest in legal circles.

$16,000 AT OSHAWA.

Oshawa, Oct. 20.—When the figures for the last day of the Patriotic Fund were totalled up last night it was found that $16,000 had been subscribed. This was considered very satisfactory for the opening day, and it is expected that several thousnd will be added to the canvass tomorrow.

CABINET CHANGES ARE CONFIRMED

Hon. T. C. Casgrain is the New Postmaster General

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, Oct. 20. — Cabinet changes foreshadowed some days ago are announced this afternoon. Hon. L. P. Pelletier has resigned as postmaster general and is succeeded by Hon. T. Chase Casgrain, of Montreal.

Hon Bruno Nantel, minister of inland revenue, is appointed to the railway commission in succession to Hon. M. E. Bernier, whose term has expired, and P. E. Blondin, deputy speaker of the Commons, succeeds to the portfolio.

Hon. Mr. Casgrain and Mr. Blondin were sworn in at one-thirty this afternoon.

Orders have been received by Major Walker, of the 57th Regiment, for the enlistment of men for the second Canadian contingent. Seventy-five men are required from this command. Recruiting and enlisting will take place at the armouries to-night.

WOMEN GIVE $200.

Fenelon Falls, Oct. 20.—In response to an urgent call for funds, the Women's Patriotic League of Fenelon Falls, at an emergency meeting held in the basement of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, voted two hundred dollars, to be forwarded at once to the secretary of the Red Cross Society.

The Rockefeller Foundation has given $200,000 to be used during the next 10 years for pensioning widows with dependent families.

TOO YOUNG SONNY SAID KITCHENER

London, Oct. 20.—Eager to join the army, Reginald Smith, a Ramsgate lad, whose father and uncle served with the colors, ran away from home and walked to London, where he called first at Buckingham Palace and then at Scotland Yard and asked to see Lord Kitchener. By chance the Secretary of State for War called at the yard and was stopped by the boy. Patting the youngster on the shoulder Lord Kitchener said: "You are too young, sonny; wait until you get older." The lad, whose father works at the Ramsgate Railway station, is to be sent to a military training school in order that his ambition may be realized.

NEW BRITISH SUBMARINE LOST

Berlin Claims Boat Was Sunk in North Sea

Berlin, Oct. 20. — Wireless via Sackville.—It is officially announced that the new British submarine E 3 was sunk in the North Sea Sunday by German warships.

Harwich, Oct. 20.—It is reported here that the Holland American Line steamer Potsdam struck a mine in the North Sea last night and was crippled by the resultant explosion.

A FEELING OF SECURITY

British Public Satisfied With Gen. French's Report

LONDON, Oct. 20.—General satisfaction and a feeling of security in the eventual outcome are expressed by yesterday morning's London papers in their meagre comments on the long report of Sir John French, the British commander-in-chief in France, on the battles of the Marne and the Aisne. The desire of the censor, expressed a month ago, that the papers refrain from extended comment or analysis of the situation in the French campaign, has prevented criticism, constructive, or otherwise, on the report. That their report added little to the knowledge already possessed by the British people, of the progress of the battles, is reflected in the journals. Comments on the street and in the clubs are apparently to the effect that the people are satisfied with the strategy of Sir John and that they have no feeling of nervousness as to the final result.

WHAT IS SHRAPNEL?

Shrapnel is really flying cannon, which shoots its discharge while in flight or explodes on contact. Its speed of many thousands of feet per second is produced by a pressure of from 30,000 to 35,000 pounds per square inch from the powder that expels it from the gun.

CAMPBELLFORD AIDS BELGIANS

Small towns seem to be "putting it all over Peterborough" in the matter of giving to the Patriotic Fund and the Relief Fund for the Belgians.

Campbellford is one of the latest instances. The Daughters of the Empire made an appeal for clothing and the response made almost filled a large room in the Wallace building.

The Weston Shoe Co. of the town is giving half the leather, and the town the other half, for nine hundred pairs of boots for the Belgians. The employees of the factory are manufacturing the boots and not taking a cent as wages. They will work two nights and Saturday afternoon for three weeks.

Germans Fail to Drive Back Advance Troops on the Meuse---Allies in Action With Enemy In Ypres Region.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Oct. 20.—The French war office official announcement this afternoon follows: "In Belgium, in spite of violent attacks on the part of the enemy, the Belgian army held its position on the line of the river Yser. There have been other actions in the region of Ypres between allied forces operating in this territory and the forces of the enemy."

On our left wing the Germans continue to hold strongly their advance posts around Lille, in the direction of Armentieres, Fournes and La Basse. On the Meuse, the enemy has endeavored vainly to drive back advance posts of our troops who moved out along the right bank of this stream in the peninsula of Camp-des-Romains.

"To sum up during the day of October 19 we have made progress at various points on the front.

LONDON, Oct. 20. — With Lille again in the hands of the allies, the situation on the French fighting line has assumed a distinctly favorable aspect. At Chaulnes a counter-attack by the German right wing was thrown back decisively, and the Kaiser's forces fled in a state bordering on panic. The Belgians have also held the Germans at a point east of Dixmude. West of Roulers the Germans were compelled to evacuate long lines of trenches, and the town is now occupied by Franco-British troops.

Unless all indications prove futile the German advance along the coast to Dunkirk is effectively checked. Reports from Dunkirk early yesterday morning stated that the sound of heavy fighting from the sea was plainly audible. It is believed certain that British naval forces are co-operating in the movement to stay the Kaiser's forward movement in this zone. Later in the day a despatch from northern France said that British torpedo-boat destroyers had penetrated the canals commanding the district in which the most westerly engagement was being fought, and the British cruisers were also firing on the invaders from the open sea.

The official communique of the French War Office yesterday afternoon said: "In Belgium the heavy artillery of the enemy has cannonaded, but without result, the front from Nieuport to Vladsloe, to the east of Dixmude.

"The forces of the allies, and notably the Belgian army, have not only repulsed further attacks on the part of the Germans, but have advanced as far as Roulers.

"On our left wing, between the River Lys and the canal of La Bassee, we have advanced in the direction of Lille. There has been very stubborn fighting on the front from La Bassee to Albain and St. Nazaire. We are advancing from house to house in these localities.

"To the north and to the south of Arras our troops have been fighting without respite for more than ten days, and with a perseverance and a spirit which never for a moment has been relaxed.

"In the region of Chaulnes we have repulsed a strong counter-attack delivered by the enemy and have won some ground.

"On the centre there is nothing to report.

"On our right wing, in Alsace, to the west of Colmar, our advance posts are on the line between Bonhomme, Paris and Sulzern. To the south we still occupy Thann."

German reinforcements have been brought up at all points along the right wing of the invaders' army, which now stretches from the Belgian coast to the elbow at Roye, where the line turns directly eastward and runs in the general direction of Metz. These reinforcements are variously estimated at 300,000 to 400,000 men. Some reports even place the number of fresh troops at 1,000,000 men of all arms, but the latter figures are believed exorbitant. It is known that they are drawn from the Landstrum exclusively.

Advices from Belgium declare that Ostend, Bruges and Blankenberghe are held by the smallest of garrisons, and that throughout the conquered kingdom every man that can be spared has been rushed southward. Admiral Von Tirpitz is said to be in Antwerp, which coincides with previous reports that he expected to personally direct naval operations against Britain which are "to be launched the last of this month."

With the capture of Armentieres Sunday and the fall of Lille yesterday to the allied armies there can be no question that operations in northern France have received a new impetus and are inclining steadily to the side of the French and British. It is significant that at every point coun-

Police Chief Kidd of Brampton Rejoins Local Force

Alexander Kidd, who resigned from the Peterborough police force to take the position of chief constable at Brampton, will rejoin the local department. His application was accepted at a meeting of the police board yesterday afternoon. He succeeds the late P. C. Paterson. His salary will be $800 per annum.

PETERBORO NOT NAMED AS CENTRE FOR RECRUITING

There will be some disappointment if it should turn out that Peterboro is not made a recruiting centre, for the second Canadian Expeditionary force. According to orders just issued recruiting will take place at the divisional headquarters, viz., London, Toronto, Kingston, Montreal, Quebec, Halifax, Winnipeg, Calgary and Victoria.

Steps were taken some time ago, in the hope that Peterboro would be made a military centre and the Cordage Works building was offered to the city for the use of the military authorities.

It may be that later orders will be made known at the weekly drill of the home guard at the armouries tonight.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1914

THE MONTREAL GAZETTE CENSURED.

THE MILITIA DEPARTMENT was quite justified in censuring the Montreal Gazette for publishing articles on the Valcartier Camp and the departure of the Canadian Expeditionary Force. The Gazette apparently has no proper conception of what the attitude of the Canadian press should be to news of Canada's undertakings in this war. According to an article in the Montreal Mail, the Gazette published the date of sailing of the force, and also the remarkable fact that the last transport was unconvoyed. A transport is at all times just so much meat for an armed vessel of war. Even a small destroyer could bang one to pieces with not more than six shots, as was exemplified in the sinking of the Konigen Louise with four shots. Had any accident occurred, had this transport been attacked due to the publication of this news, the Gazette would have to bear a responsibility amounting almost to treason. The attitude of the Gazette to the present war has been one more or less inconsistent. Almost up to the entrance of Britain in the conflict, its attitude was not in favor of the case against Germany. Then it came to the point and said: "The British Empire will fight, and the British Empire will be right." Since then it has occupied such a position uneasily, and its position in handling news of Canada's preparations for Empire defence seems to indicate that it is shuffling and lukewarm. As to Valcartier Camp, it is only natural that some things would not be as they should, owing to the hurry involved in making it ready. Further, anyone knows that horses bought for the army are not always even of an average quality, and vicious and unmanageable animals are shipped to the army. In handling these, heroic methods must be adopted and the animal made to obey or be destroyed. In transporting horses some wicked or nervous animals start kicking or stampeding, with the result that other horses are so badly injured that they have to be destroyed. That is part of the necessity of armies and is not to be called as a criticism of camp management.

The precipitate retreat of the Gazette behind abject apologies that denied facts has ended in making it a laughing stock. Having denied what its reporter stated to be true, it then proceeded to discharge the man for performing his orders. The reporter sent a telegram which was not passed by the censor, but got his news "through" by long distance telephone. Thus, while exhibiting disobedience by the Gazette, the articles show alarming loopholes in the censorship, which, if to be effective at all, should have drawn a tighter cord around the transmission of news. It is manifestly unfair to deprive the majority of newspapers of news, only to allow some rebellious journal an opportunity to kick over the traces.

WAR PRICES IN CANADA.

THE EFFECTS of two months of the world's war on Canadian prices are summed up in a rise of the Labour Department's index number from 135.5, as calculated at the end of July, to 140.7, as worked out at the end of September. These numbers are percentages of the general level of prices in the decade 1890-1899, and are based on quotations from 272 articles scattered over the whole field of production and consumption.

Most of the rise took place during the three weeks following the declaration of war. In fact, the last half of September saw general steadiness and even a tendency to decline in important articles like grains and cattle.

Though a rise of five points in the Departmental index number is very marked, it is not without precedent. Canadian prices during the trade boom of 1912 went up at intervals with almost equal rapidity, and the readjustment of prices at the close of 1911 sent the index number up four points in a single month.

It has also to be remembered that several articles which have contributed very materially to sending the index number up during the last month are not of first importance in consumption. For example, cream of tartar, antimony, and quicksilver have all more than doubled, while a number of other secondary commodities (alcohol, solder, sulphur, etc.) went up by 20, 30 and 40 per cent. Tin and rubber went up very rapidly in August, but declined practically just as fast in September. Flour is perhaps the most important foodstuff that has shown a tendency to decline. A full analysis of the prices movement by groups of commodities is appearing in the current issue of the Labour Gazette.

Retail prices, of which the Department is receiving quotations for over thirty articles in every town of 10,000 and upwards in Canada, have been on the whole steady in September after the first upward movement following the war. In flour and sugar further advances occurred in most of the cities, but in other commodities prices were quiet. Rents were downward in some fifteen localities throughout the Dominion.

It is interesting to note that in England the Economist's index number went up six per cent. during August, the rise being greatest in foodstuffs and least in minerals, while the Statist's index number went up from 82 at the end of July to 87 at the end of August. Bradstreet's index number for the United States went up 12 per cent. in August, but has eased off slighly since. The crest of the high prices wave seems to have come about two or three weeks after the declaration of war.

DAVID STAR JORDAN ON THE WAR.

READERS of the Review may be interested in knowing what the Chancellor of Leland Stanford Jr. University, California, has to say about the war. He was in Germany, returning home, when war broke out, and is famous as a biologist. We writes as follows:

In this war, what of right and what of wrong? Not much of right perhaps and very much of wrong. But there are degrees in wrong, and sometimes, by comparison, wrong becomes almost right.

The armed peace, the peace of guns and dreadnoughts and sabre-rattlers, has come to its predestined end. Its armaments were made for war. Its war-makers and war-traders have done their work for the last ten years. They have been foiled time after time, but they have their way at last. Their last and most fatal weapon was the ultimatum. If Servia had not given them their chance they would have found their pretext somewhere else. When a nation or a continent prepares for war, it will get it sooner or later. To prepare for war is to breed a host of men who have no other business, and another host who find profit in blood.

When the war began it had very little meaning. The intrigues of rival despotisms, Slav and Teuton, lie far from the apprehension of democratic western Europe. That the third and greatest Balkan war was imminent, the people of the west might believe, but they felt no call to take part in it. The people of Europe do not hate each other. The springs of war come from the few impelled by greed and glory. Diplomacy in Europe has been for years the cover for robbery in Asia or Africa. Of all the nations concerned, not one had any wish to fight, and Belgium alone stood with clean hands.

And this fact gave the war its meaning. The invasion of Belgium changed the whole face of affairs. As by a lightning flash, the issue was made plain; the issue of the sacredness of law. The rule of the soldier or the rule of the citizen; the rule of fear or the rule of law. Germany stands for the rule of the soldier. This was made clear when, a year ago, she passed under the yoke at Zabern. Britain stands for the rule of law. In spite of her lapses in Imperialism, the soldier is still the servant of the people, not their master.

The highest conception of human relations is embodied in the word Law. Law is the framework of civilization. Law is the condition of security, happiness and progress. War is the denial of all law. It makes scrap-paper of all the solemn agreements men and nations have established for their mutual good. "Parchment is parchment," said the German chancellor in 1911, "steel is force."

The rape of Belgium made scrap-paper of the parchment of International Law. The sowing of mines in the fairways of commerce made scrap-paper of the rights of non-combatants.

War may never be righteous, but it is sometimes honorable. In honorable war armies fight armies; armies do not fight private citizens. If armies give no needless provocation, they will receive none. The sacking of Malines, Aerschot and Dinant is no act of honorable war. The wreck of Louvain, historic Louvain, five hundred years the venerated centre of Catholic erudition, at the hands of blood-drunk soldiers, was an act of dishonorable war. It marks a stain on the record of Germany which the years will not efface. "A needed example," say the apologists of crime. The Duke of Alva gave the same "needed example" to these same people in his day. For centuries the words "Spanish blood" struck terror into people's hearts throughout the Netherlands. For centuries to come the word "Prussian" will take its hated place.

The good people of Germany do not burn universities. They are helpless in the hands of a monster of their own creation. The affair at Zabern a year ago testified to their complete subjugation. All the virtues are left to them save only the love of freedom. This the mailed fist has taken away.

The Germany of to-day is an anachronism. Her ideals in science are of the twentieth century; her ideals in politics are of the sixteenth. Her rulers have made her the most superb fighting machine in a world soul-weary of fighting. For victors in shining armor the modern world has no place. It will not worship them, it will not obey them. It will not respect those who either worship or obey. It finds no men good enough to rule over other men against their will.

A great nation which its own people do not control is a nation without a government. It is a derelict on the international sea. It is a danger to its neighbors, a greater danger to itself. Of all the many issues good or bad which may come from this war, none is more important than this: that the German people should take posession of Germany.

The Stability of the Municipal Bonds.

(Edmonton Daily Capital.)

Among the lessons being taught by the war in its effect upon finance is the now almost universally-recognized fact that municipal bonds are the A No. 1 among gilt-edged securities. Others having a value which rests in franchise or a privilege, such as railway bonds or property in land, may present a very substantial and imposing front in times of peace or calm, but when, through war or stress, the cyclone comes, we see the speculative assignats picked up and swirled about with every changing gust, while municipal bonds hold their position, unaffected by the storm.

Kirk, Kids, and Kitchen.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

The Kaiser is reported to have said that woman's sphere should be confined to kirk, kids and kitchen. That ought to persuade all the suffragettes to arm in a mighty host against him.

THE RIGHT WAY

By Walt Mason

On some bright future day, mayhap, the kings themselves will do their slaying, when wanting strife they'll go and scrap, and let their people do their haying. Then rulers of all grades and kinds must each one wield his private swatter, when they've made up their blooming minds on blood and death and fur and slaughter. The angry king will not command his subjects to go forth in armour; he'll take his broadaxe in his hand and swing it like a husky farmer. And while to scenes of gore he flees, and lops the arms from rival princes, his countrymen will trim their trees, and raise large crops of prunes and quinces. A few dead kings would make no odds, except to courtier and fawner, so let them battle for their gods, and for their crowns and misfit honor. I cannot see a reason why good men should into battle frolic, and lose their legs, and bleed and die, because some monarch has the colic. Most men who on grim horrors sup, on fields of battle, at this writing, would scratch their heads and give it up, if you should ask them why they're fighting. Some king or emperor or czar has told them they must march to glory, and from their persons have the tar knocked by the foe—the same old story. And so I'm waiting for the day when men no more to war will rally, and kings who suffer for a fray will do their scrapping in the alley.

VENOMOUS WEAPONS.

Blowguns of the Mangeromas and Their Poisoned Arrows.

The mysterious poison with which some of the South American tribes smear the points of their arrows is a thick sirup made by boiling together parts of the Strychnos toxifera vine and other plants and a number of the deadly venomous black ants of the Amazon region.

Instead of a bow the Mangeromas use a blowgun, a very ingenious weapon. It is made from a tall, hollow reed that grows near the river banks, and at one end it has a mouthpiece made from the hollowed half of the fruit of the Aracara palm. When the hunter sees a monkey or bird in the top of a tree, often 100 feet above him, he puts a poisoned arrow in the tube and raises the mouthpiece to his lips. With his left hand he finds the necessary elevation, fills his lungs with air and blows into the tube with no apparent exertion. The arrow flies out swiftly and silently. Almost as soon as the animal is struck it drops to the ground paralyzed.

The flesh of the game is not injured by the poison. Like the venom of snakes, it is dangerous when introduced into the vascular system, but harmless when taken into the stomach. The action of the drug on birds culminates in from three to four minutes; a monkey died in five minutes and a three toed sloth expired in seven minutes. A human being cannot survive more than fifteen minutes. The slightest scratch means inevitable death. Even the Indians know no antidote.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

Reasons For an Election

(The Toronto World.)

The reasons advanced for an election seem to have ben that the government would propose still further war expenditures, that they might even propose naval aid, that the senate might baulk them hereafter as they did in the past, and that if they had an equivocal declaration in their favor they would be authorized to proceed with a vigorous war program. But the main argument was that of the hostility of the senate toward the previous measures of the government. The senate had said to the government, "We will limit your bill to increase the membership of the senate going into effect until after the present parliament is dissolved."

What Conservatives Say.

The Conservatives say, "Well, then, that means that though we have had a clear majority of over forty in the popular chamber, you, in the senate, say we must remain in a crippled condition, unable even to pass our bills, though the people have voted us in to carry on the affairs of the nation. It is absurd for a party charged with the responsibilities of office to continue inefficient because of opposition in the senate. It is unconstitutional and unbearable. We accept your challenge and we appeal to the people."

This seems an unanswerable argument, and would have in all likelihood carried them back into office on an appeal to the electorate. But perhaps the challenge should have been accepted when the regular session closed last June.

Now the Liberals say to hold an election would be to break the truce that is said to exist on account of the war; that they are ready to vote without discussion any money the government may ask for war purposes, and that in time of war the country should not be rent with political dissension.

Session and Neutrality.

Two days ago everything pointed to a dissolution based on the record of the senate, but inasmuch as the Liberals and others protested against a political fight at this moment, and as some of the ministers did not quite see the force of the reasons for the dissolution at this moment, the project of an early election appears to have been dropped, but that does not mean that the Conservatives will not take advantage of the first hostile act of the opposition in either house to declare for an election. It looks therefore like a session and an armed neutrality. As far as can be gathered the bulk of the Conservative members have intimated that they were willing to go to the country, and it does look as if Mr. Rogers and Mr. Cochrane were their leaders in this respect and that they have many admirers in the party because of their fighting attitude. No regnant party, so these fighting Conservatives say, can remain for any long time at the mercy of their discredited opponents. This would seem to be a size-up of the situation.

Hadn't Been Taught.

Little Grace, who had recently entered school, brought home some pumpkin seed one day and told her mother that the teacher said that although the seed was white the pumpkin would be yellow.

"And what will the color of the vines be?" her mother asked.

Grace replied that the teacher had not taught her that yet.

"I know, dear, but we have pumpkin vines in our garden, and you must know what color they are."

"Oh, of course I do, mother, but we ain't supposed to know anything until we're taught," replied Grace convincingly.

Working Overtime.

Mr. Griffin had spent an anxious afternoon at the office and hurried home at an unusually early hour.

"How do you feel, dear? What did the doctor say?" he questioned his wife as she lay on a couch, her eyes half closed.

"Oh, he asked me to put out my tongue," she murmured.

"Yes?"

"And after looking at it he said, 'Overworked'."

Mr. Griffin heaved an audible sigh of relief. "I have perfect faith in that doctor, Mabel," said he firmly. "You will have to give it a rest."

The Haunted Stranger

By F. A. MITCHEL

There is a town in the Rocky mountain region somewhere between Denver and San Francisco which is completely isolated. It is not one of those rough mining towns that have been so realistically described by Bret Harte and his followers, but a quiet, sober place, with no fighting, no gambling, no horse stealing, no lynching. The only objection to the town—so said Miss Virginia Keating—was that nothing ever happened there.

No new invention ever penetrates to Cherryville. There is neither gas nor electricity, the lights used being oil lamps and candles. The fuel used is wood, of which there is an abundance in the neighboring forests. No shriek of locomotive or honk of automobile is heard. Occasionally an ox team meanders slowly through the town, or the sound of a trotting horse breaks the stillness. Nevertheless Cherryville is a sizable town. There is one main street half a mile long, crossed at right angles by a number of less important ones.

One day a man came into town whose appearance broke the lethargy that overhung the place. He was minus an arm, there was a scar on his forehead, and a number of his teeth were missing, their disappearance being accounted for by a hole in his cheek. He gave his name as Erastus Clarke, but seemed disinclined to furnish any further account of himself. If any one asked him about the loss of his arm or other deficiencies he looked scared and turned away without reply.

Where there is no solution of a mystery one is very soon invented. There was but one opinion in Cherryville about Mr. Clarke. Some enemy had mutilated him. Here the main view of his case branched. One side felt sure that he had swindled some one, the other that he had alienated the affections of a wife from her husband and that that husband had mauled him. But never a word of explanation could be elicited from Clarke.

Miss Keating had all the curiosity that is usually attributed by unterrified bachelors to her sex and resolved to find out the mystery enveloping Mr. Clarke if she had to marry him to do so.

Miss Keating on walking down the main street of Cherryville behind Mr. Clarke noticed that when he came to a cross street he would stop, look to the right and then to the left before crossing. This he repeated at every street. Miss Keating, being a true investigator, did not make up her mind definitely as to the cause of his doing this, but she naturally assigned it to the fact that he was on the watch for an enemy. She made a mental memorandum of the fact, but, realizing that Clarke would not explain the matter, refrained from asking him to do so until she had prepared the way.

However, reticence was not one of Miss Keating's traits, and she talked about this peculiarity of Mr. Clarke's. From that time whenever he was seen on the street he was followed at a distance by curious persons who were anxious to be on hand to see the fight, for they were now sure that Clarke had come to Cherryville to escape an enemy and was expecting that enemy to appear at any time to batter him some more.

Miss Keating made but poor success in getting up an affair of the heart between herself and Mr. Clarke. The trouble was that he seemed to have had the spirit of a man knocked out of him. She smiled on him sympathetically, but could not for long draw him away from the dread of that mysterious something for which he seemed to be looking.

One day she met Mr. Clarke in a store, and they walked out on to the street together. Suddenly from the other end of the town there came the honk of an automobile, the first that had ever been heard in Cherryville. Mr. Clarke trembled and turned pale. The honk was repeated nearer and louder. Mr. Clarke ran back into the store. Miss Keating followed him and found him crouching behind a counter.

"Has it gone?" he gasped.

"Gone? What gone?"

"The auto."

Miss Keating looked at him wonderingly; then a beam of light burst in upon her. "Do you mean to say that all this terror has been caused by an automobile?" she asked.

Mr. Clarke, stiffened by the contemptuous look she gave him, came out from hiding and confessed.

"I came from a large city, where there are thousands of autos. I never rode in one myself, so I was not injured that way. My only hope was not to get killed while crossing a street. Once I was knocked down. My arm was crushed, and it was amputated. A second time I received this scar on my forehead. A third I got this hole in my cheek and lost all the teeth on that side of my face. A fourth gave me three broken ribs. A fifth"—

"Never mind the fifth. My father is mayor of this town, and I'm going to get him to prohibit any automobiles from entering the limits. I don't wonder at your looking up and down a street before crossing or having been terrorized and having come to this quiet place to escape further injury."

That is the only auto that ever yet entered Cherryville.

Pickering's Lords.

Lord Hyde, who went over to England a few weeks ago, is expected back in a few days at his home here, and will then leave for Ottawa to join the Governor-General's staff. Lady Hyde has offered her services as a nurse to the Red Cross Society, and consequently will not be able to return home for some time. It is expected that Lord Somers will now be in the fighting line in Northern France.—Pickering News.

Concerning War Prizes.

In connection with the prize courts of Canada, notice is given at Ottawa that "all persons having any interest in cargoes other than enemy cargoes laden on enemy ships captured as prizes, and requiring a release of such cargoes, or portions thereof," should enquire of the Deputy Minister of Justice at Ottawa, and at the offices of his agents at the outport, the latter being obtainable from the customs officer.

Historic Coins Turns Up.

Mr. J. W. Makin, of Earlscourt, a Toronto suburb, while digging a well on his property, found at the depth of seven feet below the surface, a Waterloo halfpenny, bearing the image of Wellington, and the words "The Illustrious Wellington" on the obverse, and on the reverse a harp, the date 1816, and the words "Waterloo Halfpenny."

A VETERAN WHO WAS WITH LORD ROBERTS

Laid Low With Rheumatism—But Cured By "Fruit-a-tives".

ITS PRODUCT TOO GOOD.

A Wonderful Oil Well That Was Found in the Balkans.

In Mr. Caton Woodville's "Random Recollections" is the story of a rich oil well that was discovered in the Balkans.

On one of his journeys he was shown a deep hole, sunk most probably by the ancient inhabitants of the country for mining purposes, but which he was assured was a petroleum well. Afterward Mr. Woodville heard the full story of this well.

A petroleum "find" was reported from the district, and an expert from Baku, in the Caucasus, the great petroleum district, was sent to the Balkans by a syndicate to inquire into this valuable discovery. He was taken by eager natives to this hole, and a bucket was dropped down at the end of a long rope and drawn up again, brimful of oil.

The expert examined the contents of the bucket, tested it carefully, and then, turning to the assembled natives, he exclaimed: "This is the most wonderful oil well in the world. The petroleum is already refined."

The explanation was, of course, that some enterprising person, not knowing that petroleum comes from the oil wells in a crude state, had carefully placed some ordinary commercial petroleum in the well in the hope that the expert would think there really was an oil well there and offer a big price for the property.

SOLDIERS OCCUPY FACTORY.

Edinburgh Building Proved To Be a Concrete Bed For Big Guns.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—"A large factory owned by Germans was raided by the military in Edinburgh last night," says a despatch from The Observer's correspondent in the Scottish capital. "It was built ten years ago, and although capable of accommodating 50 hands, never more than six workmen, all Germans, were seen about the place.

"According to information supplied by the builders, $150,000 was spent on magnificent concrete foundations, the proprietor explaining that exceedingly heavy machinery would be required for the factory. The machinery never arrived, the factory never started, and no workers came, but the situation dominates Edinburgh and the prepared position, jutting on the sea, would enable big guns to hit the Forth bridge."

Germans Disconcerted.

PARIS, Oct. 19.—Lt.-Col. Rousset, the French military critic, says in discussing the position of the opposing armies in Northern France:

"I see in the change of front operated by the enemy only an admission of increasing embarrassment. German strategy is at the present time a little disconcerting and I believe that the directors of this strategy are themselves completely disconcerted. They have tried to force both of our wings. The engagements in the region of Roye and Lassigny have partaken of the Homeric. They have not procured for the Germans any benefit, nor have the combats which have taken place on the other extremity of our front."

Von Kluk Deposed?

LONDON, Oct. 19.—That the leader who has baffled every effort of the allies to get around the German right is not Gen. Von Kluk but Gen. Sixt Von Arnin, is the statement made by German officers now prisoners in England. It is asserted that Von Kluk was deposed two days after the battle of the Marne, when he was thrown back from Paris. One of the German officers, who vouches for this story is Lieut. Von Arnin, said to be a nephew of Gen. Von Arnin, and now in the hospital at Netley.

More Stringent With Spies.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The authorities are taking more stringent measures against alien enemies who remain undetained in England. Yesterday afternoon the police raided a large restaurant owned and managed by Germans and Austrians. These were taken to a detention camp.

The agitation against permitting natives of hostile countries to continue their vocations here is growing as reports come in of alleged operations of German spies in Antwerp before that city fell.

Earthquake In Greece.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Athens says that at eight o'clock on Saturday morning and again at noon there were continuous seismic shocks in the Grecian provinces of Attica, Boeotia and Peloponnesus. At Thebes hundreds of cottages were overthrown and many persons injured. The shocks are continuing, and have been felt in Athens.

Back From The Dead

By EDITH V. ROSS

"Oh, papa!" said Georgie Trevor. "What do you think?"

"What do I think? Why, I think my little boy looks very happy about something."

"I saw mamma in the park!"

A pained expression came over the father's face. His wife, the mother of the boy, had been dead a year. The child was at the time too young to understand the nature of death and had been told that his mother had gone away and would not come back to him. When the father recovered from the shock his son had given him he said:

"You were mistaken, Georgie. You couldn't have seen mamma, for she is in heaven."

"Yes, I did. While Nanny and I were walking in the park I saw mamma sitting on a bench by the fountain. I ran up to her and said, 'Oh, mamma, where have you been so long, and why don't you come home?'"

"And what did mamma say?"

"Why, she kissed me and said, 'I can't come to you, but you can come and see me at my home occasionally.' Then I asked her where that was, and she said, 'I'll tell your nurse, and she can bring you.'"

The father took his boy in his arms, kissed him and, putting him down, sent for the nurse and questioned her. She told him that the lady Georgie had referred to was the image of his lost wife; that she had humored the boy and had given her address, at the same time telling her that she might bring him to see her if she found he was longing for her.

The next day Georgie asked to be taken to see his "mamma," and the nurse, having referred the matter to his father and received his assent, took the child to see the lady, Miss Marian Hill, who petted him and gave him candy and sent him home loaded with favors. Many times during his visit she was about to explain to him that she was not his mother, that he had made a mistake, but that he might consider her as such, and she would love him the same as if she were so, but the child seemed so sure about her identity, and it was evident that she would only pain him by setting him right, so she could not bring herself to correct his error. When he parted from her he said:

"Why don't you come home, mamma, and see papa? He looks so sorry because you went away!"

Miss Hill found it more difficult to parry this part of the error than any of the others. However, she was no prude and yielded to the necessities of the case. Her heart was touched by the motherless boy, and she placed his comfort above all else.

"You can bring papa to see me if you like," she said.

"And then will you come home with us?"

The lady kissed him and said that she couldn't do that, and she couldn't explain to him why, but doubtless his father would understand.

So when Georgie's father came home that evening the boy told him that mamma couldn't come home to see him, but he could go to see her.

One afternoon Mr. Trevor made a call on Miss Hill. He was struck with her likeness to his lost wife and was not surprised that Georgie had mistaken her for his mother.

"I would have brought Georgie with me," he said, "but thought that we had better first arrange what we should tell him to satisfy him, that our stories may not disagree."

"I fear that I shall have to rely on you to tell him that I am not his mother. I fear I have not the heart to do so."

"I will think the matter over. There is no need for haste. I am not sure that we could make him understand his mistake even if we tried to do so. For the present we may permit him to remain in ignorance."

Miss Hill made no reply to this. She knew that it would be embarrassing for the child to continue in supposing that she was his mamma, living in another home than theirs. Mr. Trevor also realized this, but he had thought of a remedy. The moment he saw Miss Hill he was seized with a desire that she should fill the gap left by the wife he had lost. Indeed, from the time he thought of this possibility he became a different man. Being a widower, he knew how to lay siege to a woman's heart and realized that his motherless child had opened a way for him. When he arose to leave after his first call he had formed a definite purpose that would bring him a companion and his boy a mother.

He began by sending trifling gifts by Georgie when he went with his nurse to see his mamma, principally flowers and books, following up these by invitations, which at first were such as might include Georgie. From this he stepped to invitations and gifts of such frequency that his ultimate intentions were obvious.

One day he made his boy dance for joy by telling him that "mamma" was coming home.

"I knew she would come some time!" cried the child, clapping his hands. "When is she coming?"

"Papa is going to take her for a short journey, and when we come back she will be here all the time."

Georgie never knew but that he had found his mother, who for some unaccountable reason had gone away, but had come back to him.

MRS. LYON'S ACHES AND PAINS

Have All Gone Since Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Terre Hill, Pa.—"Kindly permit me to give you my testimonial in favor of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I first began taking it I was suffering from female troubles for some time and had almost all kinds of aches—pains in lower part of back and in sides, and pressing down pains. I could not sleep and had no appetite. Since I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the aches and pains are all gone and I feel like a new woman. I cannot praise your medicine too highly."—Mrs. AUGUSTUS LYON, Terre Hill, Pa.

It is true that nature and a woman's work has produced the grandest remedy for woman's ills that the world has ever known. From the roots and herbs of the field, Lydia E. Pinkham, forty years ago, gave to womankind a remedy for their peculiar ills which has proved more efficacious than any other combination of drugs ever compounded, and today Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is recognized from coast to coast as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health—many of them openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and in some cases that it has saved them from surgical operations.

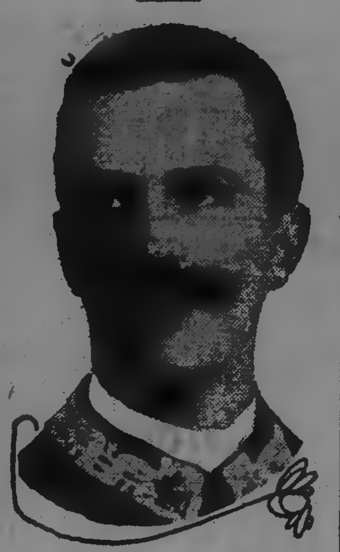
KING VICTOR TO REVIEW FLEET



KING VICTOR EMMANUEL

Rome, Oct. 20.—King Victor Emmanuel is going to Taranto shortly to review the Italian fleet, which has been secretly mobilized by the Duke of The Abuzzi, the commander-in-chief of the Italian naval forces.

Six naval divisions have been formed, each commanded by a rear admiral. Each consists of dreadnoughts or other battleships, first and second class cruisers, training ships, old type war vessels, besides torpedo boats, submarines and scout ships. A torpedo boat destroyer flotilla is attached to each division.

The Italian Government has a new style gun which can carry eleven miles, and which has been mounted upon some of the newest warships. It is to be tried out shortly against an old style warship which has been converted into a floating target.

BIG ORDERS OF SUPPLIES

Contracts Awarded for Saddles and Bridles

OTTAWA, Oct. 20.—Further orders were received yesterday from the British and French Governments for saddles and bridles, and the orders which are now being divided among all the saddlery and harness firms of the Dominion, call for a total of 50,000 saddles. Of these 15,000 are for the French Government, 10,000 for the British, 20,000 for the Russian and 5,000 or 6,000 for the Canadian troops. The contracts were awarded by the sub-committee of the Cabinet, the only requirement from any firm being that it could fill the order.

Fred Stobart, purchasing agent for the British Government, who is here to see what can be supplied most economically in Canada, is interested in such articles as sweaters, shirts, socks, gloves, etc., but he says that no boots will be required as England and France can supply their own boots, the standard of quality and price being much higher here than over there.

Jap Cruiser Sunk by Mine.

TOKIO, Oct. 20.—It is officially announced that the Japanese cruiser Takachiho was sunk by a mine in Kiaochau Bay on the night of Oct. 17. One officer and nine members of the crew are known to have been saved.

The Japanese cruiser Kakachiho was built in 1885 and refitted in 1911. She was a vessel of 3,000 tons and was 330 feet long. Her main battery consisted of eight-inch guns and her speed was about 18 knots.

The Takachiho carried a crew of 355 men, only ten of whom, according to the official report, are known to have been saved.

Austrian Fleet Driven to Cover.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Rome says advices received in the that city from Cettinje, Montenegro, state that the Austrian fleet in the harbor of Cattaro, Dalmatia, attempted to escape Sunday and break through the French fleet blockading the port. The despatch adds that the Austrians were promptly driven back into the harbor.

PRACTICAL ADVICE FOR YOUNG WOMEN

Never Sneer at Christianity, Beware of a Vindictive Spirit, Avoid the Wine Cup, be Careful in Correspondence --- Never Accept Gifts From Young Men Beyond Financial Ability of the Giver

An audience which taxed the accommodation of St. Paul's church greeted Dr. J. L. Gordon, the famous Winnipeg orator, last evening, when he opened his Christian Citizenship campaign. The subject of last evenings' discourse was "The Greatest Mistake in the Life of a Young Woman. Dr. Gordon commenced by quoting the words of George William Curtis: "Civilizations are to be classified according to the positions of woman."

Those civilizations which have given woman a low position are low grade civilizations. The civilizations giving woman higher and superior positions have been higher civilizations. Our own civilization stands highest because we have given woman the highest positions known or recognized in the history of the world. A Christian woman is the bright flower of a Christian civilization. There can be no true citizenship which does not involve and include womanhood. Christian citizenship is not a matter of the voting element in a community, merely nor simply a matter which pertains to the masculine element in a neighborhood. We cannot have an all-around Christian citizenship which does not stand for one hundred per cent. of the community. Therefore, Dr. Gordon stated that the addresses in this particular campaign are addressed to men and women proportionately.

In the first place intelligent young women should never sneer at Christianity. Christianity has done more for women than all other religions combined. Matthew Arnold once said: "Show me ten square miles outside of Christendom where the life of man is safe or purity of woman respected, and I will surrender my interest in Christianity"—and it is to be remembered that Matthew Arnold was somewhat of an unbeliever.

The Vindictive Spirit.

Secondly, a young woman should beware of a vindictive spirit. Nothing will drive beauty out of a young woman's face like inborn hate and fostered anger. Mary Queen of Scots exclaimed, "I would rather lose my crown than lose my revenge," but she lost both. There is a spiritualizing power in thought, and no young woman can have mean thoughts and at the same time possess a sweet and attractive face.

Drink Means Danger.

Thirdly, a young woman who takes a glass of wine outside her own home is on dangerous ground. Where there's drink there's danger. That danger is enhanced and magnified when it exists outside the circle of relatives and loved ones. When the modern sensualist would rob a young woman of her virtue, purity and dignity, he always tempts her to drink. "Young woman be careful how you surrender your will and person to another," urged Dr. Gordon. Most of the tragedies of life pivot on a surrendered will. When a young woman is under the influence of liquor she has surrendered her will.

Correspondence.

A fourth manner in which a young woman makes a mistake is when she is careless in correspondence with young men. There are masculine culprits in every town who will take the affectionate epistles of a lady friend and hand them around for inspection among his companions who like himself are bereft of manhood. "I have seen letters written by young women," declared Dr. Gordon, "which would blast the reputations of the writers, if once published."

About Gifts.

The fifth warning of the speaker was that a young woman should never accept a gift from a young man beyond the financial ability of the giver. This she should avoid, not only to save her own reputation but to protect the future character of the young man. There are scores of young men in Peterboro who are squandering their hard earned money on pretty girls who will never appreciate the expenditure or do anything to justify the investment. When you pick up a newspaper and read an article headed "Bank clerk short in accounts—sentence seven years" stop for a moment and think of the heartbroken mother and shame crowned father. There's nobody who can make a fool of a young man more easily than a reckless young woman.

A sixth instance is when a young woman deals lightly with love proffered her. The most sacred thing a young man ever offered a young woman is the consecration of his love and affection. A heartless flirt is the cheapest creature who ever asked for love's sympathy or affection.

The Greatest Mistake.

Seventh, a young woman should never sacrifice her conscience to her affections. This is the greatest mistake in the life of a young woman. Have no friendships which you are not willing to acknowledge. A young woman should never defy public Christian sentiment. George Elliott did and paid a high price for doing it. You cannot afford to move against the opinion of the world. Indiscretion in the end will bring you shame, contempt and misery.

The eighth and last article of advice Dr. Gordon gave was that a young woman should have some appreciation of the sacrifices made by her parents. There are charming young girls and beautiful young women for whom kind parents have made every possible sacrifice and these very often are the creatures who will not lift a finger to do a kind thing for any one of their loved ones. There's nothing so heartless as a heartless young woman.

Meanest Man in Peterboro.

Tonight at seven-forty-five in St. Paul's Church, Dr. Gordon will speak on the "Meanest Man in Peterboro." At nine o'clock he will conduct the question bureau in Murray Street Baptist Church. A special program is arranged for the latter. Some of the questions are to be found in another column of this issue.

Preceeding the service last night, Mayor Buller and G. N. Gordon, City Solicitor, spoke briefly.

: Gordon Epigrams :

The lowest in the nature of God is the highest in the nature of man.

The foolish son of a fool is a chip of the old blockhead.

No individual ever created a language, but the nearest approach is in the invention of a word.

There are three perplexing things to be "in": in debt, in doubt, and in love.

The Bible did not create religion. Religion created the Bible.

The hammer strikes no sparks from an unresting substance.

Irish Nationalists Vow to Fight Against Prussian Militarism.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Amid tumultuous cheering, with right hands upraised, the Irish Nationalists, who crowded Central Hall last night, adopted a pledge administered by T. P. O'Connor:

"We will never sheath the sword until Belgium has got back her freedom; until every inch of her soil is clear; until a treaty is made, not on a scrap of paper, but on a foundation behind which stands the millions of the British race."

The meeting was called for the purpose of expressing confidence in the leadership of John Redmond and to endorse the action of the Irish party in supporting "the war of the allies against Prussian militarism."

Mr. O'Connor said that for this fundamental and supreme principle, the British had fought on hundreds of battlefields. What they had claimed and won for themselves they also claimed for other countries and would help other countries win.

Pedagogues and Marriage.

Two bright faced academy boys were discussing their teachers.

"Mr. Blank's going to get married, I hear."

"Gee, I hope not."

"Why?"

"Because Mr. Dash got married last year and now he's fierce."

Rapid Transit Returns.

"I wouldn't be guilty of doing a favor for a man and then in a day or two asking him to do one for me."

"No, nor I. I'd ask him right straight off, before his gratitude got a chance to cool."

SHAFER REFUSED BAIL.

Alleged Traitor Is in Danger of Sentence of Death.

MONTREAL, Oct. 20. — Israel Shafer, ticket agent, charged with high treason against the King in connection with the sale of steamship transportation to Austrian reservists, who tried to pass themselves off as Roumanians, was yesterday morning ordered to be held without bail by Judge St. Cyr. He will come up for examination on Thursday.

The charge was laid by Maj. Date on behalf of the military authorities. Should Shafer be found guilty of this offence, there will be no alternative for the court but to condemn him to death, just as in a murder conviction according to legal experts here. It will then remain for the crown to exercise its clemency in such manner as may be thought fit if clemency is considered at all.

Big Fish Story.

The biggest pike that was probably ever taken from a stream in this section was brought into town recently by Messrs. James Skelton and John Lockhart, who corroborated a big fish story by producing the goods, and causing the Doubting Thomases to restore their faith by sight. The fish, which measured 3⅜ feet and weighed 21 pounds, was caught in the Mud river, Greenock, by Mr. John Cassidy, of Chepstow, and required the combined efforts of the Chepstow and Walkerton talent to land it. Served on a side dish, it later played a big part in reducing the high cost of living in certain quarters here.—Walkerton Herald-Times.

TO SAVE LIVES IN SEA DISASTER

Admiralty Provides Swimming Collars for Men

LONDON, Oct. 20.—That the Admiralty is fully alive to the necessity of providing a means for the crews of warships that strike mines or are torpedoed by submarines to escape drowning, since other warships are prohibited from going to their assistance, is shown by the announcement yesterday that the Admiralty is arranging for a general supply of swimming collars to be distributed to the officers and men of the fleet. The men are instructed that the collar shall be carried on their person when they are awake and kept inflated and near each individual when he is asleep.

Foundries Are Being Depleted.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Recruiting is being stopped in some of the Scottish iron and steel centres with the sanction of the Government. The reason is that these iron and steel works are running night and day on Government orders, and it is held unwise to deplete the working forces.

KINGSTON, Oct. 20. — Bombadier Boucher, who was serving a term in the Central for assaulting a little girl, was released yesterday to enlist for overseas duty. He left here for Montreal to enlist.

To Train In London.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 20. — In accordance with instructions received from Ottawa yesterday, the organization of a full regiment of infantry, 1,015 men, with reinforcements of 10 per cent., will be proceeded with immediately in the first military division. This city will be headquarters and training ground for Western Ontario, pending departure over seas.

CANNOT MAKE THE RIVER

Russian Wall Confronts Austro-Germans at the San

LONDON, Oct. 20.—The Times has the following from Mr. Stanley Washburn, its correspondent at Lmow (formerly Lemberg, Galicia): Fighting goes on in West Galicia without cessation. The cannonade on the River San continues. All attempts of the enemy to cross the river have failed lamentably. The Austrians have made attempts at various points. At first their artillery fiercely shelled the right bank, after which the infantry approached the river, but the Russian shrapnel fire inflicted heavy losses, as the corpses floating downstream to the Vistula and beyond to Sandomir and Ivangored testify.

The German General Staff directed the operations, and also the defence of Przemysl, before which the fighting goes on day and night, without ceasing even for a minute.

The Germans are conducting the defence with extreme energy, and the fortress is apparently well supplied with ammunition. The Russians are exerting a persistent pressure, punctuated by sudden night attacks, by which several strong forts already have been captured. These tactics palpably disturb the defenders, whose searchlights throughout the night subject the surrounding space to a ceaseless scrutiny. Meanwhile the retention of Przemysl confers no advantage of the enemy or of the bridges over the San and stands before the iron wall which is now offered by the Russian investing army.

The Austro-Germans struggle stubbornly and despairingly. Hostile collisions are spreading, and the huge strategical front grows steadily larger, like the extended front of French operations. From Sandomir to the Carpathians savagely roar the thousands of guns. Corpses are borne on the waters of the San, and cast up on its verdant banks at points up the Vistula.

A Dog Story.

We brought from Scotland a collie about six months old. He was allowed to be with us at the breakfast table, but never to be fed in the dining room. This rule was enforced by my daughter. I was the only member of the family who ever broke over the rule. And often when I offered him a tempting bone he would glance across the table, and if he caught the forbidding eye he would resist the temptation. But one morning she left the table abruptly. Rab followed her into the hall and watched her till she had closed the door of her study. Then he scampered back, nudged my elbow, as if to say, "Now is our time," seized the bone and was soon crunching it with the greatest satisfaction.—London Spectator.

Red Sea Heat.

At certain seasons of the year the Red sea is almost unbearable. The water taken from seventy to eighty feet below the surface at 6 o'clock in the morning will often register a temperature as high as 90 degrees. If, in addition, a sandstorm thinks fit to blow the whole air is full of a mist of innumerable particles of fine, hot sand, which blind and suffocate at the same time.

Sultan of Turkey Gives Enver Pasha a Political Slap In the Face.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Petrograd says that the Constantinople correspondent of The Bourse Gazette is authority for the statement that at a family council the Sultan of Turkey, in order to combat the dictatorship of Enver Pasha, Minister of War, and German influence, unexpectedly proclaimed the heir-presumptive to the Turkish throne, Yussof Izzedin, Generalissimo of the army and navy.

Prince Yussof Izzedin is the eldest son of the late Sultan Abdul Aziz.

CURIOUS FOSSIL FORESTS.

Twelve Tower, One Above the Other, in Yellowstone Park.

In the Yellowstone National park twelve successive forests, one on top of another, have been buried by outflows of lava and petrified, according to a government pamphlet entitled "Fossil Forests of the Yellowstone National Park," by F. H. Knowlton.

The area within which the fossil forests are now found was apparently in the beginning an irregular but relatively flat basin, on the floor of which, after a time, there grew the first forest. Then there came from some of the volcanoes, probably those to the north, an outpouring of ashes, mud flows and other material which entirely buried the forest, but so gradually that the trees were simply submerged by the incoming material, few of them being prostrated. On the raised floor of the basin, after a time, the next forest came into existence, only to be in turn engulfed as the first had been, and so on through the period represented by the 2,000 feet or more of similar beds.

The whole history of the manner in which these forests were fossilized is not fully understood, but it was undoubtedly dependent on or at least greatly facilitated by the presence of volcanic and hydrothermal activity, which was doubtless then, as it is to some extent now, a marked feature of the park region. The fossil forests are surrounded by a matrix that is known as an acidic lava, which contains abundant silica in solution. The first part of the process of silicification may well have been that silica would be deposited in all the cells and vessels of the wood, making an accurate cast of all open spaces. Then, while the slow process of decay went on, as each particle of organic matter was removed its place was taken by the silica, until finally all the wood substance had disappeared and its place, atom by atom, had been taken by silica.

SAVE THE SOIL.

Don't Let the Rains Wash the Valuable Plant Food Away.

If you knew that it takes nature 10,000 years to form a foot of soil maybe you would have a higher opinion of Mother Earth and be more careful how you drain your garden or field.

If you saw a granary full of rat holes you would suspect a careless farmer. But a field left to wash away by the unchecked rush of surface water after a downpour is fully as wasteful. The only difference is that here the waste is of plant food before it gets into the grain.

If your garden or field is on a slope, terrace it; if on a level, plant it not in straight rows, but in circles. And in both cases tile drain it, for the stuff that washes away is precisely the stuff that your crops most need. Once gone it is expensive to replace.

When you stop to think that everything depends on the soil, clearly the soil is worth saving.—Seattle Star.

MUCH FOOD FOR BELGIUM.

Now on London Docks — Badly Needed, Too.

LONDON, Oct. 20. — Baron Lambert, representing the Belgian Government, arrived in London from Brussels, and yesterday conferred with the Belgian Minister here concerning the movement to send food from London to the Belgian capital.

The shortage of food in Brussels is very serious. The supply of flour has become exhausted, and there is great need that it be replenished immediately. Extensive plans are under way for wholesale shipments of food through the co-operation of the Belgian Minister and the British Foreign Office.

Much food, already in cases, is on the London docks ready for shipment to Belgium when the international tangle concerning its movement is straightened out.

General Hit By Shrapnel.

LONDON, Oct. 20. — A letter received in London yesterday from an officer friend of Maj.-Gen. Hubert Hamilton, whose body has been brought to England, tells how the British general met his end on the French battlefield.

"He was standing with a group in a covered place," the officer writes, "when a shrapnel shell burst 100 yards away. A bullet pierced Gen. Hamilton's temple and he was killed on the spot. No other member of the group was scratched."

Many Austrians Arrested.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Oct. 20.—Two hundred and eighty-six Austrians, who have not signed naturalization papers, were rounded up here by the local militia.

Most of these have come to the Soo within the past few weeks. Of this number twelve men emphatically expressed their intentions of going back to Austria to fight for their country. They are now being held prisoners at the canal camp.

PAINTING FOR JUDGE BENSON

Judge Huycke One of the Speakers at Public Gathering

Port Hope, Oct. 20.—At the town hall yesterday afternoon, in the presence of a large number of citizens, members of the bench and legal profession, His Honor Judge George M. Benson, retiring judge of the united counties of Northumberland and Durham, and Mrs. Benson were presented with a large oil portrait of himself. The donors were the Bar Association of the united counties, the counties council, and the town council of Port Hope, where he resides. Most eulogistic addresses were delivered by Their Honors Judges Ward, Port Hope; Huycke, Peterborough; Roger, Cobourg; Burke, Simpson, senior member of the Bar, Bowmanville; W. F. Kerr, county crown attorney, Cobourg; H. T. Bush, mayor of Port Hope, and E. Wylie Grier, the artist, Toronto.

Judge Benson made a feeling and fitting reply, of a reminiscent strain. He said he had been thirty years on the bench and he would say to his juniors that they would find that the position of judge was not a bed of roses. In dealing with criminals they would be criticized for being either too lenient or too severe by the press and citizens. He said in regard to his policy of giving first offenders suspended sentences, he had only two or three such men come before him the second time. He would commend to his juniors the principle of being merciful, consistent with justice. The pupils of the High School atended the function in a body, his honor having been chairman of the High School board for many years. The painting, at the conclusion of Judge Benson's earthly career, is to be placed in his chambers in the town hall, Cobourg, the counties town.

WOMAN SHOULD HAVE BEEN PLACED IN HOSPITAL HERE

Jury's Opinion at Inquest Into the Death of Eliza Leavis of Peterboro

Toronto, Oct. 20.—In what proved to be her deathbed confession Eliza J. Leavis, a middle-aged Peterboro woman, admitted that she had been a morphine victim practically all her life. Her death at the Mercer Reformatory from cancer necessitated an inquest, and last night Dr. John S. King, physician to the institution, told Coroner R. Y. Kenny that the Leavis woman confessed to him that when fourteen years old she was given the drug to ease pain, took a liking to it and during the last twenty-eight years had used the hypodermic regularly.

On Oct. 1 the Leavis woman was at Peterboro sentenced to a year's imprisonment in the Mercer, and when brought to the institution on Oct. 10 was so weak that she could not walk. Dr. King sent a protest to the provincial authorities, pointing out that the institution was not a hospital, and on Oct. 17, the day the woman died, an order was received for her transfer to a Peterboro hospital.

The jury decided that the woman died from the effects of cancer, found that there had been no neglect at the Mercer, but on the evidence were of opinion that the woman was not in a condition to be removed from Peterboro and should have been placed in a hospital in that town.

LIFER SAWS HIS WAY TO FREEDOM

Left His Coat and Hat and Dummy in the Bed

Writing to friends in this city, Messrs. Jas. Murray and T. P. Connors, of Waupon, Wis., enclose newspaper clippings which tell of the escape from the state prison of a convicted murderer, who was serving a life term. Messrs. Murray and Connors are the managers of a rope and twine factory, which is operated in connection with the prison.

The escaped man was Wenzell Kabat, convicted murderer, known as "the bad man from Ooutgamie Co." He has been considered a desperate character and notices which offer $100 reward have been sent out warning all of his character.

Kabat, when sentenced a few years ago in circuit court at Appleton, is said to have sworn to take terrible revenge upon all who were responsible for his being found guilty. Messages were accordingly sent to Outagamie county to warn officers there that he might make for the place whence he was sent to prison a few years ago.

The crime for which he was condemned to a life term was cruel. He was a farm laborer, and it was charged that he brutally murdered his employer, burned his body in a great heap of brush, and attempted to keep the property.

Kabat was supposed to be under observation all of the the time on account of his desperate character. He was placed in the observation cell of the northwest cell room, which is the first cell on the range, in line of observation by the cellhouse keeper. Sometime early Saturday evening he went out through the aperture made in his cell door by sawing off three bars, leaving his coat and hat hanging up and a dummy in the bed. He replaced the bars by sticking them in their place in the front of the door so that they looked all right to the keeper who also thought Kabat was in the bed. His escape from the cell was made when the keeper was on the upper range of cells, distributing tobacco as is done every Saturday night. Kabat had a wooden key with which he unlocked the outside door into the rear yard. This door is locked with the regulation prison lock and was supposed to be secure. When he got outside he reached through the bars and relocked the door taking the key with him, which was later found in the yard. The cellroom keeper has no key as it is turned over to the turnkey every night after the men are in their cells.

PROGRESS AT VARIOUS POINTS

ter-attacks by the Germans have uniformly failed to accomplish their purpose. That the Kaiser is stubbornly sacrificing many lives to maintain an untenable position a little longer seems apparent.

From La Bassee and Albain to St. Nazaire the allies are waging a terrible hand-to-hand conflict with the Germans, the fighting having resolved into an individual contest for supremacy. Every hedge, house and overturned wagon is a new fortress, and as the Germans fall back they take a heavy toll of their pursuers.

At Chaulnes the allied artillery almost decimated the German columns participating in a frontal counter attack, the advantage being followed up by an infantry charge of French and British troops which completely upset the advance of the foe.

The situation along the centre remains quiet, with both sides content to hold their own, and neither able to gain important advantage over the other. Defensive works in this zone are very complete, and it is improbable that a major operation will be attempted by either French or Germans until the fighting on the east and west becomes better defined.

The French officials are extremely reticent concerning operations against the German crown prince and the new movement which seems to threaten the safety of Metz. It is also apparent that fighting is under way around Belfort, but no information comes through as to the extent of the engagement or the probable outcome. It is said on very good authority that a French army is even now assailing the outer line of Metz trenches, and that artillery will soon be playing on the walls of that renowned stronghold.

St. Mihiel continues in the hands of the German crown prince, but the French have driven his line still further back on both the east and west of that town, and his retreat toward Luxemburg is imminent.

Summing up the entire situation, and taking into account the position of the allies from the Belgian-French coast to the Swiss border, it may be said that the outlook is more favorable than at any time since the Germans crossed into French territory. It is apparent that their first onslaught has come a cropper, that the new drive at Dunkirk and Calais is temporarily checkmated and will most probably be completely frustrated, and that the continued success of the allies at widely-separated points, with the new advance toward Metz and the dangerous quandary of the German crown prince has seriously imperilled the whole German scheme of conquest.

Dampen a carpet a small portion at a time with a cloth wrung out in strongly salted water then rub dry with a clean duster. This will revive the color wonderfully.

PROGRESS MADE IN NEW ONTARIO

To a person from old Ontario the push and pluck of the settler in New Ontario is a tonic well worth inhaling or imbibing—that is, you can take it as hot air or you can imbibe it as a stimulate, says John N. Lake in Toronto Globe. Certainly, no careful observer can fail to notice that the greater part of the people are under forty-five or fifty years of age; few grey hairs are seen amongst them, but virile, energetic and optimistic characteristics are shown.

It has been my good fortune to visit several times a small portion of this interesting section of our province during the past three years. My first visit was soon after the great fires of 1912, when I pushed through to Cochrane and found the town in ashes. The people were not like the disconsolate of old, "casting ashes on their heads" in their despair, but were planning how best to secure temporary comfort while rebuilding, which has now been accomplished to some good extent.

But my objective point being Uno Park (which I had passed on my way north), I soon returned to that station on the T. & N. O. Railway. Here I found three fine settlements—one at Uno Park, another at Milberta, five miles directly west, and the third at Hanbury, five miles east of Uno Park.

The new settlers had been in from ten to fifteen years and already in many cases had large clearings and good buildings equal to their requirements. I saw fields cleared of stumps, fenced with wire or timber; crops in good condition; in some cases fairly heavy stocks of cattle and horses; besides everything to make their families comfortable, and many stretches of good roads, with churches and good schools convenient.

Take an example; An old acquaintance of mine from Oxford county had located near Milberta eight years before with quite a family, including two stalwart sons. In that time they had cleared up ninety acres, fenced it with wire, built a frame house worth $1,500 and a new bank barn, 40 x 88 feet, which he said was none too large for his crop. He had a good herd of cattle and several fine horses, and plenty of water and wood. Adjoining this farm I saw in bloom the finest field of timothy that I had ever seen in Ontario

This month I made another trip, my objective point being east of Uno Park to Hanbury neighborhood, which brought one near the boundary of Quebec province. I found a section fully equal to the Milberta and Highland section, with a slightly different character of soil. The clay seemed closer to the surface. A tenderfoot like myself might think it was not so good as Milberta, but the residents said they had equally good crops as the other, and certainly the neighborhood looked prosperous. The country was well cleared in every direction, and you could see for miles. Three churches grace this district. The Presbyterians and the Anglicans each have a small church in which service is held once each Sunday, while the Methodists have just completed a fine church, 26x40, with a large porch, stone basement, with concrete floor and a fine furnace.

Chinese Sympathy.

The other day a British reservist living with his family on Upper Park avenue, Toronto, received the call to join the colors immediately. He decided to take his wife and children to England to stay during his absence. He found the most convenient arrangement would mean leaving Montreal the following day. But it was mid-week, and the family wash was at the Chinaman's. The lady went over to the laundry. The "boys" shook their heads—the wash could not be sorted out before Saturday—but just then the boss laundryman came in.

"Your husband going to the war. Velly brave man. Me work all night to get your laundry."

Next morning it was brought home by the "boss" himself.

"How much?"

"Nothing. Your husband go to the war. If you stay here all winter me wash all the clothes for the family. Not a cent."

What a contrast between this foreigner's practical sympathy and the raised prices that too many of our own merchants are charging, without a shadow of justification.—Montreal Herald.

Ethel—Gladys Smith's face always reminds me of a delicately tinted china cup.

Brother Tom—Yes, it's a beautiful mug.

THE BULLET AND THE BILLET.

("Kit" in October Canada Monthly.)

As a matter of fact, most of the bullets fired in actual warfare are billeted nowhere. Even at the present day, taking into account the immensely increased precision and deadliness of firearms, and the improvement in rifles, the ratio borne by the numbers of the killed and wounded to the number of bullets fired must be very small. Not so long since Lord Roberts said that if the British soldier could be so trained as to make it certain that one shot in twenty "got home," our army might be pronounced five times as formidable as any continental army has yet shown itself. As it is, the army is twice as formidable. The shooting of the British lines at Mons the other day excited the unbounded admiration of the French. The firing was not that of nervous or excited men, such as happened to the New York 73rd, let us say, in the Philippines, when poor chaps (who had just left the land office and the ice cream counter) for the first time learned the awful fact that it was no fancy play at the ranges, but a matter of life and death, with a real enemy popping at them, until they found themselves firing with shut eyes like Mr. Winkle at the partridges, and the roof of every man's mouth was hot with trouble.

And if our British, those cool, methodical, efficient men—lost heavily in that five days' fighting, what of the Germans?

Our boys, say the reports, were silent and happy to their positions, without singing, which is forbidden these days, but with their own sallies of humor—that of Little Ortheris, and Mulvaney, and now Johnny Canuck.

It is estimated that in the Franco-Prussian war the Germans fired 20,000,000 bullets. The French killed and wounded amounted to about 140,000 men. According to this, only one ball out of 143 fired hit its man; and assuming that on an average one man out of seven hit was actually killed, it would seem that only one bullet in 858 proved effective. At the battle of Bantzen 714 bullets were fired for one man put hors de combat. At Victoria, Wellington's army fired 500 shots for one man killed or wounded.

In 1849, at Kobling, the Prussians fired 77,000 cartridges and killed or wounded 475 Danes; that is, one man was hit out of every 163 shots fired. Such estimates might be vastly extended without serving much purpose, but they show how necessary is efficient marksmanship, and how futile for all murderous purposes is a rifle practice that exercises a man's marksmanship at the rate of 60 shots a day for comparatively a few days or weeks a year.

German Cement.

Fighting against Germans on French soil, the British soldier finds need of a knowledge of modern languages. One British officer writes home that he has, as sergeant, a French-Canadian, born in Quebec city. The sergeant appears as an enthusiastic imperialist, exclaiming on one occasion: "The Kaiser, without intending it, has proved to be the greatest friend the British Empire ever met in its long and eventful history. We are the pieces. He has supplied the cement."

GENERAL FRENCH'S REPORT ON BRITISH OPERATIONS

Battle of Aisne Once More Demonstrated Spirit, Gallantry and Devotion of Tommy Atkins

London, Oct. 19.—Field Marshal French's second report, dated Oct. 8, and issued yesterday, concerns the operations of the British forces since the evening of Sept. 10.

After reviewing briefly the pursuit of the Germans, to the Aisne, the report continues:

"During the night of the 13th and on the 14th and following days, field companies incessantly worked night and day, throwing eight pontoons and one foot bridge across the river under a general heavy artillery fire. The operations of the field companies during this trying time were worthy the best traditions of the Royal Engineers.

Ordered General Advance.

"Wet weather aded to the difficulties. On the evening of the 14th it was still impossible to decide whether the enemy was only making a temporary halt or intended to stand and defend his position. With a view to clearing the situation I ordered a general advance. The action of the first corps on this day under the direction and command of Sir Douglas Haig, was of so skilful, bold and decisive a character that he gained positions which alone would have enabled me to maintain my position for more than three weeks of very severe fighting on the north bank of the river.

Haig's Gallant Service.

"Throughout the battle of the Aisne this advanced and commanding position was maintained and I cannot speak too highly of the valuable services rendered by Sir Douglas Haig and the army corps under his command. Day after day, night after night, the enemy's infantry has been hurled against him in a violent counter-attack, which has never on any one occasion succeeded, while the trenches all over his position have been under continuous and heavy artillery fire.

"On the morning of the 15th, after a close examination, I became convinced that the enemy was making a determined stand. A quantity of siege guns artillery had been brought from Maubeuge to strengthen the enemy's front.

"During the day shells, judged by experts to be from 8-inch guns, fell on our position. These had a range of 10,000 yards, and during the course of the battle our troops have suffered heavily from this fire, although latterly its effects have been largely mitigated by more efficient and thorough entrenching, the necessity for which I have impressed strongly on the army corps commanders.

Regained Lost Ground.

"As the enemy was able to bring a flank fire on it, the 5th division was unable to maintain its position and had to retire back to the river east of Missy, where, with great skill and tenacity, Major-Gen. Sir Charles Ferguson maintained his position throughout the whole battle, although his trenches were on lower ground than those of the enemy on a plateau only four hundred yards away.

"Gen. Hamilton, with the 3rd division, attacked vigorously and regained the ground lost on the 14th.

"On the 17th, 18th and 19th the whole of our line was heavily bombarded. The first corps was heavily and constantly engaged. On the afternoon of the 17th the right flank of the first division was seriously threatened. The enemy's attack was untimately driven back with heavy loss.

Joffre's New Plan.

"On the 18th information reached me that General Joffre had found it necessary to make a new plan and to attack and envelop the German right flank. It was evident to me that the battle in which we had been engaged since the 12th must last some days longer, until the flank movement could be felt and the way opened to drive the enemy from his positions."

The report says the futile counter-attacks were continued up to the evening of the 28th, when they finally ceased.

Sir John French pays tribute to the skill, endurance and tenacity shown by the Royal Artillery throughout the battle, and to Sir David Henderson and the Royal Flying Corps.

"Great strides have been made in the developments of the use of aircraft in the tactical sphere by establishing effective communication between the aircraft and the units in action.

Under Great Strain.

"It is difficult to describe adequately and accurately the great strain to which the officers and men were subjected almost every hour of the day and night throughout this battle. I have described above the severe character of the artillery fire which was directed from morning till night not only upon trenches but over the whole surface of the ground occupied by our forces. It was not until a few days before the position was evacuated that the heavy guns were removed and the fire slackened. Attack and counter-attack occurred at all hours of the night and day throughout the whole position, demanding great vigilance and permitting only a minimum of rest.

"The fact that between the 12th of September and the date of this despatch, October 8th, the total number of killed, wounded and missing reached the figures amounting to 561 officers and 12,980 men, proves the severity of the struggle.

Tribute to Troops.

"The tax on the endurance of the troops was further increased by the heavy rains and cold which prevailed for some ten or twelve days of this trying time.

"The battle of the Aisne has once more demonstated the splendid spirit, the gallantry and devotion which animates the officers and men of his majestiy's forces."

THE RULES OF BOMBARDMENT

One question of interest to Canadians, as well as all other citizens of the warring nations, is the status of the enemy's merchant ships at the outbreak of war. If German or Austrian merchant ships were in any Canadian port at the outbreak of hostilities, nothing in international law prevents their detention. They may be held during the period of the war and restored, without payment to the enemy of an indemnity or damages, or they may be condemned and an indemnity paid.

But, about forty nations have agreed that

"It is desirable that when a merchant ship of one of the belligerent powers is at the commencement of hostilities in an enemy's port, it should be allowed to depart freely, either immediately, or after a sufficient term of grace."

This "period of grace" has varied from twenty-four hours to thirty days, and Great Britain has for half a century viewed the longer period with favor. But note this is not compulsory; Convention 6 merely says "it is desirable."

The exemption of private property at sea has been fought for by the United States and other powers for many years, but so far the nations of the world have not yet come to an agreement. As the law is now, private property, except contraband, is safe on neutral ships. On enemy ships it is liable to seizure, when the property of the enemy. An attempt to put into force the maxim: "Free ships, free goods," has so far failed.

But the great weakness of international law is that there is no supreme enforcing authority to make nations behave. Can one easily imagine that if the Germans were attacking Quebec the commander of the Goeben would send in a polite note announcing his intention? Yet that is what he should do.

To attack the city because of the non-payment of a ransom is held to be illegal, if such city is undefended. The nations have agreed that:

"The bombardment of undefended ports, towns, villages, dwellings or buildings for the non-payment of money contributions, is forbidden."

But this would not apply to a fortress such as Quebec, which could hardly be classed as "undefended."

Are the Canadian ports of Halifax, St. John, Quebec, Vancouver etc. mined? Probably this is a secret known to but few outside of high Government officials. If these ports, or others, are mined The Hague Convention states that:

"A place cannot be bombarded solely because automatic submarine contact mines are anchored off the harbor."

But to this particular article Germany, France, Great Britain and Japan have not agreed, since they hold —quite reasonably it seems — that such mines are in many cases more adequate defence than land guns.

If a city should be bombarded many of the public buildings would be decorated with a weird-looking sign consisting of "large stiff rectangular panels divided diagonally into two colored triangular portions, the upper portion white the lower portion black."

Those are the devices which alone would save our hospitals and schools and public buildings from being demolished.

Detroit Pastor Acquitted.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 20. — Rev. Joseph A. Cottam, former pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Dearborn, near Detroit charged with arson in connection with the burning of his parsonage there last winter, was acquitted yesterday afternoon after the jury had deliberated on the case twenty minutes. On the night his home burned Rev. Mr. Cottam was to deliver a widely advertised sermon on "Why I am a Protestant." The defendant maintained that persons of contrary religious views were responsible for the fire.

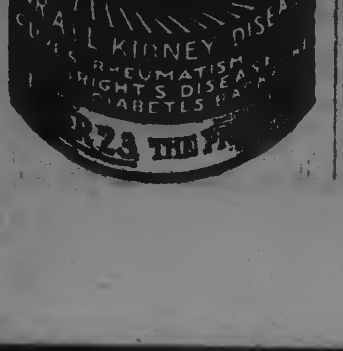
LONDON, Oct. 20.—The Petrograd correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co. says that Emperor Nicholas has ordered that German and Austrian subjects who have been granted the honorary rank of councillor of commerce be deprived of the title.



THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—Stress of export demand brought about an almost constant tightening of values today in wheat. There was a nervous feeling at the close, which ranged 2c to 2 1-4c above Saturday night's level. Corn gained 1-2c net and oats 3-4c to 7-8c. The outcome in provisions varied from 5c decline to an advance of 10c.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Oct. 19.—Cables on Manitoba spring wheat were strong again today, at a further advance of 6d to 9d per quarter, with a fair demand from overseas buyers for supplies, but owing to the raise of 1c per bushel in the Winnipeg market the bids were all out of line and no further sales were made. The local market for oats was stronger at an advance of ¼c to ½c per bushel, but the demand is still limited for carlots. The trade in corn and barley is quiet. The tone of the flour market is stronger, owing to the steady upward tendency of prices for wheat, but no actual change has taken place yet. The demand is still and quiet from both local and country buyers. The trade is more active in rolled oats. Millfeed is quiet and the condition of the market is unsettled. Cheese is quiet but firm. Exports for the week were 4927 boxes, as compared with 63,596 for the same week a year ago.

An easier feeling has developed in the market for butter and prices at the auction sales today were ⅛c to 5-8c per pound lower, finest creamery selling at 27¼c.

Demand for eggs is fair. Dressed hogs are 25c per 100 pounds lower.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Oct. 19.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 4508 cattle, 1355 hogs, 1906 sheep and lambs and 365 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice heavy steers sold at $7.90 to $8.15; good steers and heifers, $7.50 to $7.75; medium, $7 to $7.25; common, $6 to $6.50; choice cows, $6.50 to $6.75; good cows, $6 to $6.25; medium cows, $5.50 to $5.75; common, $5 to $5.50; canners and cutters, $3.50 to $4.75; bulls, $4.75 to $7.

Stockers and Feeders.

Choice steers, 950 to 1000 lbs., $6.75 to $7; good steers, $6.25 to $6.50; medium steers, $5.75 to $6; good stockers, $5.25 to $5.75; common eastern stockers, $4 to $5.

Milkers and Springers.

A light run of milkers and springers sold at $55 to $90 each, the bulk going at $70 to $90.

Veal Calves.

Choice calves sold at $10 to $11; good calves, $8.50 to $9.50; medium, $7.50 to $8.25; common calves, $6 to $7; inferior, rough eastern grass calves, $4.50 to $5.75.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, light ewes, sold at $5 to $6; heavy ewes and rams, $4 to $4.75; culls, $2.50 to $3.50; lambs, $7.65 to $7.90, the bulk at $7.75 to $7.80; culls at $6 to $6.50.

Hogs.

The hog market is on the decline; prices dropped 25c per cwt. Selects, fed and watered, sold at $8, and $8.25 weighed off cars, and $7.65 f.o.b. cars at country points.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Oct. 19.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, there was no change in the market for butchers' cattle today, the supply being smaller than a week ago and especially in good, useful grades, so there was a better feeling in the market and prices were maintained, but the market for canning stock was stronger owing to lighter offerings, prices advancing 10c to 15c per cwt., with a good demand from packers. Bulls were in good demand at $4.75 to $5, and cows at $3.75 to $4 per cwt. The trade in butchers' stock was only fair, because the demand from packers was smaller than usual, as they bought pretty freely last week at the decline in prices and carried over a fair stock of dressed beef. Choice steers by the carload changed hands at $8 to $8.25 and good at $7.50 to $7.75 per cwt.

The weaker feeling which developed in the market a week ago for sheep was the principal feature of this department of the trade again today and prices scored a further decline of 25c per cwt.

Ewes sold at $5 to $5.25 and bucks and culls at $4.50 to $4.75 per cwt.

Lambs were steady and in good demand. Ontario stock brought $7.25 to $7.50 and Quebec $6.50 to $7 per cwt.

Mill-feed calves were sold at 6c to 7c per pound live weight.

The market for hogs continues weak, with a decline of 25c to 50c per cwt. shown. Sales of selected lots were made at $8.50 to $8.65, sows at $6.50 to $6.65, and stags at $4.25 to $4.85 per cwt. weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8 to $8.25; do., medium, $7 to $7.75; do., common, $6.50 to $6.90; canners, $3.75 to $5; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $7.25 to $7.50; do., medium, $6.25 to $6.75; do., bulls, $5.50 to $7; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $80; do., common and medium, each, $65 to $70; springers, $55 to $60.

Sheep, ewes, $5 to $5.25; bucks and culls, $4.50 to $4.75.

Lambs, $6.75 to $7.50.

Hogs—F.o.b., $8.50 to $8.65.

Calves—$5 to $20.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 19.—Cattle—Receipts 5000 head; slow; prime steers, $9.40 to $10; shipping, $8.50 to $9.25; butchers, $6.75 to $8.75; heifers, $6 to $7.75; cows, $3.75 to $7; bulls, $5 to $7.25; stockers and feeders, $6 to $7.25; stock heifers, $5 to $5.75.

Veals—Receipts 1000 head; active; $5 to $12.

Hogs—Receipts, 22,500 head; active; heavy and mixed, $7.90 to $7.95; yorkers, $7.25 to $7.90; pigs, $7; roughs, $6.75 to $6.90; stags, $6 to $6.50.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 10,000 head; sheep slow; lambs, active; lambs, $5.50 to $8.15; yearlings, $4.50 to $6.75; wethers, $5.75 to $6.25.

HALIFAX IN WAR TIME; MANY SHIPS IN IT'S HARBOR

"The Warden of the Honor of the North,
Sleepless but veiled am I."

So wrote Kipling of Halifax, more than fifteen years ago, in his stirring "Song of the Cities." To-day, Halifax is the capital, of all Dominion cities, which is nearest the throb of Europe's warfare. Yet it would not be true to present aspects, to describe the capital of Nova Scotia as being agitated with war fever or in the throes of a tumultuous excitement. Halifax is too old a grey Sea Mother to yield, at this moment, to belligerent hysteria. There is no shrinking from the warfare, but there is a grave realization of the vastness of the struggle.

Since the declaration by Great Britain on Aug. 4th at 11 p.m. that a state of warfare exists between the Empire and Germany, Halifax has found life to consist of one British cruiser after another. First on the list was the Suffolk, the flagship of Rear Admiral Craddock, commanding the Fourth Cruiser Squadron. The information given out in Halifax on the arrival of this ship on the 13th showed that for ten days, the ships of the Fourth Cruiser Squadron were occupied in making the North Atlantic practically a British mill pond. The Suffolk also brought news of the chase of the Karlsruhe, near Bermuda. The Suffolk had made an early capture when she took the German oil tanker, Leda, and sent her into Bermuda under a prize crew, and Halifax shared the interest of the Suffolk's men, few of them knowing that prize money had been abolished.

A most interesting feature of the Suffolk's stay was the Volunteer Coaling Movement. The men of the flagship were in sore need of a rest, and a happy inspiration sent a detail of the 63rd Rifles to the yards, and the sailors rested, while the militiamen struggled under the coal baskets, to the tune of "Rule Britannia," as played by the Suffolk's band. Citizens joined in the movement, thoroughly enjoying this practical patriotism, a business firm sent forty men and the City Works Department also generously contributed a band of willing toilers. The last bag of the 1,400 tons of coal was thrown into the bunkers before midnight and the Suffolk was ready for sea. Rear Admiral Craddock wrote a hearty letter of thanks and the sailors cheered the Volunteer Coaling Force as the begrimed and happy citizens took their way into the city.

The ordinary summer social life of Halifax goes on—with a difference. Behind and beneath it all, there is a sense of eternal vigilance. Five young midshipmen, graduates of Halifax Naval College, sailed with the Suffolk when it went out, and the coming of the Good Hope and the Glory emphasized the quiet but effective work the ships of the Fourth Cruiser Squadron are doing in the North Atlantic. The silence which has fallen upon Britain's military and naval life is brooding, too, over citadel and harbor in Canada's old point. Yet it is a quiet of intense activity and deadly preparation, and the Canadian who has hitherto been an inlander, regards it with a sudden appreciation of Kipling's Halifax verse,

"Sleepless but veiled am I."

Halifax is one of the most ancient cities in Canada. Its magnificent harbor was discovered by the French, who were keenly on the alert for good harbors and strategic situations. They used Halifax as a basis for their attempt to retake Louisbourg after its capture by the New England forces in 1745.

It was in 1749, that the British took up the work of making Halifax a naval base. The British Government sent out 2,500 people, soldiers and settlers, under Col. Cornwallis, first governor of the colony, to lay the early foundations. It was from Halifax that a naval force was sent for the second capture of Louisbourg and for the final attack upon Quebec. During the Revolutionary War, 1776-1783, expeditions were sent thence against Boston and New York. In 1812, it was again the rendezvous for the warships engaged in active operations against the United States.

Besides its military and naval history, it has an equally long and important commercial history. From its docks merchant vessels have come and gone for one hundred and fifty years. Its trade has been international — with Europe, the West Indies, and United States ports. Today, especially during the winter months, the largest Canadian vessels running in the Atlantic make Halifax their first and last call. As Canada's foreign trade has grown, Halifax has shared in the development with St. John, Quebec, and Montreal.

Politically, also, the city has had a notable history. Many famous men have lived there. Prince Edward, Duke of Kent, father of Queen Victoria, was twice stationed there. Lord Nelson visited it in his wanderings. Prince William Henry, afterwards William IV., knew the harbor well. Sir John Ingles and Sir Fenwick Williams, of Kent, both Nova Scotians, served in the garrison in the later years of their career. Sir Samuel Cunard, founder of the famous Cunard Line, the first line of steamers to run between Europe and America, got his shipping inspiration in this, his native city. It has produced a long line of famous politicians, statesmen, and churchmen. — Canadian Courier.

Sells Cattle by Camera.

Little as it may be thought, the camera has its place on the farm, as more than a mere means of amusement, according to A. J. Tamblyn, of Orono, who was visited by a representative of The Sun during a trip through Durham County recently. Mr. Tamblyn is a well-known breeder of registered Holstein cattle and has begun to sell fancy stock from his farm.

To assist in this he has a postal card size Kodak, with which he takes photos of his saleable cattle, and sells by a description, reinforced with the picture of the animal, and has found the plan very successful. His first such sale was made to a breeder in Quebec and was a young bull calf. The buyer was pleased with his bargain, which was conducted entirely by mail, and "came back" with another order in a short time. Of course, all sales are made with the guarantee that if the animals are not exactly as represented they may be sent back at the seller's expense. None came back.—Weekly Sun.

$67 GONE

Every Canadian consumed, during 1913, approximately $67.54 worth of imported goods. Every Canadian thereby sent sixty-seven dollars of Canadian money to enrich some other country, to keep foreign workmen employed.

It does not seem so much, but it makes the gigantic total of $675,428,168. The value of all goods "Made in Canada" is less than double this. Of these imports 65% come from the United States, yet by every condition of nature we are just as well equipped to manufacture many of these goods as our neighbour—and we do.

If only 25% of this 675 million dollars' worth of goods were produced in Canada, that production would give employment to 62,500 workmen, sufficient with their families and dependents to support 250,000 people, to populate a city larger than Winnipeg, or to create 16 cities the size of Guelph, Moncton, Brandon, or New Westminster.

By purchasing only goods "Made in Canada" you can help to keep a good share of this 675 million dollars at home, you can bring about a greater prosperity than Canada has ever known.

STALLINGS HAS BRAVES' BATS AS SOUVENIRS

Clubs Used by Gowdy and Maranville Are Real Treasures

Boston, Oct. 19. — Souvenir collecting is a hobby with a great many people. It is so with George Stallings, the peerless manager of the world's champion Braves. Yet out of all the things that figured in the winning of those four memorable battles with the Athletics, the "Miracle Man" has saved just two—the bats of Maranville and Gowdy.

These two pieces of wood are treasured by Stallings above all other inanimate objects. With these two bats the lanky Ohian and the "Rabbit" laced out the hits that won three of the games against the former champions. They brought to Stallings the greatest honor a baseball manager can hope to achieve in his profession. And Stallings remembered it.

As soon as the last man was out in the fourth game and the Braves' bats were being collected, the gentleman from the south whispered something in Mascot O'Connor's ear. What he said is a secret between the two. At any rate, Mascot O'Connor scurried away and returned a few minutes later with two bats.

One of them, a long, thin handled club of the wagon-tongue variety, bore the name GOWDY pyrographed in capitals in the bulge. Five bands of tape decorated the handle. That was the stick with which the tall blonde boy from Ohio walloped out a single, a double and a triple in the first game at Philadelphia.

That was also the stick with which "Lanky" Hank smashed out the two doubles and a home run in that ever-to-be-remembered twelve inning struggle at Fenway Park, which practically clinched the title for the Braves.

The other bat was half an inch shorter and of a different type. It was brown, much thicker and taped solid the length of the handle. There was no name to designate it from the others, but Mascot O'Connor had handled that bat too many times to make a mistake.

It was Maranville's. This was the stick with which the "Rabbit" drove out those timely singles, which twice aided in downing the Athletics.

Reserve List of Canuck League

The following is the Canadian league reserve list. The Brantford club has apparently not sent in its reserve list of players to Secretary Farrell yet:

FIFTEEN THOUSAND MILE TRIP IN 16 FOOT CANOE PADDLE ACROSS CONTINENT

Bob Zimmerman, the well known Montreal swimmer and diver, holder for seven years of many Canadian championships, and a member of the 1912 Canadian Olympic team, is completing arrangements for the longest trip ever undertaken by canoeists. Zimmerman will leave next week with Fred Smith, a Halifax runner, on a fifteen thousand mile paddle. Their canoe will be 16 feet in length, with a 38-inch beam, and will be so constructed as to have water-tight compartments for food and clothing, which the paddlers will take along. They will wear oilskins and holes will be cut in the canvas covering of the canoe for their positions. Sleeping bags will also be taken along, as they will live in the open. The trip, Zimmerman estimates, will take about a year to complete.

He and Smith will leave Ottawa on Saturday, October 24th and paddle up the Ottawa to Lake Nipissing. Through the French River they will go to the Georgian Bay, thence through the McKenzie Straits, Lake Michigan, Chicago River, Drainage Canal, Mississippe River, Gulf of Mexico, coast of British Honduras, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Panama, Panama Canal, and up the Pacific Coast to San Francisco. These daring paddlers hope to reach Panama next July and to get to San Francisco by Christmas of 1915 at the latest.

Both hold many medals for their athletic feats and are confident that it will be a great adventure. They will take photographs as they go along, and have already closed with several newspapers, for which they will write stories of their experiences. The hardest part of the journey will likely be the early stages, as they may strike snow and ice before they get to Chicago. They will pick up their provisions from place to place, and finance the whole trip through their photographs and correspondence.

THE GLAD HAND FOR THE "RABBIT"

Springfield, Oct. 20.—Walter J. ("Rabbit") Maranville and Leslie Mann, both residents of this city and important factors in the winning of the world's series this year, will be the guests of honor at an informal banquet to be held here Wednesday night.

Manager George Stallings and Capt. John Evers of the victorious Braves are expected to attend. Mayor Denison will preside and presentations will be made to both of the local players.

A Challenge and the Answer.

France is laughing over the reply of a young diplomat to a challenge given by an ex-governor of the annexed provinces, Alsace-Lorraine. The two were neighbors at an official banquet recently, and the young Frenchman was talking of the skill of the French workman.

"However ugly a thing may be, he seems able to turn it into a pretty object," he said. The old Prussian, with an impatient gesture, pulled a gray hair from his beard.

"Let him make something pretty out of that," he said, gruffly, handing it to his companion. The Frenchman smiled, and carefully placed the hair in his pocketbook.

A week later the German received a small box. In it was a gold tie-pin, the head representing the Prussian eagle on a rock. The eagle held in its claws the gray hair, to each end of which a small gold ball was fixed, and on one ball was the word "Alsace," on the other "Lorraine." And inscribed in tiny letters on the rock was the legend: "You only hold them by a hair."

Greatest Fleet of History.

The largest mobilization of warships in all history was certainly that accomplished by Xerxes before the battle of Salamis. According to the detailed figures given by Herodotus, he mustered 1,207 battleships — triremes, or ships of war, with three banks of oars. Each of these carried a crew of 200 rowers and thirty fighting men. There were also 3,000 smaller vessels of war and transports, averaging eighty men each. A further 120 triremes afterward joined. Herodotus may even have understated the figures, since Aeschylus gives 1,207 triremes as the number present at the battle, and 547 had already been lost or destroyed.—London Opinion.

GROUPS FOR CURLING CLUB

In Tankard and District Cup Competitions

R. M. Waddell is in Toronto today representing the local curling club at the semi-annual meeting of the Ontario Curling association.

It is not likely that there will be any change in the Tankard and District Cup groupings:

The Peterborough club is grouped as follows:

Tankard—Group No. 3—Bobcaygeon, Cannington, Fenelon Falls, Lindsay, Norwood, Peterborough. Play at Peterborough. Umpire — Mr. R. M. Waddell.

District Cup — District No. 2 — Bobcaygeon, Cannington, Fenelon Falls, Hastings, Keene, Lindsay, Norwood, Peterborough, Port Hope. Play at Lindsay. Umpire—Mr. J. D. Flavelle.

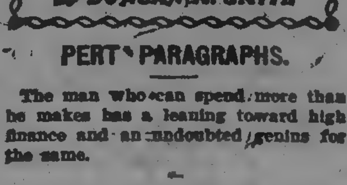
The man who can spend more than he makes has a leaning toward high finance and an undoubted genius for the same.

The man who inherits much money very rarely inherits the ability to make more.

The pleasure with which some people listen to themselves talk is often surpassed by the weariness with which others succumb to the same.



Being wise is a condition a fellow arrives at after getting it in the neck a few times.

If we could remember what we chose to remember and forget what we don't like the world would be more pleasant, wouldn't it?

It is so easy to jump on to the other chap when he is down that the only wonder is that some of us refrain.

Of course all men are vain, and some of them are even in vain.

NO NEED FOR INDUSTRIAL TIE-UP IN CANADA ON ACCOUNT OF WAR

The following extract from an article in The Monetary Times under the heading of "How the Facts Compel Confidence," should be of the keenest interest to Canadians at the present time of industrial uncertainty:

The instinct of knowing when the inevitable will come around the corner is one half of success. That being the privilege of only a few, the art of accepting the inevitable is nearly as valuable. During the first week of war Canada, like other countries, dropped pen and tools and order books to read war bulletins. Later the country realised that this international struggle is not an affair of days. The next phase was a patriotic stand to assist Great Britain in the fight. Then came business self-examination. Up to this point, the inevitable had been accepted in good spirit. Then there appeared a disposition for the business mind to make lengthy trips to meet trouble. So long have been these mental journeys that some have foretold even what disastrous days may come after war. Obviously that is the wrong attitude for business in Canada. Having accepted the inevitable, there are many substantial facts of consolation.

First, the British Empire has gone into a fight for good cause, and with excellent chances of victory. Second, Canada never before has had to face a crisis like this. It therefore gives an opportunity to show that the national business steel is well tempered. Third, the Dominion not being at the actual seat of war, some benefits come as a result.

The closing of one factory is taken as a conversational text and talked to distraction. Of the factories that have been given orders as a result of the war, making wheels revolve for many months to come, little is said. Too much business conversation is on that basis and this places business itself on the same unfortunate foundation. That is a mistake. The sooner every man will allow the brighter facts to attend him, and his business to be given the best possible impetus, the better will it be for the community.

It is right to exercise economy, but mistaken economy is out of place. The nation is made up of individuals. National business is made up of individual business and the national welfare of individual welfare. If five thousand people lack faith in the economic strength of Canada, that in the aggregate is a town's lack of confidence. Every individual who makes the problem of living more difficult for another, makes the problem more difficult for a group. They in turn make it harder for the whole community. Sentiment plays a goodly part in business. If sentiment is poor, business will suffer. Waving a flag with one hand and closing the factory gate with the other does not help. Cutting the wages of the workman is just as disastrous to him as the withdrawal of a business man's bank credit at a critical moment.

Every employer should do his best to keep the labor situation as nearly normal as possible. An army of unemployed is a dangerous wound in the economic body. Unemployment creates extensive dissatisfaction and suffering. Further, it eats into the savings now placed in the postoffice, Government and chartered banks in hundreds of millions of dollars. That money, where it is, helps to carry on business. If the individual does his part and makes even the so-called sacrifice, the entire community is doing its part automatically. The benefit is universal. That is what Great Britain is doing. Radical measures to assist are being taken in the British Isles by individual firms and by the Government.

Some may contend that this is all very well as sentiment and talk, but that the facts speak otherwise. An analysis shows that many facts confirm cheerful business sentiment and encourage the policy outlined. The outstanding feature is the notable strength of the banking and financial situation in Canada. The banks had already prepared for a process of readjustment, which was due anyway after the recent active era of construction and speculative period. They were, at the outbreak of war, in an excellent position to cope with the situation. Since then, strong measures have been taken to make the financial position impregnable. The banks have been authorized to issue Dominion notes to such an amount as may be necessary against such securities as may be deposited by the banks and approved by the Minister of Finance and his expert advisers. The banks also have authority to make payment in bank notes instead of in gold or Dominion notes until further notice, and to make use of the crop movement emergency circulation from now until further notice.

The confidence in the national financial situation is strengthened by the fact that the Bank of England has established a depository for its gold at Ottawa with Canada's Minister of Finance as trustee. The Dominion's first war loan of $50,000,000 will be raised with comparatively little difficulty. The methods were outlined in the special budget speech of the Finance Minister the other week. He is given authority by Parliament to hold gold to the amount of 25 per cent. of Dominion notes issued up to a total issue of $50,000,000 instead of $30,000,000 as previously, and as respects Dominion notes issued in excess of $50,000,000, equal to such excess. The result of this provision will be an increase of $15,000,000 in the issue of free Dominion notes. By the special taxes on sugar, coffee, spirits and tobacco, an estimated revenue of $7,200,000 will be raised. That is a good beginning. It is not a burden upon the people. Later the Government may float a loan in the Dominion. The comparative ease with which subscriptions have been raised in campaigns throughout the country for various purposes, indicates that Canadians would oversubscribe any loan which the Dominion Government deems wise to issue here. The British Government's first war loan of $75,000,000 was oversubscribed by more than $135,000,000, the total subscriptions being about $210,000,000.

In the industrial world, one expects to find the same activity among executives as is being shown in Great Britain. There they recognize the prevalence of entirely new trade conditions. They are studying these without delay and their Government is helping. They realize that trade obtained during war time is likely to be retained in times of peace. The manufacturers of Canada should co-operate with the Dominion Government so as to keep machinery running as much as possible and to keep operators employed. Already war has given an impetus to several industries. One firm has a Government order for 40,000 pairs of military boots. Another firm is making a large quantity of goods such as tents, kit bags and cotton bags. An order for 35,000 military shirts has been placed in Toronto. The flour mills of Canada are working overtime grinding Canadian wheat into 96,000,000 pounds of flour, the Dominion's gift to Great Britain. The pulp and paper companies are unusually busy and during the past week or so have received large orders for shipment to England, South Africa and South America. There will be a good demand for the wheat, grain and fruit crops of the country, and good prices too. The factories, forests, mines, fisheries and agricultural lands will continue to supply their share of national revenue. Last year the value of their production was $2,509,000,000.

Instead of boasting of a population of 8,000,000, as in the past, there is cause for satisfaction in the fact that the population is considerably less. During the past eighteen months, while the world-wide trade depression has been in evidence, many thousands left Canada, returning to Great Britain and to the United States. Both those countries have stronger financial resources than has Canada, in this critical period, to support those numbers. The cessation of immigration is fortunate too at this time. It relieves the labor situation to that extent. Again, the number of men who are leaving productive employment here for military service is comparatively small; a great advantage compared to the situation in Europe.

While trade has ceased with Germany, the British navy has managed with little difficulty to keep open the shipping routes on the Atlantic and Pacific. The United States and British markets are still open to Canada. In those two markets is the Dominion's biggest trade, and to them may be added what was once German business, although some allowance must be made for reduced purchasing power in this country. For the twelve months ended June, 1914, Canada exported produce from its mines, fisheries, forests, factories and herds, valued at $423,827,000 compared with $363,000,000 in the corresponding twelve months in 1913 and $311,000,000 in 1912.

It is unfair to compare conditions to-day with those of last year, with those of 1907 or with those of any previous year. The year 1914 presents to Canada an entirely new situation. The Government, bankers and business men legitimately may take radical measures to deal with a position that is not likely to occur for another half century and maybe never again. It is unreasonable to expect conditions like those of 1912 and the few years previous. If the Governments of the Dominion and business men everywhere will do their part to meet the unique case of nineteen fourteen, there will be reason for congratulation in after years, because such action means the maintenance of the national workshop, national credit and national satisfaction. The country had previously accepted the fact that a readjustment of conditions was due. The war is aggravating the process to some extent, but the final result of the readjustment will be wholesome. Favorable facts, confidence and good business sentiment may trip together without trepidation.

Jolt For Defiant Boniface.

A hard jolt was handed out recently by the Provincial Board of Health to a delinquent and defiant hotel proprietor in Muskoka. The man was told that unless certain steps prescribed by the Department were taken in short order that his place would be placarded to warn the public of danger, and that proceedings would be taken against him under the act within 24 hours. It is understood that he is now following out instructions.

The case, according to Dr. R. W. Bell, provincial inspector, is one of three years' standing. The hotel in question is one of the largest and most popular on the Muskoka Lakes, and every year has 300 persons at a time on the guest roll. Nevertheless the water supplied to the tables is subject to the most serious manner of contamination, and the repeated warnings of the Department have produced no change for the better. It appears that the refuse water from a large laundry in proximity to the hotel is emptied into the bay within 60 feet of the intake pipe. The board claims that such a situation is dangerous, and would rapidly deplete the number of tourists if it were understood.

If vegetables are ovecooked, their texture toughens, their flavor is somewhat destroyed and they are not so digestible.

THE ODYSSEY

With the English translations of Homer's immortal story of the wanderings and adventures of Ulysses in the Odyssey, the English speaking world was indeed favored. To those who were unable to read and understand the Greeks an opportunity was given by which they might enjoy the tale which contained so much ancient mythology. Science and learning has again stepped forward and the Milano Moving Picture Co. of Italy undertook to present it on the canvas. Last night this film which is said to be a $200,0000 production was presented at the Grand Opera House.

Some are disappointed, many pleased and others amused. The student of Homer, who has perhaps committed many lines of the great author to memory, notices many scenes of the story absent and is not satisfied but for him or her let it be known that the works of great authors can not be presented on the canvas without being a disappointment to some, as is the case in the efforts of modern actors to present the plays of Shakespeare. The film is a wonderful piece of work and the scenes presented have rivals only in the pictures, representing the Garden of Eden. The various shipwrecks and battles are exceptionally well acted.

The audience last evening embraced many school teachers and students both of the Collegiate and Normal School.

Crossley Meetings To Close Tonight

The addresses by Rev. H. T. Crossley on Sunday were very helpful and delivered to large congregations. The morning address was an acrostic on the "Scriptures." The address to the S.S. in the afternoon—when 174 in attendance signed the cards as members, Christians or those desiring to lead Christian lives; and the evening address on "Wrong Views of Hell," were masterly efforts and thorough Gospel presentations. His solos, including "The Pearly Gates and Golden," were also given in splendid voice.

To-night closes the campaign. "Ten Business Maxims" were given last night as a basis for Christian devotion and service. These, with one of his favorite solos, "Papa, Come This Way," lead many to a point of decision as the choir sang, "Where He Leads Me I Will Follow." Rev. F. A. Connors, of Park St. Baptist church, assisted in the service.

Mr. Crossley stated on the Sabbath that he would give one of his photos to each family represented at the Tuesday evening meeting. The song service begins at 7.45.

Some Clever Work By Young Artists

To lovers, admirers and critics of fine art, there is an excellent opportunity this week to witness work along that line at the exhibition being held every afternoon and evening at the home of Miss M. McCarthy, 379 Park stret. Miss McCarthy has won great prominence, and her work, as well as that of her pupils, stands out very conspicuously.

Among the many portraits which are Miss McCarthy's personal work are paintings of Mr. J. W. E. Forester, the well known artist of Toronto, who imparted to her the knowledge of the use of oils and watercolors; also portraits of Rev. Father Ferguson, of Lindsay, and Rev. Father Cote, of St. Peter's cathedral. In figure, a large painting of the "Death of Virginia," the original of which is to be found in the art galleries of Paris, is perhaps the best. The peaceful expression on the face of the dying lover is particularly well brought out.

A large work in oils by Mrs. (Dr.) Gallivan, one of Miss McCarthy's pupils, is especially attractive. The story presented is that of a young mother, hovering over the bedside of a dying child and gazing upon the picture of the Saviour on the wall, as if beseeching it for aid. Other works in oils which deserve special mention are that of a boat scene at night, by Miss Dunne, of North Monaghan, and a floral design, cleverly executed by Miss A. Curtis.

The fancy work of Miss Florence Howden in a pastoral scene brings to light the fact that that pupil is making rapid strides of advancement in water colors, particularly in sepia work. Exhibitions in this class include the work of Miss J. Gordon, Miss Elsie Dawson and Mrs. F. McGrath.

In china painting is to be found dainty work by Miss Florence Howden, Mrs. E. Conroy, Miss Hallett, Miss Sybil White, Mrs. R. Copping, Mrs. J. Comstock, Miss May Kelly, Mrs. McDonald, Miss Nora Coughlin, Miss C. Mann and Mr. H. Laplante. The dinner set by Mrs. Copping and a jardiniere by Mrs. Comstock are very cleverly done.

No invitations were sent out this year, but Miss McCarthy extends an invitation to all citizens interested in the work.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE JOS. JEFFERSON

The funeral of the late Joseph Jefferson, who was a member of the fire department, took place this morning to St. Peter's cathedral and cemetery, with members of the Hibernians, police force and fire department in attendance. The pallbearers were: Messrs. M. J. Clancy and J. J. Duffus, firemen; A. Blade and J. McArthur, police officers, and J. Drain and M. Neary, representing the A. O. H.

Police Chief Thompson, Fire Chief Howard and Adjutant McElhiney also attended. The hose wagon and also the boots and helmet of the deceased were draped.

Requiem high mass was sung by Rev. Father Phelan. Rev. Father McGinty officiated at the grave.

DIAGNOSING DISEASE.

A Plea For Annual Medical Examinations For Every One.

We have heard too much about the rights of the individual; let us know more about his duties. Too much stress has been laid on the sacredness of private property and too little on the duty of all to contribute to the welfare of the whole. Preventive medicine has demonstrated in a practical way the force of the Biblical statements that no man liveth to himself alone and that every man is his brother's keeper.

If preventive medicine is to bestow on man its richest service the time must come when every citizen will submit himself to a thorough medical examination once a year or oftener. The benefits which would result from such a service are so evident to medical men that detail is not desirable. When recognised in their early stages most of the diseases which now prevail are amenable to treatment.

The early recognition of tuberculosis, cancer and heart disease, with the elimination of the more acute infectious diseases, would add something like fifteen years to the average life, besides saving much in invalidism and suffering. The ultimate goal of science is the domination of the forces of nature and their utilization in promoting the welfare of mankind. Science must discover the facts and medicine must make the application for either cure or prevention.—Victor C. Vaughan, M. D., in Journal of American Medical Association.

It seems that all the warring nations are praying to God for victory. They will not all get it, but the praying won't do them any harm.

WHY GERMANS ARE AT WAR

Canada in Reality is Helping Herself

Professor G. M. Wrong, head of the history department of Toronto university, speaking at the Canadian club recently on "Why Germany is at war," scouted the idea of Canada being merely a helper with Britain in this war.

"One hears often the phrase that Canada is helping Britain in this war," said the professor. "In reality Canada is helping herself. It is her war as much as Britain's, and she is called upon for the same sacrifices. This war is going to test us to the very depths of our national life. We shall have to make heavy sacrifices that involve death.

"By common agreement, Germany, not Austria, is the chief enemy. This is itself a tribute to the greatness of Germany. We recognize in her the strength to face the world in arms. Germany's achievements have been very great. She is the greatest organizer in the modern world, but there are limits upon her capacity.

No Creative Genius.

"It is well for us now to remember that except music, very little that is created has come from Germany. None of the epoch-making discoveries, such as those of Galileo, Newton and Darwin have had their origin in Germany. The greatest discoveries involve imaginative insight, and for these Germany has shown but slight capacity. What she has done is to take ideas from other nations and work them out with elaborate and masterly detail."

The professor dwelt on the division of the empire which prevented it from expanding, and stated that we were at war with Germany because she had yet to pass through the revolutions, as her opponents about her had done.

"In Prussia the classes sincerely believe that their country is under a constant and deadly menace from surrounding enemies. It was France yesterday, it is Russia to-day, it may be Britain to-morrow. The one problem of national life is for them to be strong to fight. The German people, untrained in political life, have meekly followed the leaders placed over them.

"It was pathetic to hear people say, as one often did in Germany, 'If the Kaiser wants a navy, he is sure to get it.' What the Kaiser wishes, the nation would do. It was not for the nation itself to decide about its matters. We are seeing every day that this attitude of mind is the attitude of practically the whole German people. What the leaders say, the people accept, and there never was a better organized system for propagating the ideals of a ruling class than that now found in Germany."

German Philosophers.

In reviewing the dominant German philosophies, Professor Wrong mentioned the crowds that flocked to hear Professor Treitshke.

For the Good of the World.

"His teaching was that Germany has evolved a culture that no state has attained to and that for the good of the world this culture must be impressed upon it. One smiles at the lack of humor in such a teacher. He said quite simply that the greatness of the world depends upon the dominance of the German type of character.

"It is hard to imagine a leading Englishman, in a lecture, let us say, at Oxford, saying such a thing, but Treitshke taught it and Germany believed it. Any weapon might be used to impose this German culture. Germany had no colonies. Let her take those of Holland. Britain was inefficient. Germany must in time strike her down, and so on. Twenty-five years ago Treitshke was regarded by Englishmen as an eccentric. None of his writings were translated into English, and all that time he was teaching Germany that it was her sacred duty to culture to overthrow Britain."

The other great German philosopher, Nietzsche, was characterized as the modern Machiavelli.

"Nietzsche's teaching was that the great rulers of the world are the competent. He had no belief in such a theory as that of the divine right of kings. To him the claims of the German Emperor would seem absurd. He believed in the right of competence of the men who fight for their ideas and make sacrifices. Let us not then quote Nietsche as the apostle of modern Germany. But the leaders of modern Germany have acted on a part of Nietzsche's teachings that power is the one thing to aim at and that everything is justifiable in a nation which will make it powerful.

"This, then, is in some measure the outlook of modern Germany, and because she treasures these ideals and acts upon them, we are at war."

THE TOWN OF ARRAS.

Arras is situated on the right bank of the Scarpe, about half way between Calais and Amiens. It is the chief town of the department of Pas-de-Calais, and carries on an important grain trade. It was here that the French and English, after the battle of Agincourt, in 1415, signed their treaty of peace. Through the middle ages this town was noted for its tapestries, but their manufacture has completely died out today.

Industrial Classes.

The industrial night classes are progressing very favorably; the membership is increasing nightly. This is one of the greatest opportunities a young man ever had to get an education that will greatly benefit him, at no cost to himself whatever. There is still room for more pupils in the various clases.

Mr. A. F. Hagerman is the principal. He met with unbounded success last year, and he is repeating last year's performance. This is an opportunity that no one who desires a better education can afford to let pass.

A Patriotic Pillow.

Messrs. Hourigan and MacLean, local agents for the Scotland Woollen Mills, are displaying a handsome and at the same time a patriotic pillow top in their show window on Hunter street which has been the subject of much favorable comment. The pillow top, handsomely worked in varied colored silks, represents the flags of the allies, Great Britain, France, Russia and Belgium, in all the national colors of these countries. In the center of the pillow appears the Maple Leaf, and above and below this national emblem appears this appropriate motto: "All for one—one for all." The pillow top was worked by a young lady in Chicago, U. S. A., and was sent to Mr. J. E. Baldwin, promoter for the Barber Asphalt Paving Co., who makes his headquarters in Peterborough.

Star Dust.

A constant rain of meteor, star and comet dust is pouring upon this world of ours. But you should not jump to the conclusion that the earth is perceptibly "growing" on account of the influx of dust from without. It does grow a very little in that way, but it has been calculated that it would take a thousand million years to accumulate a layer one inch thick.—New York Journal.

COURSE OF RIVER MEUSE

Typical of the Peoples of Three Countries

Writing in Country Life (London) Hilaire Belloc gives an interesting sketch of the river Meuse, a river which, he thinks, is singularly typical of the three nations through whose country it flows. All its first course goes through that essentially Gallic country of Lorraine, of the Three Bishoprics, and of the countrysides that bound Barrois. On its very upper waters, where it is no more than a clear meadow stream, you will find Domremy and the house where Joan of Arc spent her childhood. In the midst of the same stretch, writes Mr. Belloc—where already the Meuse is a river—stands the great Gallic fortress of Verdun, the town upon whose fortunes so many invasions have depended. Further upon its course see the sombre name of Sedan, and in all this long French rising and flowing of the river there is upon either side that mass of rich meadowland and vineyard, low, rounded hill and strictly ordered woods, which make up a French landscape.

Similarly, all the lower reaches, from the Roman crossing at Maestricht to the vague marshes, flat mud islands, dykes and confused shallows whereby it mingles with the Scheldt and with the Rhine and passes to the sea, are quite Dutch, not only in the language spoken upon either side of the river, but in the broadening flats and sluggish waters and in the very sky. For the skies of the Netherland plain are different from anything else in the rest of Europe, save perhaps the skies in the Fenland of England. They seem to be lit from beneath, and their clouds supply the accident and contrast which the earthly horizon lacks.

Between these two peopled, wealthy sections, the upper and the lower, the broad seaward reaches and the inland meadow streams, the Meuse by a curious accident experiences a fate not promised by its origin and hardly remembered at its end. It runs through gorges more bold, and in parts more deserted, than those of any western river. The trench which it thus occupies is the more memorable to those who have followed it, from the breadth, the depth and the silence of the stream that flows through it between the very steep walls of wood and rock upon either side. These are, I suppose, 500 feet, 600 feet, 700 feet, above stream, and in places 1,000 feet, but they give an impression of far greater height from the uniformity of their coloring and wooded cloak, from their sharpness of fall, and from the way in which they run parallel, supporting each the effects of the other upon either side of the flat floor of water beneath. . . . From Liege to Namur, going up stream, the valley growing though it does more striking, is yet not fixed in character, and in many places the solemn heights of the Ardennes upon the south overlook an easier land to the north. But between Namur and Givet the ruggedness of outline increases. At Dinant the valley is already strikingly profound. Between Givet and Mezleres its majesty, depth and isolation make one remember the Pyrenees and forget the too easy north.

First Feminist Party.

The earliest deputation of women to parliament was organized close on 2,000 years ago. Under the triumvirate of Augustus, Antony and Lepidus it was proposed to tax the property of 1,400 wealthy Roman matrons in order to meet part of the expenses of the civil war then raging. They refused to submit to this imposition and sent Hortensia, one of their number, to plead against it before the senate. In the course of her speech she asked, "Why should we be compelled to pay for a war into which we had no wish to embark or for the support of a government whose policy we have no means of controlling?" This argument proved so effective that the tax on women was reduced to one-third of the amount originally proposed.—London Tatler.

NO DECISION YET FROM BIG BATTLE IN THE NORTH

Paris Observers do not Think Contest Has Reached Its Height --- Allied Forces Are After Lille, and Are Fighting Serious Obstacles

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Oct. 21.—The outcome of the battle in the North, according to the judgment of observers in Paris, still remained undecided this morning.

The furious contest in this part of Belgium and France is regarded here as now having reached its height. Germans who at first apparently yielded to the offensive of the allies are now fighting to the maximum, the lines of French and English. In this they have been assisted by troops from Antwerp and all other German forces available in Belgium.

The Allies, apparently, are fighting with the greatest ardor and determination to take Lille in spite of extraordinary resistance of the enemy. Barbed wire obstructions have proved a serious obstacle to the Allied advance and numerous means of mounting them have been considered. It is realised here, it may be necessary to make sacrifices to this end and it has been suggested that the men selected for the task be armed with bucklers such as were used successfully in attacking the notorious automobile bandits of Paris in their refuge in the suburbs of the city.

MAKE POLICE BUSY TO KEEP SOME PEOPLE QUARANTINED

Says Health Officer in Answer to Mayor Who Has Heard Complaints

CONTROL EPIDEMIC

Every Precaution Being Taken With Pupils at Sacred Heart School

At the meeting of the Board of Health yesterday afternoon Dr. McPherson, M.H.O., reported that the diphtheria epidemic was now practically under control. The recently appointed nurse for the Separate Schools of the city has been centreing her efforts at the School of the Sacred Heart and the pupils are being examined regularly. Any cases where a discharging nose, or a sore throat is found a swab is taken and the child kept from school till the finding of Toronto authorities is made known. If the finding states that there are symptoms of the disease, the home of the pupil is immediately quarantined.

Mayor Buller stated that he had heard several complaints from residents of the south end on account of inmates of quarantined houses coming to and fro from the building and children playing with other children of the neighborhood. The M.H.O. gave out the information that every effort was being made to keep such people in check and when any official hoves in sight nothing is found that would indicate that the quarantine rules are being broken. "In dealing with some people," he remarked, "it would be necessary to have a policeman on hand all the time."

Collect Accounts.

Sanitary Inspector Spence has been unable to collect an account of $9.00 from G. H. Howson for abating a nuisance on Howson's property at 137 London Street, and also a $1.00 account from T. H. Hooper for his share in the cost of cleaning a catch basin at the rear of the Post Office. The City Solicitor will be authorized to take the necessary steps to have these accounts collected.

A letter was received from R. Stark asking permission to put in a septic tank at the corner of Maria and Burnham Streets. The City Engineer will report.

"Business as Usual."

(From the London Chronicle.)

The "business as usual" motto has been taken to heart in a south-coast town, where the sound of heavy guns (at practice) was heard recently. Up a side street a panic-stricken small boy rushed to his mother, screaming that the Germans had come. His parent eyed him severely before replying. Then she spoke: "Never you mind who's come or who hasn't. Go and wash your face and take your father his dinner."

PROTEST BY UNITED STATES

Against Seizure of American Steamer by British Warship

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Washington, Oct. 21.—The United States has protested to Great Britain against the seizure by a British warship of the American tank steamer John D. Rockefeller.

New York, Oct. 21.—The Standard Oil Co. steamer Platuria, flying the American flag, has been seized by British warships off the coast of Scotland and taken into Stornoway as a prize of war, according to cablegrams received here to-day by the company.

The company has requested the state department to make another protest on the seizure of the Platuria, which is identical, the company claims, with the circumstances attending the seizure of the Brindilla. The Platuria was formerly the German steamer Diamant.

Anniversary Of Trafalgar

Today, Oct. 21, is the anniversary of the great battle of Trafalgar, Nelson's greatest victory. Admiral Horatio Nelson was born Sept. 29th, 1758, at Burnham Thorpe, Norfolk. His father was rector of that place. Nelson received a grammar school education and at twelve years of age was appointed a midshipman. In 1776 he was acting Lieutenant of the Worcester, a 64 gun vessel. In 1779 he was made captain and in 1784 he captured several American vessels as liable to seizure under the Navigation Act. This led to suits at law but Nelson finally won. While in the West Indies at this time he married Mrs. Nesbit, the widow of a physician. In 1793 he was sent to Naples, where he met Sir William and Lady Hamilton and the latter influenced powerfully his future private life. While at Naples he lost the sight of one eye by having gravel driven into by by a shot which struck the ground near him. In 1797 he fought the battle of Cape Vincent in which he boarded and captured two warships much larger than his own. His cry at this engagement was the famous "Westminster Abbey or victory." Nelson led the boarderers himself and was knighted for his daring victory. In July of the same year he led his men in an attack on the Island of Teneriffe where he lost his right arm. His life was with great difficulty saved by his stepson, Lieut. Nesbit, as the attacking party were defeated.

The year 1798 saw the battle of the Nile in the Bay of Aboukir in which nine ships were captured and two burnt. This battle left Napoleon's army stranded in Egypt and made the Egyptian Expedition a failure. For this victory Nelson was raised to the peerage with the title of Baron Nelson of the Nile and given a pension of £2000. In 1801 he became Vice-Admiral, in 1803 he was made Viscount Nelson following his victory over the Danish fleet at Copenhagen.

In 1805 he was detailed to handle the French fleet that was going to carry Napoleon's army into England. He had them tied up at Toulon but a storm allowed them to escape and after chasing them twice across the Atlantic they effected a junction with the Spanish at Cadiz. Joining his forces with those of Lord Collingwood he met them at Cape Trafalgar. The French had 33 ships of the line with seven frigates while the British had 27 of the former and five of the latter. The French were drawn up in the form of a crescent and Nelson's plan was to sail into the centre of it in two lines he and Collingwood each leading a line. In this way every ship had its antagonist picked out. In four hours those that had not struck or sunk were in precipitate flight. In the height of the battle Nelson was shot through the back but lived long enough to know that victory was won. His famous signal, "England expects this day every man will do his duty" was his last message to his men. This victory made an invasion of England impossible. Nelson's guiding principle was duty. He told a young middy once that three things were required, implicit obedience, to regard as an enemy any man who spoke disrespectfully of the King and to hate the French like the devil. Command of the sea was one of the principal factors causing Napoleon's defeat and Nelson felt it his duty to maintain it.

Violent Attacks of Foe Are Repulsed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Oct. 21.—The French official communication this afternoon says: "During yesterday attacks of the enemy were particularly violent at Nieuport, Dixmude and La Bassee.

"They all were repulsed by the allied armies with great energy.

"At all other points the situation is without any notable change."

LOSS OF LIFE MAY BE NINE

Bomb Destroys Tenements Killing Authors of Crime

RACIAL STRIFE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Montreal, Oct. 21.—The loss of life by last night's terrific bomb explosion on Frontenac street, the result of racial strife, inflamed by the war, may yet total eight or nine. Besides the Austrian bomb-thrower, found crushed under a huge stone which nearly cut him in two, and who died before he could be released, Mrs. Jurensky died in the hospital, both legs being broken.

Mrs. Gilbert had both legs amputated, and an unidentified man is dying in the hospital, and a second bomb-thrower has not been found yet.

Besides these two, a bedridden old woman and a child, known to have been in the building, are not yet accounted for.

MONTREAL, Oct. 21. — Two men who are believed to have blown up a block of nine tenements and three stores in Frontenac street, about six o'clock lost night with a bomb, met death in the ruins of the explosion, in which a dozen others were injured, according to the information that Inspector McLaughlan gathered last night in an investigation that he started at the Frontenac street police station, following the explosion.

The body of one of the men believed to have thrown the bomb is thought to be in the ruins, while that of the other is in the morgue.

Paul Belanger and Joseph Lefreniere, who say they were passing up Frontenac street at the time of the explosion, told Inspector McLaughlin that they had seen two men who looked like foreigners, carry a big, round, black object into one of the doorways of the block of tenements in which the explosion occurred. The moment they deposited it on the stairway there was a loud explosion, and the entire block appeared to rise from the ground. They both said that one of the men they had seen carry the object into the doorway was hurled back on the sidewalk, but the other man did not appear and must have been buried in the ruins.

The two young men were detained as witnesses for the coroner's inquest that will be held.

The explosion occurred while the majority of nine families and their boarders, who occupied the premises, mostly Russians, were at supper. The interior of the building was wrecked from cellar to roof, and how anyone who was inside escaped is a miracle. The explosion not only shattered the block of nine tenements, but it smashed the windows in houses on both sides of the street for some distance.

So far as the police were able to learn last night from the Russians who occupied the tenements in the buildings, none of those who resided in the building were missing.

The police were of the opinion that if there was a body in the ruins it was that of one of the men who are said to have deposited what was evidently a bomb in one of the hallways of the building.

Many of the occupants of the tenements of the house were blown through the windows by the force of the explosion.

So far as can be learned there are two men dead, two women supposed to be dying, one man in a critical condition, four men in hospitals with good chance of recovery, four known persons whose injuries were not severe and probably half a dozen persons more or less injured who were not taken to any hospital.

Late last night the police came to the conclusion that only one body was in the ruins, that of the unidentified second boom-thrower, hence the search for bodies was discontinued.

The dead man in the morgue is thought to have been an Austrian, and meant to have caused the death of the occupants of the building because they were Russians. There are Austrians and Germans living in the vicinity of Frontenac and Ontario streets, where the explosion took place.

GERMANS IN BELGIUM SAID TO BE PERTURBED

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 21.—From all quarters comes the news that the Germans in Belgium are perturbed by the latest tidings from their front in France. Correspondents in nearly all the Dutch frontier towns which are news centres for Belgium agree on this fact. What the news may actually be is never stated, but the blatant, bullying optimism of recent weeks has given place to anxiety. In Antwerp the Germans are repairing the forts with feverish haste, and trials of the new guns mounted there are to take place soon.

FOE RECEIVED BIGGEST SURPRISE OF THE WAR

Found Themselves Confronted With Large Force of All Arms, Supported by British Ships and Were Forced to Retire

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 21.—The Daily Mail's Rotterdam correspondent says the Germans report a fierce battle still raging yesterday between Dunkirk and Furnes. On their march towards Dunkirk, the Germans received the greatest surprise of the war when encountered by a large force of all arms supported by British ships which forced their retirement on Ostend.

A despatch from Ghent says the result of this fighting has caused much anxiety among the officers and one German general commitied suicide.

EMDEN SINKS FIVE SHIPS OF BRITAIN

Another is Captured According to Report to Admiralty

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 21.—The German cruiser Emden has again been sinking British steamers, this time at a point 150 miles southwest of Cocin, in British India, according to a report received by the Admiralty from Colombo, Ceylon.

She has sent to the bottom the British steamers Chilkana, Troilus, Benmohr and Clangrant, and the dredger Ponrabble, bound for Tasmania.

The British steamer Exford was captured by the Emden.

A. WEIR FOR FIFTH WARD

Had Majority of 10 Votes Over Mr. Hay for Council Seat

Archibald Weir, takes the vacant seat in the City Council by virtue of the verdict given by the ratepayers of East City, in the voting of yesterday. Mr. Weir had a majority of 10 votes and as Ald. Anderson was returned last January by acclamation for a term of two years Mr. Weir will not have to enter the municipal elections next January.

The returns were as follows:—

P.S.D.	Hay	Weir
No. 20	69	51
No. 21	68	79
No. 22	60	77
	197	207

Majority for Weir, 10.

LEAK LET WATER INTO THE MILK

Fine of $25 and Costs at Police Court

At police court this morning Joseph B. Reylock was charged with supplying milk to the Belmont cheese factory, in which there was a large percentage of water. It transpired that the creamer in which he placed the milk cans had a hole in it, and the water kept running into the milk until both vessels were at the same level. This went on for about 10 days. When the leak was discovered he told the inspector about it. He was unaware how long this had been going on.

Mr. Thompson, Madoc, official prosecutor for the Dairymen's Association, laid the information. The defendant was fined $25 and costs amounting in all to $28.50.

WAR VESSELS CANNOT ENTER SMYRNA GULF

Turkey's Action Taken as Aimed at the Allies

GERMANY ANXIOUS

Chancellor Bethmann Hollweg is Attacked in Influential Quarters

Copenhagen, Oct. 21.—Turkey has forbidden warships to enter the Gulf of Smyrna. This is aimed at the allied fleet in the Mediterranean. The Berliner Tageblatt hints that a certain amount of anxiety is manifesting itself in Germany about the outcome of the war and Chancellor Bethmann Hollweg is being attacked in influential quarters as responsible for the war.

Russians Advancing

Are Making Progress Slowly Near Warsaw

PETROGRAD, Oct. 21. — Official statements declare that the Germans are continuing their efforts to cross the Vistula river at several points, despite very heavy losses. At no point, says the statement, have they succeeded.

The Russians are declared to be advancing steadily, although slowly, on the Warsaw-Ivangorod front, driving the Germans before them.

According to a statement published in The Army Gazette, some 18,000 German dead, left on the field by the retreating Germans, were buried by the Russians.

The War Office states that the German right wing, which is extended into Galicia, has been making determined attacks in co-operation with the Austrians, but it is claimed that at no point have the enemy succeeded in gaining any distinct advantage.

An official announcement, dated Oct. 19, has been given out by the General Staff of the Commander-in-chief of the Russian forces, as follows:

"There has been no further change in the general situation. Russian troops are in contact with the enemy at various points, and there has been fighting on the River Zoura, at Stry, in Galicia, and in East Prussia.

"To the south of Przemysl the Russians continue to take prisoners in large numbers. An entire Austrian battalion, with all the officers and machine guns, surrendered to us."

GERMANS IN SEA FIGHT OFF THE PRUSSIAN COAST

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 21.—An engagement between [illegible] and hostile submarines in the Baltic near Rugen [illegible] coast is reported from Stockholm according to a [illegible] from Copenhagen.

No details are given.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1914

WHY SHOULD FLOUR INCREASE IN PRICE?

ACCORDING to the Department of Labour, flour was one of the few articles showing a decrease in price since the high-water mark of war prices was reached about a month after war was declared. The index numbers say flour is lower in price than at the first of September, yet in Peterborough the principal change has been in an upward direction. Nay, more, store-keepers last week were telling their customers that flour would likely go still further up in price. This news, while not cheerful, at least prepares householders for the shock. They say Ontario wheat is not used for flour, when a miller told us himself that he made blended flour of about half Ontario and half Manitoba wheat as well as a pure Manitoba wheat flour. But this statement concerns the price question but little. Western farmers have to sell most of their wheat as soon as it is threshed, to meet obligations, and for the last six or seven weeks wheat has been fluctuating a great deal on the exchanges. The soaring came to a sudden stop when it was realized that ships were not available for shipping all that was bought. Although western wheat has at times declined a great many points, flour to the consumer in Peterborough has been maintained in price all the time, and consumers are even told that it is going to increase still more. What is the conclusion? We know there is a retail merchants' association here and that it is necesary for a merchant to pay a fee of one hundred dollars before he can sell goods. It appears that there is a combine to maintain high prices of commodities used daily in every household at a time when labour and money are scarce and when the people are asked to make sacrifices and to give donations to Patriotic Funds and Tag Day Schemes. Is it patriotic to charge the people of Peterborough in this fashion when conditions are as they are? We know the Dominion Government has warned the country that it will take action to prevent undue price-raising, but nothing has been done. If the price of wheat is at all a determining factor in the price of flour, the people of this city are being charged too much for this commodity.

ARMED PEACE.

SOME WRITERS have been saying that armed peace is no guarantee of peace, that all these naval and military preparations have been for war pure and simple, and now the war has come. They say it is a contradiction in terms to prepare for war in time of peace, with the intention of preventing war. They say armaments mean war, and to consider huge navies or armies as a kind of national peace insurance is a fallacy of the worst kind.

In the first place, the war is not over, and it is rather early to draw conclusions. But two or three observations should occasion some pause to hasty generalizations. Twice in recent years Britain set the example to reduce expenditure for armaments. During Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman's premiership, appropriations were reduced, which were taken as a sign of weakness and decay by Germany, and she answered the offer by doubling her war programme. Winston Churchill also proposed a recess, which was not accepted by Germany. Let us ask where Britain and the Empire would be now if a policy of this kind had been followed in the last few years? There is another important historical incident in the trouble between France and Germany over the Algerias incident. Two things undoubtedly prevented an outbreak of hostilities at that time, the British navy and the power of French finance in the affairs of Germany. Lloyd George let it be known that Britain would stand behind France. France began to call in her loans, and Germany, facing a gold shortage and the British navy, backed down. There was one case where armed peace preserved peace, and where, if a policy of naval reduction had been followed, war would likely have become a fact.

But the peace advocate will say that Germany is the cause of all this insane waste of money, and that when she is beaten the nations must do away with big fleets and large armies. To say this is presuming too much. Suppose Germany is beaten decisively. What will the attitude of Russia, Japan, or China be? Will they have no interests demanding the protection of large forces for war? There are, besides, Britain and France, which, if successful, will not likely weaken the stay of their nationality in this great conflict by reducing their strength after the war is over. What new developments this great war will cause, what changes it will involve in world forces, cannot be foreseen. Even a democracy like the United States has its jingo moments. No man can say now what will be done in view of so much uncertainty that the fortunes of war involve. It would be well if the world could stop waging new wars for old, but a tremendous broadening of the idea and limitations of nationality, a wonderful enlightenment of the people of the world, educationally and spiritually, an entirely different conception of society as that is commonly understood, these things will be necessary to achieve the end in view. It is a great thought, something worthy of the highest endeavour, but too Utopian, too far in advance of human nature as it exists, and especially when war is raging, to hope that such will be the case. At best, the world can only await what progress time and change bring to pass.

WHAT GERMAN-CANADIANS DID.

SOME PEOPLE may have been skeptical of Canadians of German descent or birth in Canada, but those in Western Ontario have shown that they are on the side of the Empire. Refused permission to form a regiment by the Militia Department, they have done wonders for the Patriotic Fund, as the following editorial, in part, from the Waterloo Chronicle-Telegraph shows:

> "The response of the citizens of Berlin and Waterloo to the appeal on behalf of the Canadian Patriotic Fund has been most hearty and generous. With total contributions of over $90,000, or nearly five dollars a head for every man, woman and child in the city, Berlin at the close of its campaign held the honor of the largest per capita contribution towards this fund of any Canadian city. It has, however, since been obliged to yield this honor—and to no one would it yield it more gladly—to its neighbor, the town of Waterloo, which has responded with a contribution of $48,000—which means practically $10 per head of its population. If we include both places, the per capita contribution of this German-Canadian community works out at about six dollars.
>
> "If there was any doubt in this country, or in any other part of the Empire, as to the loyalty of the German-Canadians in Canada, this magnificent response on the part of Berlin and Waterloo, whose population is largely made up of people of German descent, should forever dispel it."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE GERMANS are bringing up heavy artillery. They are beginning to realize that hacking one's way through is slower than anticipated especially when the way is backwards.

THREE Hamilton men decided to select shoes for themselves from a carload, but being particular about style and fit, were caught in their "stocking feet."

THEY SAY the Sultan of Turkey is balking at German influence. It beats all how strong the "sick man" gets when the powers are tied up in a war.

THE BRITISH have nick-named the big German siege guns Jack Johnsons. Very appropriate, considering the German methods of sacking towns.

The Hour.

(James Bernard Fagan, in London Telegraph.)

We've shut the gates by Dover Straits,
And North, where the tide runs free,
Cheek by jowl, our watchdogs prowl,
Grey hulks in a greyer sea.
And the prayer that England prays tonight—
O Lord of our destiny!—
As the foam of our plunging prows, is white:
We have stood for peace, and we war for right.
God give us victory!

Now slack, now strong, from the mainmast flung,
The flag throbs last in the breeze;
Strained o'er the foam, like the hearts at home,
That beat for their sons on the sea.
For mothers and wives are praying tonight—
O Lord of our destiny!—
But we've no time, for our lips are tight,
Our fists are clenched, and we're stripped to fight.
God give us victory!

The West winds blow in the face of the foe—
Old Drake is beating his drum—
They drank to "The Day," for "The Hour" we pray.
The day and the hours have come.
The sea-strewn Empire prays tonight—
O Lord of our destiny!—
Thou didst give the seas into Britain's might,
For the freedom of Thy seas we smite.
God give us victory!

Do You Get It?

(Toronto News.)

A paragraph deserving analysis appears in the Kincardine Review: "E 9 is the name of the British submarine that put a German torpedo boat to the bottom. An appropriate name for so valiant a sea-dog is K 9." We thought of this paragraph, but we refrained from printing it. It is too directly traceable to the story of "the dog's seat" in a theatre, which is said to be K 9, and we feared that the Review or some other critic would discern the origin of the jest and accuse us of plagiarism.

Spicy Reading.

(Beck's Montreal Weekly.)

I understand that Mr. D. Lorne McGibbon, late proprietor of the Montreal Daily Herald, is having compiled for the purpose of publication the "inside story" of his connection with that somewhat remarkable publication, including all the details of its transfer to its present owners. If this is true, those who are privileged to read it may be sure of some spicy revelations not hitherto made public property.

Record Office for Canadian Troops.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

The announcement that the war office, with the assistance of Hon. Mr. Perley, is to establish a Canadian record office, from which information relating to the Canadian soldiers at the front will be sent out to relatives in Canada, will be gratefully received here. This office should greatly relieve the strain and anxiety that must of necessity be experienced by the friends and relatives left at home.

A Smash-Up.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

Out in Missouri a bachelors' club was organized, and straightway the girls formed an anti-matrimonial club. And when the irresistible hit the immovable, the bachelors' club went to pieces.

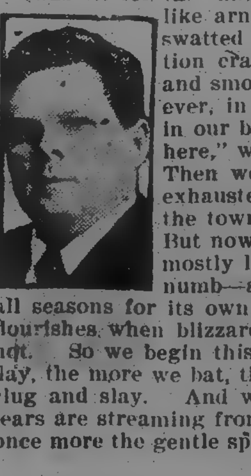
The Human Need of Dreadnoughts.

(Toronto News.)

The Globe speaks of the importance of serving, not an abstract idea, but a human need. But this has no reference whatsoever to the abstract idea of universal peace, or the human need of Dreadnoughts.

BAT THE RAT

By Walt Mason



Through weary years we swatted flies, which swatted us—'twas tit for tat—and now we're asked to nobly rise, like armored knights, and bat the rat. We swatted flies at your behest, oh tireless sanitation crank; we drove the critters galley west, and smote them hip and thigh and flank. And ever, in our sad career, one hope was burning in our breast; "the Autumn time will soon be here," we murmured, "and we'll then have rest. Then we may lay our swatters down, we poor exhausted, fly-specked men, and idly navigate the town, and play the slot machines again." But now the Autumn time is come, the flies are mostly lying flat, by chilly evenings rendered numb—and we must start to bat the rat. It has all seasons for its own, the rodent we are asked to swat; it flourishes when blizzards moan, it is on deck when winds are hot. So we begin this endless stunt like martyrs of an elder day, the more we bat, the more we hunt, the more we'll find to slug and slay. And when we've batted till we're sore, and tears are streaming from our eyes, we'll wish we might resume once more the gentle sport of swatting flies.

In a despatch from Rotterdam the correspondent of The London Evening News declares that the German marines are leaving Antwerp to rejoin the German fleet, and the German ships are being extensively provisioned.

JAPANESE LOSSES LARGE?

Refugees From Tsingtau Say Besiegers Have Suffered Heavily.

PEKIN, China, Oct. 21.—Refugees who have come out of Tsingtau, the fortified position in the German possessions in Shantun province are authority for the statement that up to the time they left the Japanese had lost several thousand men before Tsingtau, while the casualties of the Germans had not amounted to more than several hundred.

Reliable information obtained in Pekin is to the effect that a British detachment sustained a number of casualties while crossing land that had been mined by the Germans in Kiaochau.

Arrivals at the Chinese capital from Siberia say that Russian troop trains are traveling westward over the trans-Siberian Railway hourly.

An uncensored letter received in Pekin from a reliable correspondent within the Japanese lines, dated Oct. 9, says that the Japanese attacked Tsingtau on several nights, but invariably were repulsed. Once, the correspondent says, the Germans followed the Japanese successfully for a short distance.

DUCHESS OF SUTHERLAND WEDS

Nuptials Interrupt Labors of Red Cross Worker and Soldier.

LONDON, Oct. 21. — Millicent, Duchess of Sutherland, who recently went to the war zone as head of the Red Cross Hospital, and Major Percy Desmond Fitzgerald of the 11th Hussars, were quietly married last week at Roehampton. The duchess has returned to her Red Cross work in France.

The Duchess of Sutherland is the fourth daughter of the Earl of Rosslyn. She was married in 1884 to the Duke of Sutherland, who died in 1913. She is deeply interested in social questions.

Major Fitzgerald was born in 1873 and has served in South Africa. He was decorated for distinguished service in Ladysmith and the Transvaal.

GERMAN ARMY SHRINKS.

Only Old Men and Volunteers Remain Says Prisoner's Letter.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—An official communication issued by the War Office last night says:

The following are extracts from a letter found on a German prisoner, dated Dusseldorf, Oct. 4:

" 'With us officers and soldiers are becoming rarer. We have no more men than are adequate. Volunteers and men of the landwehr are all we have to-day. If you saw these soldiers you would turn your head. Everybody is being taken. It is Germany's last hope. All the aged men are becoming soldiers. Have you bread? Many complain they have none'."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

WHY THE POOR CROP?

Editor Review,

Sir, — Meetings, meetings, meetings, churches, churches, churches, teachers, teachers, teachers, preachers, preachers, preachers—yet what? The field has been plowed, ransacked and prepared for the harvest. Why then such a poor crop? Let Dr. Gordon answer that. Are we still to go on breeding and pampering "our dear young men"? When will they show that the seed of decency and religion that has been put into them so often and at all angles and at great expense is good seed and not poor stuff? Let Dr. Gordon lecture on knowing people by their fruits and not by their professions and pretensions. What then of their fruits?

JOHNNY ON THE SPOT.

MEAGRE BUT SATISFACTORY.

Germans Repulsed All Along the Line Say Communiques.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—News from official sources concerning the war operations is meagre but satisfactory.

The French official statement issued last night says that the Germans, during the day, made attacks along the entire front and everywhere were repulsed.

The text follows:

"The day has been characterized by an effort on the part of the Germans along all parts of the front—to the extreme north, where the Belgian army has held remarkably; at Labassee where the German troops have attempted an offensive movement of particular violence to the north of Arras; at Mametz, between Peronne and Albert, at Vauquous, to the east of the Argonne, and, finally, on the heights of the Meuse and in the region of Champion.

"Everywhere the German attacks have been repulsed."

The official French communique of yesterday afternoon is as follows:

"In Belgium, in spite of violent attacks on the part of the enemy, the Belgian army has held its position on the line of the River Yser.

"There have been other actions in the region of Ypres between the allied forces operating in this territory and the forces of the enemy.

"On our left wing the Germans continue to hold strongly their advance posts around Lille in the direction of Armentieres, Fournes and La Bassee.

"On the Meuse the enemy has endeavored in vain to drive back the advance posts of our troops, who have moved out along the river bank of this stream in the peninsula of the Camp des Romain.

"To sum up on the day of Oct. 19, we have made progress at various points on the front.

"In East Prussia, and on the Vistula River, there is no change in the situation. The efforts of the Austrians to cross the River San have been repulsed. The battle south of Przemysl is continuing under conditions favorable to the Russians."

TRAFALGAR DAY.

It is Being Made the Occasion For Recruiting In Britain.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—To-day is Trafalgar Day and it will be made the occasion of a great effort to recruit men for the army.

Hundreds of wreaths and bouquets have been banked at the base of the Nelson monument in Trafalgar Square, where great crowds were present throughout the day. Canada, New Zealand, Australia, Japan and South Africa sent mammoth floral offerings, which are displayed beneath the monolith, which is surmounted by the statue of Admiral Nelson. Nearly all the British ships also sent flowers.

Numerous pathetic notes accompanied the wreaths sent by relatives of the officers and men of the British cruiser Pathfinder and other ships destroyed recently by German submarines or mines.

In addition to the flowers the entire base of the Nelson monument is enveloped with recruiting banners bearing the words: "Your King and your country need you."

Killed By Falling Tree.

NORTH BAY, Ont., Oct. 21. — At Field Station, on the C. N. R., Mike Rossa, a Pole, was fatally injured by a falling tree. The unfortunate man not being used to bush life, made a step in the wrong direction and the tree fell directly across his chest. He lived only three hours.

DAVID SMITH, ABLE SEAMAN

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

Captain Williams of the United States navy having had quite a long term of sea service was ordered to the command of one of the finest naval stations on the New England coast.

Miss Nellie Williams was in the heyday of youth, and visions of all sorts of pleasures danced in her head, the principal of which was flirting with the young officers with whom she would be thrown into contact. Her mother rejoiced that she would be able to introduce her daughter into society, which she could not have otherwise done because neither her husband nor herself had any fortune, and she was obliged to live a retired life.

But no sooner had the captain assumed command and his family been installed in the best quarters at the station than Miss Nellie must needs spoil it all by casting to the winds the most sacred traditions of the service. Of all the officers at the station, including several midshipmen of a suitable age to interest a girl of seventeen, not one succeeded in sufficiently engaging her attention to save her from bestowing not only it, but her whole heart, on an enlisted man.

No one can tell what a girl between fifteen and twenty is going to do, and when she does it no one can stop her. The difference in the navy between an enlisted man and an officer can best be illustrated by comparing a bramble bush with a pine tree. There are in these times many fine young men among the United States tars, but the grandson of a millionaire can no more overstep this sharply defined line between officer and enlisted man than can the cook in the galley.

A girl of seventeen is as easily caught as the stupidest fish that swims, and no one can tell who will catch her. Miss Williams one day went aboard a ship docked at the yard. And there she saw the young man who caught her. What it was in him that caught her no one could tell. True, he was a pretty boy, but there were other pretty boys who wore officers' uniforms, while the young man in question wore the sailor's cap, the blue flannel shirt with broad collar and the trousers tight about the hips and loose below the knee of a common sailor.

Now, Captain Williams, who found no difficulty in commanding his station, consisting of many strong men, found himself unable to discipline his daughter. He threatened, if ever she was caught speaking to the youngster again, to send her away. She made promises, but they were not kept. He would have ordered the sailor—David Smith was the name on his ship's roster—away from the station, but Miss Nellie's infatuation had become known and such action would be considered using official power to serve private interests, and the captain was very sensitive on such a point. Moreover, he feared that if he "put on the screws" his daughter might run away with the tar. This would not only tie her up to a common sailor, but a deserter.

How, when and where the tar and the captain's daughter contrived to hold their meetings no one knew. At least no one would tell. They had many adherents among the sailors, but none among the officers or their families. Finally it became apparent to Captain and Mrs. Williams that something must be done, and one morning Miss Nellie was informed that she was to be taken back to the quiet home.

There was nothing to do but submit, and what had promised to be such a fine thing for them ended in disappointment. And all this on account of Miss Nellie's having fallen in love with a common sailor instead of an officer.

One day Captain Williams received from Washington the discharge papers of a sailor named Howard Singleton. The discharge had been granted by the secretary of the navy at the request of the British minister. The case was brought to the commander's attention by the officer having the care of discharges because there was no such person as Howard Singleton at the station.

"Make inquiries for him," said the Captain; "he may have enlisted under an assumed name."

The officer retired and soon after returned with David Smith, able seaman. The captain, who knew him well, having had an interview with him concerning his daughter, looked at him in astonishment.

"Is your name Singleton?" asked Captain Williams.

"It is."

"Are you a British subject?"

"I am. My father is Sir Charles Singleton, a shipbuilder on the Clyde in Scotland. He builds ships for the British navy. I am to enter his service, but thought it better to learn something of warships by serving awhile on one of them. In the British navy I could not have preserved my incog, so I chose the United States service."

"Ahem! And you go from here to Scotland to enter your father's works?"

"I do. But after consultation with my father I shall return for a purpose."

"What purpose?"

"To ask the hand of your daughter."

"Um," mumbled the captain. "Perhaps you'd better see your father about that."

Singleton went home, returned and took Nellie Williams back to Scotland with him.

Consoling.

Noticing that his lady cashier was weeping copiously and sucking her finger, the proprietor asked her what was the matter.

Sobbingly she told him she had p-p-inched her f-f-finger in the cash register.

"Never mind, little girl," he said. "A great many more cashiers got pinched before there were any cash registers."—Indianapolis Star.

The Worm Turned.

"Is any one waiting on you?" finally asked the haughty saleslady, condescending at last to notice the shopping person.

"I'm afraid not," replied the latter. "My husband was—I left him outside—but I'm afraid he's become disgusted and gone home."—Toledo Blade.

MALT VINEGAR.

Method of Manufacturing Important Article of Commerce.

That vinegar made of malt and barley is not a stranger to commerce is evidenced by the fact that one large English concern making it has an annual output of 1,000,000 gallons.

A visitor to the brewery of this concern is first shown through the granary, where, in hundreds of bags piled one upon the other, is stored the malt and barley used in the brewing process. This grain is rough and unclean, and before being used has to be screened carefully. It is then ground to a fine flour between flat round stones. The ground grain is then mixed with hot water by means of mechanical stirrers, and the mixture is allowed to stand until it is possible to draw off a sweet, clear liquid known as "wort."

This liquid is cooled by a refrigerating system, and is then transferred to large fermenting pots, where with brewers' yeast added, it is allowed to remain until fermentation has ceased and it has become known technically as "gyle." The following step is the acetification of the "gyle," the success of which operation is entirely dependent on oxygen. The absorption of this element from the atmosphere in greatest measure is insured by passing the "gyle" through revolving sprinklers situated at the top of big vats over layers of specially prepared and selected birch twigs, through which it trickles to the bottom of the vat, thus exposing to the air an enormous surface. The sides of the vat are perforated to admit a plentiful supply of pure air.

From the bottom of the vat the liquid is continuously pumped to the sprinkler for redistribution over the twigs for a period of three weeks. It is now vinegar, but it is not yet refined enough for consumption. It has now to be clarified by being filtered through three or four feet of birch chips, lying on the bottoms of other vats; after this it is transferred to huge storage vats, one of which is reputed to be the largest in Great Britain, with a capacity of 115,000 gallons. In these it is allowed to mature for four or six months before it is fit to bottle and cask for use.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

FROM THE UNDER DOG.

FOR him who isn't in the swim
The times are out of joint.
To errors in the government
His finger he can point.
The wild accounts of graft and greed
Of plunder, crime and loot,
Are food for him, and if they fail
He makes up ones to suit.

Upon the skies political
No stars of hope appear,
Things jog along from bad to worse
With each succeeding year.
He knows that long it cannot last,
To smash the thing must go.
Then maybe he will shed a smile
And say, "I told you so."

You bet it is not much he thinks
Of what they do and say
In Washington, nor does he guess
That congress earns its pay.
In fact, if he possessed a dog
No brighter than a lot
Of senators of whom he knows
He'd have the creature shot.

When he is down and in the dumps
A bunch of things he sees
That are not quite so plain to those
Who live a life of ease,
But let him only scent success,
That stranger overdue,
And things that pass before his eyes
Don't look one-half so blue.

His View.

"Are you fond of country life?"

"Indeed I am."

"But you never go to the country."

"Never. I always stay in the city."

"Why deny yourself so?"

"It isn't denial at all. I am fond of country life, for it is a thing that I can sometimes manage to get people whom I don't like to take up."

Couldn't Collect.

"Brown keeps his house very warm."

"Yes, so warm that it affects his coal dealer."

"Affects him?"

"Yes."

"Oh, I see—good customer."

"Didn't mean that."

"What then?"

"Makes him hot."

Treating Him Right.

"Leave me car fare," pleaded the victim of the holdup man.

"No," replied the robber. "But I want to do the right thing. A distinguished person like you should not ride in street cars. Wait here and I will send my auto around to take you home."

His Desire.

"I feel the use of a greater education."

"Every one does."

"Yes, but there's one subject that I wish to explore to the depths."

"What is that?"

"I want to learn how to inherit money."

Good Times For Him.

"There goes the original bad man."

"What does he do?"

"Eats a man for breakfast every morning."

"Say, he is right in it in these days of high prices."

Has to Collect.

The dancers must pay for the music,
But really the fiddler's in luck
If after the ball he finds from the hall
The men with the money don't duck.

OLD BONSECOURS

Historic Associations Cling to Vicinity of Montreal Market.

The site of Bonsecours Market, in Montreal, has a history that takes one far back to the time when it was first devoted to tradesmen and housekeepers, for on part of the site of the market there stood in the old regime the Palace of the Intendants. These Intendants were very important personages—sort of Ministers of Trade and Commerce, Finance and Justice rolled into one, to whom may be added the civic authorities as well. They regulated about everything from the price of bread to the number of horses a farmer was to have. And they did the regulating themselves, not being dependent upon fickle and loquacious legislatures, because all they had to do in order to secure the necessary legislation was to issue an ordinance, which was published by being read at the church doors after service, and thereupon became the law of the land.

An instance of the powers of these Intendants is afforded by an ordinance of Intendant Raudot, "who seems to have been inspired even more than the others with the spirit of paternal intervention."

Raudot issued a mandate to the effect, that, whereas the people of Monrteal—meaning not merely the people of the city, but of the entire district—raised too many horses, which prevented them from raising cattle and sheep, "being therein ignorant of their true interests. . . Now, therefore, we command that each inhabitant of the Cotes of this Government shall hereafter own no more than two horses, or mares, and one foal,—the same to take effect after the sowing season of the ensuing year, 1710, giving them time to rid themselves of their horses in excess of said numbers, after which they will be required to kill any of such excess that may remain in their possession."

That certainly was carrying paternal government far. It is inconceivable to-day, when the farmer is left to decide for himself how many horses he will keep. Well, in those long-ago times, the Palace of the Intendants stood where now is Bonsecours Market; and in and out of that old Palace bustled the officials, in comparison with whom our members of Parliament, even our Cabinet Ministers, are humble people indeed.

On another part of the site of the market once stood a dwelling that was the home of a man whose name will ever find a place on the pages of Canadian history. Here once stood the home of Sir John Johnson—a name that recalls big events and able men.

The founder on this continent of the famous Johnson family was William Johnson, born at Smithtown, Meath, Ireland, in 1715. Coming to New York, when of course, it was a British colony, he settled in the Mohawk Valley, where by means of trade he acquired a fortune and also became thoroughly acquainted with the Indians, particularly the Iroquois. When the Seven Years' War broke out he took service with the British, and near the head of Lake George won the victory that led to the capture of Baron Dieskau. He captured Niagara; and in the summer of 1760, when Amherst set out from Oswego to capture Montreal, Johnson joined the army with almost one thousand Iroquois warriors. He was knighted by King George, and made Superintendent General of Indian Affairs.

The proposal is being made that the Canadian Government offers regarding emigration should be addressed to the many hundreds of Belgian refugees now in England. These people, it is felt, would make admirable settlers.

CLOTHING OF A CENTURY AGO

The costume for men was in a transition stage, and it was not until many years later that the fashion of a special uniform suit for evening wear came in. Pantalons had been affected by the radicals of Paris during the French revolution and had found their way to America, but here they never rose to political importance. By 1815 they had come into general use with the younger men, but the older ones adhered to breeches and long stockings. There was, therefore, great variety in the costumes of a gathering of men. Some wore square-skirted coats, and others a newer style of coat made of blue or green cloth with large gilt or pearl buttons, a high rolling collar, and long narrow tails reaching down to the calves. Beau Brummel had already introduced starch into the neckcloths of Europe, and the fashion had reached America. Shirt collars were prodigously high and reached to a man's ears. Some wore "pudding-cravats," designed to make the chest look deep, but stocks were coming into use. A few old men still powdered their hair, but others parted it on the side and wore it long cut. A few fops had it curled.—Gaillard Hunt, in Harper's Magazine for November.

Mice Ate Peace Sermon.

(Indianapolis News.)

In an address before the Men's Club of the Tabernacle Christian church, the Rev. Alexander Sharp, of the Presbyterian church at Columbus, Ind., who has just returned from a two months' vacation abroad, told his audience that the last sermon he delivered to his congregation here before he left was an earnest plea for universal peace.

Before departing he placed the sermon in his desk; on his return he opened his desk, intending to re-read the sermon, but he found that mice had eaten his universal peace effort.

Rubber Tires for Street Cars.

In order to reduce the noise of street cars and particularly the fly wheel nuisance, it was suggested at a recent meeting of the Tramway Association, in Newcastle, England, that street cars be provided with tires of rubber. It was argued that the wear on the rails would be much reduced, and the life of the rubber tire would exceed that on motor trucks and buses, which are credited with an average life of twenty thousand miles. It was also argued that a higher rate of speed would be possible with the flexible tire.

SOLDIERS OF THE KING

Interest in enlistment for the second Canadian expeditionary force for overseas service was very marked at the armouries last night. There appears to be no scarcity of men, and the 75 men, Peterborough's quota from this division, will be the survival of the fittest.

So far 11 volunteers have passed the examination.

Any volunteer sent to Kingston and there found medically unfit, will be returned to his home at the expense of his commanding officer, that is, the officer enlisting him.

Selection of Officers.

Officers will be selected from among the names of those whose applications are received at divisional headquarters, and only those officers will be entitled to pay, of whose selection will be notified.

The first draft of recruits, in squads of ten or more, to be dispatched to Kingston on the 28th inst., further squads to follow as soon as collected. Transportation warrants will be forwarded to officers commanding units in blank for this purpose.

Pay, the Same.

The pay will be the same as laid down for the first contingent, and subsistence allowance at the rate of 75 cents per diem will be allowed for each full day recruits are held at regimental headquarters.

Militia men who volunteer will proceed to Kingston in uniform. Others will be outfitted at Kingston.

The various companies were put through their respective drills last evening, and a number of the companies practiced shooting at the ranges. The shooting is improving wonderfully, and in a short time the musketry will have attained a high standard.

Orders were read as follows :

Headquarters,
Peterborough, Oct. 20.

Orders by O. C. Commanding 57th Regiment P. R. :

1—Orders having been received from headquarters for the enlistment and mobilization of the infantry of the second contingent for the Canadian expeditionary force, recruiting for the same will begin at once, and will be continued at the armouries, until further notice each week night at 8 p.m.

2—Enlistment will be voluntary, and the time of service will be the duration of the war.

3—All applicants must be medically fit, 5 ft. 3 in. and over in height, with chest not less than 33½ inches, and between the ages of 18 and 45. A high standard will be required in musketry and in general proficiency.

4—Other considerations being equal, the applicants will be selected in the following order : (a) unmarried men, (b) married men with no children, (c) married men with children. In every case married men must obtain the consent of their wives in writing.

5—Pay will be the same as laid down for the first contingent.

6—Until further notice all men enlisted will report at the armouries daily at 8 p.m., except Sundays.

7—Major G. S. Cameron will act as regimental medical officer.

8—Leave of absence from parade is hereby granted to Captains McPherson and McLean and Major Davidson.

9—The following are taken on the strength of the regiment: Oct. 13, 1914, C. Co., Pte. E. J. Doleman. E. Co., Ptes. F. W. Eggleton, P. Ferguson, E. Shrumpton, H. Co., Pte. W. Flowers.

CHEESEMAKERS TO BOOST FUND

Sale of Cheese May Bring $2000 or Over

It is anticipated that the amount realized from the sale of the "Patriotic Cheese" will aggregate over $2,000. At the meeting of the Cheese Board this morning the first checks were received. They were: Warsaw $97.53, Stoney Lake $23.75, and Myrtle $40.00. The salesman of each factory was appointed treasurer for his district and will accept cash donations. Mr. Hawthorne, secretary-treasurer of the Board will also act as treasurer for the patriotic fund committee. It is expected that a report will be available by the next meeting which will be held on November 11th.

The bidding opened at 14¾ by Cook and was boosted along till Johnston, representing J. D. Flavelle of Lindsay, offered 15 3-16. His selections were: Keene, Warminster, Shearer, Myrtle, East Emily and Fleetwood. Mr. Gillespie secured the remainder of the board at 15⅛. The following amounts were listed:—

Keene 94, Warminster 60, Shearer 175, Selwyn 65, Villiers 75, Warsaw 110, Westwood 160, Oakdale 70, Daisy D. 75, Myrtle 100, Ormonde 120, Young's Point 40, Lang 85, Indian River 70, East Emily 85, Treewern 80, Norwood 125, Fleetwood 60, Killarney 60. Total 1649.

A despatch says that German newspapers state that the Prussian Diet next Friday will accept an emergency bill, asking for a credit of $375,000,000, of which $100,000,000 will be allotted to the provisional assistance of East Prussia.

BRITISH SHIPS WERE WARNED BY ITALIAN

LONDON, Oct. 21. — The Calcutta Statesman publishes an official statement from the Government of Bengal eulogizing the services rendered by Captain Giacapello of the Italian steamer Loredano in warning British vessels of the presence of the German cruiser Emden in the Bay of Bengal. Four or five vessels, including the City of Rangoon, and two transports were preserved from risk of capture by Captain Giacapello's efforts, and the Governor, Lord Carmichael, presented him with a gold watch and chain in recognition of these services. Mementoes were also given to the officers of the Loredano and a money reward to the crew.

Society Influences Roumania.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 21.—The Ministry of the Interior says it has received information to the effect that a secret society exists in Roumania which is controlled by Germany and the purpose of which is to influence public opinion through the press. The society is said to have a capital of $4,400,000.

When You Want to Laugh---Eat!

And If You Want to Eat Without Food Fears Take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet After Each Meal.

Laugh, smiles and mirth never go with a "caved-in" stomach. Fancy a-man-afraid-of-his - food laughing! There is always that haunting feeling that a sick stomach is nothing to be mirthful about.

"My old grouchy days are funny to me now."

Just make up your mind to help nature help herself. Give your body a chance to make good. Heal the raw edges of your stomach and give your blood the tools to make digestive fluids with.

There is only one way to make the body well — give it the chance to make itself well. Harmful and strong medicines handicap the system. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go into the stomach just like food. They are dissolved and they strengthen the weakened juices of the digestive apparatus until the digestion is made normal.

There is nothing mysterious or magical about them. Science has proved that certain ingredients make Dyspepsia Tablets are these concen-up the digestive juices. Stuart's trated ingredients—that is all there is to it. One grain of a certain ingredient contained in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest 3,000 grains of food. This illustrates how you aid nature to restore her worn-out materials. When a stomach which is filled with food receives a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet, it is more able to digest the food than it would be without it. The work is not so hard nor the task so long.

When the meal is finally assimilated the entire system absorbs more nourishment and harmful food effects are eliminated easily, quickly and with the maximum of benefit.

Every drug store carries Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. To anyone wishing a free trial of these tablets please address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., and a small sample package will be mailed free.

Mean and Unpopular Men in Peterboro

Another large congregation faced Dr. Gordon at St. Paul's Church last evening when he directed his artillery on mean men and unpopular men. He said some men are unpopular because they are hard to approach. They have an air of social superiority which chills you to the bone.

When the average man of ordinary common sense comes in conflict with some shallow but successful specimen of humanity, who has evidently more respect for clothes than character and more regard for possessions than for personality he feels like Delpini, the underpaid but conscientious actor who had an occasional "set to" with Richard Brindley Sheridan. Thus, when Delpini one day pressed the manager for arrears of salary, Sheridan sharply reproved him, telling him he had forgotten his station. "No, indeed, Monsieur Sheridan, I have not," retorted Delphini. "I know the difference between us perfectly well. In birth, parentage, and education, you are superior to me; but in life, character, and behaviour, I am superior to you."

This hign-toned regard for clothes, color, coin, and cash and the utter disregard for character, conscience, culture and Christian ethics is strikingly illustrated by a paragraph from a sermon by Henry Ward Beecher: "A friend that is present told me this incident, which I am at liberty to repeat. During the days when color was a virtue, in a famous church in New York, a distinguished merchant had a colored man in his pew. The presence of that colored man in the congregation had the same effect that a lump of salt would have in a cup of tea. The whole congregation, with an eternity to consider, thought only of the colored man in the merchant's pew. And as they went out of the church, various persons gathered about the merchant, and said, 'What possessed you to bring that nigger into your pew?' He whispered and said to them, 'He is a great planter, and he is rich—he is a millionaire.' And then they said: 'Introduce us to him!' As soon as they knew he was not a vulgar man, working for his living, but a capitalist and a millionaire, they were very willing to cross palms with him. Then where was their fine taste? and where was that distinguished consideration of minding God's laws? and where was all that ethics that we have heard so much about in years gone by, of social equality, and of different races? It was gone in a minute. Where mammon said, "Let it go," it was all right. But when the loving Jesus said, "Let it go," that ws detestable. Men will do anything for money in this bad world. Ah! self-denial is from God?"

Again some men are unpopular because they never encourage. They never venture a compliment. They never say a kind word. They never speak to cheer.

Some men are unpopular because they forget their friends in the hour of their prosperity. Said Sir Walter Scott, in that moment when the world lay at his feet: "I will never cut any man unless I discover in him the elements of meanness." The time to help a man is when you are up and he is down.

"Have you had a kindness shown?
Pass it on.
'Twas not given for you alone,
Pass it on.
Let it travel down the years,
Let it wipe another's tears,
Till in heaven the deed appears,
Pass it on.

Some men are unpopular because they never forget a supposed injury. They grow bitter thinking about things which other people have forgotten. Like Roscoe Conkling, when he whined out his miserable complaint about James G. Blaine:—"That attack," referring to some legislative onslaught, "taat attack was made without any provocation by me and when I was suffering more than I ever suffered before and I shall never overlook it." He never did. People get tired listening to the story of real or imaginary wrongs.

Some men are unpopular because they are self-centered and determined to have their own way. Head strong. Wilful. Obstinate. History is replete with illustrations. Think of Henry VIII., sitting in the House of Commons, with his terrible eye fixed on anyone who might venture to oppose him. Or Lorenzo the Magnificent, who proudly remarks: "No one ever ventured to utter a resolute 'no' to me!" Or, again that famous warrior and sovereign who uttered the affirmation: "I am the state!" Or, yet again, George III., who requested his prime minister to furnish him with a list of those who had, in a certain matter of legislation, voted against his wishes, that he might, socially, turn his back upon them on every public occasion. Kingly! Eh?—The saddest story in history is the story of the man who has had his own way.

Some men are unpopular because they are cruel in their business methods. Their methods are expressed in three words — grip, gouge and grind. It was said concerning a millionaire who died recently: "He could throw down a friend if that friend stood in his way." The first article of his creed seemed to be expressed in three words: "Business is War." Crassus, who lived in the days of Sulla, was one of Rome's meanest millionaires. He would stand by a burning building, with a fire brigade composed of 500 slaves, and offer a price for the fated edifice, wrapped in flames, and if the owner refused to accept the stipulated terms, stolidly refuse assistance whilst the wealth and substance of his neighbor disappeared in smoke. This is the spirit of the soulless combine. Unless you can Christianize Commerce our civilization is only a little removed from the civilization of the past.

Improvements in methods of exchange marks the advancement of the race, but the realm of commerce and business is as old as civilization. St. Augustine used to tell of a man who advertised that he would, on a certain occasion, tell all the people what was in their hearts, and when the vast multitude assembled he stepped to the front and uttered these words: "I will tell you, in one sentence, what is in your hearts; it is this, to buy cheap and to sell dear."

At Murray Street.

When Dr. Gordon left St. Paul's church and went to Murray street to answer the questions, he was greeted by a large audience. The audience displayed a keen interest in the way Dr. Gordon handled the questions.

One of the questions asked was: "Are men not as much given to gossip as women?" The doctor said no, that women have a monopoly of gossip, but when you find a masculine gossip, he can outdo any feminine gossip that ever wagged her tongue. Another was: "How is it that men are not as much interested in church as women?" He answered this by saying that the average church service was more feminine in its style than masculine in its character. Another was: "Is a lawyer justified in defending a client when he knows him to be guilty?" Yes, he is, because he is always called upon to show how much guilt he was guilty of.

Meeting To-night.

To-night at Dr. Gordon's meeting there will be distributed 2,000 booklets, entitled "The Day When Everything Goes Wrong." They will be distributed in the pews, and it will be necessary to obtain a seat to obtain a booklet.

Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the noted singer, will sing three selections to-night—H. Johnson's great song, "Face to Face," "There's a Great Day Coming" and "Steal Away to Jesus." The last two are southern melodies.

Mr. Edouard Hesselberg will render a number of his special pieces to-night. He is making up a special program of music for this meeting.

BRANCH OF FEDERATION OPENED AT BROWNTON

The new branch of the Protestant Benevolent Federation at Brownton was opened last evening. The meeting, which was held in the Orange hall, was largely attended and most enthusiastic throughout. The new members were initiated by the officers of the parent society here. If earnestness and enthusiasm can achieve eucess, then the future of the Brownton branch is assured. A very successful meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem. Next meeting Nov. 12th.

CANADA'S WORD

BY CHARLES W. GORDON

RALPH CONNOR.

Rev. C. W. Gordon, D.D. (Ralph Connor), has written this poem for a British publication. It is to be published here in Canada on ornamental cards and autographed copies will be sold for the benefit of the Patriotic Fund.

"O Canada! A voice calls through the mist and spume
"Across the wide, wet, salty leagues of foam
"For aid. Whose voice thus penetrates thy peace?
"Whose? Thy Mother's, Canada, Thy Mother's voice."

"O Canada! A drum beats through the night and day,
"Unresting, eager, strident, summoning
"To arms. Whose drum thus throbs persistent?
"Whose? Old England's, Canada, Old England's drum."

"O Canada! A sword gleams leaping swift to strike
"At foes that press and leap to kill brave men
"On guard. Whose sword thus gleams fierce death?
"Whose? 'Tis Britain's, Canada, Great Britain's sword."

"O Canada! A prayer beats hard at Heaven's gate,
"Tearing the heart wide open to God's eye,
"For righteousness. Whose prayer thus pierces Heaven?
"Whose? 'Tis God's prayer, Canada, Thy Kingdom Come!"

"O Canada! What answer make to calling voice and beating drum,
"To sword flash and to pleading prayer of God
"For right? What answer makes my soul?
"'Mother, to thee! God, to Thy help! Quick! My sword!'"

BUSINESS IS MORE THAN USUAL AT ACKERMANS

Big Staff of Employes Busy on Equipment for the War

Although the great European conflict has had disastrous effects on many branches of Canadian industry and manufacturing, causing many of the most prominent factories to dispense with the services of the majority of their employes, the concerns making boots and shoes and harness are working overtime.

Collar makers and harness makers are in very great demand. The well known local firm, B. F. Ackerman, Son & Co., is winning national prominence and bringing to Peterboro a goodly share of work through its ability to handle contracts with efficiency and rapidity.

Some two months ago the financial depression was affecting this firm as it was many others, and then the orders from the Dominion Government began to arrive. Every man in this city with any knowledge of harness making was hired and the factory commenced running thirteen hours a day. Equipment for the infantry men of the Canadian contingent was in demand and the B. F. Ackerman, Son and Co. put forth great effort to do its share. In the course of another week equipment for 9,500 men will have been made or very nearly equipment for one third of the Canadians now in England.

As well as this equipment 250 sets of transport harness, equipment for mounted infantry and a large quantity of horse collars have been sent out by this concern. Mr. Ackerman acted as host for a Review man this morning and took him through the factory. The most conspicuous articles were horse collars. In all 4,000 are in stock. Of course, very few of these are used in war but the branch of the Ackerman Co. in Regina has a large trade in them.

Asked if their company intended working on the saddles for the allied forces Mr. Ackerman stated that they are kept busy working on wants of the Canadian forces. At present he is consulting with officials in regard to the manufacturing of from five to ten thousand sets of artillery harness. It is very probable that they will start on this work as soon as the equipment for the infantry men has been completed.

Plenty of Leather.

"How is Canada fixed for keeping up the supply of leather," asked the scribe. He was informed that there are several large Canadian tanners who are in a good position to keep np the supply. In this respect Canada is in for a better position than the United States. The country to the south is very short of leather and the leather dealers over there were purchasing a great deal of Canada's product but the Canadian Government has taken a hand in the matter and the practise will be stopped. With the Canuck tanners capable of supplying leather and the harness factories confronted with huge orders that branch of the industry is bound to flourish.

Artificial rubber.

At a recent meeting of the Iron and Steel Institute in London its president made this significant statement: "It is being sought to obtain from coke oven gases those hydrocarbons the derivatives of which are found in rubber. Experiments that have been made permit the foreshadowing of the manufacture of artificial rubber from this source."

NEWS NOTES FROM KEENE

(Special Correspondence.)

Keene, Oct. 21.—Rev. F. T. Goodwill attended the Presbyterian session at Toronto the past week.

Miss Eliza Stewart returned from Peterboro last Thursday where she spent the past two months with friends.

Mrs. William O'Boyle and children of Hastings visited a few days the past week at the home of Mr. James Ashburn.

Rev. Dr. Workman is a guest at Bralesford this week.

Mr. William Fletcher was in Peterboro on Wednesday.

Mrs. William Chapman who underwent a serious operation at Bralesford on Monday we are pleased to report doing very nicely.

Miss Rose Scheymore who has been the guest of the Misses Woods for the past two weeks left on Monday night for Peterboro.

Mr. Charles Hall who has been convalescing at Bralesford since an operation, we are pleased to report able to be out again.

Mr. Fred English of Ottawa was calling on old friends in the village a few days the past week.

Mrs. R. N. Johnston returned home from Toronto on Thursday.

Miss Belle Howson of Peterboro spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Guilbert Howson.

Mrs. (Dr.) Harrison is visiting friends at Toronto this week.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Reilly of Hastings were guests at the Victoria House on Monday.

Death entered one of our village homes last Thursday morning which caused a shock to the entire community, when the silent messenger came to Mr. James Secord. Mr. Secord had retired on Wednesday night in the best of health. His wife was awakened about one o'clock by his deep breathing. She arose and hurriedly lighted the lamp, and when she reached the bedside he had passed away. Mr. Secord was a native of the State of Michigan and had lived here about five years, and had made many friends. He was a man of a very retiring disposition and well liked by all who knew him. He was 54 years of age. The demise was due to heart trouble. The funeral took place on Friday afternoon at three o'clock from his late home, Rev. A. K. Edmison officiating. Interment was held at Pine Grove Cemetery. The pall bearers were his six brothers-in-law: Messrs. William Wedlock, James Ashburn, Alfred Harris, John Hope, Hugh Leasson, Joseph Carter.

Mrs. Richard Brown, Mrs. Joseph Gibson and little son Victor of Toronto are guests at the home of Mrs. Gibson's father, Mrs. William Wedlock, Sr.

GERMANS ADMIT TERRIBLE LOSS

ROTTERDAM, Oct. 21.—The latest lists of casualties published in the German papers clearly indicate that the claims of the British and French troops to have wiped out whole battalions are absolutely true. Reserve infantry regiment No. 17 lost in one battalion 800 men wounded, apart from the dead, and in another battalion of the same regiment 740 were killed at the battle of the Marne.

Reserve infantry regiment No. 69 is said to have had unassessable loss, and such words as "innumerable losses" and "tremendous number of dead and wounded" follow the names of several regiments.

BIG BATTLE LOOMS UP IN VICINITY OF ARRAS

French and British Troops at Ypres After Hard Fighting Strengthen Positions—Report of Recapture of Ostend not Confirmed — Crown Prince Enveloped

LONDON, Oct. 21. — The Belgian army yesterday made good its excellent beginning against the German advance toward Dunkirk and the other French channel ports. Heavy fighting along the River Yser resulted in complete defeat of the Germans. They have ceded from two to five miles of ground all along the northern bank of the river. Their losses are said to have been considerable.

Ypres was again the centre of desperate fighting, French and British troops gaining strategic positions of value and materially strengthening the movement against the German left flank in Belgium.

Along the battle line from Arras to the coast heavy reinforcements are concentrating on both sides and it seems probable that a decisive engagement may take place here between formidable forces.

It was reported from several sources yesterday that a British maritime force landed at Ostend and drove the small German garrison from that city supported by the guns of the fleet off the port. This information was passed by the censor, but without confirmation of any kind. However, Ostend is of small importance in a military sense and it is believed that the foothold of the Kaiser in western Belgium is so precarious that the Belgian watering place is likely to be occupied by the advancing allies at most any time.

The last definite statement of the position of the Belgian forces places their advance at Roulers, thirteen miles northwest of Courtrai and but a short distance from Ostend. If this wedge should penetrate further, Ostend would be isolated from the remainder of the German army.

Out of the mass of conflicting messages stands the fact that the Germans in Belgium are attempting two major operations, first, to cut through the Belgians between Nieuport and Dixmude, and second, to throw back the Franco-British army around Arras. All of their skill and the full weight of their powerful army has been directed to this end, but without any result whatsoever.

The statement made Monday that Lille had been retaken by the allies proves premature. The town is invested on three sides and advantage in the fight for its possession rests plainly with the Germans. They have erected strong fortifications and have some of their best regiments in the trenches around the town. The Kaiser is said to place much importance on holding the city and there can be no question that the conflict at this point will be stubborn and long drawn out.

In distinction to the success of the Germans at Lille is the progress made by their foes to the west of that point. Here the allied troops have driven the Germans backward and Lille now stands well forward in territory held by French and British forces.

This is also true of St. Mihiel, held by the crown prince, now the most southerly position of the Germans. It is regarded as one of the most surprising developments of the war that Frederick Wilhelm has been able to maintain himself at St. Mihiel, with the French winning on both sides of the town. Although his stubborn resistance reveals a resolute spirit that commands the highest respect, it is agreed by all military authorities that he is none the less in a very serious predicament and is risking capture or destruction of a good part of his army by holding on to a position that is almost hopeless. The day was marked by French concentration on the right bank of the Meuse, further endangering the haughty German heir. Despite a desperate counter-attack delivered by his forces in the vicinity of Camp des Romains, the French gained considerable ground around that town. Etain continues to be the objective of a fierce French attack and its fall would mean a complete severance of the crown prince's communications with Metz.

On the centre the situation remains in status quo, both the French and German lines having been weakened until artillery play is practically the only activity.

North of Zagny, on the road to Metz, the Germans yesterday combated the French most savagely. The hand of the Kaiser is seen in the increased resistance in this vicinity. He has evidently taken alarm at the close approach of the republic's army to that strong fortress. Monday it was asserted that German trenches, only nine miles from Metz, had been assaulted.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Enlarged offerings from first hands gave the wheat market today a downward turn. Prices closed weak, ¼c to 1⅛c off. Corn lost ⅝c to ¾c net and oats ⅛c to ⅜c. There was an irregular finish in provisions ranging from 10c decline to an advance of 12½c. After ten days of almost continuous climb, the wheat seemed to many dealers to be in a position where any bearish developments would have unusual weight. In this connection signs that the continued bulge in prices had induced rural holders in the northwest to accept bids more freely proved sufficient reason to cause extensive profit-taking here on the part of recent buyers. Notwithstanding that considerable rallying power was shown, especially after the first break in prices the market closed at the lowest point of the day.

THE SPORTING WORLD

OLD TIME ENTHUSIASM IN BALL GAME BROUGHT BACK BY BRAVES CRY OF CROOKEDNESS SILENCED

New York, Oct. 21.—The carpers who have insisted that baseall is crooked and that the annual battles for the championship of the world are manipulated to draw large sums of money from the public, may now hunt their holes. If they can't find them they may be aided by the low murmurs of those who declared that the Boston Braves did not have "class," and have now crawled in and pulled the hole in after them.

The victory of the Braves over the Athletics was a great thing for baseball in more ways than one. It placed upon the highest pinnacle a team full of life, and all the human elements which go to draw the admiration of the public. The Athletics have a great team, but in their stolid, business-like, unemotional ways there is little to arouse such enthusiasm as is stirred by the fighting, tearing tactics of the Braves.

The Braves thus brought back the old yell and whoop to the game, but above all their four straight victories demonstrated that they went into the series with the Athletics to win and not to pile up a vast sum of money in the coffers of the national commission.

The players do not share in the receipts after the first four games, so that had the series been drawn out to five, six or seven games, the national commission and the club owners would have been the gainers. In the tenth inning of the third game it certainly appeared as though the series would go five games.

The Braves were licked, but they didn't know it. Then they tied the score. In the eleventh it was so dark that the ball was followed only with the greatest difficulty. Umpire Klem would have been fully justified in calling the game on account of darkness. Such action would have made a fifth game necessary, but the two teams were kept at it, and in the twelfth Joe Bush uncorked his wild throw to third on Moran's bunt, Mann raced across the plate and the Braves needed one more victory to the series.

Had the main idea of the baseball magnates been to get as much money as possible out of the series, they were never offered a better chance than in this game. It virtually rested with the umpires, as darkness took control of the game out of the hands of the players. Calling the game when the score was tied would have sent the series into five games with a chance of more.

Neither the players, the club owners nor the national commission got as much out of the series just closed as is usually shaken down. They might have made more, not only if the series had lasted longer, but if the first two games had been played in Boston. The winning of the toss by the Athletics cost everyone concerned hundreds of dollars, as Fenway park can seat well over 10,000 more people than Shibe park.

VON KLUK BLUFFING.

Every One of His Desperate Rushes Is To Cover a Retreat.

LONDON, Oct. 21. — The Daily Telegraph publishes the following from W. T. Massey, its correspondent in Northern France.

The British army is going ahead steadily, persistently and irresistibly. Nothing can stop it. Gen. Von Kluk's pretence of getting to the sea is shattered, and probably he would want half a million men to reinforce him before he made another attempt. He is still trying a make-believe game, and wishes the allies to understand his objective is one, or may be two, French seaports, but all the time he is making his attacks, and they end in strategic movements to the rear.

News from the districts which are extremely important supplements what has been told in the official communiques. It is consistently good. Some of our lines are just where they were Monday. They could have been pushed farther east and north-east, but there were sufficient reasons why they should remain stationary.

"How are your new year resolutions holding out?"

"First rate. By amending them from time to time, I may make 'em last all year."

When it was suggested that temporary bleachers be erected in centre field at Boston, Captain Evers of the Braves promptly vetoed the plan. It would have meant at least $2,000 more to the Boston players, but Johnny declared he would not take chances on a cramped field just to get some additional money.

THREE BATTALIONS BLOWN TO BITS

Position Taken by Germans Had Been Mined by French

FROM THE BATTLEFRONT, Oct. 21.—(Via Paris.)—The German invaders in their efforts to shorten their lines and rest their right wing further southwestward upon the English Channel are meeting with a vigorous offensive by the allies. A good part of the fighting is being done in the obscurity of fogs.

French marines on Monday put forth a fine effort against the Germans. The troops of Emperor William had tried a surprise attack on the marines Sunday, but they had held the field works against superior numbers. The fight lasted all day, and then the Germans contented themselves with cannonading the position of the marines.

A thick fog covered the entire region Monday, and the marines, accustomed to such weather conditions, crept toward the German trenches. "No shooting," was the order; "use the bayonet!"

The marines got within thirty feet of the trenches before they were seen. It was too late for the defenders, who were bayoneted in the trenches and beyond the trenches as they ran. Four hundred German prisoners were taken.

One of the places where the French had been most harassed is near the elbow of the Western line. The important position there had been taken and retaken frequently during the last three weeks. Every time the Germans had been obliged to abandon the position they returned in greater force and pushed back the French by weight of numbers.

The French took the position for the twelfth time and held it for ten hours. Then came a shock of the human battering ram, and the French gradually gave way. The Germans began fortifying the place, but while they were engaging in this task the earth heaved and a deafening explosion occurred. The ten hours the French had held the point had been sufficient to mine every rod of the ground.

It is estimated that three German battalions were annihilated.

Berlin Fears Portuguese.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The following despatch was received here last night from Berlin by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co.:

"On Sept. 12 Portuguese left for Angola and Mozambique, Portuguese possessions in West and East Africa respectively. Each of these forces consisted of one battalion of infantry, one squadron of cavalry, one battery of mounted artillery, one battery of machine guns and an ambulance staff. Each force aggregated approximately 16,000 men. Two native companies, each of 240 men, have left Mozambique for Angola."

Maritz Revolt Peters Out.

LONDON, Oct. 21—In South Africa the rebellion of Col. Maritz has been virtually broken up. Another lot of officers and men have been captured, while others have surrendered voluntarily to the African authorities. Maritz himself is having trouble with his German allies who are not pleased with his inaction.

Austrian Losses.

ROME, Oct. 21.—Austrian losses in action against Russia, Servia and Montenegro up to Oct. 6 are estimated approximately at: Officers, 435 killed and 1,539 wounded; men, 4,334 killed and 23,272 wounded; total killed, 4,769; wounded, 24,811. Only eight officers and 132 men, it is stated, are missing, and the numbers who have been taken prisoners are not given.

These figures are official, but are declared to be approximate. They are regarded as underestimated.

Jibutil Under Fire.

ROME, Oct. 21.—The port of Jibutil, in British Somaliland, has been under fire from a German cruiser, causing considerable damage to the terminal buildings of the Addis Abebe Railway. Jibutil is located near the entrance to the Red Sea, opposite Aden.

Humor and Philosophy

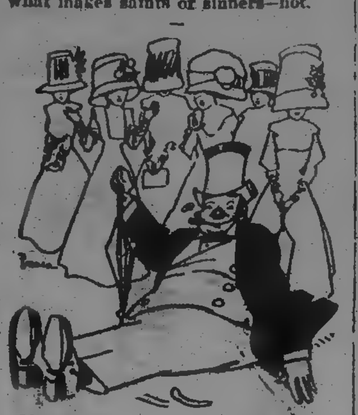
By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Occasionally we meet a man whose estimate of himself is so high that he ought to be made to pay taxes on it.

It is hard to believe that anybody would do wrong and not lie about it afterward.

Having to pay for it afterward is what makes saints of sinners—not.



How any woman can bear to have such a careless husband is what the other woman can't understand.

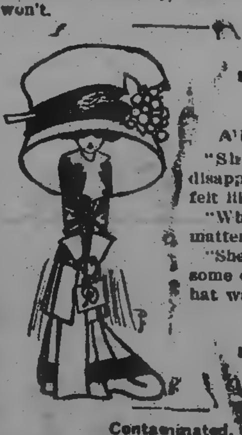
A cheerful liar is often an enduring joy to the erring and downcast.

The world solves its own problems, but very rarely to the satisfaction of those inhabitants of the world who constitute the problem.

Being able to take care of yourself should be a guarantee that you are able to take care of some one else.

Some men are unique in that they make a specialty of believing their own lies.

We would not so much mind not being able to tell what some people will do if we could only be sure what they won't.



A Failure.

"She was so disappointed she felt like crying."

"What was the matter?"

"She overheard some one say her hat was pretty."

Contaminated.

"How are your hens doing this spring?"

"I am afraid they have gone into politics."

"How does it manifest itself?"

"Getting so they make enough noise with each egg they lay for a dozen."

Squaring It.

Mr. Shoddy—Yes, that's the armah used by my ancestah who came ovah with the Conquerah. Young Lady—(after examining the armor carefully)—It says "Made in Germany" on the gauntlet. Mr. Shoddy—Oh, yes; my ancestah—er—started from there, don't yer know.—London Telegraph.

Contemptible.

Grace—If it was a secret why in the world did you tell that girl? Gwendolyn—It won't do her any good, my dear. I'd already telephoned it to all the girls she knew.—Puck.

Human Nature.

Eddie—Pa, what's human nature? Pa—That's the thing that always catches it when a fellow can't blame it on anybody else.—London Mail.

There are more men ennobled by study than by nature.

GILES—LESLIE.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Giles, of the township of Mariposa, the happy couple being Miss Bertha Florence Giles, daughter of the late Mr. Eli Giles, of Mariposa, and Mr. Ernest Leslie, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Woolridge, also of the township of Mariposa. The bride was given away by her brother, Russell Giles, and looked charming as she was escorted into the parlor to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, which was played by Miss Giles, of Peterborough, cousin of the bride.

The ceremony was conducted by Rev. W. Limert, in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends of the bride and groom, who were unattended.

During the signing of the register, Miss Giles sang the solo entitled "Because." After an elaborate wedding dinner, and the usual toasts to the bride and groom, the happy couple took the evening train for Toronto, where they will spend their honeymoon. The bride was the recipient of many handsome gifts, that of the groom being a furlined coat with muff to match.

On returning the happy couple will reside in Mariposa.

Mrs. Begg of Brockville, is staying with Mrs. Travers.

Mrs. Douglas has returned to the city after a visit at Brockville.

Invitations have been issued by the Marlborough Club for a dance to be held on Friday evening at the Conservatory of Music Hall. The names of those forming the committee are a sufficient guarantee for the success of the affair.

Quite a number of members were at the Golf Club on Friday for luncheon and a game afterwards. Among others were Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Travers, Mrs. Goodwill, Mrs. Aylmer, the Misses Kingan, the Misses Hall, Mrs. Langley and Miss Reinhart, and Miss Hare.

LOCAL VOCALISTS DID GOOD WORK WITH SOLO PARTS

In Presentation of Judas Maccabaeus for Patriotic Fund

The oratorio "Judas Maccabaeus" was repeated last night by the Peterboro Choral Society in a most artistic manner, to a well filled house of delighted patrons. The chorus put their whole heart and soul into their work, while Mr. R. J. Devey, the conductor, excelled with the baton. The soprano parts were taken by Miss Olive Casey, Toronto. This artist needs no introduction to a Peterboro audience, her name being synonymous with highest talent. Miss Dorothy Allan took the alto parts in her usual tuneful style. Mr. Kenyon, Knox Church, delighted his hearers as a basso, and Mr. George Chandler was compelled to give an encore after his rendering of "Sound the Alarm."

At the conclusion Mr. Devey thanked the audience for their support, also Miss Casey for gratuitous services, adding that the oratorio was not so well known in Peterboro as it might be, yet the choir hoped to continue their work, encouraged by the attendance last evening.

The proceeds will be added to the Patriotic Fund. All the soloists gave their services gratis and there was no charge for the use of the theatre. The small flags worn by the choristers were the gift of Mr. Chas. Coleman.

SELECTIONS FOR STUDY BY THE BROWNING CLUB

The program for the Browning Club has been arranged and the club will meet every Thursday in the green room at the Y.W.C.A. at 8 p.m. Tomorrow night, Love among the Ruins and Two in the Campagna will be studied with Mr. Morris of the Collegiate staff as the speaker.

Members are advised to get an Oxford University Press or Crowell's edition if the Globe edition is too expensive.

Mrs. Darkwell and her daughter, Miss Darkwell, of Sherbrooke St., left to-day for Moose Jaw, Sask., where they will in future reside.

The directors of the Protestant Home are to be congratulated upon the success of their entertainment held on Friday afternoon. A great many people found their way up the hill to the Home and a great many jars of jam and pickles found their way into the store room and promise a great deal of enjoyment to the old people during the coming winter. The table was most tastefully decorated with autumn leaves and flowers and lighted by candles. It was in charge of Miss Mary Brown and Mrs. Duncan Walker, assisted by Miss Robinson, Miss Helen Denison, Miss Munroe, and the Misses Hatton. Amongst those present were Mrs. Roger, Mrs. Hazlitt, the Misses Nicholls, Mrs. Suckling, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Mason, Mrs. Cressman, Miss Caldwell, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Sollitt, Mrs. Butcher, Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. and Miss Laidlaw, Mrs. Woods, Miss Edwards, Mrs. Menet, Mrs. Fessenden and Miss Penny, Miss Collins, Mrs. Frazer, Miss Nan Hall, Mrs. Gardiner, the Misses Rubidge, Mrs. Davidson, Mrs. Walsh, Mrs. Shook, Mrs. Brown of Toronto, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Stevenson. Miss Casey of Toronto kindly gave a solo which was very much appreciated by all present.

St. John's Church.

Bishop Bidwell was heard by a large congregation at St. John's last night. The meetings will continue every night this week.

EDOUARD HESSELBERG,

Who is the Director of Music at Dr. Gordon's Meetings.

Those who know him best, professionals as well as laymen, are unanimous in stating that Mr. Edouard Hesselberg is by birth a genius, by education a musician, by profession a composer of great merit, a performer of rare skill, and teacher of phenomenal success. The candor of such unqualified praise is borne out by the fact that never before has a newcomer achieved such popularity in Toronto in so short a space of time, as the subject of this sketch. Edouard Hesselberg (D'Essenelli), tone poet, pianist, composer and pedagogue, was born in 1870 in Riga, Russia. Although his father was a Russian, among his ancestors may be found German, Dutch and Spanish. He is cosmopolitan, receiving his education in Russia, and living afterwards in Germany, France, United States and Canada, his present home. He inherited his talent from his mother's side, Charles Davidoff, the world's greatest cellist, being his great uncle. Edouard Hesselberg's first appearance as soloist was at one of the Philharmonique symphony concerts in Moscow, Russia. Four years later he graduated as laureate from the "Philharmonique Conservatory of Music and Dramatic Art," receiving the only medal in the artists' class for performing Liszt's famous "Dies Irae" paraphrase with a double symphony orchestra before an audience of many thousands at the "Salle de Noblesse." Since that time Hesselberg enjoyed the privilege of private guidance under Rubinstein; played before members of the Russian and other royal families; concertized with Sembrich, Marconi, Nordica, de Reszke, Fritz Sheel, John Philip Sousa, etc., visited the principal cities of the Old and New World, with overwhelming success, earning the sobriquet of "tone poet," wrote nearly one hundred original compositions for pianoforte, violin, voice and orchestra. The influence of his work is felt in many parts of the world, his pupils holding positions in Europe, United States, China and Australia.

ALLIES MAINTAIN THEIR POSITIONS

Violent Attacks of the Germans Fail to Dislodge French and English

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Oct. 22.—The afternoon official announcement says: "On our left wing German forces in considerable strength have continued their violent attacks, particularly in the vicinity of Dixmude, Warniton, Armentieres, Radinghem and La Bassee, but positions occupied by the allies have been maintained. On the rest of the front the enemy has delivered only partial attacks. These have all been repulsed."

SAW REVOLVER IN HANDS OF MRS. CARMAN

Negro Maid is Star Witness for the State in Murder Trial

Mineola, N. Y., Oct. 22.—Celia Coleman, negro maid in the Carman household, and star witness for the state, testified yesterday at the trial of Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman, accused of the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey, that Mrs. Carman had appeared to her, revolver in hand, a moment after Mrs. Bailey had been shot, and that Mrs. Carman had said:

"I shot him."

Celia thought Mrs. Carman referred to her husband, Dr. Carman.

"The next morning about daylight Mrs. Carman came to my room," Celia continued. "She said, 'Oh, Celia, what did I kill that woman for? I hope God will forgive me. You stick to me, and if anything happens to you I'll take care of your little boy.'"

Celia Coleman swore she had lied at the inquest in shielding the accused, and that a few days after the crime Mrs. Carman gave her an extra $5 for keeping her mouth shut. Prior to going before the grand jury, she said, Dr. Carman had told her not to change her testimony, and he would take care of her.

SUBSCRIPTIONS LISTS OPENED FOR BELGIANS

Supply of Clothing is Being Made by the Ladies Who Are Doing Most of the Work — Not Mach Coming From the County

An effort is being made in Peterborough to help the Belgians, and at the present time in the neighborhood of one hundred women are making clothing for the stricken people of a devastated country.

Someone got a snap in goods and sufficient material to make a large supply of clothing was purchased for $25. The amount is as yet a liability, but it is expected that the money can be realized.

The board of trade has placed subscription lists in all the banks and with the secretary and treasurer of the board. Some subscriptions have been made.

There appears to be little effort being made to get the farmers to unlock the barn doors and give from their store of plenty. The surrounding counties and villages have made splendid contributions of food and clothing.

One prominent citizen expressed himself to-day as being disappointed at the almost utter lack of co-operation from the county, and he thought the city might also do a little better. He said that it was a difficult matter to find plain sailing in the matter of organization, due to the presence of the spirit of "I'm right and you're wrong, and if my way don't go, you can count me out."

"It seems to me," he added, "the ladies are doing the major part of the work, and if Peterborough gets on the map, as having accomplished its part, the greater amount of credit will have to go to them."

BOOKS FOR CANADIAN SOLDIERS

London, Oct. 22.—Col. Sir Edward Ward, who has charge of the general arrangements for the comfort of Canadian troops, make an appeal for at least 50,000 books, novels and magazines with which he proposes to form a lending library for the use of the men during the long dreary nights of the winter on Salisbury Plains. All gifts should be sent to Hon. Mrs. Anstruther, 35 Great Smith street, Westminster.

Sir Edward Worthington, M.V.O., medical officer to the Duke of Connaught, has arrived in London en route to the front.

AUSTRIANS AND GERMANS WITH ARMS AND BOMBS

Are Prepared to Inflict Appalling Damage to Property

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Montreal, Oct. 22.—A signed letter was received this morning by the Acting-Mayor purporting to come from one of the organizations of Germans and Austrians in the city, asserting that these people are in possession of arms, bombs and wireless outfit and prepared on a moment's notice, to inflict an appalling amonnt of damage to property here.

The letter which is taken seriously was handed over to the Chief of Police.

NATIVE CHIEF IS EXECUTED

Tried to Get Natives to Rebel Against Germany

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 22.—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Hague says that Magna Bell, a native chief of German Kamerun has been executed because he attempted to ferment among natives, a rebellion against Germany.

Announcement of this, is credited by a correspondent to Herr Ebermayer, the German governor of Kamerun.

CHARGED WITH ATTEMPTED FRAUD IN CONNECTION WITH GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Oct. 22.—Herbert Capewell, arrested last night by Dominion Inspector Parkinson and detective Archibald appeared in police court this morning on a charge sworn to by Parkinson, of having attempted to obtain by fraud from R. H. Trenple and J. J. Tierney, one half the money received, or to be received, as a commission from the Aylmer Shoe Co., Murray Shoe Co., Cook and Fitzgerald Co., and others, arising out of procuring contracts for a supply of goods by these firms to the government of the Dominion of Canada.

Capewell was remanded for one week.

Inspector Parkinson has been here working on the case since Tuesday moning. The charge is said to be in connection with contracts for boots, sweaters and other articles of clothing for Canadian troops going to the front. Capewell was a candidate for the mayoralty in 1911 but polled very few votes.

TOO NUMEROUS.

A darky employed as an office boy in Kentucky came to work one morning with a face that looked as though it had been run through a meat grinder.

"Henry," demanded his surprised employer, "what in the world has happened to you?"

"Well, suh, boss," explained Henry, "I got into a little argument las' night wit another nigger, and one thing led to another twill I up and hit at him. Well, suh, it seemed lak dat irritated him. He took and blacked both mah eyes and bit one of mah years mighty nigh off, and split mah lip and knocked two of mah teeth loose; and den he th'owed me down and stamped me in the stomach. Honest, boss, I neer did git so sick of a nigger in mah life!"

MAKE THEM WORK.

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 22.—In view of the fact that the government is to be put to great expense in feeding them, an agitation is on foot to have the war prisoners at Fort Henry utilized for government work by rebuilding the broken down walls around the fort.

There are some Germans at Fort Henry who like to create trouble and who have had to be disciplined. One of the Germans deliberately threw some dirty water down a well. He was caught in the act and placed in a cell.

HON. L. P. PELLETIER

The retirement of Hon. L. P. Pelletier, from ill-health, is greatly to be regretted. His handling of rural mail, parcel post and the general work of the department has been marked by the highest efficiency and care. There has never been a better postmaster-general and he is entitled to every praise for his good work in the public interest. As a debater Mr. Pelletier lacked nothing in skill and effectiveness. His legal training and natural ability rendered him a most dangerous opponent for the Opposition.

Swindler Is Taken

Doctor is Wanted on Charge of Frauds of $1,000,000

TORONTO, Oct. 22.—After a chase which has extended over the whole North American and part of the South American continents for the past fifteen years, Dr. R. C. Flower, alias Oxford, alias Montgomery, was arrested last night as he was about to enter his home at 1,542 King street west. Detective Armstrong of the local police was accompanied by Supt. Fuller of the local branch of the Pinkerton Agency and Lieutenant of Police McConville of New York City. Flower was held an an indictment returned against him in the fall of 1899 in New York City. He is alleged to have swindled New Yorkers and others out of $1,000,000 by means of a mine which was not even a prospect.

Flower is now nearly seventy years of age and in a bad condition physically. His health is such that he is now compelled to use drugs to keep up his apparent vigor and nerve.

LAD SHOT IN FACE

The young son of Mr. W. J. Blizzard, of Indian River, who was shot through the face last Friday with a bullet from a .22 calibre rifle, while playing with his young brother, is now out of danger and will recover. The bullet entered his face and came out at the back of his neck.

FIGHTING ON BELGIAN SOIL HAS GONE HEAVILY AGAINST THE INVADERS

Reported Evacuation of Ostend and Retreat to Bruges is not Contradicted

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 22.—Reports of German evacuation of Ostend and retreat to Bruges and of a general mauling of their West Flanders army come from so many sources that, not receiving any contradiction from Berlin, there is a general disposition to believe that the fighting in Belgium has gone heavily against the invaders.

Austrian reports of yesterday claim an advance in the Carpathians and in Bukowina and that the last Russian soldier has been driven from Hungary.

London, Oct. 22.—The Havas Agency says telegraph and telephone communication between Lisbon and Oporto has been cut, possibly by royalist agents bent on embarrassing the Republican government's negotiations with the Allies.

A Daily Mail despatch from Rotterdam says German reinforcements including two seventeen-inch howitzers, have arrived in Antwerp from Liege on the way to Bruges.

London, Oct. 22.—A Reuter despatch from Warsaw says parties of German prisoners continue to arrive. They include one general officer.

CUTTING AT LOCAL BUSINESS

THE REVIEW has learned that orders for printing are being solicited and obtained from merchants and other business men of Peterborough by outside printing concerns. The newspapers of Peterborough are entitled to local support by the business firms of this city. They have got to make their way and pay wages just the same as any store or factory. We think they turn out as good work and as cheap work as, in the long run, can be got anywhere in Canada, and if they do not receive the local business, they will be obliged to look elsewhere. The war has been particularly hard on newspapers, a fact that many people do not understand. The cost of telegraph service has increased from three to five times the ordinary charges, while paper and other things have gone up in price. There is really no increased revenue to support the increased cost. There are large departmental stores that would willing advertise in this city's dailies, but this advertising has not been accepted by local papers. We think it better for business in Peterborough that it should not be accepted, and for the same reason local merchants and business firms should continue to place their orders in this city. "Made in Canada" is a slogan to help Canadian business, and that means a slogan of "Made in Peterborough" for local business. It is not patriotic, it is not fair, it is injuring local trade, to give orders to outside printing concerns for work that has always been done here, and to cut out advertising at a time like this when every effort is being made to keep the local newspaper plants going. We know that business conditions are such as to warrant a policy of retrenchment, but that certainly does not mean at all a policy of running off to other places for job work, completely stopping advertising and going to sleep in a hollow log. Business men here who deal with peddlars should know that they are cutting at the root of their own interests and business.

RUSE SAVED BABE'S HANDS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Winnipeg, Oct. 22.—Mrs. Rose du Jardin of this city whose four year old son was visiting at the ancestral home of Lierre near Antwerp when the war broke out, has received the following message from her sister at Lierre. "Your baby's hands were not cut off by German soldiers for we tied them up as if they had already been cut off. Thus he was saved but God knows where he is now. I think he escaped with our father and mother."

SUBMARINES FOR TURKEY

London, Oct. 22.—A message from Athens states that two submarines and a number of aeroplanes are en route to Constantinople via Rustchuk on the northern border of Bulgaria. The vessels and air craft are being shipped in sections and will be assembled in Turkey. It is supposed that the shipment originated at some point in Germany.

Contributions of Second Military Division Regiments to New Force

TORONTO, Oct. 22. — Orders detailing the composition of the quota from the Second Military Division for Canada's second overseas force, which have been eagerly awaited since the announcement that a second contingent would be sent to the war, arrived at military headquarters last night. Though the individual contributions are small, it will be seen that the new force has been spread without discrimination over practically all the regiments in the division.

The quota consists of two battalions consisting of sixty-nine officers and 2,130 N. C. O.'s and men, and is distributed as follows: Queen's Own Rifles, Toronto, 7 officers, 240 men; 10th Royal Grenadiers, Toronto, 5 officers, 120 men; 12th York Rangers, Toronto, 4 officers, 120 men; 13th Royal Regiment, Hamilton, 4 officers, 120 men; 19th Lincoln Regiment, 4 officers, 120 men; 20th Regiment, Halton Rifles, Georgetown, 2 officers, 50 men; 23rd Regiment, Parry Sound, 3 officers, 100 men; 31st Grey County Regiment, Owen Sound, 3 officers, 100 men; 34th Ontario Regiment, Whitby, 3 officers, 100 men; 35th Simcoe Foresters, Barrie, 2 officers, 50 men; 36th Peel Regiment, Brampton, 3 officers; 100 men; 37th Haldimand Rifles, York, Ont., 3 officers, 100 men; 38th Dufferin Rifles, Brantford, 3 officers, 120 men; 39th Norfolk Rifles, Simcoe, Ont., 2 officers, 50 men; 44th Lincoln & Welland, Niagara Falls, 3 officers, 100 men; 48th Highlanders, Toronto, 5 officers, 150 men; 51st Regiment, Sault Ste. Marie, 4 officers, 120 men; 77th Wentworth Regiment, Dundas, 2 officers; 50 men; 91st Highlanders, Hamilton, 4 officers, 120 men; 97th Algonquin Rifles, Sudbury, 3 officers, 100 men.

The numbers required fo Engineers, Canadian Army Service Corps, Army Medical Corps and the various cavalry regiments have not yet been made known.

The force, when formed, will be concentrated at the Exhibition grounds, Toronto, where the men will train until the complete mobilization for overseas transportation takes place.

Chinese Give $140.

Ottawa, Oct. 22.—Acknowledgments to the Patriotic Fund include a noteworthy item in the contribution of $140 from the Chinese residents in Ottawa, through Hum Quon, one of the leaders of the local Chinese colony.

The total shows at $451,143. New contributions include $100 from the Guild of St. Andrew's church, Mountain, Ont.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1914

THE CITY OF BUENOS AYRES.

IT MAY INTEREST Canadians to know that Buenos Ayres, the capital of the Argentine Republic, is in population the third city in the Western Hemisphere, ranking next to New York and Chicago. Forty-five years ago, when the first census was taken, it had a population of 177,000, and to-day its inhabitants number ten times that. It has the most beautiful street, the finest theatre and the best equipped newspaper plant in this part of the world. Canadians as a rule imagine that South American countries are somewhat like Mexico to-day—half civilized breakages from a fallen Spanish empire, with small population, little culture or progress. Such is not the case. It may apply to Patagonia, but it doesn't fit a country like Argentina, which ranks as a great wheat producer in the world and uses much Canadian-made agricultural machinery. If Canadians are to take advantage of the South American market, they must know more about the true state of the great countries in that continent.

THE DAY OF DREADNOUGHTS.

THE NAVAL BATTLES in the North Sea since the war began have demonstrated the effectiveness of the submarine. Many have hastily concluded from these battles that the day of dreadnoughts is done, military experts to the contrary. When torpedoes and torpedo boats became a fact, the same criticism was launched. Many said the day of big battleships has ended, yet we have lived to see the superdreadnought contradict that criticism. The torpedo boat, with its deadly torpedo, was no sooner perfected than the torpedo boat destroyer was built, a kind of small scouting vessel, designed to attack the torpedo boat more effectively than the big ship, and to keep them at a distance. Now we have the submarine, capable of dealing deadly thrusts from beneath, and its effectiveness calls, not for the scrapping of dreadnoughts, but the building of a submarine destroyer. Just what kind of a mechanical monster this should be is a matter for military experts, but the wonderfully complex fighting machine that is now in existence in the superdreadnought is evidence that the ingenuity of man is capable of another creation to meet new contingencies. The submarine is but the beginning of war beneath the waves, as modern air craft is but the beginning of battles in the air.

BOILERS AT HOME AND ABROAD.

THIRTY OCEAN LINERS, a fleet many times greater in tonnage than any argosy of mediaeval Spain, carried the Canadian army to England. Eleven war vessels were strung by the lines-of-communication system across the Atlantic, one every couple of hundred miles, as a convoy. It was the greatest army that ever crossed the Atlantic, and the most impressive convoy ever seen in our times. The value of that 31,000 soldiers, 8,000 horses and 70 field guns was absolutely guaranteed to the British War Office by the greatest insurance system ever seen afloat.

But the Canadian army is no safer on the Atlantic than the Canadian mercantile marine carrying Canadian wheat, bacon, flour and cheese to the ports of Britain. Day in and day out, night after night, by all bells, the guns of British battleships keep open the trade routes between the fields and the mills and the factories of Canada and the markets of England. Thanks to those nimble cruisers, this country becomes a creditor of England, who, thanks to the navy, is financially able to pay her bills in a time of war on the principle of "Business As Usual."

This navy-guaranteed trade puts England in our debt hundreds of millions in a year. It enables a large percentage of our population to go on raising wheat, operating mills and factories, under absolute safety of transportation. The British navy is the greatest guarantee of our system of transportation, not only of ships but of railways that feed them and which are also fed by them. With such magnificent insurance, every wheel in Canada, every smokestack, every power house, every travelling crane, every spindl and loom, lathe and drill and roller, should go on working as though war had never happened in the world.

With such an impressive spectacle of efficiency on the high seas, it is the Imperial business of every man and woman in Canada to spend every dollar possible to keep the factories of Canada operating as diligently as the farms and the fisheries and the mines. The money spent in buying Canadian goods is money spent to justify the protection we enjoy from the British navy. If in a time of dislocation caused by war we cease to use every dollar we can buying from our own people, we are no longer worth that navy's protection.

It's the busy army at home that makes the majesty of the watchdog fleet abroad. Every warship boiler burning on the seas should be backed up by ten Canadian factory boilers burning at home.

WHEN THE HEART TURNS HOME.

IT IS ABOUT THIS TIME that the dwellers in the country and in the country towns have it all over those who live (a careless use of the word!) in cities, muses Collier's Weekly. In the cities it is merely cooler or chillier, but in the country one has assurance of a mighty change in the life of the earth and the passage of the seasons. Open fires now look good and smell good; there is a certain ripeness about the very dust of the road. A light gleaming through an unshaded window does not suggest a hot and odoriferous lamp, but a desirable place to read and rest. Home itself is twice as dear as one comes toward it in the magic of autumnal twilight instead of the glare of a summer afternoon. It is well worth taking long walks or rides just for the pleasure of getting back and finding out what there is for supper. The harvests are getting in—not simply an abundance of things to eat, but a visible evidence of the guard that human labor and foresight can throw about the objects of its love, a pledge of man's conquest of the earth. Summer is gone, and it was very good, with all its flowers, but these are the home days and much dearer to our hearts.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IT IS ANNOUNCED that both the Allan and White Star lines will resume their Atlantic sailings. Following the landing of the Canadian troops in England, the Megantic and Laurentic were released. The Sicilian and Corinthian of the Allan line will be making regular trips from Montreal very shortly. That shows what the British navy means to Canadian shipping.

WE ARE in a position to state that while the Vistula is a river, it may also be considered the vestibule to Russia. You see, the Germans want to make a call on Warsaw, possibly for a little donation of thirty millions to their war fund.

NOW that the election in the East Ward is over, its citizens will have to return to the war news.

HAS anyone heard of the submarine A 1?

Not a Dream At All.

(Belleville Intelligencer.)

No country is in a better position than Canada to make an enormous increase in her production. It may seem like a dream to make a national effort to double or quadruple our wheat, oats, eggs, butter, meats, horses and cattle, to make of Canada for the time being one vast imperial farm, but it is not at all certain that it cannot be realized. There is danger of want and unemployment. Could not the situation be dealt with nationally?

Kilometres and Miles.

(Victoria Colonist.)

Frequently in the French war office reports of fighting, distances are stated in kilometres. The simplest way to convert kilometres into miles is to divide by two, divide the result by four, and add the two results. Thus: 500 kilometres divided by two equals 250; 250 divided by four equals 62.5, and 62.5 added to 250 gives 312.5; so that there are that number of miles in 500 kilometres. To convert miles into kilometres, multiply by eight and divide the result by five.

British Finances.

(Edmonton Bulletin.)

It is estimated that if the war lasts a year it will cost Britain a billion and a quarter dollars. This is just about the sum which in an ordinary year the people of Britain save from their earnings and put into the banks for investments. If the processes of industry and trade can be kept going at something like the ordinary therefore, John Bull will be no worse off financially at the end of a year's war than he was at the beginning.

A Literary Job.

(Punch.)

Native—Yes, I says the squire be praised. He gives us that bootiful free library.

Tourist—I'm glad you appreciate it; but you don't look like a reading man, either.

Native—No, sur; I don't use the libery; but my old 'ooman, she do get the job o' cleanin' it out.

Our Best Service.

(St. John Globe.)

The best service the Canadian can render Canada at the present time is to buy made in Canada goods. By so doing the wheels of industry will be kept turning and the Canadian workman continued in his employment.

Story of a Great Crime.

(New York Herald.)

No page in all history is blacker than that which tells the story of Germany's treatment of a friendly nation whose neutrality, integrity and sovereignty the Kaiser and his government were solemnly pledged to respect.

Horrors! A Split Infinitive!

(Toronto News.)

A physician writes about "the opportunity to legally practise." And he went to college five years for this! The fellow could not be more terribly disgraced if he were to advertise.

His Choice.

(St. James Gazette.)

First Laborer (gazing into jeweler's window) — How would you like to have your pick amongst that lot, Bill?

Second Laborer—I'd sooner have my shovel!

Dutiful.

(Puck.)

The Old One—You should always defer to your husband's wishes, my dear.

The New One—I've done so ever since he told me that his one wish was to see me happy.

Did It Strike You That Way?

(Montreal Mail.)

Every time we retire we do it for strategic reasons. Every time the Germans retire, they fall back in disorder before the irresistible onrush of our army.

Speaking Artistically of War.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

The German night attack at Craonne was evidently an attempt to draw the French in dark lines.

Count 'em.

(Calgary Herald.)

There are reported to be nine million Russian soldiers in the field. Just count 'em, Bill Hohenzollern—nine million.

THE REAL REASON

By Walt Mason

"This war inevitable was," the candid monarch cries; "there's no use hunting for the cause, when it's before your eyes. For years and years, with frantic haste, we've piled up armament; and could we let it go to waste, the money we have spent? We've drilled about five million men, with endless pain and toil, and could we let them idly then go back and till the soil? The colonels and the other chaps were all athirst for war, and asked us, 'If we can't have scraps, what are we drilling for?' You arm a man with guns and knives, and he for strife will groan, and he will take some others' lives, unless he drops his own. And we have armed until we limped beneath this burden punk; for years we saved and slaved and skimped to buy the warlike junk. We taxed the man of humble birth until he groaned aloud; we taxed him when he tilled the earth, we taxed him in his shroud. We robbed the farmer of his oats, the ditcher of his mon, despoiled the herdsman of his goats, to buy a modern gun. And having lined with trench and forts the rivers and the woods, we simply had to scrap, old sport, to show we had the goods."

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

The Belgian refugees are beginning to return to their own country, especially to the city of Antwerp.

An effort is being made to organize a corps of civil servants in Ottawa who do not belong to any of the militia regiments.

Mrs. James Romain and her brother, Tony Demarco, of North Bay, were arrested yesterday on a charge of arson, as a result of a fire at the Romain residence.

Lt.-Col. W. S. Hughes will be appointed provisionally in command of the infantry battalion to be organized from the infantry and rifle units of the third division.

It is officially announced that Maj. Liberte, Quebec, will have charge of the machine gun section of the French-Canadian regiment, while Maj. Rainville will be quartermaster.

Italy has decided to remain out of the war, but she has notified the powers that she may find it necessary to occupy Avlona, Albania, owing to the chaotic conditions prevailing in that country.

The German steamer Santa Catharina, from New York for Rio Janeiro, etc., before reported seized as a war prize, is now reported sunk off Parcel dos Abrolhos, off Rio Janeiro as a result of fire.

A message from Athens states that two submarines and a number of aeroplanes in parts are en route to Constantinople via Rustchuk, on the northern border of Bulgaria. They are from some German point.

The steamer Brussels reports that she saw the steamer Cormorant of Cork sink in the North Sea. It is supposed she struck a mine. Her crew probably were saved by a torpedo boat which was seen to leave Harwich.

HUNDREDS ARE ARRESTED.

Austrians and Germans Are Being Rounded Up In Britain.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Austrian and German subjects of military age who, since the beginning of the war, have been allowed their liberty in England unless they rested under some suspicion, are to be interned in detention camps.

The police during the last few days have been arresting hundreds of men between the ages of 17 and 65 years, and sending them to camps in different parts of the country. More than 200 were arrested yesterday in London, 100 were arrested in Manchester and similar numbers were taken in all the large cities.

This action of the Government is necessitated, it is said, because of the facilities offered German spies to enter with Belgium refugees on the pretence of being Belgians.

Priest Killed Station Agent.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Father J. J. Mullen, pastor of Holy Rosary Church, stabbed and killed Thomas W. Patterson, the station agent at Hillside, a suburb, Tuesday night, after a quarrel in which Patterson had no part. The priest then stood on the right-of-way of the Illinois Central Railroad, stopped a train, and, threatening passengers and the train crew with a knife, boarded it. He was overpowered after a struggle and locked up at Hillside.

Father Mullen has been pastor of Holy Rosary Church for 12 years, ever since his arrival here from Rome.

Winston Churchill Thanks Japan.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The following message of thanks has been sent to the Minister of Marine at Tokio by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty:

"The great object is the extermination of the main German base in the Pacific. The Japanese squadrons are giving invaluable help to the protection of trade, the search of the enemy's ships and the convoy of troops in this decisive theatre of conflict."

Refugees Advised To Return.

THE HAGUE, Oct. 22.—(Via London.)—Cardinal Mercier, Archbishop of Malines, who took refuge in Holland some weeks ago, has now returned to his native city. He has advised all Catholic refugees to follow his example. The Uleuwe Rotterdamsche Courant declares that 20,000 Belgian refugees passed through Roosendaal on their way home during the past two days.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

JUDAS MACCABAEUS.

Editor Review,

Sir,—While not desiring to detract, even in the slightest degree, from your appreciation of the efforts put forth by the Peterboro Choral Society, to increase the Patriotic Fund, and making due allowances from a musical point of view, for the difficulties that, of necessity, must have to be overcome in connection with the presentation of an oratorio such as Judas Maccabaeus no good purpose can be served unless errors be recognized and shortcomings reduced.

We always expect much from Miss Casey and Miss Allan and it is no exaggeration to say both ladies were really excellent; indeed, the general opinion must have been that Miss Allan sang with even greater confidence and success than when the oratorio was given in the early spring.

Apart from initial difficulties in his first recitative Mr. Kenyon sang well in "Arm, Arm, ye Brave" and "The Lord Worketh Wonders," and ticularly the latter, and assuredly he deserves commendation.

Mr. Chandler was rather subdued, but fully deserved his recall in "Sound an Alarm" though the repetition of this solo was to a large extent marred by faulty accompaniment. That there were also evidence of either timidity or a little weakness on the part of the same singer in the duet with Miss Allan "From this Dread Scene" was manifest, otherwise our local tenor deserves and earned hearty congratulations.

The chorus was not as good as on the previous occasion. "Fallen is the Foe" "Tune Your Harps" and "We never will bow down" being distinctly ragged and lacking in cohesion. This was however not altogether due to the singers themselves, but was caused in the main, by palpable lack of rehearsal with the orchestra, a state of affairs which should be avoided if real combination and success is to be obtained in the future. The overture at the commencement, as well as the conductor's speech were both foreign to the oratorio, and could well have been dispensed with. That the Society deserves every encouragement from all lovers of music is beyond question, and it is to be hoped it will persevere in the good work it has initiated.

THE CHURCH OF THE FUTURE.

Editor Review:

Sir,—Your correspondent of last evening complains that the preachers and teachers outnumber the pupils, and yet that nothing worth while is accomplished. Let me tell him that if he will go to hear Dr. Gordon he will see what the church of the future is going to be. It will be a good speech on things that we understand and are responsible for. It will call upon our self-respect and not teach us to unload sins we never dreamed of on somebody else. We will hear good music and common sense and no mythical tales, but what we know to be facts. That will do us good.

Rising In Portugal Suppressed.

LISBON, Portugal, Oct. 22.—(Via London.)—A revolutionary outbreak in the cities of Braganza and Mafra, under the leadership of Adriano Beca, a former colonel, has been promptly put down, according to official announcement made yesterday.

Beca has been arrested and a band of the revolutionists who went out from Mafra are being pursued by troops. Beyond the cutting of telegraph wires, and the stopping of trains, nothing seems to have been accomplished.

Mine Kills Children.

ROTTERDAM, Oct. 22. — The Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant states that on Monday a floating mine, which was washed ashore at Deyst, exploded and killed three children. Another mine came ashore at Knocke. Four drifted into Zeebrugge, where they were dealt with by Germans. If, as reported from Harwich, a Holland-American liner had run on a mine in the North Sea and been damaged, the vessel is probably the Ryndam. The Potsdam is lying at Rotterdam.

The origin of all wars is the pursuit of wealth, and we are forced to pursue wealth because we live in slavery to the cares of the body.—Plato.

THE MAN UP A TREE

By M. QUAD

I am something of a reformer not only in theory, but in practice, and when I discovered the man up a tree I determined to try my hand at elevating his moral standard.

I had extended sympathy and more or less financial aid to this man up a tree. In a burst of confidence he had confessed to me that he had been a swindler, a gambler, a confidence man and a great deal more. He had come to me as a man who had at least seen the error of his ways and sighed to take another track and be counted with the good and respectable. He had given me the name of H. Jones-Jones. When he threw himself upon my mercy, as it were—when he made a clean breast of his wicked career and added that if any one would aid him he would turn into honest paths and travel on without a limp—I agreed to take him in hand. I gave him money for a week's vacation from crime and when the vacation was over was to see what further could be done. I took my week off at the same time and brought up amid the fresh buttermilk and dew kissed goldenrod of the country.

On the second night of my stay, as I sat by my open window at midnight to finish the last of my cigar and wonder if my Jones-Jones had kept straight during the last forty-eight hours, I suddenly caught sight of him on the ground below. It was a farmhouse hotel at which I was stopping. I had a corner room, and at that corner of the house stood a large apple tree. I had observed that a big limb branched out so close to my window that I could have descended by it. What you can descend by you can also ascend by. I had no sooner caught sight of Jones-Jones at the foot of the tree at an hour when everybody was supposed to be in bed than I understood that he intended to pay me a secret visit. Mr. Jones-Jones had no sooner begun to climb that apple tree than I made ready to receive him with all due hospitality. There was no club in the room, but the water pitcher had been filled for the night and made a good weapon.

I waited with patience until he had reached a particular position and then brought the pitcher down upon his head. The idea was to administer an annesthetic, and it was a success. He pitched forward into the room with a long drawn sigh. Then I forced brandy between his teeth and bathed his face with water, and in the course of a quarter of an hour my midnight visitor had so far recovered his senses that I ventured to remark:

"Well, Jones-Jones, why didn't you tell me that you were coming, that I might be on the lookout for you?"

"Sir, my name is Brown-Brown, and I don't exactly understand the situation. Am I in your room, or are you in mine?"

"I believe it's my room," I replied.

"Now, then, Mr. Ashmore, as to the business in hand," said Brown-Brown to me. "If you think you can advance me $500 I am sure I can make a go of it."

It took me a little while to catch on, but by and by I discovered that Jones-Jones had been knocked out and Brown-Brown had taken his place. Jones-Jones was a crook who wanted to reform. Brown was a poor but honest man who wanted to go into the making of shirts.

I had turned Jones-Jones the crook back into Brown-Brown the honest man by a knock on the head. When my week was up we went back to town together, and I gave Brown-Brown money enough to set up in shirt-making.

My man prospered wonderfully well. People said he was a little eccentric, but he was honest and a hard worker. In one year he had paid me back half my money and built up a good business. One day a detective entered the store to make a purchase. He had known Jones-Jones as a crook. He knew that Jones-Jones had a crooked finger on his right hand and a mole on his left cheek. When he discovered that Brown-Brown had these same identification marks he began to look at him more closely, and by and by he made up his mind that the old crook stood before him. He was so sure of it that he set out to make an arrest. Brown-Brown was an honest man, but in his surprise he started to make a bolt of it. As he ran out of his shop and down the street pursued by the detective he encountered a policeman, who tapped him on the head with his club. Brown-Brown went down like a log and was carted off to the station. I was present when his senses returned, and you can imagine my feelings when he sat up and said:

"Well, you've got me at last, but I gave you a run for it. You fellers ain't half sharp!"

"You are Jones-Jones the crook," said the sergeant.

"Of course I am and the slickest crook in the country. Is it that bank business you want me for this time?"

"Mr. Brown-Brown"— I began as I stepped forward, but the crook stopped me with:

"Who in blank is Brown-Brown?"

Then I realized how it was. I had smashed Jones-Jones the crook over the head with a water pitcher and changed him into Brown-Brown the honest shirt constructor. The policeman had smashed Brown-Brown with his club and changed him back into Jones-Jones the crook.

Go To the Farm.

Mr. A. G. Turney, the provincial horticulturist of New Brunswick, speaking with regard to the high cost of living said recently: "If people want to reduce the cost of living, why don't they grow food? Did you ever notice how cheap food products were when you had them for sale, and how high they were when you wanted to buy them? There is one sure way to protect your family purse, and that is, become a farmer.

"Some idea of the profits in apple growing may be seen from the following returns, obtained from an old neglected orchard in York County, which the Provincial Department of Agriculture renovated and conducted as a demonstration orchard in 1911 and 1912: Net profit per acre in 1911 $88.56, net profit per acre in 1912, $135.74, on an average profit for the two years of $224.30 per acre. This is a return of over 72 per cent. on a valuation of $300 per acre.

Lesson IV.—Fourth Quarter, For Oct. 25, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xxvi, 47-50; xxvii, 3-10—Memory Verses, Matt. xxvii, 3-5—Golden Text, Matt. xxvi, 24, Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Here is another instance of God and the devil face to face, as in the temptation in the wilderness (chapter iv), after the baptism at the Jordan. But there it was the devil in his own person, while here it is the devil in Judas Iscariot. First the devil put the thought into the heart of Judas, and later he entered in himself (John xiii, 2, 27). If we would be overcomers we must resist the thoughts that are evil. It is encouraging to know that if we resist the devil he will flee from us (Jas. iv, 7; I Pet. v, 8, 9). We must bear in mind that our great daily conflict is not so much with the visible in the form of people or circumstances as with the rulers of the darkness of this world, wicked spirits in the heavenlies (Eph. vi, 12), and we certainly need the whole armor of God to be able to stand against the wiles of the devil.

Some one has said that as this was the greatest piece of work the devil ever undertook he could not trust it to any of his followers, and so entered into Judas himself. It was a host of the devil's followers, including the chief priests, elders and scribes, who came with Judas as their leader, for our Lord had said to them earlier in His ministry, "Ye are of your father the devil" (John viii, 44).

It is written that the way in which the betrayer knew where to find Jesus was because He ofttimes resorted thither with His disciples (John xviii, 2). "The wicked (one) watcheth the righteous and seeketh to slay him" (Ps. xxxvii, 32), and he seems to know our resorts and our weaknesses. Judas had told the band of followers that he would indicate the man they wanted by kissing Him. This he did, and Jesus suffered it, simply saying, "Judas, betrayest thou the Son of Man with a kiss?" (Luke xxii, 48.) How much He bore for our sakes, but how little we seem able to bear for Him! Knowing all things that should come upon Him, He went forth to meet His enemies and said, "Whom seek ye?" They answered, "Jesus of Nazareth," to which He replied, "I am."

Then happened a wonderful thing, an instance of His power, an illustration of the fact that not all the soldiers on earth could take Him if He had not been willing. They went backward and fell to the ground (John xviii, 4-6). They would never have risen again if He had not permitted, but would have been like the army of Sennacherib, all dead men (II Kings xix, 35). He allowed them to rise up and come again and take Him. It was then that Peter in his zeal blundered with his sword and took off a man's ear, but our Lord gently rebuked Peter and healed the ear.

How often by our blunderings we hinder people from hearing the gospel! It may be by untimely zeal or by some inconsistency or some un-Christlike word or deed suggested by the devil.

In following lessons we will take up the story of Jesus and Peter and Jesus before Pilate, but now we are asked to continue the story of Judas until the end of his earthly career as recorded in chapter xxvii, 3-10, this portion of the record being found only here. The seeming change in Judas was when he saw that Jesus was actually condemned. Is it possible that, having seen so much of the power of Jesus Christ and remembering the day when He quietly slipped away from the hands of the people of Nazareth and perhaps recalling His words that no man could take His life from Him (John x, 18), he did not believe that He would ever let His enemies kill Him? He could make a little money and then fool the high priests and others by seeing Jesus take Himself out of their power.

I cannot tell what His thoughts were, but I cannot forget the words, "It had been good for that man if he had not been born" (Matt. xxvi, 24). The pieces of silver remind us of the money received by Joseph's brethren when they sold him, and also of the prediction in Zech. xi, 12. Verse 9 of our lesson is a little perplexing, as it is said there that the words about the pieces of silver were spoken by Jeremiah the prophet, yet we find them written in Zechariah, not Jeremiah. Our lesson does not say they were written, but spoken, by Jeremiah. If Jeremiah spoke them and Zechariah wrote them, that would clear it all up. Some day we will know, if necessary.

The words of Judas in verse 4, "I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood," are to my mind one of the strongest testimonies on record to the holiness of the Lord Jesus—the testimony of one possessed by the devil, who was in a sense one of the twelve and knew the inner life of the little company and would have seen any flaw in the life of the Lord Jesus if there had been any.

I have often wondered if he was chosen that he might leave this testimony on record. The elders and high priests seemed glad to have dealings with him when he offered to betray Jesus, but now that he seems to have changed his mind they throw him off with the words: "What is that to us? See thou to that."

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Cured Both Stomach Trouble and Headaches

PALMERSTON, ONT., JUNE 20th. 1913.

"I really believe that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives". Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctor's bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old Stomach Trouble and distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Sometime ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives" and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use.

Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked the reason. I replied, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives". He said, "Well, if Fruit-a-tives are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can".

MRS. H. S. WILLIAMS.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE HONEY CROP LIGHT

Cold, Wet Spring Reduced Supply of Clover Nectar.

It is generally conceded that the beekeepers of Ontario are not expecting to harvest any great amount of surplus honey this year. The season has been one of keen disappointment. The early part of the year when the bees should have been active was unfavorable to their flight. The clover seemed to be short of nectar, while the basswood was injured by the May beetle. The spring was unfavorable to the honey flow, then the dry and hot months of summer have reduced swarming and honey gathering to the minimum.

The majority of the beekeepers were last year fortunate in handling their apiaries and had their colonies in good condition for a large harvest this year. Extensive preparations were made well in advance. Extra frames, supers, foundations, etc., were prepared, and additional facilities for storage provided; but the bees refused to gather honey. This is admitted to be no fault of the bees as they are keen enough to work when there are supplies of nectar available. The clover fields suffered from the cold and wet weather of early spring. The May beetle, which was unusually abundant this year, fed largely on the honey-producing trees and cut off part of the fruit bloom with the result that the bees, no matter how extensive their pasture area, found their field of operation limited and their work cut short.

The same story is told by beekeepers over a wide stretch of country. The apiaries have manifested conditions of unhappiness. The bees instead of multiplying their numbers, killed off the drones; instead of going early into the pastures the workers were like laborers on a strike, they hung about the yards all day long; instead of making wax and getting ready for a harvest of honey the colonies organized bands of robbers and declared war on one another. Each colony mounted outposts daily and doubled their lines when the sun was shining. If a stranger walked into a yard he quickly received notice that his presence was not desired. If the attendant happened to open a hive during the day he immediately had a fierce fight on his hands. If a bee came from the fields with a load of nectar she had to run the gauntlet of an army of banditti and was often rescued only with difficulty by her friends who were on guard. Such are the conditions in scores of bee yards today, conditions of unhappiness and often of terrible war, because of the scarcity of food. The bees are very human when it comes to living in an atmosphere of affection and good will under adverse circumstances.

A prominent beekeeper of western Ontario, who lives in an alsike clover district, says that he will not be able to pay expenses this year. He thinks he will be fortunate indeed if his losses do not aggregate hundreds of dollars before the harvest of 1915 arrives. Another successful beekeeper says that he has so far received very few pounds of honey even from the strongest colonies, while many of the weaker colonies will have to be fed.

Allowances.

"Of course I admit your son is extravagant. But you must make allowances; he's young."

"That's all right, but the more allowances I make the quicker he blows 'em."

To Help Settlers.

The Canada Gazette states that, owing to the widespread failure of crops in the Moose Jaw, Swift Current, Maple Creek, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge land districts, it has become necessary for numbers of the settlers to leave their lands for the purpose of securing employment, and the intervention of the Government has also become necessary to provide such settlers with work, and in some instances with immediate relief, in order to prevent hardship to themselves and their families.

The Government has, therefore, decided that the time of all homesteaders in these districts spent in employment elsewhere this year shall be counted as if they performed the residence duties.

LITTLE DAMAGE AT ANTWERP

But Populace Has Fled and Streets Are Deserted

MERCHANDISE RUINED

London, Oct. 22.—A correspondent of the Associated Press, writing from Antwerp, says that as he drove through miles of the streets of Antwerp the city semed to have suffered less from the bombardment than had been believed. Indications of damage wrought by the German shells were observed in all quarters of the city, but the destruction was usually confined to individual houses at widely scattered intervals, the great mass of intervening buildings being untouched.

At the German headquarters it was said this fact was due to the definite plan of the Germans to convince Antwerp with a minimum of damage that the city was at the mercy of their guns. The heavy 12 and 16-inch guns, it was asserted, were not used against Antwerp proper, but shells from the smaller mortars were dropped throughout the city, a few in each section, until every quarter had been systematically visited. The cathedral of Notre Dame, the pride of Antwerp, had a hole eight or ten feet in diameter in one transept window, and in an adjoining wall thirty feet above the floor. Otherwise this edifice was not damaged.

The artillery park of the Germans before Antwerp was stronger than was generally known. In addition to their widely heralded 16-inch mortars and a large number of 12-inch siege guns, they had two Austrian automobile batteries of 12 guns, which made the victory at Antwerp an Austro-German one.

Havoc Wrought in Forts.

The effect of the big guns at Antwerp's outer fortifications was more striking than at Liege. Two armoured turrets at Ft. Wavre-St. Catherine were put out of action with a single shot, their steel beds being broken in two and the heavy masses of metal hurled five or six yards away. In another fort the concrete embankment was pierced like an eggshell and the steel turret uprooted. Still another turret was completely upended and lies with its base pointing skyward and its gun buried beneath.

Behind Fort Waelhem, where a 12-inch shell penetrated the magazine, a heavy steam engine, which furnished power for the light plant was blown 20 yards from its base. The entire top of the fort here was torn off, and 60 men of the garrison are said to have been buried beneath the debris.

A Dead City.

Antwerp is a dead city. The populace has fled, and the streets are deserted. Many of the houses which were demolished by the German shell fire are still smoking. Scenes of destruction are to be witnessed in the warehouse district along the river bank. In addition to wrecked buildings, piles of packing cases lie broken open, and their contents strewn about the streets. Millions of dollars' worth of merchandise have been ruined in this district.

IMPROVEMENTS FOR THE MARKET

Something Definite to be Decided in the Near Future

At the meeting of the Board of Works last evening Mayor Buller brought about discussion as to what could be done to beautify the outside market. His Worship was of the opinion that the square should be regraded so that the water would run off to the curbs. Ald. Duncan stated that he and the City Engineer had been working on the project and something definite will be decided on in the near future. As stated previously there is a possibility of building a concrete walk through the centre of the square and have rigs bearing farm products stationed on either side of this walk.

CHARGES TO BE RE-OPENED

R. B. Rogers Gets Another Hearing of His Case

When R. B. Rogers was deposed as resident engineer on the Trent Canal here, some years ago, the commission acted upon the report of Mr. H. Holgate, C.E.

Mr. Rogers has tried several times to have the charges reopened claiming that they were untrue.

He has at last succeeded in being able to have the government appoint some one to investigate the charges laid against him.

Mr. C. H. Keefer, past president of the Canadian Association of Civil Engineers, has been appointed to go into the matter and determine if the charges were justifiable or not. Mr. Keefer is at present in the city, and is going over the work constructed under Mr. Roger's supervision.

WORDS HAVE WINGS, SLANDER IS SOCIAL BLOOD-POISONING

Don't Believe all You Hear Concerning Your Neighbor Says Dr. Gordon in Discussing Mischief Makers — Large Congregations at St. Paul's and Murray Street — American Marriages Subject To-night

"It is not wrong to talk about people if you talk about them in the right way. But let me warn you—words have wings. There is nothing so swift as slander. It is social blood-poisoning."

These words were addressed to an audience that occupied all the accommodation at St. Paul's church last night. The speaker was Dr. Gordon. It is evident Dr. Gordon is being appreciated by the people of this city. Last evening at 7.30 the church was comfortably filled and 15 minutes later the edifice would hold no more.

The selections rendered by Mr. Hesselberg, the Russian master pianist, were a "Russian Polonaise," an original composition, the "Trocadero" march, and one of Chopin's Nocturnes (Emajar). As these gatherings consist chiefly of the "people" and not "musicians," Hesselberg has wisely decided to offer music of a popular character, things that even the uneducated in music can easily understand. So much has been said of this eminent's artist's mastery of the keyboard, that criticism would be impossible and praise unnecessary. Every one in that vast audience which filled St. Paul from door to pit hung breathlessly on each note sounded, and congratulated themselves upon the opportunity of hearing within their own city such an artist.

The main solo for to-night will be Liszt's great "Hungarian Battle March."

Mr. Greenlaw, the noted singer, has certainly touched the hearts of the people. He sang five different selections during the two meetings, and at the close of the last meeting the audience seemed to sit with the expectation of having him produce another selection. This evening Mr. Greenlaw sings the great "Crucifixion Song," also the "Shining Way," to the tune of "Annie Laurie," and the selection entitled "I Love Him," to the tune of "Old Black Joe." The accommodation of these plantation songs to sacred purposes is most highly appreciated by the average congregation.

Magistrate D. W. Dumble, Esq., K.C., delivered a very appropriate address, and the Rev. E. E. Johnson lead in prayer.

The following is a brief outline of the address delivered by Dr. Gordon in St. Paul's Presbyterian church last evening:

"A nation is known by its architecture. An individual is known by his language. Cromwell discovered that the word of a Quaker was better than the bond of the average soldier. That is the best church which produces the best type of character. Character is the best expression of a man's creed. A man's words are a part, a vital part, of a man's character. The human soul seeks for expression. There are many forms of expression. Laughter is the most natural form of expression; beauty, the most acceptable; music, the most universal; architecture the most dignified and impressive; eloquence, the most moving and convincing; literature, the most enduring; painting and sculpture, the forms which are classic; but the oldest and most comprehensive form of human expression is—language.

Talk the Right Way.

"Mark you! It is not wrong to talk about people if you talk about them in the right way. But let me warn you—words have wings! The Persians have a proverb to this effect: 'The unspoken word is your slave—the spoken word is your master.' There is nothing so swift as slander. It is social blood-poisoning. A friend of mine, a Toronto physician of great skill and popularity, one day, during a surgical operation, scratched his finger with a tainted instrument. In less than two weeks he was in his grave. But slander is faster than that! They have just discovered a branch of the 'Black Hand' society in the United States, but there are social mischief makers who belong to a blacker society than the one indicated. In a recent novel a certain Dr. Packthread is thus described: 'He could whisper away a character by an innocent interrogation—he could destroy a high reputation by a shrug of the shoulders—he could assassinate a soul by silence, when silence became the strongest instrument.' What a garland to weave for the brow of fiendishness!

Four Discounts.

"Friend, do not believe all you hear concerning your neighbor. Remember the 'four discounts' recommended by Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage. First, a discount of twenty-five per cent. for exaggeration. Second, a discount of twenty-five per cent. for the spirit of gossip. Third, a discount of twenty-five per cent. for the pressure of overpowering temptation. Fourth, a discount of twenty-five per cent. to cover your ignorance of the facts on the other side of the case. Richard Baxter wrote these words in his advanced years: "I see that good men are not so good as I once thought they were, nor bad men as bad as I once imagined." They said concerning Stephen Girard that he was mean, close, shrewd and exceedingly economical, but this same strange and eccentric captain of industry was planning a great college for the youth of America.

Conversation, a Test.

"And finally, in this connection, let it be distinctly understood that conversation is a test of character. Goethe said concerning Schiller: "I never heard him utter an insignificant word.' The painting reveals the artist, the book reveals the writer, the poem reveals the thinker, the building reveals the architect, the machine reveals the inventor, and conversation reveals the individual. Remember that words are the best remembered symbols in use. Charles M. Alexander, sitting in the office of William T. Stead, exclaimed: 'I have often wondered how you interviewed people!' But he himself was being interviewed at that very moment. One of the greatest journalistic artists in the world was focusing his camera on the renowned singer. In two weeks every reader of the Review of Reviews would be scanning Stead's description of the co-laborer and companion of Tory and Chapman. Every man is being 'interviewed' every day by somebody."

Last evening at a quarter to ten o'clock Dr. Gordon answered the following questions, in the Murray St. Baptist church. The church was crowded to the doors, even at that late hour. This evening he will answer a number of questions in St. Paul's church prior to the delivery of his address.

1. Is it right to defraud a corporation that is defrauding you?
2. What is the worst sin which a person can commit?
3. How would you treat people who slander you? Speak well of them.
4. Is it possible to love a person whom you do not like?
5. Is a beautiful face the sign of a superior mind?
6. Should a girl work for a living who has no need to?
7. Would you advise breaking off an engagement because a young man has a weakness for strong drink?
8. What is the characteristic weakness in a woman's character?
9. If you were a woman would you favor woman's suffrage?
10. What is the most difficult mental task for a young man to perform? Concentration.
11. Should an unconverted person be permitted to sing in a church choir?
12. Is the day of emotional religion passing?
13. What is the highest test of a preacher's success?

Want Belgian Settlers For Territory Opened By Grand Trunk Pacific

Transportation experts agree that the European war will result in a rush of settlers to Canada and a special effort is being made to obtain for Central British Columbia a large number of Belgian farmers driven from their homes by events in the war area. These people are known to be good farmers and very thrifty people, and will be a great factor in developing the agricultural possibilities of this section of the Dominion, recently thrown open to cultivation by the completion of the Grand Trunk Railway. It is planned to settle a large tract in the Stuart River district with Belgians and their families. It is expected that after the war is over a large colony will be placed on the land there, as well as in many other valleys along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific in Northern and Central British Columbia.

Russians Crush Germans

Long, Sustained Struggle Along the Vistula Results in a Severe Repulse For the Germans Moving on Warsaw and Russians Are Advancing Their Entire Front.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 22.—The Russian official statement issued last night says:

"The German troops which had occupied the roads leading to Warsaw, in the region north of the River Pilitza, have been repulsed and are now in full retreat, leaving their wounded on the battlefield.

"The Germans have abandoned the positions they had fortified in advance.

"The Russian troops are energetically advancing along the whole front.

"The enemy is still occupying the left bank of the Vistula, south of the Pilitza, and as far as Sandomir.

"The Russians who had been gallantly holding for eight days the region of Kozenitz, under most unfavorable conditions and heavy artillery fire, achieved considerable success on Oct. 20, and their position on the left bank of the Vistula is now secure.

"The attempt by the Austrians to cross the River San below Przemysl have been checked, and the Russians are assuming the offensive there.

"In the region south of Przemysl are found the remains of all the Austrian corps defeated in prior fights in Galicia. Here the Russian troops are energetically checking the advance of numerous bodies of the enemy.

"There is no essential change in East Prussia. We are at present in touch with the enemy on a front covering over 400 versts (about 267 miles) from the lower Bzoura to the slopes of the Carpathian Mountains."

ENGLISH CHANNEL ABLAZE WITH LIGHTS OF WARSHIPS

Newspaper Correspondent Says British Fleet Has Taken Part in the Battle Which is Now Raging on the Coast of Belgium—Big German Retreat is Now in Sight Declares Times' Correspondent.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—In despatches from various newspaper correspondents to-day the reports of the fighting in Belgium and northern France graphically recount the stirring events of the past two days. One correspondent from an unnamed place on the French coast states that under the glare of searchlights the British navy joins in the battle still raging. The entire Channel is ablaze with vivid gleams from the English coast to Calais.

The London Times' correspondent in France says: "The news from the front is entirely satisfactory, and there are unconfirmed reports of successes in the interior, which, if true, point to a German retreat on a larger scale than anticipated.

"Uhlans for the moment have ceased troubling the peaceful villagers. The enemy's rush for the narrow seas has landed him in difficulties which will require all the strategy of the German General Staff to surmount. Meantime the battle of Aisne still drags on its weary course, although serious fighting has practically ceased."

In The London Chronicle Martin H. Donohoe, telegraphing from northern France, says: The Germans, advancing along the coast, made a desperate attempt to break through Dunkirk to Calais and the Straits of Dover. The fighting was exceptionally severe. The Germans returned to the attack three times, and ultimately were driven back along the whole line.

Another correspondent, after deleted details, tells of the Germans being driven back towards the coast and of heavy British losses. The Germans fire on the white flag and Red Cross discriminately.

THE FIGHT AT DAME EUROPA'S SCHOOL

Showing How the German Boy Thrashed the French Boy and How the English Boy Looked On Introductory Note.

Through the kindness of Mr. Hone, B.A., of the Collegiate staff we are able to reproduce the following article from an old pamphlet. The pamphlet is without date, but was presumably written shortly after the close of the Franco-Prussian War and treats the European situation following that war in the guise of an allegory. It is exceptionally interesting to note how well the future consequences the German blood and iron policy have ben foretold and how truly has Britain's position been cast in the group of European nations.

It may be said that the tenor of this pamphlet was to the effect that Britain should have intervened and prevented Germany from pursuing her schemes of territorial expansion at the expense of France and Denmark. This would make an interesting study in the light of the present war. It seems to condemn heavily the policy of "splendid isolation," which Gladstone favored. However Bismark's policy was very different from that pursued in Germany during the last few years. Bismark made friendship with Britain a cardinal principle. Sir John Teniel's famous cartoon "Dropping the Pilot" on the occasion of Bismark's retirement indicated that a new policy doubtless the logical consequence of Bismark's was to be inaugurated. Events seem to show that German statesmen saw twenty-five years farther than British statesmen.

Two or three names in the article requires explanation. Louis refers to Napoleon III. Emperor of France at the time of the Franco Prussian War. William is either the present Emperor of Germany or the father of the present ruler. Aleck is Alexander of Russia and John is John Bull, England. Mark refers to Prince Bismark the German Chancellor. Joseph is the Emperor of Austria. Constantine refers to Turkey or Constantinople when France and England fought Russia in the Crimea. Nicholas refers to Russia. Billy refers to Wm. E. Gladstone. Ben refers to Benjamin Disraeli.

Mrs. Europa kept a Dame School, where Boys were well instructed in modern languages, fortification, and the use of the globes. Her connection and credit were good, for there was no other school where so sound and liberal an education could be obtained. Many of her old pupils held Masterships in other important establishments, two of which may be mentioned as consisting chiefly of dark swarthy youths, decidedly stupid and backward for their years; while a third was a large modern Academy full of rather cocky fellows, who talked big about the institutions of their school, and talked, for the most part, through their nose.

The lads at Mrs. Europa's were of all sorts and sizes—good Boys and bad Boys, sharp Boys and slow Boys, industrious Boys and idle Boys, peacable Boys, and pugnacious Boys, well behaved Boys, vulgar Boys; and of course the good old dame could not possibly manage them all. So, as she did not like the masters to be prying about the playground out of school, she chose among the biggest and most trustworthy of her pupils five monitors, who had authority over the rest of the Boys, and kept the unruly ones in order. These five, at the time of which we are writing, were Louis, William, Aleck, and John.

* * *

If a dispute arose among any of the smaller Boys, the monitors had to examine into its cause, and if possible to settle it amicably. Should it be necessary to fight the matter out, they were to see fair play, stop the encounter when it had gone far enough, and at all times to uphold justice, and prevent tyranny and bullying.

The power thus placed in their hands was for the most part exercised with discretion, and to the manifest advantage of the school. Thumpery little quarrels were patched up, which might otherwise have led to the patching up of bruises and black eyes; and many a time when two little urchins had retired with their backers into a corner of the playground to fight about nothing at all, did the dreaded appearance of Master Louis or Master John put them to flight, or force them to shake hands. The worst of it was that some of the monitors themselves occasionally took to bullying, and then of course it became more than ever the duty of the rest to interfere. There lingered a tradition in the school of a terrific row in times past, when a monitor named Nicholas made a most unprovoked attack upon a quiet but very dirty little Boy called Constantine. John and Louis stuck up for the child boldly, and gave Nicholas such a thrashing that he never got over it, and soon afterwards left the school.

* * *

Each of the upper Boys at Dame Europa's had a little garden of his own, in a corner of the playground. The Boys took great interest in their gardens, and kept them very neatly. In some were grown flowers and fruit, in others mustard and cress or radishes, which the young cultivators would send to one another and take into Hall, to help down their bread and scrape at tea time. Every garden had in the middle of it an arbour, fitted up according to the taste and means of its owner. Louis had the prettiest arbour of all, like a grotto in fairy land, full of the most beautiful flowers and ferns, with a vine creeping over the roof, and a little fountain playing inside. John's garden was pretty enough, and more productive than any; owing its chief beauty, however, to the fact that it was an Island, separated from all the rest by a stream, between twenty and thirty feet wide. But his arbour was a mere tool-house, where he shut himself up almost all play time turning at his lathe, or making nets or sharpening knives, or cutting out boats to sail on the river. Still, John was fond of a holiday now and then; and when he was tired of slaving away in his own garden, he would punt himself across the brook, and pay a visit to his neighbor Louis, who was always cheerful and hospitable, and glad to see him. Many and many a happy hour did he spend in his friend's arbour, lying at full length on the soft moss, and eating grapes and drinking lemonade, and thinking how much pleasanter it was over there than in his own close misty shop, with its dirt and litter, and its eternal smell of tar, and nets, and shavings. Anyhow, thought Johnnis, I make more profit out of my garden than any of the other fellows, so I must put up with a few bad smells. For Dame Europa, by way of encouraging habits of industry, allowed the Boys to engage pretty extensively in commercial pursuits, and it was said that Master John, who had been working unusually hard of late, had sometimes trebled or quadrupled his half-yearly money out of the produce of his tool-house and garden.

* * *

By the side of Louis' domain was that of William, the biggest and strongest of all the monitors. He set up, however, for being a very studious and peaceable Boy, and made the rest of the school believe that he had never provoked a quarrel in his life. We was rather fond of singing psalms and carrying Testaments about in his pocket; and many of the Boys thought Master William a bit of a humbug. He was as proud as anybody of his garden, but he never went to work in it without casting envious eyes on two little flower beds which now belonged to Louis, but which ought by rights, to belong to him. Indeed it was notorious that in old days, before either Louis or William came to the school, one of Louis' predecessors in the garden had pulled up some stakes which served for a boundary, and cribbed a piece of his neighbor's ground. For a long while William had set his heart upon getting it back again; but he kept his wishes to himself, and nobody suspected that so good and religious a Boy could be guilty of coveting what was admitted by the whole school to be now the property of another. Only one Boy, his favorite fag, did William take into his confidence in the matter. This was a sharp shrewd lad named Mark, not over scrupulous in what he did, full of deep tricks and dodges, and so cunning that the old dame herself, though she had the eyes of a hawk, never could catch him out in anything absolutely wrong. To this smart youth William one day whispered his desires, as they sat together in the summer house smoking and drinking beer; for I am sorry to say that they both smoked and drank almost all their play time, though of course it was against the rules of the school.

* * *

"There is only one way to do it," said Mark. "If you want the flower beds you must fight Louis for them, and I believe you will lick him all to smash; but you must fight him alone."

"How do you mean?" replied William.

"I mean, you must take care that the other monitors don't interfere in the quarrel. If they do, they will be sure to go against you. Remember what a grudge Joseph owes you for the licking you gave him not long ago; and Aleck, though to be sure Louis took little Constantine's part against him in that great bullying row, is evidently beginning to grow jealous of your influence in the school. You see, old fellow, you have grown so much lately, and filled out so wonderfully, that you are getting really quite formidable. Why, I recollect the time when you were quite a little chap!"

"Yes," said William, turning up his eyes devoutly, "it has pleased Providence that I should be stout."

"I dare say, but it has not pleased the other monitors. And they were very angry, you know, when you took those little gardens belonging to some of the small Boys, and tacked them on to yours."

"But, my dear Mark, I did that by your own particular advice."

"Of course you did, and quite right too. The little beggars were not strong enough to work, and it was far better that you should look after their gardens for them, and give them a share of the produce.

All the same, no doubt it made the other monitors jealous, and I am not sure that the old Dame herself thought it quite fair."

"Did you ever find out, Mark, what he thought of it?" asked William, winking his left eye, and jerking his thumb over his left shoulder towards the island.

"Oh," answered Mark, with a scornful laugh, "never you mind him. He won't meddle with any body. He is a deal too busy in that filthy, dirty shop of his, making things to sell to the other Boys. Bah! it makes me sick to think how that place smells!" and the fastidious youth took a long draught of beer, by way of recalling some more agreeable sensations.

"He is an uncomomnly plucky fellow," said William, when they had smoked for a while in silence, "and as strong as a lion."

"As plucky and as strong as you please, my friend, but as lazy as ——," and here again Mark, being altogether at a loss for a simile, sought one at the bottom of the pewter. "Besides," he continued, when he had slaked his thirst, "he is never ready. Look what a precious mess he made of that affair with Nicholas. It was before you came, you know, but I recollect it well. Why, poor Johnnie had no shoes to fight in, and they had it out in the stoniest part of the playground, too, where his feet were cut to pieces. And then again he took it all so precious cool that he got late for breakfast in the morning, and had to fight on an empty stomach. Pluck and strength are all very well; but a fellow must eat and drink, and have a pair of decent shoes to stand up in."

"And why couldn't he get a pair of decent shoes?" asked William. "He has got heaps of money."

"Heaps upon heaps, but he wanted it for something else—to buy a new lathe, I think it was; and so he sat grinding away in his dirty shop, and thinking of nothing but saving up his sixpences and shillings."

"Then, my dear Mark, what do you advise me to do?"

"Ah, that is not so easy to say. Give me time to think, and when I have an idea, I will let you know. Only, whatever you do, take care to put Master Louis in the wrong. Don't pick a quarrel with him, but force him, by quietly provoking him, to pick a quarrel with you. Give out that you are still peaceably disposed, and carry your Testament about as usual. That will put old Dame Europa off her guard, and she will believe in you as much as ever. The rest you may leave to me; but, in the meantime, keep yourself in good condition; and, if you can hear of anyone in the town who gives lessons in bruising, just go to him and get put up to a few dodges. I know for a fact that Louis has been training hard, and exercising his fists, ever since you gave that tremendous thrashing to Joseph."

* * *

The bell now rang for afternoon school, and the two friends hastily smothered their cigars, and finished between them what was left of the beer. Mark ran off to the pump to wash his hands, which no amount of scrubbing would make decently clean, while William changed his coat and walked sedately across the playground, humming to himself, not in very good tune, a verse of the Old Hundredth Psalm.

An opportunity of putting their little plot into execution soon occurred. A garden became vacant, on the other side of Louis' little territory, which none of the Boys seemed much inclined to accept. It was a troublesome piece of ground, exposed to constant attacks of the town cads, who used to overrun it in the night, and pull up the newly-planted flowers. The cats, too, were fond of prowling about in it, and making havoc among the beds. Nobody bid for it, therefore, and it seemed to be going begging.

"Don't you think," said Mark one day to his friend and patron, "that your little cousin, the new Boy, might as well have that garden?"

"I don't see why he should not, if he wants it," replied William, by no means deep enough to understand what his faithful fag was driving at.

"It will be so nice for Louis, don't you see, to have William to keep him in check on one side, and William's little cousin to watch him on the other side," observed Mark innocently.

SMALL FRY FOR BOARD

Small Items of Business Dealt With by Works Committee

INVITED TO DINE

A meeting of the Board of Works was held last night there being present chairman Ald. Duncan, Mayor Buller, Ald. Saunders, Johnston, Green and McIntyre.

Bethune St. Sewer.

A letter was received from Dr. Park asking for sewer connection for the property on Bethune Street, north of Smith Street. He claimed that the city could secure a right of way. The communication was accompanied by a well signed petition. The matter was referred to the City Engineer and City Solicitor for immediate investigation.

Rubidge Street Sewer.

The Engineer was also authorized to look into the matter of extending the sewer on Rubidge Street between Murray and Brock Street. This request was put before the meeting by a letter from Mr. George Edmison.

Bad Sidewalk.

A letter from Dr. Greer brought to light the fact that the cement sidewalk in front of his property is in bad condition due to growth of trees. The matter was passed on to the Engineer.

Crossings.

Dean McColl had a communication before the meeting asking for a crossing in front of the Church of the Immaculate Conception. It was unanimously decided to grant this request and have the work done immediately. It was also the pleasure of the Board to construct a crossing for Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald's residence on Smith Street.

Poor Drainage.

The Campbell Flour Mill Co. wrote to the Board complaining that Dalhousie St. was in very poor condition, so much so that the water is not being drained off satisfactorily. The matter will be attended to immediately.

Pole to be Removed.

Mr. Parsons was ordered to wait on the Utilities Commission and urge that the Hydro pole on the corner of Simcoe and Bethune Streets be removed so as to permit the G.T.R. to move the siding, as requested by the City Council.

Council to Dine.

Mayor Buller reported that G. N. Graham, proprietor of the Empress Hotel had extended an invitation for the city officials to have a luncheon at the new hotel some evening. The date to be set by the council. The invitation will be accepted.

Just One Day's Pay Means $141,737.64 for Those Dependent on Canada's Fighting Men

The voluntary contribution made by officers and employees of the Canadian Pacific Railway to the Canadian Patriotic Fund of the one-day's pay in the month of September has amounted to the fine total of $140,316.71, to which must be added the sum of $1,421.93 contributed in the same way from the Dominion Atlantic Railway, the line owned by the company in Nova Hcotia.

In view of the fact that this contribution was collected from all districts served by the railway from Atlantic to Pacific, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy has written to Ottawa asking that credit in the distribution of this sum should be given to the various provinces in the following proportions: British Columbia, $18,000; Alberta, $18,000; Saskatchewan, $15,000; Manitoba, $28,000; Ontario, $28,000; Quebec, $28,000; New Brunswick, $5,316.71, and to Nova Scotia the sum already quoted of $1,421.93.

The 'one-day's pay" idea initiated by the Canadian Pacific has proved one of the most fertile fields for the Patriotic Fund, as it was adopted by a large number of firms as the most practical method of enabling all classes to contribute according to their means.

This contribution is entirely separate from the sum $100,000 voted by the directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway to the fund, and to the large sums given by directors and officers in their individual capacity. During the campaign week for the Montreal branch of the fund over $100,000 was collected in Windsor Street Station ovr and above the contributions under the one-day's pay scheme.

VARENNES.

(From the Boston Globe.)

Varennes, mentioned in recent despatches as having been occupied by troops of the German left wing, is fast increasing in the present conflict the fame which it first acquired as the result of an incident of the French Revolution.

On June 20, 1791, Louis XVI., a prisoner to all intents and purposes, whose situation had become intolerably irksome, succeeded in quitting Paris in a travelling berlin, accompanied by his children. All were disguised.

They reached St. Menehould in safety, but there the King was recognized by Drouet, the son of the Postmaster, who, mounting his horse, pursued the royal fugitives to Varennes, raised an alarm and caused them to be captured when they already thought themselves out of danger.

Louis XVI. was conducted back to Paris, maintained as a constitutional monarch for a while, and combined attacks upon the revolutionists of France by other nations of Europe were considerably delayed.

Once before, in the course of the war of 1914, Varennes has been in the hands of the Germans. At the time of the previous occupation the headquarters of the Crown Prince's army was established there.

THE FIGHT AT DAME EUROPA'S SCHOOL

"Ah, to be sure," exclaimed William, beginning to wake up, "so it will, very nice indeed. Mark, you are a sly dog."

"I should say, if you paid Louis the compliment to propose it, that it is such a delicate little attention as he would never forget—even if you withdrew the proposal afterwards."

"Just so, my Boy, and then we shall have to fight. But look here, won't the other chaps say that I have provoked the quarrel?"

"Not if we manage properly," was the reply. "They are sure to fix the cause of dispute on Louis, rather than on you. You are such a peaceably Boy, you know; and he has always been fond of a shindy."

So Dame Europa was asked to assign the vacant garden to William's little cousin. "Well," said she, "if Louis does not object, who will be his nearest neighbour, he may have it."

"But I do object, ma'am," cried Louis. "I very particularly object. I don't want to be hemmed in on all sides by William and his cousins. They will be walking through my garden to pay each other visits, and perhaps throwing balls to one another right across my lawn."

"Oh, but you might be sure that I should do nothing unfair," said William, reproachfully, "I have never attacked anybody," he continued, fumbling in his pocket for the Testament, and bringing out by mistake a baccy pouch and a flask of brandy instead, which, however, he was fortunately quick enough to conceal before the Dame had caught sight of them.

"That's all in my eye," said Louis. "I don't believe in your piety. Come, take your dear little relation off, and give him one of the snug corners that you bagged the other day from poor Christian."

"Oh, Louis," began William, looking as meek as possible, "you know I never bragged anything. I am a domestic peace-loving Boy——"

"Very much so, indeed," cried Louis with a sneer. "It's lessons in peacemaking, I suppose, that you have been taking from the 'Brummagem Bruiser' for the last six months or more — the fellow that bragged to a friend of mine that, though you used to be the clumsiest fellow he ever set eyes on, he had made you as sharp as a needle with your fists!"

"A friend of yours, you said, did you, my dear? Perhaps that was the 'Sheffield Slasher' who told my fag Mark that he had made your arms strong enough to threw a bull or a stone more than a hundred yards."

"Come, come," interposed the Dame, "I can't listen to such angry words. You five monitors must settle the matter quietly among yourselves; but no fighting, mind. The day for that sort of thing is quite gone by." And the old lady toddled off, and left the Boys alone.

"I wouldn't press it, Bill, if I were you," said John, in his deep gruff voice, looking out of his shop window on the other side of the water. "I think it's rather hard lines for Louis, I do indeed."

"Always ready to oblige you, my dear John," said William; and so the new Boy's claim to the garden was withdrawn.

"What shall I do now, Mark?" asked William, turning to his friend. "It seems to me that there is an end of it."

"Not a bit," was the reply. "Louis is still as savage as a bear. He'll break out directly, you see if he don't.

"I have been grossly insulted," began Louis at last, in a towering passion, "and I shall not be satisfied unless William promises me never to make any such underhand attempts to get the better of me again."

"Tell him to be hanged," whispered Mark.

"You be —— no" said William, recollecting himself, "I never use bad language. My friend," he continued, "I cannot promise you anything of the kind."

"Then I shall lick you till you do, you psalm-singing humbug!" shouted Louis.

"Come on!" said William, lifting up his hand as if to commend his cause to heaven, and looking sanctimoniously out of the whites of his eyes. And it was well for him that Louis did not take him at his word; for, while one hand was lifted up, the other was encumbered with a bundle of good books which he was carrying to his summer house, and it would not have required much to knock him down. But Louis did not feel quite well. He had taken a blue pill that morning, and he put off the attack therefore till he should meet his adversary again.

Meanwhile, by Mark's advice, William ran off to the Brummagem Bruiser, who put him up to all the latest dodges, and exercised him in the noble art to such good purposes that on his first encounter with Louis after breakfast the next morning he hit out a crushing blow from his shoulder and knocked his enemy down. Louis was soon on his legs again, and he too did good execution with his fists; but he was clearly outmatched, and at the end of the first round had been punished pretty severely.

"Hot work, isn't it my Boy?" said William, chaffing him as he mopped the perspiration from his steaming forehead. "This is what you call your Baptism of fire, I suppose, aye?" Then he wrote home to his mother, on the back of a half-penny post card, so that all the letter carriers might see how pious he was:—"Dear Mamma, I am fighting for my Fatherland, as you know I call my garden. It is a fine name and creates sympathy. Glorious news! Aided by Providence, I have hit Louis in the eye. Thou may'st imagine his feelings. What wonderful events has Heaven thus brought about? Your affectionate Son, William." Then he sang a hymn, and went on with the second round.

Meanwhile, the other monitors looked quietly on, not knowing exactly what to do.

"Oughtn't I to interfere?" asked John, addressing one of his favorite fags.

"No," said Billy, who was head fag, and twisted Johnnie round his finger. "You just sit where you are. You will only make a mess of it, and offend both of them. Give out that you are a 'neutral.'"

"Neutral!" growled John, "I hate neutrals. It seems to me a cold-blooded cowardly thing to sit by and see two big fellows smash each other all to pieces about nothing at all. They are both in the wrong, and they ought not to fight. Let me go in at them.

"No, no," said Bobby, a clever fair-haired Boy, who kept John's accounts, and took care of his money. "You really can't afford it; and besides, you've got no clothes to go in. There is not a fellow in the school who wouldn't laugh at you, if you stood up in his garden. Sit still and grind away, old chap, and make some more money, and be thankful that you live on an island, and can take things easily.

"Well," said John sulkily, "I don't half like it, though certainly my clothes are not very respectable, and there is no time now to mend them. But look here, Bob; I mean to go across and help to sponge the poor beggars, if they get mauled."

"You may do that, and welcome," replied Bobby. "You will make no enemies that way, and it may cost you perhaps eighteenpence in ointment and plaster. But bless you, Johnnie, if you were to rig yourself out well enough to hold your own against Louis or William, you would have to fork out a ten-pound note or more."

* * *

John went on with his work in rather a grumpy humour, for he had always been looked up to as the leading Boy in the school, and he did not like to play second fiddle. He felt sure that if he had been half so natty and well got up as he used to be, he might have stopped the fight in a moment. For the next half hour he cursed Billy and Bobby, and all the other little sneaks who had wormed themselves into favour with him, by teaching him to save money. "Hang the money!" growled Johnnie to himself; I'd give up half my shop to get my old prestige back again." But it was too late now. Nevertheless he had all his own way about the sponging, and certainly he did behave well there. At the end of every round that was fought, he got across the stream, and bathed poor Louis' head, for he wanted help the most, and gave him sherry and water out of his own flask. "I am so very sorry for you, my dear Louis," said he, as the Boy, more dead than alive, struggled to his feet again.

"Thank you kindly, John, said Louis; "but," he added, looking somewhat reproachfully at his friend, "why don't you separate us? Don't you see that this great brute is too many for me? I had no idea that he could fight like that."

"What can I do?" said John. "You began it, you know, and you really must fight for it. I have no power."

"So it seems," replied Louis. "Ah, there was a time—well, thank you kindly, John, for—the sticking plaster."

"Come on!" shouted William, thirsting for more blood.

"Vive la guerre!" cried poor Louis, rushing blindly at his foe. Well and nobly he fought, but he could not stand his ground. When he did it, indeed, he hit to some purpose; but seldom could he reach out far enough to do much damage. Foot by foot and yard by yard he gave way, till at last he was forced to take refuge in his arbour, from the window of which he threw stones at his enemy, to keep him back from following.

Louis was plainly in the wrong. He ought to have calculated the other Boy's strength before attacking him, and he deserved a licking for his rashness. But he had had his licking now; and when William, who talked so big about his peaceable disposition, and declared that he only wanted to defend his "fatherland," chased him right across the garden, trampling over beds and borders on his way, and then swore that he would break down his beautiful summer-house, and bring Louis on his knees, everybody felt that the other monitors ought to interfere. But not a foot would they stir. Aleck looked on from a safe distance, wondering which of the combatants would be tired first. Joseph stood shaking in his shoes, not daring to say a word, for fear William should turn round upon him, and punch his head again; and John sat in his shop, grinding away like a nigger at a new rudder and a pair of oars which he was cutting out for Louis' boat, in case he wanted to take advantage of the brook—for which service Louis would pay him handsomely and William abuse him cordially.

* * *

"I can't help it," said John, apologetically, "I'll make a rudder and some oars for you too, and a boat besides, if you want one—that is, of course, if you will pay me well."

"But I don't want one," answered William angrily. "I have got no water to float it in, as you very well know." By which it will appear that John did not make many friends by his neutrality. "And just look here," continued William, "do you know where these cuts on my forehead came from? Why, from stones which you pitched across the water for Louis to throw at me."

"Can't help it, Bill; it is the law of neutrality."

"Neutrality, indeed! I call it Brutality." And so William went across the garden again, leaving Johnnie at his work—of which, however, he felt thoroughly ashamed.

* * *

"Come and help a fellow, John," cried Louis in despair from his arbour. "I don't ask you to remember the days we have spent in here together, when you have been sick of your own shop. But you might do something for me, now that I am in such a desperate fix, and don't know which way to turn."

"I am very sorry, Louis," said John, "but what can I do? It is no pleasure to me to see you thrashed. On the contrary it would pay me much better to have a near neighbor well off and cheerful than crushed and miserable. Why don't you give in, Louis? It is of no mortal use to go on. He will make friends directly if you will give back the two little strips of garden; and if you don't, he will only smash your arbour to pieces, or keep you shut up there all dinner time, and starve you out. Give in, old fellow. There's no disgrace in it. Everybody says how pluckily you have fought."

"Give in!" sneered Louis, that is all the comfort you have for a fellow, is it? Give in! why, would you give in, if that great brute was in front of your shop, swearing that he would break it down? No disgrace, indeed! No, I don't think there is any disgrace in anything that I have done; but though my dear dear arbour that I have spent so many many weeks in building should be pulled down about my ears, and every flower in my garden be rooted up, I would not change places with you, John, sitting there sleek and safe— no, not for all the gold that ever was coined! Give in, indeed! Mon dieu! that I should ever have heard such a word as that come across our little stream!"

* * *

So Johnnie began to discover that, if on-lookers see the most of the game, they do not always get the most enjoyment out of it. But the bell now rang for dinner, and he followed the rest of the Boys with some anxiety, not being quite easy in his mind as to the account he would have to give to Mrs. Europa of what had been going on.

"Louis and William are very late today," observed the Dame, when dinner was half over. "Does any one know where they are?" And then bit by bit she learned from some of the Boys sitting near her the whole story.

"And pray, John, why did you not separate them?" demanded the Dame.

"Please, ma'am," answered Johnnie. "I was a neutral."

"A what, sir?" said she.

"A neutral, ma'am."

"Just precisely what you had no business to be," she returned. "You were placed in authority in order that you might act, not that you might stand aloof from acting. Any baby can do that. I might as well have made little Georgie here a monitor, if I had meant him to have nothing to do. Neutral, indeed! Neutral is just a fine name for Coward. Besides, there is no such thing. You must take one side or the other, do what you will. Now, which side did you take, I wonder?"

A titter ran round the room, and the little Boys began to whisper to one another something which appeared to be in their small estimation an excellent joke. It was good fun to them to see a monitor badgered, even if they should get paid out for it afterwards.

"What are you saying?" said the Dame. "Both sides, aye? Well, and how did you manage that, Master John?"

There was some more tittering and whispering and shuffling about on the forms, and then a chorus of voices said, "Please, 'em, he sucked up to both of them."

* * *

"Just what 'neutrals' always do," said Mrs. Europa; "sucked up to both, I suppose, and pleased neither. Ah, no doubt," she continued, gradually gathering information, "offended Louis by always preaching at him that he was in the wrong; and offended William by supplying Louis with stones. Now, I tell you what it is John. I have long watched your career with pain, and have seen how you are content to sacrifice everything—duty, and influence, and honour,—for the sake of putting by a few paltry shillings. You have been badly advised. You have chosen to have about you a set of fags who are no credit to anybody, simply because they make better bargains for you in the things you sell to the other Boys; and now you see the consequences. If such fellows as Ben and Hugh had been your fags, you know very well that this disgraceful scene would never have taken place at all. You would have been sufficiently well trained and well equipped to command the respect of the other monitors, and the two rivals would not have dared to come to blows. There was a time when, if you so much as held up your finger, the whole school would tremble. Nobody trembles now. Nobody cares one farthing what you think or say. And why? because you have grown a sloven and a screw, and Boys despise both the one and the other. You ought to have prevented the fight from the very first. Failing this, you ought, in conjunction with the other Monitors, to have stepped in the moment the Boys had proved their relative strength, and struck a fair balance between them. Instead of doing so, you sit coolly in your shop, supplying the means of carrying on the fight, and coining a few wretched coppers out of your schoolfellows' blows and wounds. You have been a bad friend to both of them. Well, some day, perhaps, you may want friends yourself. When you do, I hope you may find them. Take care that William, the peaceable unaggressive Boy, does not contrive (as I fully believe he will contrive) to get a footing on the river, where he can keep a boat, and then one fine morning take your pretty island by surprise."

* * *

"It was Louis' own fault, ma'am," urged John. "He began it all. William was only defending his Fatherland."

"Defending his Grandmother!" retorted the Dame, contemptuously. "It looks very like self-defence, to chase a Boy half across the playground and threaten to kick down his arbour. Very like self-defence to train hard for six months, and then purpose something which is certain to create a row. And although Louis has been in the wrong, he has also been severely punished, and it is time that he should be relieved. What! Are those who make mistakes never to be helped out of them? Is it any the less incumbent on the strong to protect the weak, because the weak has got himself into a mess by his own fault? However, there is some excuse for William, who is half mad with the fever of success; but there is no excuse for you, who have sat still in cold blood and looked on. You have abused the trust committed to you as one of the five monitors of this school, and your office shall be taken from you——"

"Please 'em," said a chorus of little boys together, "please 'em, do let him off this time. He was so kind to Louis and William when they were bad. He brought them water, and bathed their faces, and stopped the bleeding, and did all sorts of things for them. Please 'em, let him off?"

* * *

"Well," said the Dame, much affected, "kindness to the wounded shall plead his cause this once, and I will think of some punishment less severe. For I have hopes of Johnnie even yet, that he will rise to a sense of his high position in the school; and learn that duties cannot be coolly ignored, because they are disagreeable; that he who shirks the responsibility of doing right, does in very deed and truth do wrong; that the true test of greatness is the ability to grapple with great difficulties; that it is but a sorry thing to boast of bravery and skill and power, if, just at the very instant you are called upon to act, your resources fail you, and you whine out the miserable excuse that 'you don't exactly see how you can interfere.' If, indeed, such an excuse be allowed to stand—if it be really true that the head and champion of the school is thoroughly beaten by circumstances—utterly at a loss, at some critical moment, what is the right thing to do; let him confess at once that he is unequal to his place—that he is not the Boy we took him for—that his courage has been overrated, and his reputation as a hero too cheaply earned; that for all his vaunted influence with others, he is too weak to stay an unrighteous strife—to avert a storm of cruel, savage blows—to spare the infliction of wounds which will lie gaping and unhealed for long long years to come, bearing on their ghastly face a bitter hatred for the foe that dealt them, and contempt for the 'neutral' friend who looked calmly on."

BATTLE ON LEFT WING

Allies Hold Everywhere Says Paris War Office Bulletin

PARIS, Oct. 22—The official statement issued by the French War Office last night reports a violent battle on the left wing, with the allied forces holding their ground everywhere. The text follows:

"On our left wing from the North Sea as far as La Bassee, on the several fronts from Nieuport to Dixmude, from Ypres to Menin, and from Warneton to La Bassee a violent battle has been fought during the whole day.

"According to the latest advices the allied forces were holding their ground everywhere.

"There is nothing to report regarding the centre or the right wing.

"Russia—The German army which had advanced on Warsaw was forced yesterday (Tuesday) to beat a precipitate retreat, the enemy abandoning the positions which he had established for defence. The Russians are in pursuit and have captured a number of prisoners."

The official communique, issued yesterday afternoon, was notably laconic:

"During the day (Tuesday) the attacks of the enemy were particularly violent at Nieuport, Dixmude and La Bassee. They were all repulsed by the allied armies with great energy.

"At all other points the situation is without any notable change."

Gulf of Smyrna Closed.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 22. — A despatch appears in The Frankfurter Zeitung from Constantinople to the effect that the Porte has closed the Gulf of Smyrna to warships, and that all foreign ambassadors have been notified of this action. The Dardanelles, controlled by Turkey, have been closed to all shipping for several weeks.

Canada Proud of Tie.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22. — Canada's pride in being a part of Great Britain, a nation which "keeps sacred its covenants and maintains its plighted word," was asserted last night by Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, Chief Justice of Canada, in an address here before the American Bar Association on "The Constitution of Canada."

England's Oldest Theater.

The village theater at Little [illegible] may be the oldest theater in use in England, but it is not the oldest in existence. Visitors in Dorchester can find there a wonderfully preserved Roman theater, designed, it has been estimated, to seat about 13,000 people and artfully arranged to have the sun behind the majority of them for the greater part of the day. And this theater has been used in comparatively modern times, for in 1705 10,000 people (alleged to be civilized) gathered there to witness the burning of a woman who had poisoned her husband. —London Spectator.

Mortality in Battle

(New York World.)

To read of a battle in which 3,000,000 men are engaged naturally arises visions of wholesale slaughter. All the appliances of modern warfare are designed to that end; all the skill and science of the greatest military experts are directed to that purpose.

Yet, basing estimates on authentic historical records, there is good reason to assume that the number of men killed in any one battle in France will be surprisingly low when compared with the death-rate under normal circumstances among the same number of men. At Gettysburg, for example the death rate per 1,000 was 55.5, the highest in 21 battles in the Civil war. According to the figures published by the Northwestern Mutual Life Co. in the American experience table of mortality, for every 1,000 men living at the age of 49 there will be 55.6 deaths before reaching the age of 53. For all purposes, this is exactly the same rate of mortality as that on the field of Gettysburg. That is to say, each soldier had the same chance of surviving the battle of Gettysburg that a man now 49 years old has of living to be 53. At the battle of Chancellorsville the death rate among the soldiers engaged was 20.3 per 1,000. According to the life insurance tables, the death rate per 1,000 among men in peaceful pursuits, ranging in age from 42 to 44, is exactly the same. Every soldier at Shiloh, where the death rate in battle was 42.2 per 1,000, had the same chance of escaping alive as the average man of 30 has of reaching the age of 35.

These figures are surprising in showing how far we are likely to be led astray in calculating the relative mortality in batle.

THE SPORTING WORLD

ATHLETICS TO JOIN COLORS

Second Contingent Will Leave Gaps in Sporting Clubs

Ottawa, Oct. 22.—The second Canadian contingent will leave many gaps in the ranks of the various sporting clubs of Ottawa. Among those who offered up their services were Jack Fee, captain and coach of the Britannia Boating Club, who rowed with the Ottawa senior eight two years ago; Arthur Black, who starred for Ottawa in the Interprovincial Football Union last year; and Coo Dian, the well-known amateur hockey star. The first contingent carried away over forty well-known local athletes, fifteen of them members of the Ottawa Rowing Club.

London Wants Senior Hockey

London, Oct. 22. — London will have a senior hockey team this winter. Manager Dr. H. J. Stephens, of the Western University, will go to Toronto shortly, when the Intercollegiate Hockey Union meets, and will ask that their team be taken into the senior series.

The good work of the team in the O.H.A. intermediate series last winter shows that the association has material for a good senior team.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

LOOKING AHEAD.

THOUGH the way seems dark ahead,
Let's not worry, let's not fuss,
Be downhearted, thinking what
Coming days will do to us.
Let us keep our nerve and say
We will smile and see it through.
Though it kills us, we are sure
That is all that it can do.

Every cloud is fitted with
Silver-linings, we are told.
Maybe those that look so black
May be lined with solid gold.
Maybe what we thought was fate,
Reaching boldly for our neck,
May be but a friendly hand
That is passing us a check.

If we will put on our specks
And, improving thus our view,
Read the future by the past
We will learn a thing or two.
We will find that troubles melt
When we boldly go to see
What in thunder they're about—
Vanish like the Dutchman's flea.

Troubles that are in advance
We may contemplate with scorn.
Like as not they will be dead
Several weeks before they're born.
If they should arrive alive
And should venture to get gay
We can strike them for a loan—
Beat them to it, you might say.

Cheating Them.

"My little brother is awful sick," said the small girl. "And we had to have the doctor at our house twice."

"What's the matter with him?" asked the small boy.

"Cholera infantum. I bet you never had nothing like that."

"Huh! That's nothing for a kid to have."

"What's the matter with it?"

"He ought to have measles or something like that, so the rest of youse kids could stay out of school."

Her Reason.

"Is your wife a suffragette?"

"Yes."

"Is that so? I didn't think that she cared much about public questions."

"She doesn't."

"Then why is she in favor of suffrage?"

"She says that they are bound to have a distinctive style of their own, and she is prophet enough to know they will be becoming to her."

Where It Is Thick.

"Who is going to own the air when the airships are perfected?"

"Some monopolists will claim it."

"But won't they have trouble making surveys?"

"Yes, except in Chicago and Pittsburg."

Wanted to Be Sure.

"Is my hat on straight?"

"Straight as such a crooked thing could be."

"Is that straight?"

"What—the hat?"

"No—your answer."

Prepared.

"Listeners never hear any good of themselves."

"Unless"—

"Unless what?"

"They have had a prearrangement with the speakers."

No Easy Chair.

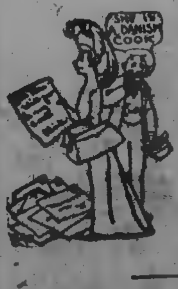
"He wanted to go west and start a cactus farm."

"Why didn't he?"

"His father sat down on it."

"Ouch!"

Sure of Another.



SHE IS A DANISH COOK

"Is she a good cook?"

"Yes."

"Then if she is dissatisfied I do not wonder she is getting a divorce."

"Why? What has that to do with it?"

"Any woman who can cook can marry."

GERMAN LINE WAVERS IN DESPERATE FIGHTING

Lille is Seething Vortex, Both Sides Being Bent on Holding the Town.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—All along the allied front from the English Channel to Switzerland the Germans were held at every point during the fighting of yesterday. In some instances they lost ground after desperate counter-attacks started by them in an effort to resume the offensive. The situation on their extreme right is rather uncertain, but it is positively known that the Belgians have maintained their position on the River Yser, and that British warships are pouring a devastating fire on the German troops within reach of their guns. The fire of the warships has also served to render futile every effort of the Kaiser's men to bring heavy guns into play. Aviators of both the fleet and army have kept the naval commanders fully informed of every such attempt, and the British gunners have more than sustained the navy's prestige for accuracy of gun fire. One German battery after another has been blown into atoms, and it now seems that their artillery operations along the channel must be confined to light field guns, which can be kept on the move.

A flotilla of German torpedo boats delivered an attack against the British men-o'-war, but were driven off by destroyers. Details of the engagement have not been received, but it is stated that all the torpedoes fired by the Germans went wild.

From Lille to the channel the fighting yesterday was steady and of a most sanguinary character. Weighty reinforcements came up from Antwerp to strengthen the German wedge directed at Nieuport, held by the Belgians. From there to Dixmude, defended by British and French forces, the German assault was of a most bitter nature. At the latter point heavy artillery was brought into action by the invaders, and the losses on both sides were great. In the end the Germans were compelled to fall back to their second line of trenches.

The German right wing is wavering all along its tortuous length from the force of blows delivered by the allies. Lille is a seething vortex, and both sides seem bent on holding the town, now occupied by the Germans. The French and British troops are gradually closing in on the position, in the face of perhaps the most stubborn resistance which they have yet encountered. Every few yards German trenches and barbed wire entanglements render attacks extremely difficult. These latter have caused the most serious trouble, the time occupied in their destruction exposing assaulting forces to a withering fire from the German trenches.

Just as the Germans have been unable to make good their advance along the channel, so have the allies failed to cut the line of communication between the Germans in France and those coming from Belgium. All efforts to hack through the Kaiser's lines have met with repulse, and the allied commanders are loathe to make the sacrifice of life which accompanies frontal attacks on a scale sufficient to accomplish this purpose. The flanking operations of Gen. Joffre have proved the most effective in dealing with the invaders, and both the French and British are proving adept in whip-saw manoeuvres, which are marked by a demonstration in force at one point, and sudden, dare-devil drives a few miles away. With these tactics the centre of the German line between the two points attacked nearly always give ground, and a few more miles, even yards, are gained.

It is declared by correspondents at widely-scattered points that the stand of the allies and the steady receding movement of the Kaiser's army at many points has caused the gravest anxiety among German officers, and something akin to alarm among the German people.

Both began to fear that the Kaiser's prediction that all of his troops will be in Germany before Christmas may be fulfilled in a way he had not anticipated. Indications of this anxiety are shown in the orders countermanding a big feast which was to have been held at Ghent, where as many officers as could be spared were to celebrate the victory of German arms.

In the neighborhood of St. Mihiel, the German crown prince continues to face a steadily tightening line of the republic's troops. His front here resembles a peninsular running into territory held by his enemies, and which, to complete the simile, may be cut by a tidal wave advance at a point behind St. Mihiel.

Reports are persistent that the Germans are hurrying work on a new line of fortifications from Metz to Namur, and thence northwestward in the general direction of Antwerp. This is believed to be the next bulwark behind which the victors of a few weeks ago will attempt to stem the oncoming allies.

To Lambaste.

"Lambaste" is a sinewy, heroic word. We prefer it to its variant "lambust." And it is a word of respectable age. "Stand off awhile and see how I'll lambaste him" was written in 1637. It comes from the word "lam," to beat soundly, and "baste," which means the same thing. The tautology is here only intensive. But the word should always be spelled with a final "e."—London Standard.

HE KNOWS EVERYONE

And Prof. Mavor Is Also Reputed To Know Everything.

James Mavor (not James Mavor M.A., LL.D., Ph.D., B.S., but plain James Mavor, professor of economics at the University of Toronto, and soon to deliver a course of lectures in India) is the one man at the university who most nearly approaches the popular idea of a college professor. His one drawback is the noticeable lack of alphabetic ornamentation at the end of his name. He appears in the list of the members of the faculty of the university as plain James Mavor. In spite of this drawback, Prof. Mavor measures up to specifications in other respects. He sails along the streets with his head in the clouds and his hair streaming in the wind behind him. He has written many ponderous books (the latest of them is 400,000 words long, and contains a great many facts about Russia that even the Russians were not aware of); he is to be seen walking the streets with all sorts of people, varying from anarchists to millionaires; he is apt to reply to a simple question in Russian or Chinese. The professor of economics is, in short, a very striking, a very remarkable member of the university.

A whole cycle of legends has grown up at the university with "Jimmy," as he is irreverently known, as the hero of them. The authenticity of some of the episodes of the "Jimmy saga," as one student called it, is not beyond question, but people who know the professor well say that all the incidents related of him might conceivably be true.

On one occasion, so the legend runs, Prof. Mavor was having a long discussion with Prof. Fletcher at the latter's house. He walked home in the early hours of the morning, and found that he had, as usual, forgotten his latch key. He pounded on the door for several minutes. A head was thrust out from an upstairs window. "Prof. Mavor is out," came the call. He is said to have turned solemnly around and gone back to Prof. Fletcher's.

Prof. Mavor has traveled much in Russia and China, and an ancient "shuba," a sheepskin coat, was for many years one of the sights of the campus. His economic lectures were once described by a student as "around the world in 80 minutes."

Prof. Mavor is often spoken of, since the death of Prof. Goldwin Smith as "Canada's most widely educated man." His breadth of knowledge is amazing and is second only to the extent to which he is known outside of Canada. He was a close friend of Tolstoi, is yet a "crony" of Prince Kropotkin, the celebrated Russian communistic anarchist, entertains Lord Milner on the latter's visits to Canada, sits up away into the dawn with the Irish poet, William Butler Yeats, discussing Celtic literature when the bard passes through Toronto and possesses in his extensive library, presentation copies of almost everything that matters in the literature of half a century.

UHLANS' CRIME PUNISHED.

Highlanders Wreck Vengeance For Outrage of German Horsemen.

NORTHERN FRANCE, Oct. 22.—A certain place in the north of France was the scene of a fierce drama of crime and punishment. The actors were a small body of Uhlans and 12 men of a Highland regiment. The latter were carrying out a reconnaissance when they came upon a small farm. It was late in the evening. They noticed fourteen German horses in the farm yard. Stealthily and unobserved they crept into the farmhouse. Downstairs all was silent, but there were sounds from a room upstairs. The Highlanders burst into a room, where they found fourteen Germans and tied to a bed, a young woman.

The scene that followed was swift and terrible. The Uhlans were surprised in their dastardly conduct, and the entry of the Highlanders was like the descent of a sword of vengeance. Rightfully no mercy was shown the Uhlans. Every one of the fourteen was killed with the bayonet and their bodies hurled through a window into the yard below.

Potatoes In Ontario.

Ontario is a province that is well suited to the raising of potatoes, but nevertheless the area planted has varied very little during the past thirty years. In 1913 the acreage in potatoes in Ontario was 167,707, while in 1895 some 184,647 acres were planted.

There are several reasons why potatoes are not grown more extensively in this province. One is that for the most part a more or less local market is the only one supplied and no efforts are made to ship in large quantities to the larger places. There are a great number of varieties grown and it is very difficult for a dealer to arrange for a large shipment of the same variety.

The agricultural college at Guelph conducts experiments each year with different varieties of potatoes in order to find the ones which give the most satisfactory average yearly yield. Last year the list was headed by extra early Eureka, which gave 268.8 bushels per acre. Early Fortune followed with 245 bushels. Irish Cups with 242.5. Rogers Rose with 240 and American Wonder with 237.5 bushels.

Taking the average for the last few years Extra Early Eureka has made the highest record for the early potatoes. The Burpee's Extra Early and Rose of the North are the two medium ripening varieties, and the Davies Warrior, the Empire State and the Rural New Yorker No. 2 are among the very best for the late or general crop varieties.

GEN. ALDERSON INSPECTS FORCE

Commanding Officer of the Canadian Contingent Begins Work

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Gen. Alderson held an informal inspection of a large portion of the Canadian contingent yesterday, the parade including the Princess Patricia Light Infantry. Most of the brigades are still one or two battalions short.

The greater part of the artillery did the journey from Plymouth yesterday, and by to-day the contingent will be pretty fully established on the plains.

Some heavy marches have already been undertaken by the earlier arrivals.

Three days' leave passes have been fairly generously granted.

No rain has fallen since the camp has been established. The health and spirits of the entire contingent continue at the highest pitch.

ATTACKS ALL REPULSED.

Servian Government Reports Series of Successes In the Field.

NISH, Oct. 22.—(Via London.)—The following official announcement has been issued by the Servian Government:

"On the night of Oct. 17-18 attacks by the enemy were repulsed near the Losnitza customs house and the principal positions on the Drina river to the south of that town. On the same night the enemy bombarded Banovis from the Bejania heights and also Topchidelsko, the Bardo bridge across the Save and the two Singanil Islands. None of these operations met with success.

"On Oct. 18 fighting took place along the whole front occupied by our troops in Bosnia, and all the attacks made upon them were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy.

"On the same day the enemy directed an attack against our right wing in the direction of Montchevo and against Erninova. Both these attempts were repulsed, as well as one against the Servians near Belgrade, on the left bank of the Save. On the remainder of the front there is nothing of importance to report."

Young Men To Be Trained.

BORDEAUX, Oct. 22—The French Government, through the Minister of Public Instruction, has directed Baron Pierre De Coubertin, president of the French Olympic Games Committee, to organize the physical and military training of the young men of France, and especially of those youths who would come normally into the army in 1916.

These young men are now eighteen years of age, and they number between 275,000 and 300,000.

Churchill In Trenches.

LONDON, Oct. 22. — Right Hon. Winston Spencer Churchill, the first Lord of the Admiralty, who accompanied the British naval brigade and marines to Antwerp, was, according to one of the latter, with them in the trenches practically all the time, and just before the order was given to retire, urged the men to hold out 24 hours longer, when the big guns would arrive. One day he reconnoitered the position of the Germans in an aeroplane.

Germans Are Foxes Says Expert.

PARIS, Oct. 22.—Col. Rousset, the military critic, declares that the German system of fortifications is excellent and furnishes a protecting curtain for heavy artillery and the insidious machine gun. "It is not chivalrous warfare," he writes, "but it is practical. Our enemy fights not after the fashion of the lion, but like the fox, and we should make use of some of these ideas."

NEXT CAMPAIGN IS AT CLINTON

Rev. H. T. Crossley Makes His Final Appeal at St. James'

The closing service of the Crossley meetings was held Tuesday night, when Mr. Crossley spoke in "Stir up the gift," appealing to the Christians to trust in the Lord, more than in themselves. "Trying" to be a Christian was a mistake. If there was any joy in the world the Christian should have it. We are in this world not to learn to outbeat but to preserve and go on until we win. Deserters are seldom found during war; it is when mere parading and drill was the routine that men left the ranks. A working Christian does not desert Christ or His Church. The test of a Christian is his home life, and here Christ should reign. As to the church to join seek out where you can be most at home, receive the most good, and do the most good. Backsliding comes from neglect of the prayer life and the reading of the Scriptures. If a Christian, let it be known, success does not come from living on the quiet." If we realize our relationship to God, and God's covenant relation to us we need not fear as to our ability to gain the victor's crown. God doesn't fail in keeping those who trust in Him a day at a time.

Centre seats of the church were filled with those who entered into covenant relation with God.

Mr. Crossley left by the 7.34 train for Toronto and begins next Sabbath his campaign in Clinton, Ont.

HINDU SHOOTS AN OFFICIAL

Wm. C. Hopkinson is Victim of Oriental in Vancouver

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 22.—William C. Hopkinson, chief assistant to the immigration inspector here, was shot and instantly killed in the court house on Georgia street yesterday afternoon by a Hindu. The assassin was immediately arrested.

Hopkinson was standing in the main corridor of the court house when a party of Hindus passed by. Mewa Singh is believed to have done the shooting.

Mewa Singh and eighteen other Hindus were in the party which filed along the court house corridor. Mewa suddenly pulled his hands from under his overcoat, a revolver in each hand. He fired the first shot into Hopkinson's breast. Hopkinson grappled with the man, but the Hindu fired again, and this bullet penetrated Hopkinson's heart. Mewa continued to shoot into the body until five shots in all were fired. Then he turned to flee.

James McCann, the courthouse janitor, seized him. Mewa struggled and tried to shoot McCann, but several police officers disarmed him.

Immediately the shooting began there was a great scattering of the Hindus who had been standing in the hall. Eight of them fled towards the front door, but all were stopped by policemen. They were locked up in the cells of the provincial police at the court house.

Hopkinson was threatened at the time of the Komagata Maru's visit to Vancouver, but his assassination yesterday morning probably arises from a trial now pending at the assize. He was to have been a witness yesterday in the case of Bela Singh. Ram Singh, another Hindu, was acquitted on a charge of murder Tuesday. Hopkinson gave testimony favorable to Ram Singh, who was an enemy of Mewa Singh.

FEARS FOR SAFETY OF HIS BROTHER

Andrew Mercer is Unable to Locate His Brother Frank

Toronto, Oct. 22. — Mr. Andrew Mercer, manufacturers' agent at 52 Bay Street, is much worried ove the strange disappearance of his brother, Frank Mercer, whom he last heard from on Tuesday morning at about 11 o'clock. At that time his brother telephoned Mr. Mercer from his apartments, making an appointment to have lunch with him in town. Since then Mr. Mercer has heard nothing further from him, and is in consequence much perturbed, fearing that his brother may have met with some mishap.

Mr. Frank Mercer, who has disappeared, was a man aged about 48, and was clean shaven with iron-grey hair, his height being five feet eleven inches. His business took him out of the city a great deal, and he had just arranged to meet his wife in New York, for which city he intended leaving yesterday, from there intending to sail for Cuba, where he was to spend the winter. None of his clothing or luggage was taken from his apartments, and his brother thinks it probable that he had a considerable sum of money on his person at the time of his disappearance. He is said to be affected with a slight weakness of the heart.

Some years ago Mr. Andrew Mercer conducted a tailor establishment at the corner of George and Hunter Streets and his brother Frank was in the fruit and fish business in this city.

RUSSIA LOSING HER FORESTS.

(From the Youth's Companion.)

We are disposed to think of Russia as a land of limitless forests, but even Russia has a serious forestry problem. For decades, according to a writer in the Petrograd Novoe Vremya, Russia took no notice of the destruction of her forests. The ruling class, the nobility, sold large parts of their wooded properties, rather than sell farm land. They disposed of their forests usually for sums so small that the brokers made from 300 to 1000 per cent. on their capital. In the end the deforestation of the country assumed such threatening proportions that the government introduced a forest conservation law, but . . . the destruction of the forests even now goes on at full speed. The forests, which guard the very possibility of man's existence in the north, are rapidly disappearing. Firewood is as necessary to Russia as the sea is to the English or the mountains to Switzerland. One may regret the disappearance of timber, but in a large degree timber can be replaced by brick, iron or other building materials, but in the north, fuel, in the form of firewood, cannot be replaced.

War Reveals Waste of Food

Apprehensive over food shortage, the London press is advising the English people to save and utilize every article of food value, including the bran coating of grain.

Why? The outer coat of grain holds the precious mineral elements which mean so much in vital building and up-keep of body, brain and nerves. And yet the modern miller throws out about four-fifths of these priceless food elements just to make the flour look white and pretty!

Isn't it astounding that it took war to wake people up to such a fearful waste!

Nearly twenty years ago the crying need of a food which would fill the lack caused by demineralized white flour products led to the making of —a wonderfully nourishing and appetizing food, containing all the nutriment of wheat and barley, including the vital mineral elements, just as nature designed them for our use.

410 GEORGE STREET

WILL MAKE GOOD JOB OF THE PAVING

Changes May be Made in Work Done Last Year

The Foley and Gleeson Co. when submitting their tender for the paving of George Street, Hunter Street and Charlotte Street two years ago did not include the half inch binder which is placed between the concrete base and the asphalt surface. The company did not anticipate that the traffic on George Street would be as heavy as it is and as pavement without the binder was cheaper and according to reports from other cities, just as substantial, the city officials deemed it advisable to have the pavement without a binder.

George Street is a very narrow main thoroughfare and the traffic much heavier than expected, this fact and the fact that the street has not been given the proper care has caused the asphalt surface to scale. That is, creep toward the gutter on the concrete base and form small ridges. The block where this is most evident is between Brock and Murray Street. In other sections the defect has also been found. While it is not a breach of their contract not to remedy this matter as it is the direct result of the city not wishing a binder to be inserted, the Foley and Gleeson Co. have voluntarily offered to rectify it.

The general manager of the Foley and Gleeson Co., J. S. Driscoll, when interviewed by The Review this morning stated that if it was necessary to tear up every foot of the work laid last year the company will do so and it will not cost the city a cent. According to Mr. Driscoll the company greatly underestimated the traffic of George Street. They placed the pavement that is ideal for residential streets thinking that this city's main thoroughfare would not be subject to greater traffic than the residential streets in some larger cities. The surface they put down was not as close a mixture as is used on heavy traffic streets and the water got into it and was never allowed to dry out.

Too Much Water.

Considerable of the blame for the scaling of the surface can be laid on the fact that far too much water is being placed on George Street in an effort to overcome the dust. Mr. Driscoll is of the opinion that no pavement in the world could give satisfaction where the water is put on so freely and the slime and mud not cleaned off properly. The method that should be adopted is now in vogue in all the cities of importance. All day long men are kept busy with brushes keeping the dirt gathered up and on Saturday night night the streets are flooded. The result is a nice clean street for Sunday and very little dust all week.

"Don't you think," the scribe asked, "that there being such a small percentage of the street paved that the dirt accumulates on the paved streets quicker than it will in a larger city?"

"True enough," Mr. Driscoll answered, "but from now on the percentage of paved streets is greater, and next summer there will not be so much dust and dirt present. If the city would get away from flooding the streets so much and having water and slime continually on the surface, they would not only save the pavement, but they will be taking a sanitary move. Cities like New York and Buffalo would not stand for so much dampness on the streets for five minutes."

The system by which the company will overcome the difficulty will not be to tear up the work this fall. They will paint all the work performed last year with a coat of asphalt, place hot sand on it and roll it. This will bring it back to its original condition. The extra coat will be a very dense mixture and will keep the water and slush off. If in the spring this has overcome the trouble, nothing more will be needed, but if the surface still creeps the whole surface will be torn up and re-laid with a binder. This extra work will be done by the Foley & Gleeson Co. gratis.

Mr. Driscoll claims that the pavement now being laid accord to the specifications, which call for the binder, is unequalled in quality. It will stand the heaviest traffic just as has been proven on Fifth avenue, New York City, where the heaviest traffic in America is to be found.

CEDED CERTAIN POINTS, AND ADVANCED AT OTHERS

REINFORCEMENTS FOR GERMANS FAIL TO BREAK DOWN ALLIED OFFENSIVE

Progress is Made Particularly in Region of Rosieres --- Enemy Appears to be Making New Effort Between the North Sea and the Oise

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Oct. 23.—The official announcement this afternoon says: "On our left wing very considerable German forces whose presence was reported yesterday have continued very violent attacks in the entire region between the sea and the canal of Labassee.

Generally speaking, the situation of the Allied forces has been maintained. If the Allies have had to cede at certain points they have advanced at others. The enemy has also evidenced very great activity in the region of the Arras and on the river Somme.

To the north and to the south of this stream, we have progressed particularly in the region of Rosieres. In Santerre, in the region of Vedun and in the region of Pont-a-Mousson we have had some partial successes.

On the rest of the front there is nothing to report.

To sum up, the enemy appears to be undertaking, along the major part of th front and particularly between the North Sea and the Oise, a new effort, making use of a corps, made up of new organizations. These are composed of men recently drilled, some of them very young and others of middle age and have staffs drawn from various parts of the enemy.

London, Oct. 23.—A Reuter despatch from Paris says that according to trustworthy accounts received at the French capital this morning fresh troops brought up by Germans have enabled them to deliver attacks with increased vigor on the French right wing where the battle has been of a ding-dong character with alternative gains and losses.

ENGLISH PEOPLE REMAIN CALM

Mr. and Mrs. Frank White of Havelock are in the city visiting Mrs. White's mother, Mrs. Menzie, 18 Stewart Street. Last Monday Mr. and Mrs. White arrived home after an extended trip in England. They left Canada the first week in August and sailed via steamer Lake Manitoba. While they were in mid-ocean war between Great Britain and England was declared and passengers on the Lake Manitoba were immediately ordered to put out all lights at night. Before land was sighted three war ships appeared and convoyed the vessel to Liverpool.

Mr. and Mrs. White confined their travels to England and Wales. While in London they had the unique experience of witnessing an air craft on guard over Buckingham Palace.

They were not aware that the Canadian contingent was in England till they arrived on this side. Evidently they passed at mid-ocean. One thing which impressed Mrs. White was the calm manner in which the people of England are taking the present conflict. They are not nearly as panicky as some Canadian people seem to be.

Luncheon With Rev. Dr. Gordon

The board of trade is holding a luncheon next Wednesday at one o'clock in the Oriental Hotel to which a cordial invitation is extended to all citizens of Peterboro, particularly the business men. It will be featured by an address by Dr. J. L. Gordon who is giving a series of addresses in St. Paul's Church. Dr. Gordon has had vast experience as a business man as well as a clergyman and any advice he may give should be well worth hearing. His subject will be announced later. Tickets may be secured from members of the board of trade or at the secretary, A. N. Allison's office, Charlotte Street.

Sir Robert Leaves for South

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—Sir Robert Borden leaves Ottawa today for the south on a three weeks' vacation. The Premier feels much in need of a rest. He has been working hard for a long time, and since the outbreak of the war he has been especially busy. He will probably spend a portion of his holiday at Virginia Hot Springs. Lady Borden will accompany him.

THIRTEEN BRITISH SHIPS SAID TO HAVE BEEN SUNK

German Steamer Brings News and Credits the Karlsruke With Sending Merchantmen With Total Tonnage of Sixty Thousand, To the Bottom

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 23.—A despatch from Teneriffe, to The Daily Mail dated Thursday reports the German cruiser Karlsruhe has sunk thirteen British merchantmen in the Atlantic.

The news was brought to Teneriffe by the German steamer Crefeld which brought there part of the crews of the steamers Strathroy, Maple Branch, Highland Hope, Indrani, Rio Iguassu Farn, Nice to Maria, Delarrinaga, Cervantes, Cornish City, Puth, Condor and Lynrowan, all of which were sunk by the Karlsruhe.

The Crefeld was accompanied into port by the German steamers Patagonia, Rio Negro and Asunion.

The total tonnage of these thirteen British ships is sixty thousand.

REV. H. J. KEITH IS GRANTED LEAVE TO ACCEPT CALL TO EDMONTON CHURCH

BANK RAIDED BY BANDITS

Two Are Dead and Two Others Are Missing

VANCOUVER, Oct. 23.—Two robbers dead, one dying and two yet at large, is the schedule of casualties on the side of the enemy in the battle between the Austrian bank bandits and the authorities near the international boundary at Blaine yesterday morning. Clifford Adams of New Westminster, a young customs officer, was the official killed.

The five bandits who held up the Sedro-Woolley Bank last Saturday night attempted to cross the boundary into Canada yesterday morning. The first fight with the boundary officials resulted in Adams' death, while one of the robbers was shot dead and another wounded. The latter was taken to Cloverdale yesterday afternoon. He was apparently disabled by the officers' shots, and then probably fired at by his fleeing companions, for he is suffering from a scalp wound dealt by a revolver held so close to his bead that his hair was singed.

Just after noon yesterday another robber was wounded at Hall's Prairie. He drew his own revolver and shot himself while the officers raced forward to catch him.

At dark the posses were still out, but it looked as if the remaining two or three had escaped. The country is, however, well policed, not only by regular officers but by members of the Home Guard, formed since the starting of the war. These amateur warriors rendered quite valiant assistance yesterday.

Will Preach Farewell Sermons On Sunday November 8 And Expects to Start for Western City Two Days Later --- Two Resignations Placed Before Presbytery

The Presbytery of Peterboro met in Knox Church at 9.30 this morning with the moderator Rev. Hugh Brown of Warsaw in the chair.

The call from Westminster Church Edmonton, to Rev. H. J. Keith was presented by the Clerk, Rev. D. A. Thomson.

A large representation of Knox Church was present on behalf of the congregation, Mr. J. F. Morrison and Mr. H. Shurter represented the session, Mr. H. McCannan the people, Mr. A. McKenzie, the Sunday School, Dr. J. M. McCulloch, the Board of Managers, Mrs. Parker the Ladies' Aid, and Mrs. McPherson, the Women's Mission Society. Each one made a plea for the retention of Mr. Keith on the ground of the good work already accomplished under his leadership in the various departments and in the construction of the church and organ.

Rev. Mr. Myers of Toronto was appointed to represent Westminster Church but was not aware of the hour of meeting. Rev. Mr. Thomson was also appointed and he spoke with great reserve of the possibility of Mr. Keith leaving.

The call being presented to Mr. Keith he spoke of the close relationship between his people and himself, but felt he had their cause at heart when he decided to go to Edmonton. The task there was no lighter but appeared to be much heavier. The call had come unsought but with great compulsion and he felt it was his duty to accept, much as it would mean to himself and family to leave Knox Church. Rev. Mr. Keith was then granted leave to accept and Rev. Mr. Pogue of St. Paul's was appointed moderator of Knox Church.

Members of Presbytery spoke in feeling terms of Mr. Keith's ministry and friendship and expressed regret at his leaving the city and Presbytery. He will preach for the last time on Sunday, November 8 and expects to start with his family for the west on November 10.

Rev. Mr. Pogue will preach in Knox Church next Sunday morning, meeting the session at 10.30 and the people after the morning service to arrange for a successor to Mr. Keith.

Two Resignations.

The resignations of Rev. Mr. Ross of Pontypool and Rev. Mr. McCorkingdale of Lakefield were placed before the meeting but will be laid over till the December sitting.

NEW LIFE OF INDIA.

It is said that the Rev. John Sherrard, D.D., head of the Presbyterian College in India, will lecture in Peterborough on the new life in India, in a month or so.

This will be, if true, especially interesting to workingmen and others engaged in industrial life, as it will be seen by his lecture in Toronto that he is wonderfully struck with the rising manufacturing interests of India.

DROP CONSPIRACY CHARGES C.P.R. CONDUCTORS FINED $200

TORONTO, Oct. 23—Following the inability of the sessions jury to arrive at a unanimous verdict in the case of Henry Coker, the C. P. R. conductor who was charged with having charged short fares and not handing the money to the company, the crown abandoned the charge of conspiracy against the railway officials yesterday and eight of them pleaded guilty to breaches of the Secret Commissions Act, and fines ranging from $50 to $200 were imposed by Judge Coatsworth.

Richard Reid was allowed to go on suspended sentence; Fred Lee was sentenced to two months in jail; Albert Cheeseman and Harry Yates were fined $50 or an alternative of one month in jail. When passing sentence of one month on P. McCarl the judge declared, that this case was the worst, and he could not allow him to go by paying a fine. He imposed the minimum sentence, however.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1914

AN IMPERIAL MYSTERY.

(Editorial in the St. Louis Republic.)

WHENEVER Germany and France, with their highly centralized and logically wrought out governments, have contemplated the fabric known as the British Empire, they have smiled smiles of disdain.

If ever there was an instance of "muddling along" through decades and even centuries, taking things for granted, avoiding issues, extemporizing expedients, and working always for the object immediately in view, with scant reference to any principle of outward consistency, it is supplied by the history of the making of the British Empire. This is a strange gathering together of Crown Colonics, Dominions, Protectorates, a Commonwealth, Dependencies—and India. India is directly ruled by the Crown. Jersey, Guernsey and the Isle of Man are governed under their own laws, but certain officials are appointed by the Crown. Canada and Australia are both self-governing, but the senators in Canada are appointed by the governor-general, while those of Australia are elected. There is a secretary of State for India in the King's Cabinet. And all gradations of self-government may be found in the more than ninety units of the British Empire.

This fearful and wonderful fabric has no central body. There is no "Bundesrath" or Imperial Council. No collective action of its units is possible. The relation to them of the Mother Country is illogical, ill-defined. To the foreigner accustomed to the federation of the American States or of the units of the German Empire, the government looks planless and ineffective.

All of which is preliminary to the observation that there is not at the present moment any more effective institution in the whole world of political fabrics than the British Empire. Whatever its machinery lacks appears to be supplied by its spirit. The defects of its body are made up for by the unity of its soul.

The fact cannot be gainsaid that England, who does not begin to be as logical as Germany or as systematic as France in matters of government, has nevertheless the knack of making men step out of their own free will, to die in her defence. She has the gift of keeping alive, across tumbling seas, round half a world, the undying bond that unites the heart to home. She has shown herself indifferent to the possession of taxing power over her colonies—but what matters it? Those colonies willingly tax themselves to send her warships, and their sons seize their rifles in time of strife to go to her aid. She has the wisdom to train and guide the swarthy children of alien races, and even the foes of yesteryear, that they put their living bodies between England and England's enemies. She has a fearfully muddled theory of government, but her practice of government lays hold on the deepest things in the soul of man.

As we contemplate this wonder of an Empire, which is an Empire of the spirit, an Empire whose philosophy of politics is all wrong, but for which the costliest things within the gift of man are poured out without stint, we are moved to wonder whether this is a prophecy of the future. Will the States of the coming days make more of the spirit and less of the machine? Will they reck less of constitutions and bills of rights and fabrics of government and more of the invisible things which touch the soul?

The British Empire is unscientific. It is unreasonable. But it is mighty, with the greatness of the soul.

THE ABOVE EDITORIAL expresses well the inability of foreigners to grasp the guiding principle of British government. Not understanding it, they laughed at what was termed the British Empire and regarded it as a house of cards that could not stand any really severe test. Not without good reason did most thinkers so regard the political fabric of the British Empire, for we have had our Little Englanders, of which Goldwin Smith was a distinguished member, and also the Canadian Nationalists, as well as present day British members of Parliament who maintained on public platforms that the British Empire was an empire in only name. Moreover, citizens of most important countries have been accustomed to constitutions, to systems of checks and balances, to concentrated authority in some tangible council, executive or sovereign. Grown used to such political machinery, they look at the British Empire with all its forms of government, varying from that of direct military control to self-governing dominions, without its own constitution being written, and so loosely strung together that it appears without unity, without strength, without the power of concentrated action, and impotent from its very size.

To understand why the British Empire appears so and is not as it appears, is to understand the difference between its form of government and those of other nations. This difference can be realized more by a study of the antecedants of government than by a comparison of constitutions. The government of the United States began in rebellion. Independence meant the establishment of sovereign commonwealths, each of which was actuated by petty jealousy of the other. Each framed policies to maintain its individuality and to increase its wealth and importance. Hence the Continental Congress was a disastrous failure, and when in 1789 the present constitution was adopted, the greatest problem was to over-ride mutual distrust of each other and get each state to unite under a central government for concerted action. Individual states were afraid they would lose their identity, that a president of all might become a king, and so they devised a constitution in which everything was carefully written down and defined as well as it could be. Its defects have been many and puzzling, but the main point is that its strength depends upon distrust, not trust, upon written agreement, which, fulfilled, requires nothing further.

The government of Germany arose out of war and an army. The military forces in Germany gave that country its nationality, under the hand of the Iron Chancellor Bismarck. The Reichstag, corresponding to our House of Commons, is not the central legislative authority to the same degree. The upper chamber, the Bundesrath, is a real executive, with extensive powrs, while the franchise is quite limited. Here the statesman recognized that strong government was necesary, and this required a powerful executive. The people were not united by a common German spirit, and each little state guarded jealously its individual powers. Hence, when the German constitution was adopted, the German people were not ready for a liberal franchise, and the strong hand required to whip individual states into a common cause meant a limited franchise, limited powers for the legislative body, and extensive powers for the executive of which the Kaiser was the head. German unity and national spirit came in war with Austria and France, and so, to the distrust that one little German principality had of another, were added the virtues of military power and war as a binding force. It was natural, then, that the Germans should emphasize the practical in their political, social and industrial life. That which won its end was the thing to adopt. That is the military rule. Nothing is taken for granted. Their government, too, was based not on trust, but distrust. It was written down with the powerful restriction of an efficient military executive.

The political system in France began in revolution and passed through many picturesque stages, but the French have shown an aptitude for theories, ideals and irresistible logic. They are great systematizers and have tried to evolve a system of democratic government, worked out to minute details, one that leaves as little as possible to individual initiative. They try to solve problems before they come, and, while their system has not been determined by distrust, it has had regard for human weakness and trusted the human factor as little as possible.

The British system has a totally different history from all of these forms of government. Its experience of an efficient military system was obtained in Cromwell's time, and soon discarded. The American Revolution taught Britain the danger of an uncontrolled executive, while the last century saw much of the development of the party system and the extension of the franchise. By leaving political questions to the people, the British system depends on trust. By leaving the politics of the self-governing dominions to themselves, it entrusts them with great responsibilities. Such a system is based on the idea of capacity for work and of the division of labour. It depends less on legal ties or military control and more on the responsibility to fulfill obligations, not because they have to be fulfilled by virtue of some penalty, but because it is only right to do so. A bond carries no binding force beyond the letter of its wording; military control has no power beyond the limit of the force sustaining it; but the strength of right admits of no qualification. That is the strength of the British Empire, something different from other great systems, and which decieves those not acquainted with its antecedants. What looks like weakness and decay to Germany, like inefficiency to France, like something intangible and disconnected to Americans, has a strength which it alone possesses, because its political experience has proceeded along different lines.

Colonel Maritz.

(Christian Guardian.)

In the whole of the British Empire, during all the stress and strain of the war there has been no discordant note sounded, save in South Africa. This is saying a good deal, and speaks volumes for the unity of the Empire. When the war broke out, the British Government received a telegram from Premier Botha, of South Africa, which said simply, "We will do our duty." If the Germans had remained quiescent there would probably have been no trouble, but when they proceeded to invade South African territory, the South African troops were promptly called ont. The most important fact in connection with the matter was the disaffection of Colonel Maritz, with about 500 troops; but the colonel appears to have scant sympathy among his fellow-citizens, and the incipient rebellion will in all probability soon be put down.

Canada and War Supplies.

(Le Canada.)

Some time since we called attention to the fact that Canada should be able to supply many of the needs of the armies of the allies, and drew the attention of the boards of trade to that fact. We are now informed of the early departure for England of Sir George Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce. Here is a mission which Sir George is perfectly qualified to undertake. He will probably find, both in Britain and France, if his visit covers that country, that the state contractors will be glad to be put into touch with our Canadian manufacurers.

Cold Comfort for the Senate.

(Montreal Mail.)

American naval experts say the ultimate test of navies will be battleships, and not submarines, which are not yet developed enough to decide a naval war. Cold comfort for Germany and our Senate.

POLITICS AND WAR

By Walt Mason

The land is full of candidates, the smaller ones and heavyweights; what are they toiling for? They cannot make the people pay attention to the things they say, unless they talk of war. Our bulwarks and our sweetest boons are valued less than musty prunes, as topics of the day; the tariff and the income tax were both sent groggy to their backs, by rumors of the fray. In vain the orator uprears and tries to fill the voters' ears with tiresome politics; some fellow whispers, "The reports say Russia took a chain of forts and crossed the river Pkvwlwyx." The whisper travels round the hall, in vain the orator may bawl about the flag that flies; the voters sit around and bet that Russia will be humbled yet, or just contrariwise. Once more the speaker wildly tries to hold the voters' ears and eyes, and yells about the trusts; but at the door a newsboy shrieks, "Oh, wuxtra! Denmark dares the Greeks," and then that meeting busts. The voters canter down the aisle and through the door in Maud S. style, an "extra" to obtain; and in the hall, depressed, alone, the orator lets out a groan that's charged with grief and pain.

Hughes Is Major-General.

OTTAWA, Oct. 23. — Official announcement was made last night of the promotion of Col. Sam Hughes to the rank of major-general dating back to May, 1912, and of Col. Gwatkin, chief of the General Staff, to the same rank.

Col. Hughes becomes senior major-general in Canada. His appointment has been under advisement for some weeks, but passed finally at yesterday afternoon's Cabinet Council.

Oporto Cut Off.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The following despatch has been received from Oporto, Portugal:

"Telegraphic and telephonic communication with Lisbon has been cut. A number of unexploded bombs have been found on the railways."

Astrologer Predicts Victory.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—In an address Dr. A. Z. Stevenson, president of the Astrological Society, declared: "Germany will be driven out of France in a decisive battle, to be fought beween Nov. 5 and 7; the Kaiser will be forced to relinquish his throne by the middle of next January; the Russians will be in Berlin in April, and the present European war will last about two years.

May Be Returned Unopposed.

OTTAWA, Oct. 23.—It is improbable that any opposition will be offered to the return of Hon. T. C. Casgrain and Hon. Pierre Blondon. Other bye-elections, in Westmoreland, Terrebonne and Jacques Cartier will be brought on shortly.

It is believed that the six vacancies in the Senate will be filled shortly. Five of these vacancies are in Ontario in succession to Senators McMillan, Ross, Coffey, Gibson and Cox, and one in British Columbia, through the retirement of Senator MacDonald.

Lines of Communication In Danger.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 23. — The sound of heavy artillery firing was heard yesterday morning at Sluys, a village in the extreme western tip of Zealand, about 20 miles north and a little west of Ghent. The firing apparently was taking place between Bruges and Ghent.

The conveyance of German wounded from Bruges to Ghent has suddenly ceased and it is believed that the German lines of communication between Ghent and Bruges are threatened by the advancing allies.

German Rioters Suppressed.

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 2.—An order to the guards to "fix bayonets" prevented a small-sized riot among the prisoners at Fort Henry. One German who has for some time been acting in a disorderly manner and who tried to induce the other prisoners to join in a riot was placed in a cell. For some time a number of the prisoners have been trying their best to make trouble.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

BEAUTIFY THE CITY.

Editor Review,

Sir,—If there is one thing more than another which we lack in the art of beautifying our city it is that of properly pruning our trees. Many of our most beautiful trees have been made unshapely and ungainly at the hands of a novice instead of "a thing of beauty and a joy forever," to say nothing of doing it out of season. I saw one case of such pruning today on Simcoe Street near Aylmer Street, where the limbs were slashed off indiscriminately on one side and the top decapitated, leaving the tree lobsided and unsightly. Better by far, had it been taken out altogether, especially, as they were too close to one another. It takes years for a tree to grow and the pruning of it should only be entrusted to an expert under the supervision of a committee.

Yours, etc.,
FOLIAGE.

BIG CATCH OF FISH AT PRINCE RUPERT

How rich the waters of the Pacific Ocean are in fine fish is shown by the September statistics for the port of Prince Rupert just received at the Grand Trunk Pacific headquarters in Montreal. The catch of the local fishing fleet during the month, comprised: 11,000 cwts. of halibut; 4,440 cwts. of cod; and 10,552 cwts. of salmon. The catch at ten cents a pound would produce $310,120. Prince Rupert has now begun to ship its fresh fish to the East in special refrigerator cars over the Grand Trunk Pacific and the October fishing is therefore expected to be productive of even larger catches.

VON MOLTKE DYING

Germans Make Efforts to Conceal News of His Condition

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A private letter received in Amsterdam from a high official in Berlin, says Lt.-Gen. Count Helmuth von Moltke, chief of the German General Staff, is dying, according to the Exchange Telegraph's Amsterdam correspondent.

"Everything, the correspondent adds, "is being done to keep the news secret. Gen. von Moltke is suffering from an affection of the liver. The cure he was undergoing was interrupted in July by the German mobilization. He has now had to leave Emperor William's headquarters, Gen. von Falkenhayn, the Prussian Minister of War being left in charge."

Many German officers ascribe the check to the German advance to the forced retirement of Gen. von Moltke.

Prussian Diet Authorizes Loan.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—A message from Rome states that the Prussian Diet will authorise a loan of $375,000,000, secured by bond, payable before Jan. 1, 1916.

This fund is to be devoted to the relief of the people in East Prussia, invaded by the Russians, and to the aid of public employes thrown out of employment.

Grand Trunk Appointments

The following Grand Trunk appointments are announced by Mr. W. D. Robb, Supt. Motive Power, with the approval of Mr. Howard G. Kelley, Vice-President.

The Duke's Daughter

By thh BARONESS VON RUDTEN

I.

The train had stopped again, and Wickham, rubbing the moisture off the window with the dingy curtain, looked out into the night.

Wickham shuddered and drew back into the shabby comfort of his second class carriage.

"Karlsruhe, probably," he thought as the noise of banging doors announced a speedy departure.

It was too dark to read. Wrapping his rug well about his legs, he leaned back again and closed his eyes. Then just as the train started the door of his compartment was opened, the light from a lantern flashed across him, and a woman, vigorously helped forward, stumbled into the place opposite him, and a worn bag was dumped by a porter directly on his foot. As if that were not enough, the owner paid no attention to his discomfort, but sat immovable in her place.

Wickham was annoyed. He disliked being the only other person in a compartment with a woman, and this one, judging from the shabbiness of her wet brown skirt and the cotton gloves on her limply folded hands, was utterly lacking in even the small charm necessary to reconcile a cross man to the bore of opening and closing windows and arranging another's hand luggage.

Ignoring the small bag at his feet, he watched the blurred lights of the city until they were swallowed up in the darkness. Then, closing his eyes again, he tried to find his way back to the comfortable half sleep that had soothed him since he left Mannheim.

But he could not sleep. The presence of his neighbor, still as she sat, made him nervous.

Lifting the bag, he put it on the seat beside her, but still she did not move. And then as the train rushed round a sharp curve she fell helplessly sideways. Her hat, crushed into the angle of the head rest, fell back and revealed her face in the feeble light.

"Good heavens!" said Wickham. The girl—for she was not more than four or five and twenty—lay silent and still.

II.

Wickham stared at her for a few seconds. Then, digging his flask out of his bag, he sat down by her, balanced her limp body as well as he could in the wanton jerkiness of the train and poured a few drops of the fluid into her mouth.

It seemed hours before a little color came back into the pale face and the sunken eyes opened.

"Danke schoen," she said presently, drawing away from him. "Forgive me."

"Good heavens, I have nothing to forgive," he answered with a vehemence that he vaguely recognized as quite uncalled for. "If I hadn't been a brute I'd have seen at once that you were ill."

"Oh, I wasn't ill! I wonder whether, as you have been so kind, you would let me have a little more. Most of what you gave me went—outside."

"Why, you are English!" Wickham exclaimed, handing her the flask. "How strange! You'd better drink out of the flask, the train shakes so."

"Thanks. Yes, I am English," she said, while he watched a wave of brilliant color sweep up her thin cheeks. Then, to his disappointment, she closed her eyes, and he dared not speak again.

Her hands, bare now of the disfiguring gloves, lay loosely as before, and he saw that, though painfully thin, they were white and slim.

Then she opened her eyes.

"Don't be frightened," she said, trying to smile, "but I am dreadfully afraid I am going to—to do it again."

"Oh, for heaven's sake, my dear young lady, don't! Take some more brandy."

She waved the flask away. "No, no! I"— Then suddenly she added, speaking very fast: "The truth is I am not ill; I am only hungry. If you happen to have"—

III.

Catching the look in her face as she tasted the meat in the sandwich he thrust into her hands, he fled to the far end of the compartment and stood with his face to the wet window, positively sick with pity.

When she called he found her folding the paper about the remaining sandwiches. "I ate two," she said, with a little shamed laugh, "and—shan't try to thank you. I suppose you never were hungry?"

"No, I was never hungry," he returned, feeling himself an unmitigated brute. "I was never hungry in my life."

"Your people are dead?" he went on. The train was drawing into the Stuttgart station, and he saw in the electric light the half defiant expression of her face as she answered.

"My father is alive," she said.

"Then I'd like to punch your father's head."

"Yes? My father is the Duke of Tarbolton."

"The Duke"—

"The Duke of Tarbolton. Have you ever heard of the Tarbolton vein? Well, there it is."

She held out her left hand and by some slow twist of the muscles moved a big vein on the back of it nearly an inch out of its place and back again.

Wickham had heard of the family peculiarity and nodded. "Extraordinary!" he said perfunctorily. "But"—

"Oh, my mother wasn't a duchess. Don't be overwhelmed. She was a farmer's daughter, and she believed in him."

"Scoundrel!"

The duke's daughter shook her head impartially.

"He wasn't so bad. He was very young, and—he cared for her. He had me educated, and mother lived in a house of his till she died. I'm not complaining at all."

"And what are you doing over here?"

"Governessing—nursery, you know. A very nice family, but I couldn't stand the governess of the elder children. She was too arbitrary, possibly, to suit my ducal blood."

The bitterness that suddenly came to her voice stung Wickham unreasonably."

"So you left?" he went on at length, with an effort.

"Yes. I got a place at Frankfort. They were very kind to me, but one of the sons began making love to me"—

"And then"—

"And then I went to Darmstadt to answer an advertisement. They wouldn't take me, so I spent the last of my money on a ticket to Munich. The Ferrises are there—my first family—and perhaps they'll take me back."

"If they don't, what will you do?"

"Oh, I don't know. I will have to plan to find another position."

"Why not allow me to lend you some money till you find one?"

The look that flashed over her face and her emphatic but courteous refusal showed him how useless it would be to pursue the subject.

IV.

At Ulm Wickham got out and secured some bread and sausage sandwiches and coffee.

When he went back to the compartment, balancing her cup carefully, he found her awake, her eyes heavy, one cheek wrinkled with sleep.

"Oh, how good of you!"

As she took the cup from him her hand touched his, and they both started.

"How soon do we reach Munich?" she asked hastily.

"Not until 7 something. Are you so impatient to get rid of me?"

"I didn't mean that. You have been so good."

He shook his head. "No, not good. But you are so lonely, and I too"—

"Are you lonely?"

"I have been lonely all my life, but—I have never been so lonely as I shall be when you have gone."

She looked at him thoughtfully. "Isn't it strange? We have known each other only a few hours"—

Wickham's heart gave a leap at what she did not add. "That makes no difference, does it?" he asked.

"I suppose not."

"My name is Robert Wickham. What is yours?"

"Mine is Percy Lane."

"Ah!"

"Yes; she named me for him."

"It is a sweet name—Percy. I draw for some of the illustrated papers, not fancy pictures, but scenes and things they need to illustrate articles."

"'Our Special Artist!'"

"Yes. I am no genius, but I work carefully and am tolerably well paid. I was ill in the summer and have been having a holiday. I am thirty-two years old."

The girl watched him dreamily. "And I am five and twenty."

"If—the Ferrises take you back you will stay in Munich?"

She shook her head. "No. They are going to Italy for the winter. I am sorry."

Wickham had forgotten his determination to be wise and, leaning over, laid his hand in hers. "Would you like to see me again?"

"Yes. Oh, yes! You have been so kind."

"Do you like m[illegible]?"

"Yes."

"Look at me," he went on a trifle breathlessly. "I like you, Percy, much more than a little. Do you think you could ever like me as I do you?"

"Oh," she said, "please don't!"

Then she drew the shabby curtain before her face and pretended to look out into the breaking day. Wickham cursed his own idiocy, and an hour passed before either of them spoke again.

Then he said rather roughly: "Miss Lane, we are almost there, and you will need all your strength. Eat the other sandwich."

She obeyed in silence.

"Do you know where the Ferrises are stopping?"

She shook her head. "No; I only saw their arrival announced in a paper."

She tugged at the window as she spoke, and it slammed down, letting in a rush of cold morning air.

Wickham looked at the glint of the early sun on her straight, thick hair for a moment and then, pouncing on her suddenly, held her close for a moment and kissed her.

"What nonsense!" he cried jubilantly. "I need you, and you need me. I love you, and you are going to love me. The sun's coming up, and tomorrow we'll be wed in London, you and I, dear!"

She tried to protest, but she couldn't. The truth and the joy in his voice overpowered her. He kissed her again as the train rumbled into the dark Central Bahnhof, and then, very tenderly, he helped her out into the cold, dingy day. And neither of them saw that it was cold and dingy.

At 7.45 To-night

ALBERT E. GREENLAW

1. What would you do with doubts you cannot answer and cannot silence?
2. Does the association of men and women in business tend to lower the moral tone in society?
3. What would you advise a young person to do who has a battle with his emotions and is never sure of himself?
4. Can a man be a hypocrite and not know it.
5. Is there such a thing as an honest bluff?
6. What would you do if you had brought up children carefully and prayerfully, and found at last that they had rebelled against you?

The Price of a Kid.

Cordova is full of fun, says C. Bogue Luffmann in his "Quiet Days In Spain," and in the leisurely pace of life there the observer has time to see and appreciate all of it.

In the market one day a small boy with a big apron and a pompous manner was offering half of a small kid to a woman for a peseta. She objected that it was very tiny, and he fairly smothered her with: "Woman! Do you want half a bull for a tenpence?"

ESKIMO WHALE DANCE.

When Arctic Natives Feast and Pick Their Life Mates.

A very primitive custom of the natives of the Bering and arctic coasts of Siberia, a custom that has come down from generations of savage ancestors, is the annual celebration of the whale dance, when the Eskimos select their wives.

When the sun moves southward at the end of the short summer season and the ice closes up the northern seas the whales come down to open water. Then, in celebration of the season's catch, the ice dwellers assemble for the whale dance, which lasts twenty-one days.

The great dance circle is prepared, and in the center the dancers, both male and female, perform the most savage of evolutions and motions to the accompaniment of rhythmless beating of the tomtoms and weird chanting. The dance songs tell of the prowess of the hunters and of the history of the tribe. The movements of the women are surprisingly graceful, and they mean to show in their dance that, as daughters of a great people, they are possessed of all the qualities such women should have. The men execute pantomimic scenes of the hunt and go through all the motions of the kill. They spear the ice bear, slay the walrus and seal and finally, with extraordinary contortions, vanquish the mighty whale.

During the last days of the feast, when the time arrives for the selection of husbands and wives, the man performs his mate dance before the woman he has picked out. In pantomime he promises to provide her generously with the fruit of the hunt, both food and fur. If she is pleased with him she walks out and dances her acceptance and shows how she will look after the igloo. When they have danced before each other they are married after the custom of the tribe, and he leads her off to his walrus hide lodge.

During the dance they feast on whale. The skin of the baleen whale is about an inch thick and looks like rubber. The solid blubber between it and the true flesh is usually about fourteen inches thick. The black skin and the blubber, the latter cut to the thickness of the former, is called moktuk and is considered a great delicacy. It is eaten raw and, although it sounds repulsive to the civilized ear, is most palatable. It has a flavor something like that of chestnuts.—Youth's Companion.

Prime Numbers.

It might appear at first that every number can be divided by some number besides itself and one; but many numbers cannot, and if they cannot they are known as prime numbers. Of all the numbers having a value of less than 1,000, there are 169 that are prime. Of these twenty-six are smaller than 100, twenty-one appear between 100 and 200, sixteen between 200 and 300, sixteen between 300 and 400, seventeen between 400 and 500, fourteen between 500 and 600, sixteen between 600 and 700, fourteen between 700 and 800, fifteen between 800 and 900 and fourteen between 900 and 1,000.

Will Know In February.

Prof. John Patterson has returned to the Meteorological Office, Toronto, after his long Arcticward Government trip, having traveled by canoe and scow as far north as Fort McPherson, inspecting the different observatories and making experimental kite flying observations en route.

Flax—No. 1 N.W.C., $1.12; No. 2 C.W., $1.09.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Oct. 22.—There was a fair demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today, and as bids were in line with exporters' views sales of 150,000 bushels were made, but the volume of business was checked owing to the increased scarcity of ocean grain room. There was also some demand from exporters for wheat on spot, and sales of 20,000 bushels of No. 1 northern were made at $1.19¾, and 45,000 bushels of No. 3 at $1.14½ per bushel, c.i.f. The demand from local dealers for oats was good, and sales of 140,000 bushels of No. 2 feed were made at 54¼c, and 20,000 bushels at 54½c, while 65,000 bushels No. 1 feed sold at 55½c per bushel, c.i.f.

Flour continues quiet, but the tone of the market is firm. The trade in millfeed is quiet. Hay is more active and stronger at an advance of 50c per ton.

Demand for butter is quiet, and prices rule steady.

There was some business done in cheese over the cable, but the sales were principally small lots.

Demand for eggs is good, and the undertone to the market is strong.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 22.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.15; No. 1 northern, $1.11½ to $1.14; No. 2 do., $1.08½ to $1.12½; Dec., $1.12.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 70c to 72c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 46¼c to 46½c.

Flour and bran—Unchanged.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Oct. 22.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.15⅝; No. 1 northern, $1.14⅝; No. 2 northern, $1.11⅝; Dec., $1.13⅝ to $1.13½.

STABILITY OF THE NATION PIVOTS ON THE HOME LIFE

Interest in Dr. Gordons Meetings Continue— Some Questions Are Answered

St. Paul's Church was crowded to the doors last evening, for the fourth meeting in the series of services, conducted in connection with the campaign for Christian Citizenship. Every inch of available standing room was occupied, and scores were turned away. One striking feature, was the large attendance of business men, young men and mechanics, and the masculine element seems to grow stronger, with every additional meeting.

Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the colored singer, was in fine form last night and rendered three great selections. "The Man of Galilee," to the tune of "Annie Laurie," "I Love Him," to the tune of "Old Black Joe," and also the "Crucifixion Song," a selection which is called for by the audience, again and again, in evey campaign. This evening, Mr. Greenlaw will sing "The Dream of Paradise," "He Lifted Me," and "Tell Mother I'll be There."

Professor Edward Hesselberg, presided at the piano, and rendered several of his characteristic selections.

The following questions were answered by Dr. Gordon, in brief but pungent paragraphs:

1. How do you account for the sudden temptation to commit some awful sin which sometimes comes into the minds of very good people?
2. Is there anything in the use of tobacco that makes men selfish?
3. Is it honorable to listen to a private conversation on a party telephone line?
4. Can a flatterer be a sincere friend?
5. What would you do if outside relatives interfered with the happiness of your home?
6. What is the most dangerous hour in a young woman's life?

The following is a brief outline of the address by Dr. Gordon, in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church last evening:

"Youth has three visions: The vision of God. The vision of Duty. The vision of Love. The vision of God touches the realm of religion and the soul. The vision of Duty concerns responsibility and achievement. The vision of Love finds its fulfilment and realization in the home life. That sacred threefold vision comes to us all. Happy the man or woman who finds that glory of the vision hours of early youth loses nothing of its spiritual splendour with the increasing years. Louis IX. of France, who married Princess Margaret of Provence, wore a ring on which were inscribed three words: "God," "France," "Margaret." He was accustomed to remark: "I have no other love outside this ring."

Home, the Foundation.

"The foundation of an empire is the home. The strength of a republic is the home. The glory of a civilization is the home. The crown of a true church is the home. The stability of the nation pivots on the home. "The nation rests on the cottage," said John Bright. Oh, the home life! How the memories of the old homestead come sweeping over us."

"A man never travels so far that he gets beyond the shadow of the old homestead, and the most men never rise higher than the ideals worshipped there. The writer who referred to the poet Byron as "half God and half devil" may not have known that his father was a spendthrift and his mother the incarnation of a temperament which bordered on insanity. Harriet Martineau speaks thus of her early days: "My life had no spring, no violets, no early flowers." "The first five years of my life made me an infidel," said Thomas Paine.

Homes Without Religion.

"How dare young people establish their homes without religion and assume the responsibility of childhood without God? Better send a new Titanic out to mid-ocean without captain or crew. An infidel Christian, if you will pardon the paradox,—a worn-out, backslidden saint, deceived by the evil one and fascinated by the world, once remarked, in sad accents, "I have a little girl, three years old, and I don't know what to do with her. Once I could teach her to say, 'Now I lay me down to sleep,' but I can't now."

"An old preacher said to evangelist "Sam" Jones: "In my first charge, and during the first six months, I married one of my Christian young men to a worldly minded, unchristian girl; and also one of my Christian girls to a worldly minded and unchristian man. Inside of six months the Christian girl had brought her husband into the Church, while the gay and giddy girl had caried her husband out of the church."

"The first years of married life are apt to determine the destiny of a family. The hardest year in the establishment of a home is very often the first year. Learning to live together is the greatest problem in life. Two wills, two natures, two temperaments, two souls — coming into contact. What an opportunity for tact, consideration and fair play. How many biographies have been written in blood. Such was Shelley's. "She can't bear solitude and I can't bear society — the living chained to the dead," muttered the great poet. The greatest tragedies are the tragedies of the home life.

"When two people are determined to have their own way in all respects and particulars, there can be but one result. Look out for a tragedy! There are masculine tyrants and feminine popes. A home is not the throne-room of a despot but the virgin soil for the establishment of a miniature republic. John Ruskin used to say that the characteristic thing about a mean man was the way in which he pronounced the personal pronoun "I."

"Better the stalwart strength of a strong character than, lacking character, the polished exterior of a shallow personality. Stanley, the explorer, was stern, exacting, uncompromising, silent and inscrutable," but his companions could say: "While we were all afraid of him, yet we all believed in him." Character, that's the word. Character is the diamond which scratches every other stone.

Social Drinking.

"The social drinking customs of the hour threaten the permanency of our Christian institutions. The saloon is the organized enemy of the home. The distiller quaffs a goblet full to the brim with liquid agony and feeds like some monster of ancient mythology on human hearts, crushed, pierced, bruised, broken and torn. I would take my chances on the day of judgment with Judas Iscariot, rather than with the brewer who coins sorrow into silver, blood into bonds and manhood into the merchandise of ill-gotten wealth. He has no hesitation in crowding his hellish products, by display "ads." and electric signs, upon the unsuspecting youth of the community, and I have no hesitation in branding him as the arch traitor of the race, the incarnation of commercial meanness, and the last surviving specimen of social piracy which threatens the existence of every frail human barque floating on the tempestuous waters of our modern life.

This evening Dr. Gordon will speak on "the fools of modern society." Both men and women will receive particular attention in this discourse and all classes will be interested.

Two thousand copies of Dr. Gordon's printed address, on "The hand that rocks the cradle," will be distributed at this evening's meeting. This means, that everybody will get a form.

HAD SPLENDID SPORT IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mr. L. A. Robison, General Passenger Agent, New York Central Lines, has just completed a successful hunting trip in the Yellowhead Pass region of British Columbia. He bagged two grizzly bears, three caribou and a moose and he declares that he is going back next fall. He is enthusiastic over the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and the territory which it has opened up. He was a passenger on the second through train, between Edmonton and Prince Rupert, over the newly completed Western section of the line. He says the G.T.P. will lead to largely increased trade between the North-western part of the United States and Canada.

RAPID RETREAT FROM WARSAW BY GERMANS

Russian War Office Says That Desperate Fighting Continues in Galicia Where Russians Have Taken Many Guns and Over 2,000 Men—German Losses in Marshes of Poland Have Been Heavy.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 23. — The official communication issued by General Headquarters last night says:

"The rapid retreat of the Germans from Warsaw continues. The bombardment of the enemy's heavy artillery has caused no essential damage to the fortifications of Ivangorod or the bridges.

"In Galicia desperate engagements are still being fought. During the advance in the region between Przemysl and the Vistula we captured more than 30 officers, 2,000 soldiers and many rapid-fire guns. To the south of Przemysl the Russian operations are developing, also with success.

"The Russian troops displayed exceptional energy in coming to the defence of Warsaw and saving the city from a German bombardment. The Russian concentration was effected with greater swiftness than was called for by strategical reasons.

"The seventeenth German corps and some of their reserve troops who attempted to push forward in the region between Blonie and Prouschkoff, suffered severely. It was there that the Siberian troops, together with other Russian forces, inflicted terrible losses on the enemy. Many villages in the vicinity were taken and retaken in hand-to-hand fighting."

Retreated 18 Miles.

ROME, Oct. 23. — A despatch to The Corriere Heras yesterday, from Petrograd, states that the Austro-German forces have been compelled to retreat 18 miles to the westward. The battle has been renewed on the Vistula river with extreme violence.

The Germans have lost heavily in artillery and munitions of war in the marshes of Poland.

Watch the East, Says Belloc.

LONDON, Oct. 23. — Emphasizing the importance of the operations around Warsaw, Hilaire Belloc, the famous writer on military topics, says: "It is obvious the Russian plan must be a turning movement around the north of the enemy by way of Warsaw. They know this is largely a campaign of exhaustion. They know the enemy has rendered his own communications insecure by a false policy of cruelty toward the peasants. They know he has in his retirement but few roads or railways to depend upon—roads and railways which will be hopelessly clogged in any pressed retirement.

"The Germans have massed themselves, it is said, in not less than five army corps in front of Warsaw—a third of all they have upon the Vistula. It is probable that an appreciable result in Russian Poland will in a short time either release the Germans for the west or in the absence of such reinforcements compel the German line in the west to retire.

"That is why it is the business of all," says Hilaire Belloc, "to keep their eyes fixed upon this eastern field."

Cossack Captured General.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 23.—A startling story is told by an official from Lvoff, Lemberg. An Austrian general ordered a Cossack captured alive and brought to the Austrian camp to prove that he was no better swordsman than the Austrians. When the general handed him a sword the Cossack wielded it wildly, leaped upon the horse where the general was sitting and drove madly away. The Austrians feared to shoot lest they kill their own general, who is now in Russian captivity.

ON BOARD A DIRIGIBLE.

(From Popular Mechanics.)

The bringing of a flame, or anything capable of causing a flame, to the vicinity of a dirigible is one of the things most guarded against. Recently a dirigible landed outside of Milan, Italy, and was soon surrounded by a crowd. Despite repeated warnings of the officers aboard, some one lighted a cigar. Immediately there was a tremendous explosion, 50 persons were severely burned and the dirigible entirely destroyed.

The seriousness of the danger of an explosion on a dirigible was emphasized in a recent work of fiction, in which an officer of a German dirigible discovered a single match in the clothing of one of the crew. The culprit, in the story, was instantly courtmartialed, condemned and executed for placing the lives of his companions in jeopardy.

The gathering will be addressed by prominent workers from this city.

A true heart penetrateth heaven. —Thomas A Kempis.

A university professor is very popular among the students. He was entertaining a group of them at his residence one night. Taking down a magnificent sword that hung over the fireplace, he brandished it about, exclaiming, "Never will I forget the day I drew this blade for the first time." "Where did you draw it, sir?" an awestruck freshman asked. "At a raffle," said the professor.

The following sentences appeared in the small boy's letter to his chum:

"You know Bob Jones' neck. Well, he fell in he river up to it."

HYDRO RADIAL RAILWAYS FOR THIS DISTRICT

Address by Sir Adam Beck is Postponed Indefinitely

A communication was received by City Clerk Armstrong this morning from Sir Adam Beck, in answer to the Clerk's letter, asking him to come to this city and address a public meeting on radial lines, which would connect Peterboro with surrounding villages and country districts.

Sir Adam claims it to be a very opportune time owing to the money stringency and the fact that the Dominion Govenment has not settled the matter of a subsidy toward the railway. This will necessarily mean that the idea of holding a meeting will be laid over for the time being, although citizens having dreams of going via radial to Lakefield and back, the lakes or to Centreville and Bewdley should not give up hopes. With the Mayor in hearty sympathy with the movement it will not die because of a short set back.

Sir Adam Beck's letter further stated that he would like to have the Hydro Electric matter in Peterboro in a more settled condition as far as the supply of power is concerned.

PREPARING FOR THE FRONT

A tribute to the Belfast Agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway is paid by the "Belfast Daily Telegraph" of October 10th, which reproduces a photograph of Mr. W. McCalla, the Belfast agent of the company, together with his staff, all in regimentals. "The C. P. R.," it says, "has placed the benefit of its widespread organization at the service of the Empire in the present crisis, and has developed itself into a great recruiting agency for the British Army. Every office is a centre of patriotic activity, and the company's employees have given an excellent lead to others in joining the King's forces in large numbers. The Belfast office, so capably managed by Mr. McCalla is no exception, and the group of the chief and his staff, shown herewith no fewer than six are now preparing for the front as recently-joined members of Lord Kitchener's Army. The display of pictorial posters in the windows of the Victoria Street offices is very fine, and certainly it cannot be said that the Belfast staff has been deaf to the stirring appeal under one of the most effective of them:—

Lads of desk and wheel and loom,
Noble and trader, squire and groom,
Come where the bugles of England
play,
Over the hills and far away.

SEED GROWERS' OPPORTUNITY.

The provincial winter fair, which is held at Guelph early in December each year, has many excellent educational features, one of the most valuable being the seed exhibit. During the past few years this department has grown rapidly and the interest taken in it has constantly increased. Its value has been recognized by the management and this year increased space has been allotted, more classes have been provided, and the prize list has been increased by about $300.

This offers an excellent opportunity for all farmers who have good seed for sale to advertise it and compete for prizes. Those who send creditable entries representing larger lots held for sale will have a good chance to dispose of their seed to advantage.

BRITISH NAVAL GUNS OUTRANGE GERMAN ARTILLERY

Admiralty's Report of the Participation of the Fleet in Land Operations Along the Coast of France and Belgium Show That Effective Work Has Been Done by Ships---Naval Losses Small.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Secretary of the Admiralty issued last night the following statement of the operations of the British warships in co-operation with the allied army:

"On Oct. 18 requests for naval assistance was made to the Admiralty by the allied commanders. In consequence, a naval flotilla mounting a large number of powerful long-range guns came into action at daybreak on the 19th, off the Belgian coast, supporting the left of the Belgian army and firing against the right of the German attack, which they were, by their position, enabled to enfilade.

"The Germans replied by shells from their heavy guns, but, owing to the superior range of the British marine artillery, practically no damage has been done.

"Three monitors, which were building in British ports for Brazil, and were acquired on the outbreak of the war, have proved particularly well suited to this class of operation. A heavy bombardment on the German flank has been maintained without intermission since the morning of the 19th and is being continued to-day.

"Observation is arranged from shore by means of naval balloons, and all reports indicate that substantial losses have been inflicted upon the enemy, and that the fire is well directed and effective against his batteries and heavy guns.

"Yesterday a considerable explosion, probably of an ammunition wagon, followed upon a naval shot. The naval losses have so far been very small, considering the damage and the important assistance rendered to the Belgian left flank.

"All reports received by the Admiral show the courage and determination with which the Belgian army, animated by the King in person, is defending the last few miles of Belgian soil.

"The naval operations are under the command of Rear-Admiral the Hon. Horace L. A. Hood."

Submarine E3 Long Overdue

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Secretary of the Admiralty announces that the submarine E3, commanded by Lieut.-Commander George Chomley, is now considerably overdue, and that it is feared she has been sunk in the North Sea.

A wireless despatch received from Berlin on Tuesday said the E3 had been sunk Sunday, Oct. 18, by German warships. Her complement consisted of 16 men.

It is also reported that the British torpedo boat Dryad is ashore at Kirkwall, in the Orkney Islands, off the coast of Scotland. Her crew is said to have been saved.

The Dryad, which was built in 1893, is 250 feet long, and has a speed of 18.5 knots an hour. She has been attached to the navigation school at Portsmouth.

There are in commission in the British navy now 232 destroyers and 59 torpedo boats.

Boston women have won their fight against the high street car steps.

DEFIED THE ENEMY

Fort Troyon With Small Force Held 10,000 Germans at Bay

LONDON, Oct. 23. — The Standard's Paris correspondent says: It has already been related how gallantly the little Fort Troyon defied the Germans on the Meuse, but it is only just being realised what a service its garrison rendered the allied force for five days. A force of 450 men kept 10,000 Germans at bay, notwithstanding the awful pounding from the terrible guns that gave the deathblow to Liege, Namur and other strongholds. After two days' bombardment the enemy tried to carry the fort by storm. They got within ten yards, but fell in such numbers they had to withdraw. Next day they summoned the garrison to surrender. "Never," was the reply.

"Then we shall shell you with our heavy guns until you and your fort are but a heap of cinders," retorted the German commander. They almost had time to carry out the threat before relief came. When the siege was raised nothing was left of the fort, while over half its defenders had been buried alive in its ruins. The captain in command was wounded in 28 places, and his lieutenant had his leg blown away. The governor of Verdun came in person to congratulate the garrison on the magnificent feat, and ever since a stream of generals and higher officers from all sides has come to see the damage done. Every regiment that passes has orders to halt and render the garrison military honors. The defenders have been loaded with presents in recognition of their heroic defence.

Belgian Refugees Refuse to go to Towns Occupied by Germans

FLUSHING, Oct. 23. — (Via London)—A total of 8,000 penniless Belgians, quartered to-day in Flushing, absolutely refuse to return to their homes in Antwerp or other Belgian cities in the hands of the Germans. It is true a hundred refugees did go back to Antwerp Wednesday and that an equal number left yesterday, but the movement to get large numbers to return to the city in the possession of the enemy has been futile.

All the school and church buildings of Flushing are at the present time occupied by impoverished Belgians. The schools have been dismissed to accommodate them.

The normal population of this city is 20,000, but it is to-day augmented by probably 10,000 Belgians, only 2,000 of whom have funds and are able to pay their way. The municipality is bearing the expense of feeding and sheltering those who are without money.

Snakes in Squirrel's Cage.

A small red squirrel caged in the natural history section of the Government building was so frightened recently that it held by its claws to the sides of its wire cage nearly all night. Two riband snakes from the cage next to it some way managed to get into its compartment. One took possession of the water pan, where all the squirrel's food was, and another patrolled the bottom of the cage.

The snakes were removed by attendants after being in the cage several hours.

IT IS THE ENGLISH CUSTOM

Field Marshall Sir Evelyn Wood told some interesting stories at a meeting which he addressed in London recently. Referring to the charges of brutality made against the Germans, he said:—

"We need not fear that the British soldier will ever descend to making reprisals. Thirty-five years ago I was commanding 18,000 men, who fought against 23,000 brave Zulus for five hours and a half. They attacked with the undaunted courage of savages who did not realize the effect of modern rifles, and the following morning we buried, besides a vast number elsewhere, 884 close up to one face of the laggered wagons behind which our men stood. When the fight was over I desired a few friendly Zulus who were attached to the companies under my command to collect men of every regiment promising for each uninjured man a 'stick' of tobacco. Next morning there was a group outside my tent of magnificent speciment of humanity. When I got all the information I required, I said, 'Two months, when after a skirmish our doctors cared for your wounded, and a few days later you overwhelmed our camp, killing 1,500 of our men, you did not spare those who had been attending on your brothers. Will one of you say why I should not kill you?" Said a young giant, 'May I speak, O Master? You ask why you should not kill us; I answer, because it is not the English custom.'

First Duty of a Citizen.

"This is the character our race bears in the North, South, East, and West Africa, and I hope it may ever continue, for reprisals are not only useless, but would sensibly lessen the grand fighting value of our soldiers. The troops at the assault of Delhi in 1857, when embittered by horrible stories, many exaggerated, and at Jhansi in 1858, were seen deliberately lifting women and little children out of the line of fire. Such conduct is a part of our national inheritance."

Sir Evelyn said this war would test Britons and deepen the spirit of self-sacrifice and devotion to duty. Our people were realizing now that the first duty of a citizen was to fit himself to defend his country. That we had yet time to repair our refusal to admit the accuracy of this truism was due to the unceasing watch of our seamen in mine-strewn waters.

Story of the Kaiser.

"In June, 1889, when the German Emperor saw the Aldershot Division carrying out operations, pointing to some cavalry in the distance, he asked me, 'How many squadrons hve you got in the field today?' I replied, 'Sixteen, your Majesty,' when he said, 'If you will come and see my manoeuvres in September I will show you 64 squadrons.'

"We admit the Germans are brave, but so far they have not ridden over our regiments. Their horses are trained for two years before they are passed into the ranks, and while it is impossible for one man to fight three or four with a certainty of success, I have always believed that individually our cavalry are better horsemen, and we certainly attack without hesitation twice their number of Germans."

Sir Evelyn told a good story of Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien: "In 1882 I was left 12 miles outside Alexandria with six battalions to cover a frontage of over five miles, which in the previous week had been penetrated by the enemy. I sent an order into Alexandria for a smart subaltern, who was to go to the Khedive's stable and all the saddler's shops and produce in one day some mounted infantry. Smith-Dorrien received the order at 1.30 p.m., and at 6.30, with 81 horses, three mules, and a donkey, carrying Derbyshire men, the Sherwood Foresters, few of them had ridden before, he passed me at Raziah, went out into the desert, engaged an Egyptian outpost, killed its commander, and never let them inside our line again."

French "Always Reading."

A story of Sir John French followed: "When I inspected his regiment, he being a major, many years ago, I asked the colonel, pointing to him: 'Of what value?' He replied: 'For ever reading military books.' He has been reading ever since.' In 1895, when we were retiring across the Byuda desert, after the failure to save Gordon, I saw Major French coming back the last man of the last section of the rearguard."

OPERATIONS IN NORTH SHOW STEADY GAIN

Reported Occupation of Courtrai Further Isolates Lille, Which is Critical Point of Turning Movement—Two Wedges Driven in Near City

LONDON, Oct. 23.—From the Belgian coast to a point beyond St. Mihiel fighting was continuous yesterday. The result favors the allies in every instance, important advances being reported in the neighborhood of Lille. It is said that Roulers is again in the hands of the allies, but it is not known whether Franco-British or Belgian forces have effected the capture. On Tuesday the Belgian advance rested on this point, and it was claimed that a further penetration of King Albert's troops in that zone would seriously imperil the German forces between Roulers and the Channel coast. The town of Ypres was the centre of desperate fighting yesterday, heavy reinforcements from the south of France enabling the allies to strengthen their lines from Ypres to the edge of the Channel.

A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Flushing says: "Wednesday night nad yesterday the Germans made a violent attack on the environs of Ostend, which was repulsed by an energetic counter-attack by the Belgians.

"Eleven British warships fired on the Germans yesterday morning. Gen. Von Trip and his staff, who were together in Leffinghe, near Middlekerke, were killed by the fire of the British naval guns."

The situation in western Flanders, where the latest German drive has met with a better organized resistance than any which faced the Kaiser's armies in the early days of the war, is befogged by many reports. It is stated that every town on the fighting line has been taken and retaken several times, and that the British warships are wrecking vengeance on the Kaiser's lines within reach of their powerful guns. From Ostend comes a report that the allies have succeeded in destroying the railroad between Bruges and Ghent. This is in no way confirmed, but, if it proves true, signifies that allied cavalry in force has cut into the heart of the German position in Belgium. A despatch to The Daily Mail says that Courtrai has been occupied by the allies. Courtrai is an exceedingly vital point, and its possession would give the Franco-British forces control of railway lines which would further isolate the Germans at Lille.

Dixmude is one of the towns which the Germans retook from the allies, only to be driven out a few hours later by a desperate bayonet charge. House-to-house fighting continued for some time, in which the losses on both sides were heavy.

The chief success of the allies as the result of Thursday's operations were perceptible gains around Lille. It is claimed that a wedge has been driven into the Germans at a point thirteen miles north of the town, and that a distance of two miles was gained on the east of Lille. This eastern advance is the first of any moment since the action around Lille assumed much importance, and has caused great jubilance among the allied commanders. The tactics at this point are directed toward isolation of the city, which is the critical point in the movement to double the German right wing back on its own lines of communication.

From Roye to Arras considerable fighting took place yesterday morning, but without special significance, further than a very successful artillery exchange near Roye, where the French 75-millimetre guns silenced several German batteries.

The flanking operations of the French to the east of St. Mihiel, held by the German crown prince's troops, was met yesterday by a stubborn counter-attack on the part of the Germans. This attack was repulsed several times, and the efforts of the French to secure control of all highways running to Metz is progressing very nicely. The armies of the republic are hammering steadily at Etain, and it would seem that the town cannot hold out much longer. The French have a secure foothold on the right bank of the Meuse, and are displaying the most brilliant spirit in pushing the advantage gained a few days since. It is declared that French tactics in this quarter have excited the admiration of their British allies in the highest degree.

West of Craonne and in the vicinity of Souain the Kaiser's commanders yesterday threw forward masses of fresh troops to test the French lines. They met with a stubborn resistance and failed to gain ground. The chief significance of this action is the apparent effort of the Germans to resume the offensive in that quarter.

Armentieres was again under fire yesterday, with both sides striving ineffectually to gain an advantage.

Eight Million "You's"

Your individual contribution to Canada's prosperity is important.

This is the time when every Canadian's support is needed, every Canadian means you—yes you.

Don't figure that the amount of goods you individually consume would not amount to a "drop in the bucket." Multiply your purchases by eight million and you will see what you can do for Canada by purchasing only goods "Made in Canada."

This message is for eight million "you's." If you all do your part every Canadian and every Canadian industry will be working at top speed.

You, yourself, cannot fail to benefit by the prosperity this will create for all of Canada.

"Made in Canada" Will Make Canada.

BRAVES MADE UP POOL FOR THE INELIGIBLES

Boston, Oct. 22. — The Braves, who came into possession of quite a bundle of money as a result of the world's championship series, showed quite a commendable spirit of generosity in sharing their good fortune with others who, according to the arbitrary rules laid down, were not entitled to benefit.

After they had drawn their shares, the Braves made up a pool and those ineligible were provided for.

Willie Connor, the mascot and batboy, was given $250; Jimmy Neary, the trainer, was given $1000; Tom Hughes, the pitcher who was with the club about ten days or so, coming from the Rochester club of the International league, was given $500; Bill Martin, the Georgetown boy who came to the club crippled and got into only the last game of the season, also was given $500.

Herman Nickerson, the secretary of the club, was given $1000.

All this came from the players themselves.

They also made presents to Dick Rudolph and George Tyler, Bill James and Hank Gowdy.

Rudolph and Tyler, being married men, were given silver sets, and James and Gowdy were given diamond rings.

Gowdy, Maranville, James and Rudolph each received a bonus of $1000 from the Boston club for their good work, and while it is not known definitely, it is understood that Charley Schmidt, the big first baseman, was also remembered when the bonuses were passed around.

Manager Stallings will personally see that Fred Tyler is remembered.

It does not appear that anyone was overlooked and everybody is happy.

Most of the Braves are already on their way to their respective homes, and are scattered to the four winds, not to come together again as an organization until they meet in Macon next spring to go into training for another campaign.

'Tis said that in Berlin business men are willing to contribute half the funds required to finance a ball team in the 1915 Canadian League. That's proof of the assertion that baseball is a big help to a city as Berlin has been without a team in the Canadian League during the past season. The idea might possibly be tied out here. The business men and merchants of Peterboo should put forth an effort to keep the city represented in Fitz's circuit.

NEGOTIATIONS IN PROGRESS FOR SALE OF CHICAGO CUBS

Cincinnati, October 23.—Garry Herrman, chairman of the National Baseball commission, confirmed reports of a peace pact between the Federals and organized baseball, when he declared negotiations are on for the sale of the Chicago Cubs to Charles Weegham, proprietor of the Chicago Federals.

Hermann said that so far as he knew the contemplated deal was not near completion.

"Weeghman and I had a talk in New York recently," said Hermann. "The sale of the Cubs was discussed. I know that such negotiations are on."

Under the plan Weegham will get control of the Chicago National league team, in which Charles Taft at present owns the greatest interest. Hermann said he knew nothing of the reported deal for the taking over of the Brooklyn league club by Robert Ward, owner of the Brooklyn Federals.

TO OPERATE ON UMPS BEDFORD

For Injury Received in Canadian League Game

New Haven, Oct. 23.—Bobby Bedford, well-known local arbiter and Canadian League umpire, went to St. Raphael's Hospital to undergo an operation. Bedford, umpiring behind the plate in a game at London, four days before the Canadian organization closed, was struck by a foul tip that laid him low. Though warned that if he continued to work the effects might be fatal, Bedford pluckily stuck it out for the rest of the season and then returned to his home in this city.

Bobby has been staying at the Hotel Garde since his arrival here. His medical attendant, Dr. Pallman, advised an immediate operation, but the arbiter would not have it. He stated that he was going to stick it out until the world's series had been finished. Bedford, who used to hold the indicator in the old Connecticut League, was for years interested with Jim Cnavan in the Playograph at the armory.

Despite Dr. Pallman's orders, Bobby left his bed each day of the battles for the world title, and walked over to the armory, where he remained every afternoon until the last man had been declared out on the board.

Dr. Pallman says that his patient is in excellent physical condition for the operation, which will be performed in the course of a few days. Bedford says he is in great shape, and he looks it as he gamely marched down the Garde lobby shaking hands with his friends.

COMMENT

As You Like it

Eddie Wright, the former St. Thomas third baseman, now on the roaster of the Providence International League team is confined to the hospital at Joliet, Ill., with appendicitis.

It looks as though London will have to dig up a new manager for 1915 as Doc Reisling isn't anxious to undertake the burden at the same salary. With the hole left by Louis Bierbauer and a couple of pitchers and catchers needed the new pilot will have a job ahead of him.

Boxing, a London magazine, has made a request for a thousand sets of boxing gloves to be donated to the British soldiers.

Boxing contests form one of the principal pastimes with the English soldier.

At the present time there are 130,000 soldiers at Aldershot drilling and training for the war.

As there are few exercises that will fit a man physically quicker than boxing, there has been a big demand for more gloves—just boxing gloves of any make or color.

Several firms have agreed to make new gloves for cost, provided they are donated to the army.

The practice of boxing has no doubt had a lot to do with the courage of the English soldiers. People in this country who try to cry down the practice of boxing and boxing contests, should remember that it has been said many times, that the time to prepare for war was in times of peace.

"There are over 200,000 men training at various camps throughout the kingdom, and there are going to be 500,000 more within the next three months. Well, there men can do with boxing gloves. They will be better, brighter, happier men if they have them, and it is absolutely certain that they will be fitter men in every way," said the editor of Boxing.

By-law Regulates Use of Fire-arms

At a meeting of the Otonabee Council a by-law was passed to regulate the discharge of fire arms in the township. Residents of the township may carry or discharge for any lawful purpose upon lands owned or occupied by them, but non-residents will have to have permission from the owner or occupant of premises before they can carry or discharge any fire arms on the said premises, which also includes the highways of the township. Anyone violating the provisions of the by-law, upon conviction before a justice of the peace will incur a penalty of not less than $1 or more than $20.

On motion, the collectors bonds were approved. The following accounts were passed: for gravel, Jas. Davidson, $5; John Webster, $19.20, cleaning out pit, $15, drawing tile, $1.75; D. McCarthy, $8; M. Y. Crowley, $1.65; Mrs. McNaughton, $1.75; Thos. Fox, $2.24; Wm. O'Leary, $3.60; John Crowell, $4.80; J. C. Waldie, wire fence, $4.50; Bruce Savigney, $17.75; John Johnston, $25 for opening ¼ line opposite lot 22, con. 16; Jas. Hogan, repairing water pipe, $1; P. Bolin, 60 cents, for blasting powder; D. Kennelly, making tile, $14.10; W. J. Miller, lime and drawing lime, sand and poles for hall chimney, $5.05; Wm. Doucetta, building chimneys, $62.40; Geo. Simpson, excavating well on Hanlon's hill for water tank, $25; Wm. Edwards, blasting stone on road, $1; Wm. Wedlock, plank, $54.22; E. H. Mann & Co., plank, $5; Patrick Conroy, cutting brush, $8; F. Walsh, care of road during fire, $15; J. M. Drummond, attending judges' Court of Revision, $28.11.

Council adjourned to the 16th of November.

KAISER TO BLAME

His Insistence on Advance Responsible for Plight of Forces

LONDON, Oct. 22. — The Danish press is authority for a story that Emperor William and his generals had a severe disagreement after the battle of the Marne. In the face of all military precedent and common sense, with the right flank seriously threatened, he insisted on an advance and a general debacle was only avoided by noncompliance with the Kaiser's order.

When the haughty German war lord was told of the retreat of the Prussian Guard at Vitry-le-Francois, he is reported to have said: "That and Gen. von Hausen still living? A Samurai would have acted otherwise." This phrase is said to have sunk into the hearts of the German commanders and to have aroused profound misgivings over the future, each man feeling that his imperial maste. would sacrifice both commander and men as the merest slaves to carry out one of his own ideas.

LINDSAY HEARS OF ANOTHER GOOD THING

Chance to Get Heat, Light and Electricity Plant

(Lindsay Warder.)

Mr. Paul Schlicht, a gentleman who has been residing in Lindsay for several months past, eloquently addressed the august body of town aldermen last night, requesting a franchise from the town whereby he might be enabled to established a plant to produce heat, light and electricity.

The speaker portrayed in glowing terms the great future of such a plant and the necessity of the town grappling with his scheme. In part he said he had lived in Lindsay 42 years ago and after travelling in various countries concluded that he would return to the town which in youth he loved the best, and give the people the benefit of the knowledge he had acquired while away and which would be a civic benefit.

Cobourg and Port Hope offered his company 42 acres of land free if he would establish his plant in either of the towns, but he would give Lindsay the preference. The firm is known as the Light, Heat and Power Co. of America.

The company would install a large coke oven from which heat, steam and many other benefits could be derived.

The speaker said : "Cheap power is what you want, and you have not got it. The possibilities for this plant are great in a town the size of Lindsay and with its surroundings. electricity is one great factor to promote a town's growth, and this is what our plant will furnish, and give it cheaper than the hydro-electric.

Natural gas may give out, but coal mines never will. All wires will be placed underground to convey electricity, and the work I purpose going on with will cost about $600,000."

Mayor Beal—What do you want the town to do ?

Mr. Schlicht—Nothing, only grant a franchise that will pass the scrutiny of our solicitors.

Ald. Nicholls—Where are your plants operating now ?

Mr. Schlicht—Principally in Europe.

Mayor Beal—What will your company give in exchange for the franchise ?

Mr. Schlicht—Anything that you desire which will be agreeable to the town and our company. In the smallest plant we build 6,000,000 feet of gas per day is manufactured.

Dr. Irvine—Have you plants in the United States?

Mr. Schlicht—No, but we have them in Belgium and England.

Through peculiar circumstances the speaker said he could place the initials F.R.S.A. after his signature, and his daily fee in Germany for information in connection with his own business was $250 per day.

Ald. Nicholls put some sharp questions to the speaker, who replied that the bull dog of the council was away (meaning Ald. Chambers), and if he (Nicholls) was wanting information it would be freely given.

Ald. Irvine—Would your plant run a shoe factory?

A Voice—If B. D. Thomas was not around.

Mr. Schlicht—It will run anything.

On motion of Ald. Sims and Clark a committee will wait upon Mr. Schlicht and deal fully with the matter.

It is probable that the town will ask a guarantee of $50,000 from the petitioner before granting a franchise.

HUNTED A GRIZZLY

Messrs. W. Thorton, Kay and Picard have returned from the north country. They have been holidaying for a week, at Silver Lake. The hunting is reported to be good. "Bill" Thornton tells a tale of chasing a bear, for two days, but the grizzly eluded him. We cannot vouch for this tale, as it is a little "bare" of facts.

HOGATH—BARNARD.

At St. John's Church, Norway, a pretty wedding was solemnized of Kate, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Barnard, to Mr. James Hogath. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a charming dress of ivory lace, trimmed with satin and seed pearls; also veil and orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley, and was attended by Miss Mary Hogath, who wore a white shadow lace dress, trimmed with pale pink satin and white hat, with plume, and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations. The bridegrooms's gift to the bride was a gold wrist watch. The bridesmaid's gift from the groom was a plain gold bracelet. Mr. Fred Barnard was best man. The Rev. W. L. Baynes Reid officiated. After the ceremony a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents. The happy couple left at 5 o'clock to spend the honeymoon at Peterboro. The bride travelled in a navy suit, with black velvet hat and white plume. — Toronto Telegram.

CANON PULLEN WAS THE AUTHOR

Wrote "The Fight at Dame Europa's School" in 1871

Mr. Dela Fosse, the librarian, has shown The Review a bound volume of the English paper "Once a Week," for the year 1871 in which appears a note about the pamphlet "The Fight at Dame Europa's School" which was published in last night's edition. Here we learn that the pamphlet was written while the Franco-Prussian War was in progress. Upwards of 100,000 copies were sold at the time of writing in the Once a Week. The Rev. Canon Henry Pullen of Salisbury Cathedral, who later went with the Nares' expedition to the Arctic, was the author. A Dame school is a boarding and day school for small boys kept by a lady. Bobby refers to Robert Lane, an Albino, Chancellor of the Exchequer. Once a Week says the brochure's popularity belongs only to the time being, but the truth of the forecast has made it of more than passing importance.

In Countries Of the Allies

Novel Entertainment by Ladies Aid Pleases Many

The unique entertainment given by the Charlotte St. Ladies' Aid, known as a "Trip to the Allies" has met with distinct favor. Yesterday afternoon and evening many citizens availed themselves of the opportunity of visit surroundings which were typical of the homes of the Allies now combating with that archenemy, Kaiser William of Germany. The novel form of entertainment is made up of an auto drive commencing at "Canada," the home of Mrs. S. Clegg, 295 Stewart Street, and proceeding to several residences, each bearing name, national decorations and customs of countries.

The itinerary included the following:—

"British Isles," the home of Mrs. A. F. Lane, 422 Rubidge St.; "Japan," the home of Mrs. (Dr.) Morrison, cor. Park and Hunter Sts.; "Russia," the home of Mrs. A. Parker, 384 Park St.; "France," the home of Mrs. M. W. Lyle, 317 Park St.; "Belgium," the home of Mrs. Jos. Walsh, 317 Margaret Ave.; "United States," the home of Mrs. A. F. Bookhout, 297 Maitland Ave.

All of the above homes were handsomely decorated with bunting, flags and pennants. Material for this was very generously given by local merchants, especially Richard Hall and Son. At each place the ladies were gowned in costumes of the country which they represented. Entertainment such as vocal solos and instrumental selections assisted in pleasing the guests.

Refreshments, typical of the country, were served. At Japan, the tea drinkers held positions in the centre of the floor while at France, the visitors were privileged by being served with French wines.

At each station two boy scouts acted as marshals. This evening between 7.30 o'clock and 9.30 o'clock will be the last opportunity to enjoy this unique entertainment.

MME THEBES CALLS ALLIED FORCES TO WIN

Emperor William is not Right in His Head She Says

Paris, Oct. 23.—Mme. de Thebes, the famous French professional "prophetess," on her return to Paris from her country home denied the authenticity of all prophecies about the German Emperor and the war which have been attributed to her recently in the newspapers of various countries.

Speaking to the representative of a Paris newspaper, in a prophetic vein, Mme. de Thebes said: "I said, and I say again, that France will issue from this trial more powerful than ever before. We are still, up to March, 1915, that is to the end of the astral year of 1914, which ends on March 20, 1915, under the double terrible influence of Mars and Saturn, two planets whose conjunction was to be disastrous for us Europeans. Consequently the war will be a long and bitter contest, bloody to the very end, but finally victory, crushing and thunderous, is to crown our efforts, for destiny is favorable to us.

"We only need to have the will of our faith, the unanimous will of hope. Then the occult force of our united wills will render our arms invincible. Moreover, the worst of our sacrifices is now over. We can count henceforth on having more wounded than dead. We will not see gain the hecatombs which marked the commencement of the war."

When the interviewer was leaving he noticed on Mme. de Thebes' chimney-piece a photograph of the German Emperor.

"Have you by chance read the Kaiser's hand?" he asked.

"His living hand, no," said the prophetess; "but ten years ago a German woman of high rank brought to me a plaster cast of the right hand, saying it was the hand of a very high personage. The moulding of the hand was remarkably done, and the study of its lines interested me. The line of the head was broad and well marked. It spoke of rare intelligence, but at the same time it indicated a disordered imagination and immeasurable pride.

"This line turned off suddenly two-thirds of the way down to the mountain of the moon, which is an evident sign of insanity. I told the woman what I thought. She then took from her reticule two pictures of William the Second.

"'You have been studying,' she said, 'the hand of the Emperor of Germany. Therefore, you understand why I did not bring you the cast of his left hand. It would have been too easily recognizable. Keep these pictures, madame, and heaven grant that you are mistaken.'

"As to the Crown Prince," continued Mme. de Thebes, "I have seen photographs of the casts of his hands, and they bear undoubted signs of a violent death. The day and the hour he was born are both under fatal influences.

"William the Second will die mad," was Mme. de Thebes' final pronouncement, "and a physical physical wreck. His son will die by the hand of an assassin. These two deaths will end the Hohenzollerns."

Jerry's Mother-in-Law—In two parts. A big scream from start to finish.

The Actor's Strategy—A splendid melodrama.

The Call of the Blood — A thrilling drama.

The Hidden Witness — A complete drama.

The Beaded Buckskin Bag — An historical incident of the days of '49.

THEATRICAL

The Grand Opera House will have something new to offer its patrons tonight. The Montrose Players will produce an act that they have played from coast to coast. It is a novelty act in the line of art posing—or a "Study in black and white." This act alone is worth twice the price of admission. The pictures are tastily arranged and correctly costumed. The posing consists of Biblical and military pictures and will certainly prove a big drawing card as nothing of the kind has ever been shown in this city.

The company will also produce Gus Coan's two act Society Comedy, "The Runaways." Come and laugh and get your face out of shape. The original Six Hopkins arrived today from the States and will work with this company tonight. Laugh and the world laughs with you, come and see lively show, also "The Million Dollar Mystery" in movies.

This company comes to the Grand Opera House, Peterborough, for one week, commencing Monday night, October 26th, at 8.15. Prices, 15c. and 25c. Gallery, 10c.

A MODERN SLAVE MART

Traffic in Human Chattels Still Goes on in Morocco.

Auction Begins With Public Prayer and Then the Buyers Examine the "Goods"

I had for many years had an idea that slavery to-day was dead, even in Africa, so far as the buying and selling of men and women were concerned. But I know different now. And I suppose my mistake arose from having heard so often when a boy at school about the "Abolition of Negro Slavery," the "Putting down of the Traffic in Slaves," etc., etc., with sundry eulogiums on Britain's glory thereat! However, as I have just said, my eyes were opened three years or so ago, when I spent some time in Morocco, says a writer in a London magazine.

I do not intend here and now to describe at length the mysterious city of Fez. There is the new town and the old one, respectively named Fez-el-Jedid and Fez-Bali. The streets are very tortuous and extremely narrow, as in most Moorish towns; there are many fine gardens, especially those belonging to the Sultan. Of course, all the houses are flat-roofed, and generally of three stories; the number of mosques is great, and many are very beautiful.

Under the guidance of my astute and clever Moor, who seemed to know all sorts of folk in Fez, both high and low, and got leave for me to view many things I should certainly not have viewed otherwise, I had two or three very interesting days in Fez. But the chief attraction to me—for it was the one thing I was never likely to see outside Morocco, was the slave market.

Here, on a stated day each week, you can buy almost any sort of slave you may wish. They stand in rows, or in small gangs—men, women, and children, though the two latter classes predominate, and the woman-class is largest of all. Sometimes they are fully dressed, generally they are not. For when a Moor wants to purchase a slave-girl he usually is very far from being willing to buy "a pig in a poke," as we say in England. He has a keen eye for appraising a good female figure and beautiful features, whether white, black, or copper-colored. And he is not giving any big price for an old or incapable slave, even of the woman kind, let alone of the male type.

My guide, friendly and somewhat old acquaintance as he was, could not be got to say where the slaves came from. He professed utter ignorance of this, beyond saying that caravans brought them from across the desert! Sometimes the slaves are sold privately, and sometimes by auction, for there are regular "auctioneers" engaged in this business, and the slave goes to the highest bidder. There is often strong competition for a really fine-looking girl, of from sixteen to thirty, and the bidders often get excited over this, not a common thing for Moors in most matters.

The buyers walk leisurely round the market, surveying the slaves offered for sale, feeling their limbs, and examining them, much as men buying horses or cattle do in our land. And the slaves themselves, for the most part, are sullen, or at least indifferent, though now and then you, watching closely, may see the scornful curl of the lip of a young woman, as some fat, old, ugly Moslem leers at her when about to bid, or feels her arms and body in order to place a value on her. And sudden flashes of eyes and quivers of lovely nostrils prove that these slaves have not lost all interest of feeling, despite their wretched plight.

It is something, however, to be able to record that, for the most part, once they are bought, the slaves are generally well-treated. The Moor does not like to lose the full value for money spent; also the authorities, so far as they can keep an eye on the women in a house, and, whilst allowing the Moorish master a very wide latitude indeed with regard to his wife, or wives, and female slaves, they do not allow him to ill-treat even the latter on the lines of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." And so the slave, once purchased, whether meant to live in Fez or in a distant part of Morocco, generally settles down to a more or less prosaic and satisfactory life, as an inmate of the Moorish household.

These slave markets at Fez and Marrakesh, known as the "Sok-el-Guezel," are unique of their kind in Northern Africa. A visit to the latter market was at Fez. The ground of the "Soks" is strewn with clean sand, and the walls enclosing the Sok have several recesses, covered so as to shelter buyers and spectators from the hot sun. The slaves at Marrakesh stand within little places in an arcade, about the middle of the market; and one custom obtains there which was not in evidence at Fez, or at least I did not see it namely, when the auctioneers wish to make a woman slave appear specially attractive, after first showing her more or less a la the Garden of Eden, they dress her up in really fine clothes, borrowed for the occasion, ere they offer her for sale, to show prospective buyers what a beauty she would make, as an additional wife or inmate of the harem.

It certainly made me think furiously, as the French say, to find that the Dilals (auctioneers) began the sale with public prayer.

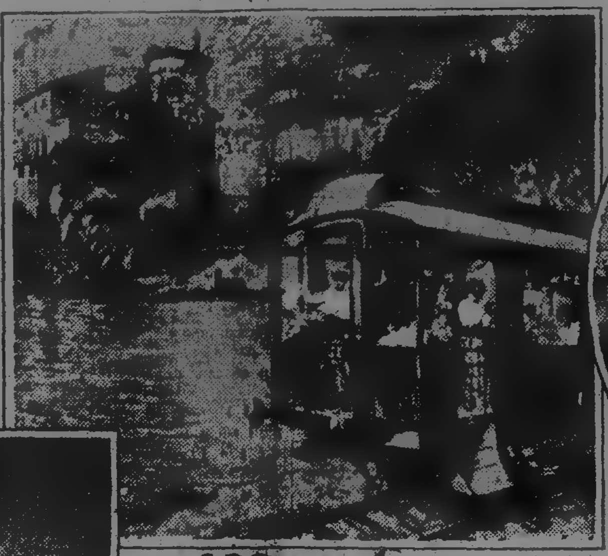
The auctioneer lead the slave by the hand round a circle, for general inspection. After a bid is made the auctioneer tries to get a higher one, by constantly repeating this bid, and enlarging on the beauty, or strength, or capability of the slave.

The WAR and the Canadian Pacific

A transcontinental railway, with ample facilities, is a great asset in time of war. The reason why Canada has been able to help the Mother Country so expeditiously with supplies in the present crisis is because Canada's rail connections are so comprehensive.

The commissary car which sprang into existence at the first call to Valcartier Camp testifies in no small measure as to the eagerness with which Canadians rose to assist Britain.

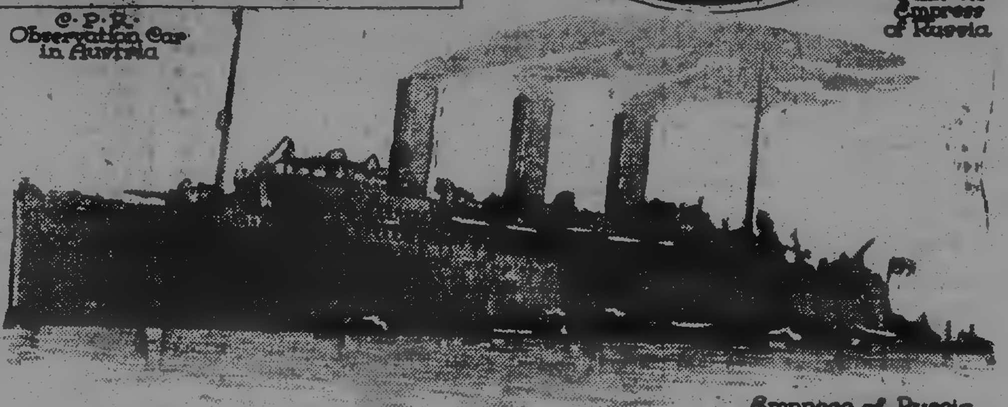
This new car of which the C.P.R. Dining Car Department had had ten constructed, is a perfectly appointed hotel kitchen on wheels. With the greatest facility from five to six hundred men can be fed by means of these cars three times a day. Along one side are ranged a big steam boiler, great cooking kettles, steam ovens, and a cooking range, in addition to half a dozen of the most modern contrivances for the operation of the culinary art on a large scale. At one end is a perfectly appointed ice box or cold storage plant.



C.P.R. Observation Car in Austria

Mounting 6 inch Guns on Empress of Russia

The Commissary Car



Empress of Russia being converted for War at Hong Kong

It was no small testimony to the speed and seaworthiness of the Canadian Pacific fleet on the Pacific waters when the British admiralty requisitioned the whole of it as soon as war broke out. The newest vessels—the "Empress of Asia" and "Empress of Russia"—have been converted into armed cruisers, and the accompanying photographs show the "Empress of Asia" in Hong Kong painted the regulation grey and fitted out with 6-inch guns.

The picture in the centre of the layout is from a painting by Cyrus Cuneo, a well known Italian artist, shows a number of tourists on an observation car operated by the C.P.R. until the Government of Austria confiscated the cars. The reason assigned for this action was that the Company had refused to pay the dividend of the Austrian shareholders.

Desiring to attract American travel, the Austrian Government decided to put Observation Cars on certain express trains, and turned to the Canadian Pacific Railway, which builds its own cars at the shops in Montreal, where the Company turns out an attractive type of car peculiarly adapted for similar mountain scenery in the Canadian Rockies. The Canadian Pacific undertook, not only to supply and design, but also to operate these Observation Cars for five years, the third of which has been interrupted by the war.

In selecting the 6,000 extra laborers to whom work has been offered, the C.P.R. has taken care to see that this relief is only given those races which are fighting on the side of the Allies in the present war. The foreigners have to provide a consular certificate proving their country of origin, as this extra employment was naturally not intended for either Austrians or Germans. As the Russian reservists have not yet been recalled from Canada, the Russian Vice-consul, Mr. H. Zaniewski at Montreal, has been particularly busy owing to this C.P.R. order. On one day no less than 400 applicants for certificates were congregated outside his office in St. Nicholas Street.

WHEN WILL OTTO DIE? RELEASE FOR BAVARIA'S MAD KING STILL FAR OFF

After Forty Years Imprisonment in the Castle of Furstenried, King Otto is Now Sixty-Five Years Old, But Doctors Say He Will Live Several Years Yet—Cousin is Regent.

When will he die? When will the country which in half a century has been afflicted with three mad monarchs be released from the burden of a king who knows not one of his subjects; who has not written a word nor read a book for years; who seldom speaks a few intelligible, connected words, who knows nothing of the time or seasons, who spends almost every hour of the day in a padded room, and has had to be guarded from self-destruction for nearly thirty years? When will this hopelessly insane king die?

Fate seems determined that the people of Bavaria shall continue to ask this question for years to come. They can scarcely hope for a merciful release, in view of the recent report of the doctors who visited the demented King Otto, who has been incarcerated in the castle of Furstenried, near Munich, for close upon forty years. For although the King, who is king in name only, and who is now sixty-five years of age, has lived this terribly pathetic life since early manhood, his physical condition is such that the doctors give room for belief that the King will live quite a number of years. And thus the pitiful tragedy drags on.

Even though Prince Ludwig, who succeeded his father, Prince Luitpold, as Regent of Bavaria a short time ago, issued a proclamation in November last to the effect that the Regency was ended and the throne vacant, and that he had taken up the reins of government as king, he can never be a real king while his cousin, who is monarch by Divine right, lives. The tragedy really began nearly seventy years ago, when Louis I., King Otto's grandfather, a well-meaning and liberal monarch, wasted the wealth of the kingdom on extravagant works of art, and became so infatuated with that notorious adventuress, Lola Montez, that he created her Countess Lansfeldt, with a pension of 20,000 florins. This infuriated the Bavarians to such an extent that they forced him to abdicate and placed his son Maximilian II. on the throne.

But already Maximilian had exhibited traits which betrayed the hereditary taint of madness, and his wild excesses ultimately led to his early death in 1864, when he was succeeded by his son, Louis II., brother to King Otto. Louis, too, carried his grandfather's love of art and music to excess, and the only achievement of his reign was his patronage of Richard Wagner, who owed everything to "Louis the Beautiful," for he had beauty like a girl's with pale cheeks, long silky hair, and large, lustrous eyes. Women idolised him; men pitied him, and were ever ready to make excuses for his madness.

For a time it took a harmless form. He built fairy castles in the mountains, entertained ghostly guests, and fancied he was dining with Hamlet and Julius Caesar; drove about at midnight around his roads in a sleigh formed like a golden swan, engaged theatrical companies to play an opera or play to himself alone, bestowed titles on his barber and tailor, or wandered about the woods playing "Tristan" in apricot-colored tights.

One of his most astonishing acts, however, occurred in October, 1867, when his marriage was arranged with his cousin Sophie, who afterwards became Duchess d'Alencon, and perished in the Paris bazaar fire. Everything was ready for the ceremony, and then the King announced that he would not marry. He destroyed every portrait of her he possessed, and opening a window threw a marble bust of his beloved princess into the courtyard below. It was a happy escape for the princess, but one can imagine her chagrin when she returned home husbandless after the vast preparations which had been made for her wedding.

In spite of this, however, Louis retained the affections of the Bavarians to such an extent that when he became hopelessly mad, and was placed under restraint in the castle of Burg in 1886, the peasants attempted to rescue him. They were unsuccessful, and three days later the bodies of the King and his medical attendant were found in the lake. There was evidence of a great struggle, but whether the King had murdered his physician in order to escape, or whether the physician had perished in an effort to frustrate the King's attempt at suicide, remains a mystery to this day.

For some time prior to Louis' death the late Prince Luitpold acted as Regent, and he continued to rule the affairs of Bavaria when Otto, Louis' brother, succeeded, for it was decided that, although Otto had been for ten years in an asylum, he should be declared King. There was, however, no coronation.

King Otto's affliction became apparent at the time of the Franco-Prussian War, when he ordered a squad of cavalry to charge a stone wall which he insisted was a body of infantry. Then secret letters offering peace to the enemy were discovered, with the result that he was placed under medical care, and from that time has been kept under constant surveillance.

Such is his pathetic state of mind that, like Nebuchadnezzar, he was often found eating grass, and an attendant had to restrain his appetite in that direction. He refused his food, imagining it to be poisoned, developed a horror of washing, and on several occasions nearly murdered his attendants.

An orange tree will bear fruit until it reaches its 150th year.

No Cause For Worry.

Retail prices for foodstuffs in the Dominion as a whole show no cause for anxiety. Through its correspondents the Labor Department is keeping in the closest possible touch with the course of prices in every district.

"Our reports show," said R. H Coats, editor of the Labor Gazette, the other day, "that there is absolutely no cause for worry, we are constantly informed of any changes."

The index number of prices usually prepared monthly is now prepared weekly to keep the department better in touch with general developments.

PREMIER OF PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Hon. John A. Mathieson Has Been in Politics For Fourteen Years—A Strong Physique and a Sanguine, Irrepressible Temperament

The Hon. John Alexander Mathieson, Premier of Prince Edward Island, who has recently announced a war gift of one hundred thousand bushels of oats to Great Britain from the island province, is one of the most energetic and persistent politicians in public life in Canada to-day. A strong physique and an sanguine, irrepressible temperament fit him to play the part. He is fifty-one years of age and of mixed Scottish and Irish ancestry. He was born at Brackley Point on the north side of the island, but represents in the Legislature the straggling constituency of Georgetown at the extreme south-eastern end. In his own constituency he is very strong, electorally, making it a point to visit every division once a year. In his younger day he was a schoolmaster, but is at present a lawyer with an extensive practice before the provincial bar. He has been Premier three years and before attaining power had to defeat a Government which had been in power for twenty-two years. Mr. Mathieson was first elected to the P. E. I. Legislature at the general elections of 1900 and had been a member for less than three years when elected to the leadership of the party.

The Provincial Opposition was a very passive affair until Mr. Mathieson's advent. He had lived out west for some time and while there had imbued some western ideas on politics and other matters. He was firmly impressed with the fact that so long as the Opposition contented themselves with mild academic discussions of the Government they might remain content to sit in Opposition. He told his colleagues how he felt and forthwith plunged into an aggressive campaign against the powers that were. His methods appealed to his colleagues and the Conservative electorate, and he was asked to accept the leadership. After that he maintained an aggressive campaign on the hustings and on the floor of the Legislature, and with such effect that at the general election of 1908 the once overwhelming Government majority was reduced to two. Two bye-elections, bitterly fought by the Opposition under Mr. Mathieson's leadership, wiped out their small majority. Premier Palmer resigned and the lieutenant-governor sent for the leader of the Opposition to form a Government. This Mr. Mathieson did, and at once appealing to the country, was sustained by an overwhelming majority, only two Liberals being returned to the Legislature.

A Hint To Cities.

If people in cities are as good as their word, and are desirous of increasing the acreage under crop in 1915, they might begin first on the large areas of farm land that have been bought by enterprising real estate men, for subdivision into city lots. There are hundreds of acres around Toronto that could thus be brought under cultivation this fall and made to produce something more than the land surveyors' stakes, a beautiful park gate entrance, and an occasional house or two. And Toronto is not alone in this respect either. There are other centres where a beclouded vision has taken hundreds of acres of land that should be producing food, and brought them under the spell of the real estate man. If they have not yet been brought under production, there must be thousands of these suburban acres adjacent to western cities. Nearly every city, therefore, has an opportunity at its very doors to increase the wheat acreage of 1915. City plowing bees should be in order just now. There are many idle teams, and men, too, in our cities. The plows are all that are needed, and they can be secured very easily. First bring the unused suburban acres under the spell of the plow. When that is accomplished the movement should be extended to the country and assistance given the farmer in preparing more land for the 1915 crop. Farmers will welcome their co-operation. Many farmers on account of the help question have as much as they can well attend to without bringing more land under cultivation. But with the help and co-operation of people in cities they may be able to extend Canadian farming.

Many a poor girl remains a miss because she cannot make a hit.

CURE FOR OLD AGE

Easy and Pleasant and Costs But Little to Try It.

The Prescription is to Mix Open Air and a Hobby, Shake Well and Take Often.

Old age can be cured. The prescription is a simple one. Mix open air and a hobby, shake well and take as many hours a day as possible. No one begins to age until he is bored, and the first gray hair comes when a man suddenly thinks to himself, "What's the use?" Then is the time when a hobby makes life interesting again.

There was an official on one of our great railroads who was retired at seventy. "He'll die now," said his friends kindly. But he didn't. Instead, he became interested in the wild flowers, and now he is too busy in looking for the ram's head orchid and trying to find a new station for the hart's tongue fern and tramping around in the woods and fields in all kinds of weather even to think of dying. Anyway, he would not have time until he's finished his monograph on the willows of the United States.

There is a woman in Baltimore, seventy-two years old, who years ago sought to forget a great sorrow by learning the butterflies. Her city home has become a rendezvous for entomologists all over the world and houses a famous collection. While her contemporaries are dozing their lives away in caps and easy chairs she spends her summers in the mountains and her winters in Florida with a butterfly net. Twenty-one new species to identify are her contribution to the lepidoptera, and she plans to live until the last goal of an entomologist is reached—the using of her single initial species.

An octet of men in Philadelphia, all well past their threescore years, some in business and some foot loose, belong to the same ornithological society. They are afield every day of the year, rain or shine, to watch the ever changing bird life. In the spring each prepares migrant sheets showing the arrivals of the hundred odd migrants that pass through every place every year. There is great rivalry as to who shall score the most warblers or identify the largest number of birds in one day. At present writing the oldest of the eight holds a record of seventy-five different kinds of birds seen or heard in one day between dawn and dark—one for each year of his age and one to grow on.

A man in North Carolina by the sudden death of two of his family was left alone with but little money, no friends and the cheering dictum from his doctor that he had only a year to live. To while away the few months still left to him as well as to help out his household expenses he took up the study of edible mushrooms. At the end of a year in the open he notified his indignant physician that he had become too much interested in his hobby to confirm his diagnosis. In ten years he has discovered, classified and tested 170 kinds of edible mushrooms and has published a book which is one of the standard authorities for mushroom eaters of the world.

Another septuagenarian attributes his long life to the stars. Confined to business during the day, he sought the open air at night and began to study the changing constellations and the perplexing planets. Then he found that with an opera glass he could detect their colors and reveled in the blue light of Vega, the green glare of Sirius, the rose red of Aldebaran, the flame color of Betelguese and the strange shades of other gleaming sky kings. Finally he bought a small telescope. Now, at seventy, he has published a monograph on the double stars, besides a quaint little star guide that has interested thousands in his hobby.

None of the nature studies requires much money or time. A cheap illustrated guidebook, an opera glass and, if possible, some walks and talks with an expert, and you will learn almost immediately to identify a score or more of flowers, or birds, or constellations, or mushrooms, and you will have found a hobby on which you may ride away from Death.

Try it, young men, lest you grow old. Try it, old men, before you grow tired. Escape into the open from these narrow indoor days and learn the way to where the wild folk dwell. In their land you will find the help of the hills and hope wide as the world, and strength, and youth, and happiness. Try it.—Samuel Scoville, Jr., in Lippincott's.

Across the Atlantic.

The narrowest part of the Atlantic is between Brazil and Guinea, where the ocean is only about 1,800 miles wide. From Newfoundland to Ireland, the narrowest breadth north of the equator, is nearly twice as far. From New York to the nearest point of France is nearly three times as far.

Use chicken fat instead of butter for cake, cookies and gingerbread. It is an excellent substitute for butter.

The Haunted House

A Story of Mexico --- By F. A. Mitchel

"Is there a hacienda near by where I can stop for the night?" I asked a man I met on the road. I was traveling in the province of San Luis Potosi, in Mexico.

"No, senor; there is nothing within a convenient distance where one can find entertainment. There is a deserted house about two miles down the road, but I would not advise you to stop there. You had better go back to Venado."

I had come from Venado, a distance of eight miles. To go back and return to where I was would be a round trip of sixteen miles. I was well mounted, but did not care for such an additional journey in any event. I asked the man to tell me more about the deserted house.

"It was formerly the country place of a Spaniard who lived there with his wife—he a crusty old man, she a beautiful young woman. He was jealous of her, and a tragedy occurred in the house. Some say he murdered her lover, and others say he murdered both her and her lover. At any rate, he disappeared, leaving the house with all the furniture in it, and so it has remained to the present day."

"Is it locked?"

"Oh, yes; it is locked, but you will have no difficulty in getting into it."

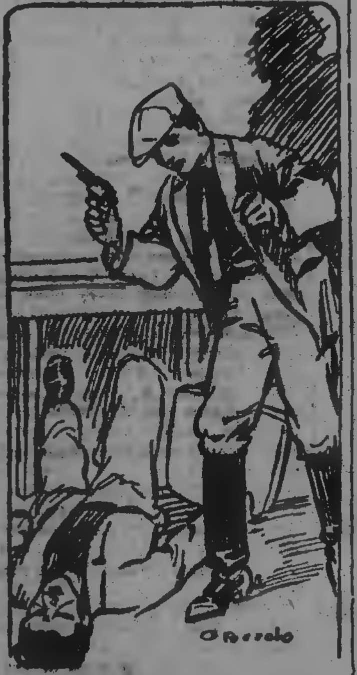
"I have provisions in my haversack. Why should I not go in there, roll myself in my blanket and sleep till early morning, then resume my journey?"

"Well, senor," replied the man, "there is nothing to prevent your doing that, but I would not do it for all the gold there is in Mexico."

"What is there to fear?"

"Men have slept there who have never been seen or heard of afterward. Men have slept there who have told fearful tales."

This was not encouraging, but I was familiar with the superstition of the lower class of Mexicans and knew that they were very easily frightened. I must either sleep in this deserted house or return to Venado or bivouac. The latter I did not wish to do, for a norther was blowing and a fine rain was falling. So I thanked the man for his information and rode on.



THERE LAY THE BODY OF A MAN.

I reached the house just before dark, and an attractive place it must have been in its prime.

The house had been handsomely furnished, but that must have been many years before, for, though the framework of the furniture was solid as ever, the woven fabrics were in tatters. And yet the place looked as if persons had used it since the olden time, when it was occupied regularly. There were bits of food scattered about and other evidences of the sojourn of human beings. Perhaps, I thought, these things were left by those persons of whom the man I met on the road told me. The first thing I did was to gather some wood which I found scattered about the place and, putting it in the great fireplace, soon had a cheerful blaze, which I needed not only for warmth, but to help banish the dreariness about me.

I ate my supper beside the fire. The apartment I occupied had apparently been the principal bedroom of the house in its better days, and its walls were hung with portraits. One I judged to be the likeness of the former owner, the Spaniard who had murdered his wife and her paramour. He certainly looked capable of murder. One of his eyes seemed to differ from the other; but, since I had no light except what came from the hearth, I could not make out wherein this difference lay.

Having finished my supper, I went out and gathered what green stuff I could find for my horse to eat—I had watered him shortly before at a runnel beside the road—and, returning, smoked a pipe beside the fire. I had no mind to occupy the bed with its enormous rotting canopy and other fittings; so, rolling myself in my blanket, I lay down on the floor. But hard wood is not comfortable for a couch, and after fitful sleeping for a couple of hours I arose, mastered my repugnance to the moldering bedclothes and, spreading my blanket on them, tried again to sleep. But, the uncanny place getting the better of my feeling, I arose and got my 45 caliber revolver. There was nothing alive to shoot at, but somehow there was a sense of protection in the weapon.

How long I slept before waking again I don't know. I was, or thought I was, awakened by a sound. But there was a strong wind, and many parts of the house had rotted loose and rattled. The fire had gone out, but one of the heavier pieces of wood blazed and cast a lurid light about the apartment. Directly opposite was the portrait I have mentioned, and the eye which I had noticed being unlike the other seemed to me to belong to a human being and was looking straight at me.

I rubbed my own eyes to see more clearly, and when I looked again the human expression had gone out of the eye of the portrait. Thinking that I must have been mistaken, I composed myself to sleep. Naturally I thought of my money and my weapon. The former was in a belt made for the purpose of carrying funds and strapped around my waist. The revolver was in my hand on the bed.

My next awakening came from a heavy weight falling on the floor in the room above. Then came the sound of whistling wind, followed by a cry. Then all was still again. In a few minutes the stillness was broken by frightful shrieks. From the moment of the first sound I sat up, clutching my revolver. My gaze lighted on the portrait of the old Spaniard, and it had again become human.

I cannot say that I was frightened, but I will assert positively that I was mad. Yielding to an impulse which I cannot well describe, I raised my revolver and sent a bullet straight at the eye that caused the commotion within me. And so sure was my aim that an open space was left where the eye had been.

Something fell on the floor of the adjoining room. The sound seemed to come from behind where the portrait was hanging. Throwing myself from the bed, recocking my revolver with my right thumb and snatching a burning brand from the fireplace, I ran through a doorway and stood on the other side of a partition. There lay the body of a man. I had shot him in the eye and pierced his brain.

The stillness was broken by some one running in the patio, but this was all the indication I had of the presence of any one except the dead man. I stood listening for some time, then was seized with a desire to get out of the place as soon as possible. I started for the patio, dropping my torch as I went that it might not make me an illuminated target, and, reaching the door of the house, gained the outside. There I stood trying to pull myself together.

There was a streak of dawn in the east. It tended to quiet the horror there was within me. After all, what was there to flee from? I could hear no sound from within, and all except the wind was still without. I was as well armed and had the same chance as any one else. I had killed a man, and I preferred to learn if possible whether I had been justified in doing so. Summoning my resolution, I reentered the house, peering through the dim light for any one who might be there.

I regained without opposition the room in which I had slept. There were embers on the hearth, and I rekindled the fire. There I stood with my back to it, waiting for the day to break. As soon as I could see without artificial light I went to the room, where the body lay in the same position I had left it. It was on the floor beside a table, and the table was directly under a hole in the partition, the latter being about the height of a man. I got up on the table, put my eye to the hole and looked into the bedroom.

Now I could form a theory. There had been two or more men in the house. One of them had looked through the hole, which formed an eye of the picture, and seen me on the bed. If he wished to rob me my revolver was in his way. An attempt had been made to frighten me, but whether to get an advantage over me or to drive me out of the house I could only conjecture. I inclined to the latter opinion.

Having gone thus far in my investigations, I resolved to go further. I ransacked the house. I looked into closets, up chimneys, under furniture. The last thing I did was to pull the clothing and mattresses off the bed on which I had slept. Out rolled a shower of gold coins.

It was now quite light, and I resolved to gather up the coins, hide them and report my experience at the next town at which I would stop.

I reported my find as I had intended to the police, informing them where I had hidden the gold pieces. They visited the house in question and recognized the man I had shot as a notorious bandit. They wondered when he had seen me lying on the bed that he had not shot at me through the partition, but I reminded them that this would have been difficult. Besides, it was doubtless to his interest to frighten me away.

I never heard that anything was done to prevent the premises from being used by bandits. The Mexican rural police are not very effective, and soon after my experience Governor Carransa started his rebellion against President Huerta.

They Make a Try.

Here's Dr. Wiley, food expert,
  Who says it is no fable
That women where we thought they shone
  Are neither strong nor able.
He says they do not understand
  The mystic art of cooking.
But we forgive them much in that
  Since they are so good looking.

The French, he says, can beat them out
  In juggling with the skillet
And fooling round the frying pan
  When they have things to fill it.
Oh, dear, but ignorance was bliss!
  It gave us satisfaction,
Before we heard how much they lacked,
  To see them get in action.

Well, doctor, maybe that was so
  Where you last week were calling.
There are some places where the food
  They serve is quite appalling.
But there are other places where—
  Ye gods and little fishes!—
It makes your stomach doubly glad
  To see them spread the dishes.

It makes a difference where you go.
  Stop in some rural places
Where canned goods are not on the bill
  And watch them feed their faces.
Your flat raised lady may be shy
  On baking, broiling, stewing,
But in the wayside places yet
  You'll find great homemade chewing.

Second Hand.

"Did you ever?"

"What?"

"Ethel said her new coat was made to order."

"Well, what of it?"

"Nothing, only"—

"Only what?"

"I couldn't help wondering made to whose order."

CURIOUS CARD TRICK.

It Deals With Odd Numbers, and the Explanation Is a Mystery.

There is a puzzle which may be performed with any odd number of objects, playing cards being usually employed, and which any one can do, but no one seems able to explain the reason for it. Let us suppose the number selected to be twenty-seven cards, although fifteen or twenty-one would do just as well.

After having them shuffled hold them in the left hand face upward and then deal them face upward one at a time in three piles so that the fourth card comes on the first and the fifth on the top of the second and so on until you have three piles of nine cards each.

Request any person who is watching you to make a silent note of any card he pleases, and when you have finished dealing to tell you in which pile the card lies. By picking up the three piles again one at a time as before, the noted card will reappear. Ask in which pile it came that time and place that pile in the middle as before.

Upon dealing the cards into three piles for the third time note carefully the card that comes in the middle of each pile. With twenty-seven there will be nine in each pile and the fifth will be the middle card. Now, when the person who selected the card names the pile in which his card comes you will know it was the middle card of that pile. With this knowledge in your possession you can finish the trick in any manner you please.

This is only a statement of results, but what is the explanation or reason for it? What is the rule that makes it always come out right, regardless of the number of objects used, so that it is odd?—New York Sun.

Where the Fault Lay.

A newspaper man tells of a friend who edited, with more or less success, a paper in a small town. That he was somewhat discouraged by the lack of interest shown in his journal was evidenced by this notice which one afternoon appeared on the editorial page:

"Burglars entered our house last night. To the everlasting shame of the community for whose welfare we have labored, be it said, they got nothing."—Harper's Magazine.

Bewildered Him.

"I say, Weggie, I'm in an awful mess. Miss Smart means to sue me for 'bweath of pwomise' or somethin' howwid like that."

"Weally?"

"Yaas. I said I was awfully sowwy not to ask her to mawwy me, but dad would cut me off if I did, and all she said was, 'You needn't imagine I'm the kind of a girl that accepts an apology for a man.'"—New York Tribune.

Athletic Vocalization.

"Is a ventriloquist a person who throws his voice?" asked Mr. Lobrow.

"So to speak."

"Well, we've got one next door to us. She hasn't thrown it yet, but she is giving it a terrible struggle."—Washington Star.

WON ON HIS BLUFF

How an American Consul Brought a Dictator to Terms.

A THREAT AND A SURPRISE.

The Venezuelan Despot to Whom Uncle Sam's Official Had Issued a Comic Opera Ultimatum First Got on His High Horse and Then Stepped Down.

A great many years ago Phil Hanna was consul at La Guayra, Venezuela, when a little revolution broke out. A military martinet in command of the town announced himself dictator and, needing money to carry on his activities, seized a bunch of American, English and German residents in the place and locked them in the town jail. They were informed that they would be released when they had made certain cash contributions to the revolutionary war chest.

Hanna was notified of the situation, and, looking up the consulate and leaving an extra sized American flag flying, he marched up to the headquarters of the dictator.

"Mr. Dictator," said Hanna, "I note that you have locked up a number of Americans. Permit me to introduce myself as the American consul."

The dictator asked what interest that fact had for him.

"It signifies that I am here in the name of my government to demand that these Americans be released instantly," replied Hanna.

"Can't do a thing for you," replied the general. "They've been told that when they cough up they'll be turned loose."

"They'll be turned loose without coughing and without delay," retorted Hanna. "I desire, in the name of my government, to say that if the Americans and all the European citizens whom you have locked up are not released by 6 o'clock this afternoon I shall proceed to shell the town."

"To shell—what'll you shell it with?" snorted the dictator. "Why, you haven't an American ship within a thousand miles, and you know it."

"What I said," replied Hanna with frozen faced dignity, "was that if those people are not released by 6 o'clock I'll shell the town." And he marched out again.

Hanna knew perfectly well that there wasn't an American ship nearer than New Orleans, and he knew the dictator knew it. But he had something up his sleeve. He went back to his office and waited patiently, meanwhile sending a clerk down to the water front to watch things.

The day wore on to midafternoon. Hanna was getting nervous. He must make good somehow. At last his messenger returned.

"Two British cruisers are coming into the harbor, sir," he reported.

"I knew they were due today," replied Hanna. "Now, you get word to the commander about what we've done here and tell him it's very important for him to come and see me."

At 5 o'clock that afternoon three very impressive officers in the uniform of the British navy came ashore and marched straight to the American consulate.

Hanna slouched out of his chair, shook hands all round and explained his scrape. The naval man wanted to know how he could best serve the necessities of the moment.

"Just go back on shipboard and begin clearing those vessels for action in the most ostentatious way you can," replied Hanna. "I'll do the rest."

As soon as the necessary time had elapsed to assure that these facts would have duly impressed themselves on his dictatorship Hanna started for the palace again. He didn't have to wait for admittance.

"Have the American and European prisoners been released?" he asked.

"They have not yet," replied the dictator.

"Then permit me to say that at 6 o'clock sharp, as I mentioned this morning, I begin shelling this town!"

"Where's your American ships?" persisted the dictator.

"The two British cruisers that have entered the harbor today are under my orders," replied the American consul, "and we'll blow you and your town off this coast before morning if you don't perform. Do you get it?"

The dictator didn't know whether it was bluff or not, but at 5:50 o'clock the prisoners were turned loose.

Hanna got a promotion for the job.—New York Sun.

BIGGER'N BETTER THAN EVER

Canada's crop of cereals may not have made a new record this year, but the apple crop has equalled, if not passed, the figures of 1912 when the highest point of apple production was reached. It is estimated by the experts of the Dominion Government that the apple crop of this year will reach the enormous total of 20,000,000 bushels, of which Ontrio's share is something like 70 per cent. Nova Scotia and British Columbia are the two other geat apple-producing provinces. The Dominion Government has instituted a campaign of advertising the virtues of the Canadian apple and Ontario, at least, is pushing the sale of her great crop in the Western Provinces as never before. Apples are cheap not only because they are more plentiful than ever before, but because on account of the war, only a very small quantity is being exported. In the past the cream of the crop has gone to Great Britain; this year the "No. 1 hards" will stay here for home consumption.

A Tragic Episode.

By BAYARD VEILLER

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Late in an afternoon of October the warden of the county jail stood smoking in the doorway of his office.

In the wide street of the little southern town quiet reigned.

Two dogs were wrangling happily over a bone. Farther along a crowd of boys were playing with a ball.

A keeper came out and stood beside the warden, who paid no attention to him. The old man coughed slightly and touched his superior on the arm.

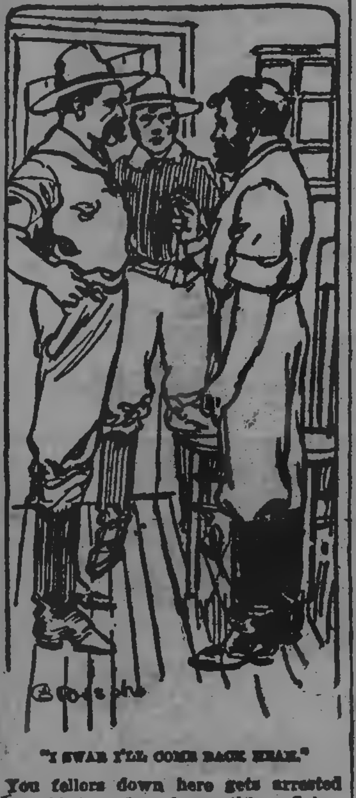
"Th' man in numbah 7 wants t' see you all."

"What's he want now?" asked the warden querulously. "He's always after sumthin'. Does he think I ain't got nuthin' ter do but run errands fer him?"

He still spoke with the accent of his New England birthplace.

"I dunno," said the old man.

"Whut's he here fer, annyhow?" went on the warden. "Lord knows, I can't keep track of all them fellers! You fellers down here gets arrested fer th' darnedest funny things I hev ever heerd tell on. Up north we gits fellers in jail fer real sure enough crimes. Down here th' criminals ain't no account. What's he in fer, I say?"



"I SWAR I'LL COME BACK HEAH."

"He all got kotched fer runnin' a still," explained the keeper. "He's a right good feller tew."

"Well, I ain't goin' up there," announced the warden. "You bring him down here to me. I reckon he won't git away."

The keeper slouched away and returned a few minutes later in company with the prisoner. He was tall, rawboned, uncouth. He stood awkwardly before the warden, fumbling a torn cap in his hand.

"Well, what's yure name?" asked the warden.

"Wilbur Rawlins," said the man, with a slow drawl. "I got kotched fer runnin' a still," he added. "'Twan't mine," he went on after a pause.

"Oh, I ain't th' jedge," said the warden cheerfully. "Whut you want with me?"

The man was silent. He rubbed one foot over the other slowly and then scratched his ear.

"Come, come, young feller," said the warden, not unkindly. "Ye sent word thet ye wanted ter see me. Waal, now, ye see me. Whut ye want with me?"

"I gotter go home fer a couple o' days."

"You gotter go home?" said the warden. "Young feller, this ain't no boardin' house. You gotter stay right here till you are tried."

"Kain't ye let me go?" pleaded the prisoner. "'Tain't 's if I'd done much. I ain't killed nobody. I ain't even been in a feud. I swar I'll come back heah."

"Can't do it," said the warden. "They's no use askin' me. I tell ye I can't do it."

"I ain't got nuthin' but er mewel," urged the prisoner. "You're welcome ter that ef you all 'll lemme go."

The warden smiled grimly. "I couldn't let ye go ef ye offered me a thousand dollars," he said. "What'd ye wanter go fer, anyway?" he added.

"Mah little gal's all alone up on th' mountain," said the prisoner, "an' they ain't no neighbahs ter go ter her, an' they's a babby a-comin, an' I gotter be thar. Heavens, man, ye kain't let her be thar alone at a time like that! Kain't ye see I jess natchelly gotter be thar?"

"Can't be did," said the warden briefly.

"Ef you all 'll let me go I'll name th' babby aftah you all." He had the air of a man offering a bribe of stupendous value.

"Supposin' it wus a gal?" suggested the warden.

"I doan' keer. We all 'll name her aftah you all. Whut's yure name?"

"Zebulon," said the warden shortly. It was a sore point with him, this name. "But can't ye see, man, I can't let ye go? Not but I'd be proud ter hev th' baby named atter me," he went on politely. "I dunno es I ever hed a baby named atter me. But, honest, I can't let ye go."

"Jess fer one day," pleaded the prisoner.

"Not fer a minit," said the warden. "Now, look here, man, ye jest go back ter yer cell an' trust t' the Lord. Ye're wife'll be all right. It'll be kinder lonesome mebbe, but it'll be all right."

"I gotter go, an' I'm goin'," said the prisoner defiantly as he turned away.

The warden slept late the next morning. He was still sleeping when his wife came and shook him roughly by the shoulder. She was crying, and so was the child clinging to her skirts.

"Git up, Zeb!" cried the woman.

"Whut's th' matter?" yawned the warden sleepily.

"Thet moonshiner's killed Tom an' broke out!" cried the woman.

The warden leaped from his bed and, clad only in his nightshirt, ran hurriedly through the house and up into the jail.

On the floor in front of cell 97 he found the keeper lying dead. The old man's face was purple, and about his throat was the imprint of fingers. The door of the cell was open.

"Merciful heavens," cried the warden, "who'd 'a' thought it? Thet feller wus jest es peaceable es a lamb."

"I foun' the front door open when I got up this mornin'," said the woman, "an' I mistrusted all wa'n't right, so I come here an' foun' thet. It was turrible. I shan't git over it ter my dyin' day, Zebulon Waters, I shan't."

The man had been the only prisoner on the tier, and he had been so docile and quiet that in his case the usual discipline had been relaxed. The door of his cell was never locked when the keeper was in the corridor.

"Thet's whut comes o' bein' kind ter them prisoners," said the warden's wife.

"Shet up, can't ye?" cried the warden. "Ain't I got trouble ernough 'thout you chimin' in? Like es not I'll lose th' job for this."

"Whutje goin' ter do now?" asked the woman.

"Put on my pants," said the warden shortly.

"D'je think I thought ye wus goin' ter hunt fer thet feller in yer night shirt?" retorted his wife angrily.

"Lucinda, shet up," said the man solemnly. "Don't fergit ye're in the presence of death. Yer jest go into the house and hurry up the breakfast. I gotter git arter this man lively, and we may nab him fer he gets much of a start."

Within an hour the warden had organised a posse to hunt for the missing prisoner. Two of the men brought bloodhounds.

"I won't hev him torn up by them dogs," announced the warden—"not ef he killed th' hull town. 'Tain't Christian. I'm fer law an' order, an' we're goin ter catch this feller right. We aint goin' ter hev him et up by no dogs."

It was explained that neither of the dogs would be unmuzzled; that they would merely be used to trace the man.

"Ye don't need no dogs," said the warden's wife. "I talked 'ith thet feller yestedy an' I know. Ye don't need no dogs. Ef ye jest go ter whar he lives ye'll git him easy enough. That's whar he's went."

In spite of this they took the dogs. The men were on horseback, and for the first five miles they had no difficulty in following the animals. The dogs ran straight, their noses close to the ground. The trail was easy for them to follow.

Then the road became rougher and rougher as the path led up the mountain side.

Ten miles from the town the party had to abandon their horses, leaving the animals in charge of one man. After that they slowly made their way up the mountain, the dogs, still in leash, tugging frantically at their chains.

The cool, brisk air of the October woods, fragrant with pine and balsam, made no impression on these men. They were hunting a human being—a murderer. Two or three suggested that it would be a good thing to hang him as soon as he was caught.

"No, ye won't," said the warden. "Me an' th' sheriff's runnin' this hunt, an' it's goin' ter be lawful all through. I'm goin' ter take that feller back ter jail, an' he's goin' ter be tried fer murder."

The others gave a sullen assent.

Suddenly the party stopped. Half a mile above them, standing out in the clear fall air in sharp lines, stood a small log cabin.

"He all lives thar," said one of the party in a whisper.

The dogs tugged harder on their chains.

"We'd better go kinder quiet," suggested the warden. "Mebbe he's got a gun."

Slowly the men made their way toward the house. From the place there came no sound. The men came nearer and nearer. Two or three drew pistols and held them ready for instant use.

The warden, closely followed by his posse, finally stood in the doorway of the little cabin. The sunlight streaming through the open window fell on the figure of the fugitive, sitting with bowed head beside a tumbled bed on which lay the dead bodies of a mother and child. The man looked up dreamily.

"I wus sho'ly sorry ter hev ter kill Torm," he said slowly, "but I wus jess natchelly 'bleeged ter come."

Prince Rupert Fisheries.

The Prince Rupert fisheries are developing very rapidly, and during the month of July the fleet gathered in a catch, valued at $490,535. This included salmon taken in the canneries or used otherwise. Of that quantity 6,800 pounds were either frozen or used in a fresh condition. In a canned form there were 8,156,000 pounds made use of, while for mild curing 1,289,000 pounds were utilized.

Halibut is easily the next most important fish for the month, with a total catch landed of 1,016,000 pounds. The only other variety that was represented in any quantity was the cod to the extent of 6,000 pounds, all of which was used in a fresh condition.

There is also an ever-increasing production of fruits and vegetables in the district around Prince Rupert. These have been of exceptionally good quality. Fruits ripened earlier than usual this season, bringing them into close competition with produce grown farther to the south.

One grower, Mr. H. D. Lenhart, at Mile 87, on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, along the Skeena River, has received $700 for the strawberries grown on one and a half acres of land, while much of his crop still remains to be picked.

Canadian Consuls.

Never was there a time when Canadian consuls in foreign countries could be of more service than just now. Not only could they give advice and assistance to Canadians resident abroad, but they could inform our exporters what goods are required. Some advice has been sent out from Ottawa to the effect that Canada should try to capture some of the German trade with South America. But without consuls there export trade is difficult to handle. Such advice is cheap. What the Canadian Government should do is to send trade agents there at once to find out what Canada can supply.

A system of Canadian consulates abroad has been discussed in several Parliaments and has even been promised, but—that is the Canadian way.

THE MIXTURE.

SENSE and nonsense,
That's the stuff
Life is made of,
Sure enough.
Sense? Yes, maybe,
And a lot
Of the baldest
Baldy rot.

How they mingle
And intwine,
Forward, backward,
Down the line.
Sometimes hardly
We can know
Which is t'other
In the show.

In the schoolroom,
In the mart,
Them you cannot Tell apart.
Often sense on Closer view
Is but nonsense
Through and through.

In the busy
Daily race
Each is useful
In its place,
And between them,
Could you choose,
Which would you
Prefer to lose?

An Exception.

A Fortunate Meeting

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

"There's a new boy coming!"

Half a dozen youngsters ran to the porte-cochere of Mr. Sanford's boarding school to see the new pupil. He jumped out of the carriage, and when he had done so stood stock still, staring at one of the boys who had come to look him over, all the others staring at him.

"Why, he's Bob Archer!" was the exclamation of several of the self constituted reception committee.

"Are you Bob Archer?" asked the newcomer of the boy who was gaping at him.

"Yes."

"Then you're my twin brother."

"Reckon you're right."

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Archer eight years before this meeting had separated, having made an arrangement that the father should have one of their twin boys, aged four, and the mother should have the other. Thomas had gone with his father, Robert with his mother. From the time of the separation these two divisions of the family had never met. Their parents, unknown to each other, had sent them to the same school.

The affection twins have for each other is accounted for physiologically. Tom and Bob Archer from the time they met at the Sanford school were inseparable.

"Bob," said Tom one day, "do you remember father?"

"No. Do you remember mother?"

"Just a little."

"What do you suppose was the matter between them?"

"Don't know. I don't think fathers and mothers have a right to quarrel, do you? It's mighty hard on the kids."

"No, I don't. When vacation comes I suppose we've got to separate again."

"I move we don't."

"What can we do?"

"I'll write father that I'm going to spend my vacation with you somewhere, and you write mother you're going to spend yours with me."

"It would knock mother out not to have me with her."

"Humph! I don't think it would trouble father so much to part with me, but it might. Fathers don't show what they feel so much as mothers."

"Where can we go for our vacation?"

"Let's go to a farm."

The upshot of this conspiracy was that the boys wrote to their respective homes that they would not be separated and were going to spend their summer vacation together on a farm. This struck each parent with consternation. Mrs. Archer wrote her husband to know if he had any objection to her spending July and August with the boys. Mr. Archer replied that he had.

Then each boy was informed by the parent with whom he lived that he must come home; if he remained away no remittance would be sent him. The boys, who had come to their resolution to stay together some time before the end of the term, had saved up the money sent them from home for spending, and each had enough to pay $2 a week board for eight weeks. So they wrote that they could get on without remittances.

There was a farm a few miles from the school that they had often visited, and there they made arrangements to pay $2 a week each for board and do $2 work a week, which consisted principally of milking. On leaving school they went to this farm, and since the work was a novelty to them they quite enjoyed it.

Mrs. Archer endured her son's absence as long as possible, then gave way to a desire to see both her children together. So, filling her purse with money and her suit case with good things for them, she went to see them. Putting an arm around each of them, she sat weeping that she could not have both of them with her always. She remained with them two days, when, fearing that her husband might hear of her presence there, she bade the boys goodby, intending to go home. She was embracing both at once, tears streaming down her cheeks, when the door opened and there stood her husband.

Now, Mrs. Archer in her troubles with her husband had yielded to irritation and when he said disagreeable things to her had hurled them back in kind. She had never resorted to woman's trump card, tears. Her husband, seeing her embracing their boys, weeping, began to weep himself. Tears, like laughter, are contagious, and, seeing their parents weeping, the boys followed suit. The father approached his sons to embrace them, shedding a few tears over Bob, whom he had not seen for years, and thus got mixed up with Tom and the wife and mother. Their arms were around each other promiscuously.

"Belle," said Mr. Archer, "these boys have got ahead of us. We can't continue the situation without its pertaining to them. In separating from each other we separate ourselves from them. If you'll come home and bring them with you you'll be welcome."

"Do it, mother," pleaded both the boys.

That was the end of the separation in the Archer family. Both father and mother placed a guard over themselves, for they knew that as soon as they parted the boys would part from both of them. But time had changed them, and loneliness had taught them that scrapping is the result of nervousness and, after all, doesn't mean much. However, scrapping was never resumed between them.

Which?

Is woman more interesting than man, or the reverse? Man varies more. He has more genius in exceptional individuals, and less of genius-like insight in the average person. He completes; woman endures. He builds externally, she at home. He fights; she preserves. Our worthless opinion is that men are more interesting than women, but that woman is more interesting than man.—Harper's Weekly.

Commissioner of Labor Lynch, of New York, has changed his mind about excluding women from holding positions in the new state bureau of employment, and has ordered that they be allowed to take the examinations.

Peterborough, Ont., Oct. 1, 1914.

MR. W. H. HILL,
City.

Dear Sir :

I wish to thank you for the very prompt manner in which my claim was settled by the Fidelity and Casualty Co., of New York.

I have carried accident insurance with this Company for a number of years and have always found them and their representatives courteous at all times.

Regarding my recent claim, the claim papers were filled out and sent in on Sept. 29, 1914, and to-day I received a cheque for the full amount of the claim.

Again thanking you for the prompt manner in which this claim has been handled, I am,

Yours truly,

R. G. STURGEON.

PULLING ON EMERGENCY POWER IN FARMING

Making Canada the Granary of the Empire

Preparing the Seed Bed.

In those parts of the country which do fall plowing and fall seeding, the way the seed bed is made and the way the sowing is done this fall will determine the crop per acre next year more than next year's rainfall, hot winds or frosts. In an experiment not long ago described by F. L. Peterson of the University Farm at Davis, California, he says:

"As the pressure for supplies becomes greater, it becomes more evident that the world cannot afford large farms skimmed over with careless culture. In an actual experiment a gain of 200 per cent. which was made in the productiveness of a certain area, 100 per cent. was found to be due to better plowing and harrowing, 50 per cent. to better cultivation, and the rest to better seed."

A lesson or two like that in every community would soon work its way into farm operation in such a way that several costly practices sanctioned by time and custom would become in a short time as historical as cradling wheat and threshing it with a flail are now. The great economic law which makes a man's land profitable is not so much the price he gets for his produce as it is the difference between this price and the amount spent in producing this produce. The above experiment was apropos of the tractor—a mechanical way of plowing and of disking—a mechanical way of massaging the land, so to speak, and of drilling—a mechanical way of sowing the seed. In the cost of raising a crop, just the same as in the cost of making carpets, shoes or wagons, hand power and animal power cannot compete with mechanical power. The mechanically prepared seed bed not only costs less in its preparation, but it gives forth more in its harvest.

The War Will Make Horses Too Costly to Keep.

Oats and oil are in the throes of a little war of their own, just the same as the human back one combatted with the reaper knife. This strife is fast becoming more acute, because the price of horses is being accentuated every day by the number being sold out of the country for cavalry mounts to be used abroad. The drain upon the Canadian horse supply will soon be such that wherever possible mechanical contrivances will be used to do their work. Were we to begin at once, it will require five years to replenish the drain which the war has alredy made upon the horse supply of the world. The United States government department of agriculture has estimated that it costs $75 to $80 per year to keep a horse, and in the study of horse utility for a period covering six years it was found that he averaged only 3.14 hours of work per day as his contribution to lessening the high cost of living. In contrast with this it was found that he ate up the entire yield of one out of every five acres which he helped to cultivate. It has been shown, too, for every hour he worked it cost about 16 cents; whereas, a full horse-power hour can be delivered by a high-grade oil engine for only two cents per hour, in both cases interest, fuel, food and depreciation being included. Again, in plowing, a team of two horses can plow only about two acres per day. In doing this they travel sixteen miles, which is a good day's pull for horses with a load. An oil tractor, on the other hand, will plow deeper and keep it up twenty-four hours each day until the work is completed, without feeding, resting or growing thin. While it would not be wise to dispose of brood mares and blooded stock to satisfy the demands of the war, in the end perhaps the increased prices which the present horse purchases will undoubtedly bring about, will be beneficial in forcing thousands of farmers to adopt a newer and more economical form of power. Everyone who cultivates 160 acres or more is a candidate for a share in the millions of dollars which the countrywide adoption of this method of plowing will ultimately save.

Insuring the Crop in Advance.

After plowing, the first duty of a man is to guarantee the work by proper cultivation and disking and packing. The disk harrow and packer are two of the leading nature aiders in farming. It is said that rightly used the disk does more to increase crop profits than any other farm implement and should be used on every farm. It is one of the simplest implements made; one of the easiest to obtain; simple to run; will stand much hard work; and lasts a long time. It is so inexpensive that if used on a fair sized field it will so increase the production that it soon pays for itself.

Seeding Helps Make the Crops Secure.

After the seed bed is in a condition satisfactory for the proper development of the seed, the next important step is to be sure that the seed is sown just right. It is only within recent years that definite, decisive tests have been made between sowing with a drill and sowing broadcast, but so one-sided have been the various tests in regard to these two methods that broadcasting is fast being numbered among the many old methods which farmers are now discarding. Broadcasting requires more seed, and yet it produces a smaller crop of lower grade grain. The reason for this is that the seed thus sown is not distributed evenly over the ground. It does not all start from an even depth, nor does it begin germinating uniformly. By the use of an ordinary drill, even without the more modern attachments, the seed is deposited in fine, slightly compact, moist soil, all of it at a uniform depth. It is thus carefully covered by the cover chains or press wheels, it all has an even chance of germinating, and all the grain will tend to ripen at the same time. It requires, furthermore, much less seed to get a good stand with a drill than by broadcasting.

Proper disking and packing and proper sowing are the best ways to help nature give a good crop. There is very little more expense in doing it right than in doing it wrong, and the returns are much greater.

Our work begins this fall in our plowing and seeding, and our opportunity to help will come next year at our harvesting and selling. We have more at stake than our profits. Towering over everything and stifling our selfish hopes of gain of our commercial instincts, is our ability and our willingness to meet the call upon us which we know will result from the waste and devastation of the present unfortunate conflict into which the Mother Country has been drawn.

(By H. H. Biggart, Hamilton, Ont.)

The history of all great wars has shown that the man at home behind the plow fought shoulder to shoulder with the man at the front behind the gun. In times past, without the first the latter would have starved, and without the second the former would have been destroyed.

Such a crisis has not yet come in the present conflict, but the silent appeal of the Mother Country to all her colonies has been heard around the world—an appeal for supplies, for bread, for hay, for horses and for moral support.

Already across the border the American farmer is fortifying himself to meet the increased demand which will be made upon him for his produce. He is increasing his acreage and everywhere is re-echoing the appeal to him to improve his methods in order that his acreage yield may be increased. The impulse which is swaying him to answer the emergency call should meet with double response from the tillers of the soil in this country, where not only the dictates of business urge them on, but where there is the added incentive of the higher consideration of patriotism. As a man doubles his strength when tightly pressed, or an engine exceeds its rated capacity when forged ahead, so should the Canadian farmers multiply their energy and strive to excel their past good records as producers of the world's bread.

The recent appeal of the Hon. Martin Burrell, minister of agriculture, showed definitely the business advantage of beginning at once to prepare for a greater acreage of wheat. "The only way to get more wheat," he said, "is to properly and most carefully handle the stubble land. Let it be the determination of every farmer to make his wheat acres in 1915 yield as never before. It is certain that an increase of many millions of bushels can be insured if every farmer on the prairies will carefully consider the following suggestions and put them into practice immediately:

Summer Fallow.

"The summer fallow. Get the summer fallow into good shape; let it be ready for the seeder the moment the snow goes, and put it into such shape as to be free from weeds, ready to absorb moisture, and as safe as possible from evaporation.

Stubble Land.

"Stubble Land—Every acre of stubble land in good enough shape to be fairly safe for wheat, should be plowed right now; plow not less than seven inches deep, and deeper if the character of the soil and moisture content will permit; deep soils should be ploughed deeply, shallow or light soils with a more shallow furrow; do the plowing well; every acre should be harrowed within two days after plowing and pack the land if possible after harrowing.

Spring Work.

"Spring Work—Early seeding is the next consideration; make every preparation now and this coming winter, to lose no time when the spring opens; be sure the seed saved is clean, and of high germinating quality; get the best variety possible; do the work well at seeding time, cultivating or disking before seeding always means bigger and better crops, and in districts where the crops were a failure this year the methods outlined above are particularly necessary."

We would emphasize especially the necessity for frequent disking and the almost essential use of the land packer as a safeguard against drought. Many thousands of farmers, for the first time, last year staked their crops on the land packer, but owing to the unseasonable dryness which prevailed this season it is estimated by many authorities that the use of this machine, wherever used, made a difference of 6 to 12 bushels per acre. At the price at which they are disposing of their wheat this year, the packer has proved an investment worth several hundred per cent. to them the first year of its use.

PEPPERY COMPOSERS

Masters of Music Who Had Nice Tempers of Their Own.

Even in the presence of his royal pupils Handel would sometimes fly into most violent passions.

"You forget yourself, Mr. Handel," a court attendant said reprovingly on one such occasion. "You should show more respect to her royal highness!"

"Royal highness!" snorted the musician contemptuously. "Bah! De respect is due to me! There are many brincesses, but only one Handel!"

On another occasion, when George I. sent a message summoning him to an interview, he returned this answer:

"Dell his bajesty he bust wait. By tibe is bore imbordant dan his!"

Viotti, the famous French musician of the eighteenth century, had an equal contempt for royalty and an exaggerated opinion of himself, as the following story shows: One day he was summoned to Versailles to play before Marie Antoinette and the court. The performance had begun; the opening bars of his favorite solo commanded breathless attention, when a cry was heard:

"Place for Mgr. the Comte d'Artois!"

At the sound Viotti immediately ceased playing, cast an indignant glance at his audience, placed his violin under his arm and walked out of the place.

When Marie Antoinette once inquired of Gluck how his new opera was progressing he answered, "Madame, it is nearly finished, and I assure you it will be superb," a conceit which was rivaled by that of Meyerbeer, who, when a friend declared that if anything better could be composed than one of his rival operas he would dance on his head, answered, "If that is so I should advise you to start practicing at once, for I have just commenced the fourth act of 'The Huguenots!'"

Even Haydn, usually the most modest of men, showed at times that he had as good an opinion of his own merits as any of his admirers. On one occasion, when a friend said to him of his "Salomon" symphonies, "Sir, I am strongly of opinion that you will never surpass these wonderful symphonies," he answered placidly, "No; I never mean to attempt the impossible!"

The deepest thing in Socialism is also the most democratic thing, because it can be understood by all—the belief in human brotherhood.—Brougham Villiers.

A Band of Velvet Ribbon

By JOHN Y. LARNED

At a summer hotel in the Adirondack mountains, where there were the usual quantum of young girls and the usual deficit of young men for them to flirt with, Albert King, who needed recreation after too much work, found himself in demand. But King was not a ladies' man, and he demurred.

Nevertheless, there was one girl who attracted him. She was not one of the rocking chair brigade, as the ladies who sat on the piazza were dubbed, for she was not admitted to their charmed circle. Why, King did not know.

King made her acquaintance and was thereafter taboo by the patrician girls, who had no use for a man who would divide his attentions to them with one of another caste. But he did not mind this, for Ellen Bickford, the young lady in question, interested him and relieved the monotony of his stay in the mountains. Besides, he discovered her superiority in one respect, courage, for when a large party were caught out on the lake in a terrific squall and it looked as if their boat would be swamped Miss Bickford displayed no terror whatever, while other girls were desperately frightened.

Miss Bickford never wore short sleeves to her dresses except at the hotel dances, when she displayed a well rounded neck and arms. But at such times her right arm was invariably encircled with a broad strip of velvet. The fact that this part of her arm—midway between the shoulder and the elbow—was never exposed soon began to excite comment. That there was something on her arm to be concealed was evident; curiosity stepped in and would know what it was. But there was a dignity about Miss Bickford that caused curious persons to abstain from making inquiries, so the matter remained unexplained.

King was ignorant of the gossip concerning what kind of blemish was hidden under the velvet. He had noticed the fact of Miss Bickford's wearing it but had not troubled himself as to the cause. If he thought of it at all he very likely set it down to the concealment of a scar, probably caused by vaccination. But one day the rumor reached his ears that Miss Bickford was the daughter of a common sailor who, when she was a child, had tattooed on her arm an anchor. Since King had been smitten with the young lady this report naturally interested him.

Whatever he may have thought of Miss Bickford's origin, it seemed to him unlike her to conceal any mark of it. He would rather expect her to permit the whole world to know her for exactly what she was.

Miss Bickford, it seems, was as much attracted by Mr. King as he was by her. Moreover, she noticed that after a certain period he seemed disposed to draw away from her. She knew that what she was concealing was causing a smothered commotion among the young ladies of the hotel and inferred that some one of the many stories that were floating about concerning it had reached him. One day she frankly said to him:

"Mr. King, have you heard the story that I am the daughter of a common sailor who tattooed an anchor on my arm?"

"I have."

"You are the only person in this house whose opinion I care for, but I do care for yours and do not wish, so far as you are concerned, to sail under false colors. My father is or was a landsman and had nothing to do with what is under the circlet I wear. But I do wear it to conceal something that has been tattooed on my arm."

"Thank you very much for the preference you have shown me and your frankness. For the first time my curiosity as to that ribbon has been excited, and since you have caused it I look to you to gratify it."

"I assure you that it is nothing to be ashamed of."

"Is it anything to be proud of?"

To this she assented haltingly.

"In that case I insist upon seeing it."

After some persuasion she pulled the ribbon down toward her elbow, and there in blue ink under the skin were the letters "Heroine."

King looked at the word, then up at the girl's face and, with a smile, said:

"Come; tell the story. I am dying to hear it."

"It is not much of a story. For years my family had a cottage on the seacoast. My summers were spent there from the time I was six years old. I learned to swim like a duck and could handle a boat as well as a boy. Our cottage was on one side of a neck of land, and a life saving station was on the other side. One day on our side a ship came ashore. The life men did not know of her being there, and there was not time in which to tell them. There were six men about to drown. I pulled out in my boat and saved them. I was but thirteen years old and didn't know enough to refuse to permit one of the life savers to tattoo my arm."

"You have hurried through your story," said King, "as though it was something to be ashamed of. I'm glad what you are is indelibly written on your person, and if you were mine I would never consent to an attempt to eradicate it."

In time she became his, and there was nothing he was more proud of than the proud title his wife continued to conceal.

A Thundering Yarn.

A year or two ago, in a North of England city, writes Mr. J. H. Elgir, F. R. A. S., in the Yorkshire Weekly Post, a man told me that during a very violent thunderstorm all the windows of his club were thrown wide open. "To let the lightning in!" I remarked. "Not exactly," he replied, "but to let it out again if it did get in." As a fact, it accepted the invitation to enter the club with alacrity, and though it magnaminously spared the foolhardy people responsible for the invitation, it wrecked a large safe in an adjoining room. The person who related this to me said he would ever after look upon lightning as the "'cutest thing in creation." It is the flash that murders; the poor thunder never harm'd head.

WESTMINISTER ABBEY INSURED

For $750,000 Against Risks From Aircraft

London, Oct. 24. — Westminster Abbey was insured at Lloyd's yesterday for $75,000 against aircaft risks. The sum named is evidently intended merely to cover possible damage to the roof and other parts accessible to the bomb-droppers. There is a falling off in the number of risks, covered, owing to the brighter outlook in Belgium and Northern France.

OUR OLD FRIEND VILLA IS ACTIVE

Said to be Making Preparations for an Attack

Laredo, Texas, Oct. 24. — Gen. Villa is reported to be making preparations to attack Nuevo, Laredo, just over the border in Mexico. Gen. Recault, an adherent of Carranza, arrived in Nuevo Laredo with more than 1,000 reinforcements last night, together with machine guns and a hospital corps.

Captured German Not Very Sure of Victory

London, Oct. 24.—Whatever the Kaiser may think now, the German soldier, at any rate, has a wholesome respect for "General French's contemptible little army."

Here is an extract from a letter found on a captured German officer:

If we could only beat the English it would be well for us, but I am afraid we shall never be able to beat these English devils.

Many Teutons Are Exhausted From Starvation.

London, Oct. 24.—In a despatch from Warsaw, the correspondent of Reuter's Telegam Company says the German retreat from Warsaw was so precipitate that the soldiers had to abandon their food supplies.

Many of the prisoners taken are exhausted from starvation.

One complete unit of 800 men has been captured by the Russians.

NO OUTRAGES BY ALLIED FORCES

Truth is Lacking in Some Charges Made

Berlin, Oct. 24, via Amsterdam and London.—While most of the German papers continue to publish allegations of outrages by the troops of the allies, the Vorwaerts declares it has investigated a number of specific instances of alleged cruelties practised on German civilians and soldiers and has found no basis of truth in the allegations.

ADMIRALTY ANNOUNCES DECISIVE EFFORTS TO CLEAR SEAS OF ENEMY

About Seventy Warships Will be Sent Out to Corner the Eight or Nine German Craft, Which Are Still at Large.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The Admiralty last night issued a statement outlining the steps that are being taken to round up the eight or nine German cruisers at large in the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian Oceans. These cruisers include the Emden, which has sunk or captured twenty British vessels to date in the Indian Ocean, and the Karlsruhe, which has taken thirteen British ships in the Atlantic. The statement says:

"Searching for these vessels and working in concert under various commanders-in-chief are upwards of 70 British, Australian, Japanese, French and Russian cruisers, not including auxiliary cruisers. Among these are a number of the fastest British cruisers.

"The vast expanse of seas and oceans and the many thousands of islands offer almost infinite choice of movement to the enemy's ships. In spite of every effort to cut off their coal supply it has hitherto been maintained by one means or another. In the face of increasing difficulty the discovery and destruction of these few enemy cruisers, therefore, is largely a matter of time, patience and good luck. The public should have confidence that the commanders-in-chief and the experienced captains serving under them are doing all that is possible nad taking the best steps to bring the enemy to action.

"Our commanders so far have been occupied in very serious and important convoy duty, but this work has somewhat lessened and the number of searching cruisers is being continually augmented. Meanwhile merchant ships must observe the Admiralty instructions which it is obviously impossible to specify, and use all the precautions which have been suggested.

Karlsruhe's Exploits.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24. — A cablegram received yesterday by the United States and Brazil Steamship Co. confirmed, in part, the recent activities of the German cruiser Karlsruhe, which, in cable despatches, is said to have destroyed thirteen British merchantmen in Atlantic waters.

The cable message was from Capt. Pilcher, of the British steamship Indrani, which left New York Sept. 1, calling at Norfolk, where she took on board 7,000 tons of coal for Rio Janeiro. Capt. Pilcher informed the United States and Brazil Line, to which the vessel was under charter, that the Indrani was met by the Karlsruhe when off the Barbados.

Officers from the German cruiser boarded his vessel, and on learning that she carried a cargo of coal, the cruiser's small boats were lowered and several hundred tons of fuel were transferred to the Karlsruhe. On completing this operation the Indrani's crew was transferred to the Karlsruhe, and the merchantman was then sent to the bottom with a few well-directed shots.

The Indrani was of 3,456 gross tonnage, built in Glasgow in 1888, and was owned by Donaldson Brothers of Glasgow.

GERMANS NOT THE FORCE THEY WERE

LONDON OFFICIAL STATEMENT

French Make Some Material Advances to East of Nieuport, in Langemarck and Between Armentieres and Lille While Germans Move Forward Near Dixmude and La Bassee

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 24. — Today's instalment of the official information bureau's story of the British erpeditionary forces' campaign in France is one wek old and says that although the Germans are giving way before our troops and are using in some cases ancient ammunition and other old material, they are fighting well, and always retreat in good order.

Extracts from captured letters reveal desperate privations suffered by the enemy during August and September.

"There is no doubt," says the bureau's report in conclusion, "the Germans have to a great extent recovered from these conditions, but they are not the force they were."

PARIS, Oct. 24. — The afternoon official communication says: "The Germans have made progress to the north of Dixmude and in the vicinity of La Bassee, but the French have made material advances to the east of Nieuport in the region of Langemarck and between Armentieres and Lille.

In Russia, the Germans are retreating to the south of Warsaw, as well as to the west of Ivangorod and Nova Alexandria. Desperate fighting continues in Galicia on the Sandomire front.

At Przemysl, the Russians have taken 2000 Austrian prisoners.

FRENCH SHIP WITH WOUNDED IS ASHORE.

LONDON, Oct. 24. — A despatch to Lloyd's says the French ship Marie Henriette with wounded soldiers on board is ashore near Cherbourg and is sending out wireless signals. Another vessel is standing by.

PRESENT CONFLICT THE MOST CRITICAL OF WHOLE CAMPAIGN

LONDON, Oct. 24. — Leading newspapers in London agree with the suggestion of the German military expert that the present conflict on the German western front is the most critical of the whole campaign, and it is contended at least that the outcome is likely to decide the future of German operations in France.

Six hundred thousand reinforcements are said to have been rushed to the German right, and it is believed they are making a supreme effort to break through the lines of the Allies.

BELFORT STRONGLY FORTIFIED GERMANS CAN'T AFFORD AN ATTACK

GENEVA, Oct. 24. — None of the German heavy artillery has arrived before Verdun or Belfort as yet, according to a correspondent of the Tribune who has returned to Basel after visiting the French and German frontier for a week. The correspondent says that Belfort is so well armed that it would take three hundred thousand men with heavy artillery a long time to oust the French, which army the Germans cannot aoffrd.

EMPEROR WILLIAM ON FIELD OF BATTLE.

LONDON, Oct. 24. — The Petrograd correspondent of the Central News says that soldiers from the Warsaw front say Emperor William was personally on the field of battle. He was almost taken captive, barely escaping by automobile.

ASK TEACHER'S RESIGNATION

Board of Education Takes Action After Special Meetings

At a special meeting of the Board of Education last evening the Board asked the resignation of Miss Weir, who is on the teaching staff of the Collegiate Institute.

The Board held a meeting last Wednesday evening to discuss the matter, and last evening Miss Weir was present. Members of the press were admitted only when the Board's decision was given.

Miss Weir had some trouble with Louis Sukloff, a pupil, who absented himself from his studies. When he returned and was admitted by the principal, Miss Weir refused to have the pupil in the room during her period. He then obtained a permit from the chairman of the supervision committee of the School Board, and Miss Weir still refused to have the boy in the room.

Miss Weir has always been regarded by the Board as an A 1 teacher.

GERMANS IN POLAND HAVE ABANDONED WAR SUPPLIES IN FLIGHT

Russian Army Outflanked the German Left Wing and Cavalry Appearing in Rear of Kaiser's Legions Created Panic--Grand Duke Nicholas is Decorated.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The following official communication was issued last night at Petrograd by the Russian General Staff:

"The energetic offensive of our armies, which have crossed the Vistula on a large front, encounter no resistance on the part of the Germans, who continue to retreat.

"In the trenches below Ivangorod we took large quantities of war stores and ammunition abandoned by the reserve corps of the Prussian guard in its hasty retreat.

"The Austrian armies continue to fight with stubbornness on the Vistula, on the San, and particularly to the south of Przemysl.

"In East Prussia there is no change in the situation."

The Petrograd correspondent of The Rome Tribuna thus desribes the latest phase of the fighting along the River Vistula:

"The combat is confined to the German left wing, where 600,000 Germans are engaged in battle with a million Russians.

"The fighting began on Oct. 7, becoming furious the 13th, and was finished on the 18th.

"The Russians drove before them ten cavalry divisions from Novo Georgievesk to a point west of Bsura, where was situated the extreme of the German left wing. The Germans were completely outflanked by the Russian cavalry, which appeared in their rear, producing a terrible panic.

"The order was given by the German commander for a general retreat toward Lowitz and Skierneviez, but the retreat soon degenerated into a disorderly flight, with the Russians still pursuing, and the flight momentarily becoming more disastrous.

"Emperor Nicholas has conferred the order of St. George, third class, on Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russian forces and the same order, fourth class, on Capt. Martinoff.

FARMER IS SHOT.

Blenheim, Ont., Oct. 24. — Thos. Sample, a prominent Harwich township farmer, was accidentally shot dead last night by his 12-year-old nephew, Jack Sample, who attempted to extract a bullet from a 32-rifle when the cartridge exploded.

WITH LIMITLESS FORCE OF MEN RUSSIA TAKES ENORMOUS RISKS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 24. — Describing the recent fighting, the Petrograd correspondent of the Post says the battle of Warsaw is another instance of the daring strategy of the Russians in taking enormous risks to secure desirable positions, and risks which Russia can afford to take, but which countries like England and France cannot afford.

"Russia already has won three battles, Galicia, Augustowo and Warsaw," says the correspondent, "each time by enormous risks consciously taken, and each time the enemy has trumpeted a great victory at the crisis, until the final result opened the eyes of the German strategists to the nature of the Russian tactics."

TWO EXPLOSIONS ON BELGIAN COAST.

ROTTERDAM, Oct. 24. — According to a report from Flushing, published in the Nieune Courant, a tremendous explosion was heard at 7.30 on Friday night on the Belgian coast, followed by another at 8. Coast guards think the pier at Zeebruge was blown up.

It is reported here that the Germans are preparing to leave Antwerp, and that German officers' wives have been ordered to leave Brussels within forty-eight hours.

Nonagenarian Knits For the Soldier Boys

(Lakefield News.)

At a certain house in the village an aged lady, 90 years old, can be seen nearly every day and evening engaged in knitting warm socks for the members of the Canadian Contingent now in the Old Country. Even at her advanced age she does not require glasses, and can also read the daily newspapers without the use of them. It is an object lesson that many of our younger people should take to heart. How many of the younger generation are employed in a like patriotic manner?

SOLDIERS ON CANADIAN FARMS.

IT SOUNDS ODD to speak of fighting Germans on Canadian farms. Yet it can be done. A week or so ago a very large order for a contraband article came to an English trader from Italy. Suspicions aroused led to inquiries, and the goods were to be sent to Switzerland, where there was no industry large enough to use even a small portion of the shipment. These goods were intended for Germany, and indicate how serious is the industrial condition of that country. This case is cited to show how important are the food and productive resources of a country in time of war. The silver bullet and flour powder are just as important as men and ships. Money and bread are necessary to keep armies in the field. Canada has sent a large body of men to the front; more will soon be training, but there is another field where every Canadian farmer can do a great patriotic and imperial service. That is by growing wheat. Wheat will be more in demand next year than now, high-priced as it is, and it is important that Canadian farms yield their maximums of food next year. It is essential to the welfare of Canada and the Empire. Already Imperial authorities recognize the importance of this fact. The Westminster Gazette, a representative English paper, says this regarding Canada's share in Empire defence, which is important to all Canada:

> "Sir Robert Borden announced yesterday that the Canadian Government is going to organize and train a second Expeditionary Force. This is to be done as quickly as possible, and arrangements for the equipment necessary are already being made. Further, the Government is making arrangements to train reinforcements for both the Expeditionary Forces. This is indeed a magnificent contribution to the Imperial Army now at work on the Continent of Europe, and we in the Mother Country are deeply conscious of the splendid loyalty which the Canadians, in common with all the King's peoples overseas, have displayed at this critical time. Once again we venture to express the hope that Canada will take care to be in a position to send us not only men but wheat. We know that there are a good many Canadian farmers who, fidgeting to be at the front, find it difficult to leave their farms. They may rest assured that if they stay in Canada to grow wheat for us next year they will perform a very real service to the Empire."

SIR WM. OSLER AND DUM-DUMS.

THE RUMORS that dum-dum bullets have been used in the present war call forth many protests. The following paragraph from the Montreal Gazette seems to discredit the rumors, but the feeling of the public on the use of these bullets is none the less against their use:

> "Sir William Osler, who is supervising hospital work in England during the war, expresses the opinion that this war will set a new record for low mortality among the wounded. The famous physician also says he has yet to see a wound inflicted by either a dum-dum or an explosive bullet. Many will be gratified to hear both the opinion and the statement."

GOOD ROADS.

THE OPENING of a new highway by Sir Lomer Gouin calls fresh attention to the Good Roads Movement, which is gradually spreading throughout the continent. In Quebec, says the Montreal Journal of Commerce, considerable progress has been made during the past two or three years, and some very fine highways have been built in various parts of the province. This movement is spreading throughout Canada, and it will only be a question of time when improved highways will be deemed as necessary as railway transportation is at the present time. On this continent we have made the mistake of spending large sums on the railroads, or the main arteries of commerce, and neglecting the smaller feeders, with the result that it costs two or three times as much as it should for a farmer to bring his produce to market.

The neighbouring Republic has done more in the matter of good roads than has been accomplished in Canada. Recently the California Highway Commission announced that 202 miles of state highway had been completed, and accepted, and 615 miles were under contract and partially completed. This has been accomplished in the past three years at a cost of $4,800,000. Altogether that State is planning to build 2,000 miles of improved roadway. In other parts of the United States improved roadways are the order of the day.

It has been found that farms adjacent to good highways increase enormously in value as a result of the improvements made. A farmer living alongside of a good road can draw more produce to market and in less time than one who has to struggle through roads axle deep in mud. Improved highways make for better social intercourse, permit of an easier access to school and church, and in a score of other ways add to the prosperity and happiness of a community. Good roads are justified from both economical and social standpoints.

A FEW QUESTIONS.

IT IS SAID that in response to the wild pleadings of Liberal politicians the election has been postponed till after the next session. Are we, then, to assume that a partisan and irresponsible Senate is to be allowed to balk the will of the people at another session with impunity, or is it that they are to be given one more chance to behave themselves? Will our Liberal brethren agree to an election at that time if the war is still on and other conditions remain the same? Or are we to continue to be thwarted by the Senate to please the Liberal politicians who are not ready for a contest? The government will incur a serious responsibility if it listens to Grit politicians, whether in the Senate or out of it, to the detriment of the House of Commons, whose members the people elect to transact their business for the welfare of the country.

THE MONTREAL STAR.

THE ATTITUDE of the Montreal Star towards the Borden Government cannot be considered friendly. That journal has assumed all sorts of motives on the part of the Government regarding an election, and has even gone so far as to forget that it has lost very much of its influence for reasons with which the public is familiar. Its present manner of spanking the Government and setting it right on its little chair is amusing, if not instructive.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IT HAS been announced that the Canadian Pacific's giant elevator at Transcona, Manitoba, which settled in the ground and leaned over at a great angle, has been righted and set upon solid concrete piers which rest on bed rock. This wonderful feat of engineering skill has been performed without the structure showing a single crack.

THEY SAY three-hundred-year-old tin mines in Bolivia have reached to a depth of 2,300 feet and the richness of the ore increases as the workings descend. When they go to the hot place, they may find pure tin sidewalks and plate factories going.

GERMAN CULTURE is not apparently in very high vogue just now.

The United States Army.

(Canadian Courier.)

Many people, in talking of the Canadian army, underestimate the strength of the United States army, with which ours is generally compared. The total enlistment in the Republic is more than 80,000. Of these, 14,000 are cavalry, 6,000 field artillery, 19,000 coast artillery, 31,000 infantry, and 9,000 service school detachments. In addition, there are 6,000 native troops in Porto Rico and the Philippines. Within a year Canada may have an equal force under arms both at home and abroad.

Some idea of the cost of such an army may also be gathered from the United States. The annual military appropriation is more than ninety millions of dollars. This does not include pensions or appropriations by States for their National Guard.

The Way to Get Wealth.

(Edmonton Daily Capital.)

Canada is an immensely rich country; but Canadians, in recent years, have been losing sight of the idea that the way to get wealth is to produce it. Canadians have been falling into the error of believing that they were getting rich by borrowing money. A few hundred thousand of those Belgians would be a good investment if we had to carry them across free and stake them to the farms. They could teach us the gentle art of producing wealth from the soil. They know how. We only think we know.

Canadian Nickel.

(Montreal Evening News.)

The nickel sent from Canada by an American trust has enabled Germany to take her place at the head of the warlike powers of Europe. Without this material she would not have been able to capture Antwerp. Our Government knows this; so does the Ontario Government, whose Premier comes from the nickel district. The present is the time to restrict exportation of raw material and safeguard the destination of the refined. Why does not something occur leading to this end?

They Have Stopped Drinking.

(Kincardine Review.)

"The Emperor William of Germany is the greatest temperance crusader of the day," declared the secretary of the Evangelical Association in an address to the Dominion Alliance, some five months ago. Sure! There are thousands of men who will never take a drink again, and all because of the Kaiser.

A Needed Warning.

(Calgary Herald.)

Premier Sifton has warned an Alberta loan company that was trying to make usurious profit out of the war emergency by charging an extortionate rate of interest to borrowers. It is to be hoped that nothing more serious than a warning will be necessary to stop such ghoulish practice.

PRAYERS FOR HELP

By Walt Mason

"God bless our army and our navy, and help us knock the blooming gravy from Graustark, o'er the way." Thus prays the King of Zenda, nightly, then takes his gory axe politely, and mingles in the fray. The King of Graustark, worn and bloody, kneels gravely in his royal study, and prays for aid divine; "Jehovah, hear a monarch pleading, and send the bullets we are needing, along our battle line. Send us a raft of swords and lances, if you would multiply our chances to whip that sinful crew; Oh, send us guns and smokeless powder, and send my starving soldiers chowder, and send them P. D. Q." The God of Battles must be weary; through all the ages; long and dreary, He's heard that tale of woe; and He is surely sick of seeing the riven souls of soldiers fleeing from blood red fields below. He must be sick of King and Colonel, of ruin, wreck and waste infernal, of charge and shock and thud; of Butcher Caesars and of Neros, of praying kings and braying heroes, and captains drunk with blood. Oh, not on crimson fields distressing will God bestow His sovereign blessing, and not on gory arms; but it will come when soldiers wander back from the strife and horror yonder, back to their homes and farms.

DAMAGE ENORMOUS.

British Monitors Have Inflicted Heavy Losses on Germans.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—A special despatch to The Standard from the north of France says: The German losses on the coast from the fire of the British monitors, which, with their light draught, are able to go close in shore among the sandbanks off Ostend and Nieuport, have been enormous. The gunners obtained the exact range of the German camps during the night, mainly from the indispensable fires, and shelled them at dawn, before their guns could make any sort of reply, the horses stampeding in all directions. Tents were overturned or blazing, and hundreds of dead and wounded lay where they had been sleeping calmly, as complacent as conquerors.

Around Peronne the Germans appear to be concentrating an immense mass of troops on a movement towards Amiens and Rouen, to cut off the British and Belgian communications before proceeding southwards to attack Paris. They cannot leave the allies' army in the northeast on their right, so heavy fighting is taking place right up to the coast. The Germans are seeking to occupy Pas de Calaix before they advance much farther into France lower down. That they seriously hope to attack England before attempting once more to invest Paris is hardly conceivable. The cheerfulness of the cosmopolitan population of Pas de Calaix, now that the great exodus of refugees from Belgium is over, is altogether admirable.

Germans Preparing Lighters.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 24. — (Via London.) — Two shipyards at Kiel, the Germania and the Howard, are building thirty armored lighters capable of carrying 500 men each, and traveling at the rate of nine miles an hour, to proceed to the River Scheldt should eventualities permit the landing of German troops on the coast of England. Furthermore, it is asserted that three of these lighters are completed and already on their way to the Scheldt.

Dutch To Evict Refugees.

LONDON, Oct. 24. — A despatch from The Hague says it is semi-officially announced that the Netherlands Government, in pursuance of its decision to free eastern and northern Holland of the burden of caring for the Belgian refugees will run many trains to-day from the various cities in these districts to Belgium.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A FIGHT TO A FINISH

Editor Review,

Sir,—It has been proposed to organize a great popular movement, international in scope, which would take advantage of the most unhappy conditions the most of the world labors under, and present a remedy for the future, based on past experience.

Under present paralleled systems of defence, any nation so dominated by ambition and greed, may launch the world into enormous expenditures in armaments, ruinous and an ever-present menace in peace times, and with a finally certain result, as the present great war, the effect of which is felt to the uttermost parts of the earth.

Germany is not the last country which may be so exploited; more teeming millions still are just beginning to receive the mark of our European civilization.

The great mass of the people of any nation stand for peace, normally speaking, and what more effective than to chrystallize the voice of the people, that governments which are constituted to register and execute their will, may know that we have outgrown militarism, and when its present greatest exponents, the Germanic combination, have been overthrown, will abolish national armament which makes it possible to exploit one people against another to the detriment of both.

This could more easily be done than to reach an agreement as to limitation of armament which could not be enforced, for if the principle remains that a nation may arm then she herself may set her own limitation until met force to force.

An international court in which the nations would have to settle their disputes just as individuals do in our civic courts, and an international police to maintain the peace, not a dual alliance of Triple Entente, helpless during preparations for an avowed enemy, but an alliance of the best elements of all the nations, to redress the very beginnings of disorder.

The world is ripe for this movement and every nation which ejects itself into the world war would make it easier to finally effect its object.

No system could have more dire results than arbitrament of war. We might with supreme confidence support anything to supplant this method, so contrary to Christian, moral, and natural laws.

Canada is ideally situated to begin this movement living as we are in the freedom of a hundred years of peace and now taking our proper share of a conflict which should free Europe as well.

The lower orders of life do not fight amongst those of their own order unless in extremities, and man has greater and nobler struggles requiring all our energy.

This would be a "fight to a finish" movement and yet its vigorous conduct might well have effect in shortening the war. Adversity may clear the vision even of our enemies.

If at the end of this war force be not international, then you will see a more feverish struggle than ever in preparations for what must be a still greater war. In this, Canada and America could no longer exclude themselves.

It is a God-given opportunity of emancipation.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH S. BELL,

AN IMPORTANT OCCASION

By JOHN TURNLES

During the summer hegira of Americans to Europe Miss Virginia King met on the steamer outward bound David Redwood. He dawdled with her through galleries in Dresden and Munich, climbed mountains in Switzerland and parted with her in Paris, he being obliged to return to his native land early in September.

The result of this sightseeing was an engagement, and it was agreed that Mr. Redwood on his return to America should seek the acquaintance of the young lady's father and make a formal application for her hand. She was of course to write her father of the acceptance of her suitor, and as she was prone to decide things for herself the only part Mr. King was to take in the matter was to go through the formalities.

On Mr. Redwood's arrival he wrote Mr. King a note, stating that he had met his wife and daughter abroad and with their kind permission would be happy to call on Mr. King if he would inform him what time and place would be agreeable. The young man was invited to dine with his prospective father-in-law on the following evening at his suburban residence at East Arlington, a dozen miles from the city.

On the train Redwood sat next a gentleman who, when the conductor came along, offered a commutation ticket to East Arlington.

"Pardon me," said Redwood. "I see you are from East Arlington. Can you inform me what direction I shall take to reach the residence of Edward King?"

"Edward King? Oh, yes! I can tell you where he lives. I go right by his house. I'll show you the way with pleasure."

The gentleman—Barbour was his name—proved quite genial, and before their journey was ended Redwood had told him that he had met the Kings in Europe, and since King had told Mr. Barbour of his daughter's engagement the latter was not long in divining the young man's errand.

"Is Mr. King a—ahem—a genial man, a man of the world?" asked Redwood.

"On the contrary, he is very strict. Can't tolerate tobacco; never drinks any wines or liquors and is very attentive to formalities. But if you are going to see him on a matter of importance I would advise you to beware of him. He has a way of finding out about people by throwing them off their guard. They say that before employing a man in his business he will pretend to be a roisterer to him, and if there is anything wild about the fellow it will show itself."

"Thank you very much for the information," said Redwood, and turned the subject.

On the arrival of the train the gentleman showed Redwood to the King residence and went to his own home. The visitor was admitted by a butler and told that Mr. King was dressing for dinner and would be down presently. Then the butler disappeared and returned in a few minutes with a cocktail and a box of cigarettes on a salver.

"Thank you; you needn't leave that," said Redwood, looking at the liquor and the cigarettes longingly. "I neither drink nor smoke."

But the butler left the refreshments on a table and departed without a word.

Mr. King came down and received his visitor cordially. Naturally knowing the object of the call, he was a trifle disconcerted.

"I see you have not drunk your cocktail," he said. "Do so, and I will join you in another. Oscar, bring two cocktails."

Redwood protested that he never drank wines or liquors—they didn't agree with him—and, as for smoking, he regarded it a filthy habit. Mr. King looked at him with an expression of disapprobation. When the butler brought more refreshments he drank his cocktail, apparently much disgruntled at being obliged to drink alone. Then they went into dinner.

A bottle of champagne was on ice beside the host's chair, but Redwood declined to drink any of it. Of course Mr. King could not urge his guest to break through his accustomed habits.

During the dinner Redwood mustered the necessary courage to go through the formalities of asking Mr. King for his daughter, and the matter being over with the host regretted that his prospective son-in-law would not join him in a glass of wine to the health of their beloved Virginia. It was hard for the young man to resist the temptation, but, fearing he was being tested and might lose the girl he loved if he yielded, he stood firm.

During the awkward pause that followed there was a ring at the doorbell, and the gentleman Redwood had met on the train entered. Mr. King's expression changed.

"Hello, Jim!" he exclaimed. "You're just in time to prevent my drinking alone Ginnie's health upon her engagement. This is Mr. Redwood, to whom I have just given her."

With a twinkle in his eye, Mr. Barbour took up the glass that was filled for him and said:

"Pray excuse me, Mr. Redwood, for perpetrating a huge joke on you. The temptation was too strong for me. My friend Ned King is a temperate man, but not such as I pictured him to you. I am glad to join you both on this very happy occasion."

And the three drank the health of the absent one with great gusto.

EXTRA GRANULATED
SUGAR
THE CANADA SUGAR REFINING CO.
MONTREAL

The Redpath Sugar Carton
Certainly is Convenient!

No troublesome dipping out of a paper bag—no spilling—no need of having a special sugar box or tin.

You couldn't get a better container in which to keep your sugar supply, nor a handier one when you want to use it. Just snip off a corner of the Carton, and pour out what you want, exactly where you want it.

Just as important a feature as the convenience, is the certainty that in these Cartons you get genuine Redpath Extra Granulated Sugar, which for 60 years has been recognized as Canada's best. And you get it clean and pure, just as it left the Refinery. 100

Get the Redpath Cartons! It's well worth while!

Dilemmas of Welsh Postmen.

The postal departments of certain districts in Wales are in a well nigh chaotic condition owing to the preponderance of families bearing the name of Jones. For example, the poor, unfortunate Swansea Valley postman is to be pitied when he finds that he has to deliver correctly seventeen letters, all addressed confidentially to "Mr. Jones," where there are nine different families of the name within a radius of 500 yards in a district where the houses are erratically numbered and most of the streets are nameless. So numerous are the Joneses in this part of the principality and so rapid is the growth of the places in the valley that it is now almost impossible for a postman—probably a Jones himself—to give the right letters to the right Joneses every time.—London Cor. Washington Post.

BABY CRIED CONSTANTLY

Mrs. Simon Aumont, Mushka, Ont., says: "My baby was ill and cried continualy till I began giving her Baby's Own Tablets. They worked a marvellous change in her and she became happy, gained in weight, and all signs of sickness left her. The tablets are the very best medicine I know of for little ones." Baby's Own Tablets cure all the minor ills of little ones, such as colic, colds, constipation and indigestion, etc. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

African English.

An extraordinary jargon, which is claimed to be the English language, is spoken by many of the natives on the African continent. Mrs. Mary Gaunt in her book "Alone in West Africa" says:

"Listening very carefully, it took a great deal of persuasion to make me believe the words were English. When I bought bananas from a woman sitting under the shade of a spreading cotton tree and the man behind her came forward and held out his hand, saying, 'Make you gi'e me been, vouman coppa all,' I grasped the fact that he intended to have the money long before I understood that he had said in the only English and probably in the only speech he knew, 'Give me her money.'

"Some of the words, of course, become commonplaces of everyday life, and I am sure the next time I call on a friend who is rich enough to have a manservant association of ideas will take me back, and I shall ask quite naturally, 'Massa lib?' instead of the customary 'Is Mrs. Jones at home?'"

Bush Negroes of Guiana.

The bosch negers (bush negroes) of French Guiana are magnificent specimens of physical manhood. To the numerous cues of their braided hair are often attached nickel bicycle clips and to their ears rings of gold. Gandy colored breechcloths "made in Germany" are practically their only clothing. They are pagans and worship the cotton tree to propitiate a bad spirit. Obeah is the name they give to anything about which they may be superstitious, applying it to all evil influences, to their fetishes or charms in general. Many resented a camera as a bad obeah.

Their language, called taki-taki (talk-talk) is a most remarkable linguistic compound of their original Cromanti coast dialects, with a good measure of pidgin English and Dutch and spiced with a few derivatives from French and Spanish.

TWO WOMEN SAVED FROM OPERATIONS

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Edmonton, Alberta, Can. — "I think it is no more than right for me to thank you for what your kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me.

"When I wrote to you some time ago I was a very sick woman suffering from female troubles. I had organic inflammation and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed, and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend your medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills, and think they are fine. I will never be without the medicine in the house."—Mrs. FRANK EMSLEY, 903 Columbia Avenue, Edmonton, Alberta.

The Other Case.

Beatrice, Neb.—"Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R B. CHILD, Beatrice, Neb.

PREPARING RAW SILK

The Washing Process Is an Important and Delicate Operation.

Raw silk is of three kinds, known to the trade as organzine, tram and souple. The organzine is used for the warp or woven materials, and the tram for the weft. Before these are dyed and prepared for weaving, the silkworm gum must be washed out by a process called "stripping." The souple silk is used for the manufacturing of the soft fabrics, such as messaline, chiffon, etc., and in order that these materials may retain their softness and pliability and admit of being crushed in the hand without showing any signs of creasing the souple silk must first undergo a process known as softening.

This process is a very delicate operation, and the quality of the silk depends very much upon the care with which the softening is done. In this case the silk is not stripped of the silkworm gum, but is immediately placed in a bath of pure olive oil soap. This bath is made up of about fifty parts of pure water to one of strong liquid soap. The silk is suspended in this bath on wooden rods and is moved back and forth by two operatives, who frequently turn it and keep it in constant motion. The bath is heated to 30 degrees R., and owing to the continuous agitation of the silk in the bath the silkworm gum, while not washed out, is made to permeate uniformly through the silk.

After being treated in this manner for about an hour the silk is removed and placed in another bath of lukewarm water, where it is again treated in the same way. This process continues for about fifteen minutes and is intended only to cleanse the silk. The skeins are then removed from the bath and placed in another consisting of about sixty parts of pure water to one of concentrated sulphuric acid heated to 60 degrees R. Here it is worked back and forth and frequently turned very slowly for about two hours or until it yields very readily to a pressure of the finger. It is then removed and given two thorough washings in cold water. It is then ready for the dyeing.

Golden Horseshoes.

Roman writers inform us that Commodus caused the hoofs of his horse to be gilded. Nero when he undertook short journeys was always drawn by mules that had silver shoes, and those of his wife, Poppaea, had shoes of gold. From a passage in "Dio Cassius" there is reason to think that the upper part only was formed of those noble metals or that they were perhaps plated out of thin slips. When Boniface, Marquis of Tuscany, one of the richest princes of his time, went to Beatrix, about the year 1038, his whole train was so magnificently decorated that his horses were shod with silver. The nails were even of the some metal.

The Truly Reticent Woman.

Speak of a reticent woman and most people picture to themselves a woman who doesn't talk much. But the truly reticent woman—the women who makes reticence an art—is not at all silent. She talks with apparently the greatest candor, so that people go away from her saying what a frank, genial woman she is. And no one ever suspects, unless he or she is phenomenally clever, that the genial conversationalist had all sorts of unspoken things in her mind.

THE MAN OF A THOUSAND

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

They called him "Judge" Dale because in the far west you never "mister" a man when you can call him "colonel" or "judge." As James Dale looked more like a judge than a colonel, they called him as I have said. He was a mine owner, and when things went wrong he could make hot times for his engineers and foremen, but he didn't do it in a vulgar way. He was always a gentleman, even when he cussed the hardest. As a matter of fact, the judge's motto was "good form," and he carried it out in his clothes, his cigars, his dinners.

I have it on good authority that Judge Dale was not vulgarly startled when he received word from Denver that his handsome wife, to whom he had been married five years and who was visiting friends, had taken an old lover's arm and severed conjugal relations by eloping. He went through the daily routine just the same for two or three days, and he had the same placid look and the same even voice as he called his head clerk into the private office and said:

"Thomas, I am going away for a few days, and you will take charge."

"Yes, sir," replied Thomas, and the next morning the judge was on his way to Denver. He picked up his clew there without having elbowed anything or soiled the polish of his shoes. He met friends and talked politics and real estate and mines, and, lighting a fresh cigar, he took a train for the east. Arriving in New York city, he paid a detective to locate the couple.

A steamer was sailing for the Mediterranean at the end of the fourth day, and when she departed the judge was one of her passengers. There were more than a hundred others, and as the weather was also stormy for the first two or three days out no one commented on the fact that the passenger who was registered as Major Davis stuck close to his cabin and had his meals brought to him by a steward. Judge Dale had changed his name, but he had no idea of changing his identity. There were laughter and conversation and a clatter of dishes as all the passengers finally gathered for dinner for the first time since leaving Sandy Hook. To the right of the captain sat one of the handsomest ladies and one of the finest looking gentlemen on the list; but, taken altogether, it was a grand array of wealth and culture. Dinner was fairly under way and the lady on the captain's right was beaming when she happened to cast her eyes down the table, and her face went as white as death in a second. Half a dozen people caught her words as she whispered to her supposed husband:

"John, there is the judge!"

The man looked, and the color went out of his cheeks and his jaw fell. Near the foot of the table sat the man who had taken a new name. He was cool and placid, and only the ghost of a smile hovered around his mouth. He looked the woman and the man full in the eyes for a minute, but made no sign of recognition.

"What is it?" asked the captain as "Mrs. Bemis" shuddered and gasped and seemed on the point of fainting.

"A—a sudden illness—heart trouble!" she stammered as she left the table for her stateroom.

At every meal Major Davis faced the guilty pair. Some of the passengers suspected nothing, but others insisted that there was a queer mystery afoot. The major gave nothing away. It wouldn't have been good form. The woman avoided him as far as possible, but two or three times a day he found excuse to speak to her.

The steamer was to call at the Azores. One morning about 10 o'clock she made harbor, and it was given out aboard that she would not get away before midnight. Everybody was anxious for a brief run ashore—everybody but Mrs. Bemis. She feared that she might overexert and bring on another attack of heart trouble. Mr. Bemis had decided to stay with her when Major Davis hunted him out and said:

"I trust you will make one of a little party going ashore, and that you will bring your revolver along as I shall mine?"

"The party is—is"— began Mr. Bemis as his face blanched.

"A very exclusive one—just the two of us, you see. You have a pistol, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"Ah, of course! We may find game, you know. Do you wish to speak to your wife first?"

"No."

"She's gone to lie down, eh? Well, let's be off."

The two engaged a boat as soon as landing and pulled away to a wooded cape, and two hours later a dead man was brought back in the boat. It was Mr. Bemis. He had accidentally shot himself while shooting at a bird.

When the accident became known and it was found that Mrs. Bemis was to go on with the ship instead of ashore to see her husband to his last resting place, there was an outcry over her want of feeling, but it did not reach her ears. She was in the stateroom under the doctor's care, and none of the passengers saw her again. When the major had finished his work at the island he took a steamer for New York and home, and upon entering his office at the usual hour and in the usual way he said to his chief clerk:

"Thomas, I am back and feeling better. Bring me the balance sheets for the past four weeks."

LINED WITH SPIDER WEBS.

One Has to Cut One's Way Through the Roads of Paraguay.

The roads of Paraguay are about five yards wide throughout, and the trees meet overhead at a height of some eighteen feet, thus forming a tunnel of very uniform dimensions. In the clear parts of the tunnel—that is, where it is not choked up with the giant nettle—it is full from roof to ground of enormous spiders' webs stretching clear across the road, the big trees usually being chosen as anchorages and the total clear span being thus more like eight yards than five.

The main cables or framework of the nets are composed of five or six strands of thick yellow web and are almost as strong as cotton thread. The rest of the net is made up of single and double strands of the same stout material, which is as sticky as it is strong. Every yard or so one of these nets extends across one's path, making it necessary to hold a cutlass or a fairly stout stick at arm's length in front as one walks.

The makers of these troublesome but picturesque obstructions are large, highly colored, gaudy looking spiders with bodies that look as if they were about to explode, they are so blown out and glossy.

At intervals in some more open space where the sky is visible one will notice a different kind of web, far more irregular in shape, but far larger than the others. Not content with the space available in the tunnel, these webs are stretched in complicated mazes from the ground to the very tops of the surrounding trees, with clear spans frequently twenty or thirty yards from one tree to another.

From these main cables smaller ones extend to the ground—a drop of fifteen or twenty yards—and the spaces in between are filled up with a mass of webs spun in all directions.—Wide World Magazine.

SOME FOOLS OF MODERN SOCIETY CAUSE MUCH HARM

Dr. Gordon Addresses His Remarks to Women and Points Out Where Many Sad Mistakes Are Made — Meetings on Sunday

Mr. E. O. Weber, the originator of the idea expressed in the Citizenship Campaigns, presided last evening in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, and made a stirring speech, in which he described the details of the work and the progress already achieved in Peterboro. He good-naturedly urged the people to sit closer together in order to accommodate those who were compelled to stand in the aisles and hallways. Hundreds stood during the service, and scores were unable to secure admission at all.

Adjutant McElhiney of the Salvation Army offered the opening prayer, while Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the colored singer, favoured the audience with such selections as "The Plains of Paradise," "He Lifted Me," and "Tell Mother I'll Be There." The congregation joined enthusiastically in the chorus of the last selection.

No meeting of the campaign will be held on Saturday evening. Two special meetings have been arranged for Sunday, at such hours as not to interfere with the regular services being held in the churches of the city. At 4 p.m. on Sunday in the Grand Opera House Dr. Gordon will deliver his confidential talk to men. Only men will be admitted, and boys under fifteen years of age will of necessity be excluded. Dr. Gordon has delivered this address before tens of thousands of young men on the continent of North America, and also in the presence of leading physicians and educationists.

At Grand Opera House.

At 8.30 p.m. on Sunday Dr. Gordon conducts a question drawer in the Grand Opera House. About twenty questions bearing on the practical phases of life, and having to do with the applcation of the principles of Christianity to the affairs of every-day life, will be answered. This service will be a unique one. Mr. Greenlaw will sing at the Sunday evening service, and also at the metings in the afternoon.

The following questions were answered last night:

1. What would you do with doubts you cannot answer and cannot silence?
2. Does the association of men and women in business tend to lower the moral tone in society?
3. What would you advise a young person to do who has a battle with his emotions and is never sure of himself?
4. Can a man be a hypocrite and not know it?
5. Is there such a thing as an honest bluff?
6. What would you do if you had brought up children carefully and prayerfully, and found at last that they had rebelled against you?
7. What is the greatest danger in the life of a young man, just beginning his career?

Seven Sad Sights.

The following is a brief outline of Dr. Gordon's address delivered in St. Paul's Church last evening:

"There are seven sad sights in the world. A godless old man, an undignified maiden, a careless youth, a frivolous preacher, a drowsy student, a sleeping saint, and a careless, reckless woman. Woman is the masterpiece of God's creation. She ascends to the highest heights. She may also ascend to the lowest depths. This evening I bring you a message of warning, which I trust will not be unwelcome. The title of my speech is "The Fools of Modern Society." This evening I address myself to the women. Next week I shall address myself to the men, under the catechumen, of "The Mistakes of Married Men."

First: The woman is a fool who thinks only of herself. It was said of Lady Sumden, that she never stuck a pin into her gown without purpose, intent, and design. A designing woman can scarcely be sympathetic, and a woman who lacks sympathy is lacking in the brightest garland that ever crowned the feminine bride. There is nothing so heartless as a heartless woman. There is nothing so divine as a sympathetic soul.

Second: That woman is a fool who talks too much. The world has been startled by a poem entitled "The Woman with a Serpent's Tongue." Many a woman has talked her husband out of his business and out of his happiness. William E. Gladstone said to his young wife, at the beginning of his political career, "Shall I tell you everything and you say nothing, or shall I tell you nothing, and you say whatever you please." It is hardly necessary to add that Mrs. Gladstone made a wise choice and never caused her husband to regret her decision. Napoleon said, "I cannot tell Josephine a secret. It is absolutely impossible for her to keep a secret." This may have been the vital cause of the divorce between Josephine and Napoleon.

Third: That woman is a fool who thinks only of dress. There are women whose thoughts never go beyond clothes and millinery. They live upon the shell of things and dream only of that which has to do with the exterior circumstances of life. The shallowest mortal in modern society today is the woman who in the presence of her husband and children, can find nothing better to talk about than the color of a ribbon or the style of a gown.

Fourth: That woman is a fool whose house is too good to live in. There are certain women whose homes are altogether too fine for human beings, carpets too good to walk on, chairs too good to sit on, pictures too good to look at, pianos too good to play upon, rugs too good to walk over. Everything is so neat, clean and orderly, precise, conventional and exclusive, that there is no room for the prattling feet of infants, or the rollicking little forms of childhood. Heaven save us from such. James Watt, the inventor, brought up in such a home as this, exclaimed at forty years of age, when he was the master of his own home, "I love dirt."

Fifth: That woman is a fool who is economical when economy ceases to be a virtue. There are women whose husbands are worth anywhere from two hundred thousand to a million dollars, who are as shrewd, as saving, as economical, as exacting, and as penurious as they were when the head of the house had an income of seven or eight hundred dollars a year. In these lives we can find no sign of generosity, liberality or relaxation. They are simply wearing themselves out when there is no need for the close economy which belonged to the early days. If you can get $100.00 out of one of these mortals for the Ladies' Aid Society, or $50 for some benevolent scheme in the community, you are performing a surgical operation equal to any miracle ever performed in the days of the apostles.

Retailing Troubles.

Sixth: That woman is a fool who retails her troubles at the diner table. The average business man of today has a desperate struggle, in order to make a living, and it is a poor inspiration to come home to the dinner table, after a morning of perplexing problems, and then listen to a fresh array of annoyances which have developed within the home cir-

Everybody Loves A Lady Fair

And a Lady Can Have a Fair, Clear Complexion by Using Stuart's Calcium Wafers After Each Meal.

You women ought to hear some men rave over a beautifully clean and shell clear skin. There is nothing that so charms a man or a woman as this. Where there are pimples, blotches, liver spots, etc., the blood is diseased and filled with impurities. Clean the blood and these effects disappear at once. That is what Stuart's Calcium Wafers do almost beyond belief.

"She Was a Pimply Person Once Upon a Time."

Stuart's Calcium Wafers are known to hundreds of thousands of men and women. Perhaps some of the faces you admire now were made beautifully free from skin blemishes by Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

You won't be always worrying about what your friends and strangers think of your "broken-out" face, if you give these wonderful little wafers a chance.

That's because they go right to the seat of the trouble, the blood, driving out all impurities, strengthening it, toning it up. And when the blood is clear the skin is free from blemish.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers are perfectly harmless and may be taken freely by any one. They contain absolutely no mercury, no poisonous drugs, no opiates.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers contain Calcium Sulphide, and a mild alternative — every doctor prescribes them a hundred times a year. They are the most effective blood-cleansers known to man.

It doesn't matter whether you have blackheads and pimples "something awful," or boils, tetter, rash, carbuncles, eczema, liver spots or a muddy complexion, try Stuart's Calcium Wafers and get a surprise in a short time.

Buy a box from your druggist anywhere. All druggists keep them in stock. Price 50 cents. A small sample package will be mailed free to any one who will address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

THE TERRORS OF INDIGESTION

Disappear When the Blood is Made Rich, Red and Pure

The mistaken idea that laxatives or drastic purgatives provide a short cut to the cure of indigestion is largely responsible for the prevalence of dyspepsia and other stomach disorders. Indigestion calls for more than a makeshift. Your stomach needs tone, it cannot absorb nourishment from the food you eat. To give new strength to your stomach so that it will perform the work of digestion without pain or distress, you must enrich the blood. This is the tonic method for strengthening weak stomachs. In cases of this kind Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale people are the best medicine known. Every dose makes new, rich blood, which not only strengthens the stomach, but builds up every part of the body as well. Here is an illustration of what this medicine can do: Mrs. I. N. Brown, Dowville, N. B., says: "For three years I was a sufferer from chronic indigestion. I was hungry all the time, yet could take very little food, and what I did take was followed by great distress and nausea. My sleep at night was broken, and I often had profuse night sweats. The suffocating feeling which often followed eating would cause my heart to palpitate violently. At times my hands and face would become the color of clay and I would be completely prostrated. I was under the care of a good doctor, who finally told me the trouble was incurable and that the most I could hope for was temporary relief. I was in these straits when a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did so, and used the pills steadily for two months, when I was again a well woman, and have since had no return of the trouble."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ENTERTAIMENT WAS BIG SUCCESS

Many Travellers Made Trip to Countries of the Allies

"Hello Bill, let's take in that trip to the Allies the Ladies' Aid of Charlotte St. Church are giving. Wot's that? Why you just go round in automobiles to about ten houses an' you git yer supper—at all of 'em—all for a quarter."

That was no doubt a fascinating proposition and we felt we would be socially ostracised if we didn't present ourselves at this ladies' function. While we did not get a swell ten course dinner ending up with smokes and finger bowls at each, we enjoyed it well, and must say it was a novel and highly pleasing entertainment.

The trip began at Mrs. Clegg's house on Stewart St., which was decorated to represent Canada. Flags, snow shoes and the playing of "O Canada" sufficed and as soon as an auto was ready the crowd, for there was a crowd, was hustled off to the British Isles at Mrs. A. F. Lane, on Rubidge Street. Here we met Britannia, a lady gowned in Scotch costume, and heard English, Irish and Scotch airs. Then we were ushered into another room, where a number of young ladies presented us with refreshments. The sample was good but we were curious about Japan and made a hasty exit. Chief Thompson who welcomed us in military style marshalled the autos off to Japan.

This visit to the flowery kingdom was an eye opener. Ladies in Japan, mirabile dictu, are not supposed to talk—at least to men visitors. They all bowed and salamed beautifully and we returned them as artistically as our six feet would permit. After inspecting Japanese curios we went into the dining room and a number of interesting Japanese young ladies brought us tea and a little cake with pretty little curtesies of about a quarter horse power. The decorations here (the home of Mrs. Dr. Morrison) were very elaborate and quite appropriate.

Russia was the next stop at the home of Mrs. Parker, Park Street. This was very interesting. We were shown into a Russian drawing room where the skins of Russian wolves were spread on the floor. There were not ushin wolves as they were all pacified a long while ago. Russian music with its wierd melancholy tones came from an adjoining room and just about this time a Russian girl in native costume with long dark tresses invited us to have some Slavonic tea and bread. It was excellent, the tea came out of Russian tea pots (not too fact though) and around the walls were samples of Russian needlework and hand spun and hand woven linen. Samples of these things were not included in the first payment—twenty-five cents. Mr. A. Leznoff and Willie Sukloff played the Russian national anthem and war song which was much appreciated and helped to make the representation of Russia so realistic and attractive.

France, the home of Mrs. Lyle, on Park Street, was the next objective which we reached after many wild and dangerous adventures in passing through the North Sea, Germany, and Holland in a gentleman's automobile. The air in the tires floated it on the sea and kept it off the mines so that we arrived safely in the record time of three minutes. The ladies here gave us a warm welcome and spoke the language astonishingly well. They understood everything we said to them and offered us a taste of wine and cake that had the usual exhilerating effect that refreshments in Paris alone impart.

The home of Mrs. Walsh, Margaret Ave. was in Belgium. It looked like Bedlem—beg pardon—Belgium. Belgium pots, dishes, and ornaments were exhibited and explained to us in a most lucid and instructive manne. Then we were taken into the banquet hall where we sampled a very tasty dish of spoiled cabbage—saurkraut they called it. We had some cheese sticks and then were requested to step up and have a glass of beer — a little glass of ginger beer. You see that's why the Belgians put up such a lively resistance to the Germans—it's the ginger beer. Although we said we liked the cabbage sample, no more was given us for fear we suppose there would not be enough to go round. The ladies were gowned in native costume with Belgian colors of red, yellow and black—wide black silk bodice, laced in the Flemish style, red skirts "gathered" at the waist, with yellow silk waist with overlay effect of hand made black Belgian lace—very handsome and no doubt expensive. They wore the Flemish white or yellow bonnet curling at the bottom like a question mark and appearing very cute and becoming.

America, the home of Mrs. Bookhout, was next visited and a very hearty welcome was extended to us. Little Miss May Elizabeth Wright and Miss Alice Williams sang pleasing solos after which we were treated to coffee, cake and nuts. We would have liked to remain longer but if we had the type man upstairs wouldn't be able to finish setting this report for today's paper, and anyway, he says we had too good a time for the capital invested which is about right.

About $115 were realized.

The new organdie collars are still higher in the back and fasten up rather closely, although they are still open in the front.

Population and Tax Rate of Ontario Cities

The Provincial Government's official report on Municipal Statistics, dated September 30th, 1914, gives returns regarding the population and taxes of the various municipalities.

In comparing the rate of taxation in different places the question always arises as to whether the basis of valuation is the same. In one place the property may be assessed up to or close to its value, while in another the assessment may be below actual value.

By taking the taxes collected per head of population, no question of the basis of the assessment arises in making a comparison, and as each place is taken on the same basis this method appears to be a fair one.

The Government return shows the taxation per head of population in the cities of Ontario to be as follows:—

	Municipal Taxes Per Head	School Taxes Per Head	Total Taxes Per Head
Port Arthur	$26.14	$4.63	$30.77

The Great Emancipator

said "You can't fool all of the people all of the time."

For a good many years a lot of people have been fooled in the belief that tea and coffee were good for them—that they were harmless—even beneficial.

It was only when the scientific research of the medical profession began to lay bare the bones of the tea and coffee skeleton, that people awoke to the fact that much of the Nervousness, Indigestion, Heart Disturbance, Short Breath, Headache, Biliousness, Sleeplessness, etc., were directly due to tea and coffee drinking.

The proof came to these people when they tried the easy test of quitting both tea and coffee for a while and used

UNCEASING CONFLICT CONTINUES ALONG FRONT

Persistent Reports of Capture of Lille by Allies Are Current---Experts Believe That Kaiser's Attack Will Weaken Steadily---Germans Are on the Offensive.

LONDON, Oct. 24. — The Germans have undertaken a general offensive movement along the line extending from the River Yser, on the North Sea, to the River Meuse, and while they have compelled the allies to give ground in some places they themselves have lost positions in others. This, in a few words, is what is gathered from official reports coming last night from the French and German headquarters.

The German attack yesterday was particularly severe in the west, where their right wing, strongly reinforced by fresh troops, attempted an advance against the Belgians, who are holding the allies' extreme left. This left rests on the coast and is supported by British and French warships and by Anglo-French troops, which form a front from a point somewhere in the vicinity of Dixmude southward to La Bassee Canal. Both sides claim successes, but the French alone admit that in places they have been compelled to fall back.

Generally, however, there is little or no change in the situation, the swinging and swaying of the lines being the same as has been going on for weeks.

The French yesterday captured Altkirch, Upper Alsace, at the point of the bayonet.

A heavy battle is raging in Belgium about 20 miles south of the Ghent-Bruges line and north of Roulers, according to The Telegraaf's correspondent in Suis, Holland. Roulers was again bombarded by the Germans on Thursday.

"Fugitives from Roulers declare," says the correspondent, "that forty inhabitants of that town were shot by the Germans during the invaders' occupation, and that all the prominent citizens were taken as hostages.

"There is no confirmation of the report that the allies have broken through the German lines near Eecloo."

Putting together the fact of the Kaiser's placing what is practically a mob of raw recruits on the battle front, and the special attention that is now being paid to plans for the sea and air forces, military experts have formed the opinion that the Kaiser's offensive plan of campaign against France has passed its maximum strength, and that from this time on the Germans' efforts will show a weakening.

Reinforcements of British troops are now being concentrated at a point near Havre as a reserve army, to take up the task of defending the sea coast should the Germans succeed in defeating the Belgian army at the River Yser. Such a defeat, it is argued, would enable the Kaiser to carry out his cherished project of hurling a huge army against Dunkirk, and possibly Calais. At present, however, the tide of battle is taking the other turn at the Yser, and the gallant little Belgian army, with an allied British and French squadron sweeping the Belgian seaboard, in defiance of submarine attacks, has won a victory for the allies by forcing the crossing of the Yser, where they aided in blocking German raids on Dunkirk and Calais, and are now firmly established on the right bank of the river.

Heavy reinforcements have enabled the Germans to attack with increased vigor the right wing of the allied armies in France, while continuing the violent attacks upon the Belgian, British and French armies, which are resisting their advance over the coast and canal region of Belgium and northeastern France.

The forces of Crown Prince William yesterday failed in a desperate attack on the French at St. Mihiel. In the Meuse region the Germans are striving to halt the advance of the French toward Etain, an important station commanding the railway to Metz.

Berlin's official day report says that the Germans were successful on Thursday along the Yser Canal, advanced south of Dixmude, and attacked with success west of Lille, occupying a number of villages. However, persistent but unconfirmed reports say that Lille has been recaptured by the allies.

WAR TROPHY BRINGS TEARS

London, Oct. 24.—The tragedy of war was brought home in a poignant manner to a crowd of sightseers in the War Office court yard the other day.

There is on view there a German field piece which, as a roughly chalked inscription on the screen implies, was captured by the 1st Battalion Lincoln Regiment. Near by hang long sheets of names—casualty lists. An old woman entered the courtyard, and hurrying past the elated crowd of younger men and women surrounding the captured gun, eagerly scanned the lists of killed and wounded.

Sobbing but dry-eyed she turned away, and as she passed the Geman gun her attention was caught by the words "1st Lincoln Regiment." Now her tears fell, and with her weak old hands she belabored the blood-stained, bullet-scarred thing of steel. "That," she said between her sobs, "was my boy's regiment, and his name is over there."

Many a woman has selected her life partner without half as much reflection as she bestows on the selection of her fall suit.—Detroit Free Press.

Some Fools of Modern Society Cause Much Harm

cles. Poor aid to digestion is this. Perpetual anxiety is a sin against God and a crime against your loved ones. I speak to the woman who is the incarnation of fret and fume, hurry and worry, concern and anxiety. Do not worry about the flower in the carpet. One rose on your cheek is worth all the carpets in the house, sweeter than the roses of Persia, sweeter than the perfumes of Arabia is the voice of a cheerful woman.

Religious Denomination.

Seventh: That woman is a fool who allows the question of religious denomination to come between her and her husband. On the question of religion, a man and his wife ought to agree. Protestants should marry Protestants and Roman Catholics should marry Roman Catholics. The priest agrees with me in this affirmation, but so far as the difference of our Protestant Christianity is concerned, there is practically no difference between a Presbyterian church and a Methodist church, or a Methodist church and a Baptist church, or between a Congregational church and an Anglican church. There is no earthly reason why a woman should wander off to one church while her husband goes to another. I believe that it is the bounden duty of a wife to follow her husband in the church of his choice. God knows, there are temptations enough in the life of a man, and if one church suits him any better than another, she ought to be wise enough to agree with him in this respect in particular.

Eighth: That woman is a fool who believes in her husband less than others believe in him. The person who doubts you persistently is your worst enemy. The individual who believes in you persistently is your best friend. A man's wife ought to be his best friend in this respect in particular. The woman who kills her husband's enthusiasm for business or for pleasure is digging her own grave. Mohammad exclaimed concerning his first wife, "She was a widow, old and homely, but she believed in me when nobody else did." The sweeest compliment ever paid to a husand, and especially a young husband, comes from the lips of his wife, and the woman who has no compliment for her husband must be sadly circumstanced indeed.

Ninth: That woman is a fool who sacrifices the spiritual welfare of her children. There is nothing in the honors of the godless that will ever compensate for blighted morals and for withered spiritual aspirations.

The Rev. Robert Pogue, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, pronounced the benediction.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Trying to burn his way out of a wooden ice house at Three Hills, Alberta, into which he had been thrust for being drunk but 20 minutes before, Fred McGillivray, a blacksmith of that town, was roasted alive, his prison being reduced to ashes under the horrified gaze of the whole populace who were powerless to save him.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM HAMILL.

William Hamill, a well known Toronto citizen, whose home was 150 Winchester Street, passed away Thursday in his 59th year. For 20 years he was a member of St. Enoch's Presbyterian Church. Born in Hope Township, near Millbrook, Ont., he was formerly in business in Toronto as a coal merchant. Mr. Hamill's death is the first break in a large family. His father and mother are living at the advanced age of 89 and 82 years, and with five sisters and one brother, are enjoying good health. A son, Stanley, and a daughter, Muriel, and his widow, also survive.

ISABELLA WHITEMAN.

The death took place yesterday of Isabella Whiteman, wife of Joseph Whiteman.

Deceased was born in the United States 61 years ago, and had resided in Peterboro for about 25 years. She leaves to mourn her loss besides her sorrowing husband, two sisters, Mrs. Tom Bolton, Stratford, and Mrs. Charles Stermer, of this city, also two brothers, Thomas R. White of this city and Henry of Wisconsin.

The late Mrs. Whiteman was held in high esteem by all who knew her.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 from the family residence, 704 Concession St. Rev. Mr. Phelps will conduct service at the house at 2 o'clock.

PLOWING CHAMPIONSHIP TO BE HELD WEDNESDAY

The public is reminded that the championship plowing match will take place on Wednesday, Oct. 28th, at the farm of S. Matchett, which is not far from Peterborough, in Otonabee.

The prizes are excellent. Besides a number of cash prizes is the $80 championship trophy and the bronze medal that goes with it.

The attendance promises to be large, as a large number of people have stated their intention of being present.

It is hoped that the revival of good farming will be supported by those who take an interest in it.

It is part of my religion to look well after the cheerfulness of life and let the dismals shift for themselves, believing, with good Sir Thomas Moore, that it is wise to be "merrie in God."—Louisa M. Alcott.

CANTEEN OPENED

Sergeants Avail Themselves of General's Ruling at Salisbury

SALISBURY, Oct. 24.—Two days ago the camp roads were two feet deep of powdered dust. To-day they are a veritable quagmire which makes the work of the army service corps doubly laborious.

Hard work has begun in earnest now in every brigade, although the whole of the troops have not even arrived yet from Plymouth. The first brigade attained its full complement yesterday. The Canadian battalions have all adopted the double company formation for drilling. Nothing has yet been done in the way of rifle practice. The rifles, in fact, are only just arriving in camp. Route marches are undertaken three times weekly."

Several sergeants' messes became "wet" Thursday night in accordance apparently with the announcement made by Gen. Alderson earlier in the week, but wet canteens for the men have yet to materialize.

This subject will probably provoke more discussion in Canada than on Salisbury Plains. Officers of the contingent appear to be agreeable to the establishment of such an institution, seeing that such is the custom in every training centre of this country. One must wait events to see the extent to which the canteens will be patronized.

Meanwhile it is worthy of note that the marquees erected by the Y. M. C. A. are invariable crowded. Pianos are provided in each marquee with ample facilities for letter writing. The Canadian emigration department van arrived yesterday bearing a big consignment of song books for these marquees, as the gift of Hon. Dr. Roche.

A lively interest is being manifested in to-day's visit of Lord Roberts.

After inspecting the parade at Bustard, he will proceed to each of the other three camps. Lord Roberts has always shown a particular interest in the Canadian military, every year traveling specially to Bisley to inspect the Canadian team. "Bobs" will not see the contingent at full strength, leave for the officers and men having been granted extensively over the week-end.

CANADA'S FOOD GOES TO BELGIANS

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The Standard states that 250,000 bags of flour and 4,000,000 pounds of cheese, a war gift to the Mother Country from Canada, has been lying on the London docks for the past two months because of the difficulty in discovering who is responsible for its handling. It has now been ascertained that the Local Government Board is responsible and its members are busy considering what is to be done with the food. It is possible that some of it will be given to the hungry Belgians in London.

CRYPTIC LETTER ON GENERAL.

It Referred to Funeral of Crown Prince In Berlin.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—(Via London.)—Two aeroplanes were seen above Compigne yesterday, and when they were discovered to be Germans, French airmen immediately left to meet the Taubes. The invaders fled in the direction of Marseillies.

The German general, Von Freise, has been captured by the Turcos and taken prisoner to Fort St. Nicholas. A letter found in his possession, written by a woman in Berlin, says that eevrything is quiet in that city, except on the day of the "crown prince's funeral, when all turned out to see it."

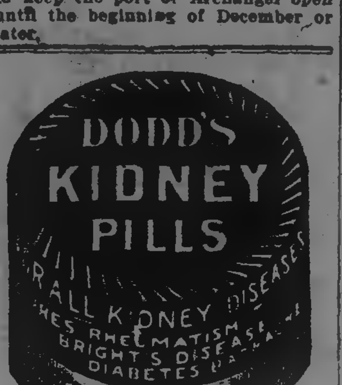
Canada Bars Three Papers.

OTTAWA, Oct. 24.—The Department of Customs has prohibited the further importation into Canada of two English weeklies, Illustrated Bits and Ally Sloper's Half Holiday, and a New York bi-weekly, The Vital Issue.

The English publications are regarded by the Department as immoral and the American publication as untruthful and unfair in its anti-Britishism.

Ice-Breaker at Archangel.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—A Reuter despatch from Archangel, Russia, says the ice-breaker Earl Grey, acquired from the Canadian Government, has arrived, and that the Russian Government hopes the vessel will be able to keep the port of Archangel open until the beginning of December or later.



KIDNEY DISEASE CURED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Father And Son Both Owe Their Good Health To The Healing Qualities Of The Only Medicine In The World Made Of Fruit Juices.

H. DORLAND, ESQ.

Bronte, Ont., Oct. 31st. 1913.

"For about 40 years, I was troubled with Lame Back brought on by Kidney and Bladder Trouble. I was never confined to my bed with the trouble, but it affected my spine and I had to rest for a time. I took advertised remedies that did not do me any good. I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised and decided to try them. They did me more good than any other remedy. I would advise anyone suffering from Kidney or Bladder Trouble, to use "Fruit-a-tives".

H. DORLAND.

"Fruit-a-tives" acts directly on the kidneys and bladder, relieving inflammation and stopping the pain. But it does more. It prevents the formation of an excess of uric acid, by restoring the Kidneys, Bowels and Skin to healthy action. When these three great eliminating organs of the body are working in harmony, there can be no uric acid to poison the blood and irritate the nerves. "Fruit-a-tives" sweetens the stomach, regulates the bowels, clears the skin and cures every trace of Backache, Kidney Trouble, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Neuralgia and Chronic Headache.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

IN OPPOSITION TO WET GOODS

Canadian Methodist Church Protests Against Canteen

MEDICINE HAT, Oct. 24. — The Methodist Church, through Rev. Dr. S. D. Chown, has sent to Sir Robert Borden a strong protest against the order of Gen. Alderson, authorizing a "wet" canteen for the Canadian troops.

In the message of protest sent from here yesterday Dr. Chown reminds the Prime Minister that Russia has forbidden vodka and France absinthe for the army, and in asking Premier Borden to make an emphatic protest to the Home Government that the order be withdrawn, he questions the moral right of Gen. Alderson to authorize a canteen in the face of the practice of the Militia Department of Canada and contrary to Canadian public opinion, and the tacit understanding with Canadian motherhood.

KAISER BARELY ESCAPED.

German Emperor Almost Captured Near Warsaw, Say Soldiers.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 24.—That the Kaiser, who was present on the field at the battlefront in the vicinity of Warsaw, whence the German troops had been retreating, was surrounded and nearly taken prisoner, but just escaped in a motor car, is the statement of soldiers who participated in the fighting in these parts.

There is no official confirmation of this report.

One of the Kaiser's generals, however, who was being sent with presents from the Kaiser to his troops, was seized by the Cossacks and brought into camp a prisoner.

Prince Not Murdered.

LONDON, Oct. 24. — The mystery surrounding the fate of Prince Maximilian of Hesse, a son of the youngest sister of Emperor William, has been disposed of in a report given out by the official information bureau yesterday.

In this it is announced that Prince Maximilian, a young man of 20 years, was mortally wounded Oct. 12 in the hard fighting in the neighborhood of Mont des Cats. He was buried on the grounds of the monastery crowning this hill, together with three British officers and some German soldiers.

French People In Need.

PARIS, Oct. 24. — The greatest problem for France this winter probably will be to take care of the people at home.

The army will have the first call on the national resources. The thirty-seven million people at home must get on as best they can. A wonderful spirit of gentleness and kindness is moving the French people to create a community of interest in everything they have, in which every person shall share. All private interests have shriveled up. Nevertheless contributions from the outside world are sorely needed.

TOWN OF ARRAS IS DESTROYED

Hospitals Suffer From Artillery of Enemy

PARIS, Oct. 24. — The Germans on Wednesday again bombarded Arras and finished their work of destruction. The town hall and the town itself suffered frightfully from the heavy gun fire. None of the hospitals was spared and priests and nurses were among those killed. The cemetery was continuously shelled to prevent the burial of bodies, which will now have to be burned.

The Academie des Belles Lettres, at the end of a long secret session, passed strong resolutions condemning German atrocities and German "intellectuals."

The declaration thereon said, among other things: "That the Academie was sadly surprised to see among the members certain of those whom the association had deemed worthy to share in its work, but who were so wanting in the debt of honor and loyalty."

Leaving Ostend and Bruges.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 24—(Via London.) — The Sluis correspondent of The Telegraaf says:

"The Germans are not prospering in the incessant fighting which is going on over the whole of the West Flanders front, from Roulers to Thourout and between Ostend and Nieuport. The struggle is still undecided, but there is little doubt the Germans are now clearing out of Ostend and Bruges."

News Letters For Soldiers.

Mrs. Arthur Murphy, of Edmonton, president of the Canadian Women's Press Club, known throughout the English-speaking literary world as "Janey Canuck," has recommended to the Women's Press Club all over the Dominion to issue at regular intervals a "home letter" to the Canadians enlisted as soldiers, sailors and nurses in Europe. The Women's Press Club, of Edmonton, was the first to take up the idea. Its officers will issue letters twice a month for distribution among the men and women sent to the front from the Province of Alberta. These letters will contain brief items of news from the various cities, towns and villages and cheery editorials.

Canada's Exports Increase.

Canadian export trade is still on the increase. During the first four months of the present fiscal year, ending with July, exports totalled $134,966,644, an increase of $4,431,367 as compared with the same period last year. Imports totalled $172,041,713, a decrease of $55,627,960. The total trade for the four months was $306,908,377, a decrease of $51,196,503.

Foreigners May Make Trouble.

MONTREAL, Oct. 24.—Police Chief Campeau is urging the Board of Control to take immediate steps to deal with the problems arising out of the presence in Montreal of thousands of destitute Austrians and Germans.

He has drawn up a statement for the board in connection with the serious situation which exists in the city.

It is made clear by the chief that, if there is not a much more intelligent and stringent supervision of the foreign quarters, conditions here will be dangerous in the extreme during the coming winter.

Body of Col. Burland Home.

MONTREAL, Oct. 24.—The body of the late Col. Jeffery H. Burland, Red Cross commissioner for Canada, who died suddenly in England two weeks ago, arrived in Montreal yesterday from New York. Mrs. Burland accompanied the remains. The funeral will take place this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

Grain Dealers Arraigned.

MONTREAL, Oct. 24.—Joseph A. Roberge and George Cardinal, grain dealers, appeared in the court yesterday afternoon on the charge of purchasing oats stolen from the harbor elevators. Both entered pleas of not guilty and the hearing of the case was postponed.

Harwich Farmer Killed.

BLENHEIM, Ont., Oct. 24.—Thos. Sample, a prominent Harwich Township farmer, was accidentally killed last night when he was pierced through the chest by a bullet which his 12-year-old nephew, Jack Sample, was attempting to extract from a .32 rifle.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills owe their singular effectiveness in curing Rheumatism, Lumbago and Sciatica to their power of stimulating and strengthening the kidneys. THE SPORTING WORLD

BOSTON BATTERY SCORES AS VAUDEVILLE TEAM

(From New York Post.)

Hank Gowdy and Dick Rudolph, of the world's champions baseball team, began their week's engagement at Hammerstein's Victoia Theatre, yesterday afternoon. Loney Haskell introduced them as having been "secured to get on and off the stage somehow." He said he first signed the contract with them, and asked them if they could do anything at all in the way of entertainment. Being assured by both in the same breath that they could not do a —— thing, he knew at once that they were good for a week's run at Hammerstein's.

Gowdy was the first to appear and received a rousing welcome from the tired business men who had wandered over from watching the war bulletins.

"Ladies and gentlemen," said Hank, "I am going to show you the signals we used in the world's series. We worked over them night and day at the hotel, as the Athletics are clever at catching the signals of an opposing team, I take great pleasure in introducing you to Mr. Dick Rudolph.'

The hero pitcher of Bronx, taking his cue, walked in from the other wing.

"Ladies and gentlemen," said Dick "Mr. Gowdy has told you all he knows about catching. I will tell you how I pitch. There are fast, slow, curves and spitballs. I can't throw a spitball here. I generally use slippery ellum for them."

Process of throwing three balls to Gowdy, each of them is called a strike by Haskell. The battery shakes hands. Curtain.

Two Alterations In Hockey Rules

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 24.—The official opening of the Pacific Coast Hockey Association season will take place on Tuesday, Dec. 8, at Portland.

The fourth annual meeting of the association was held last night, Portland's application for a berth in the league was accepted, officers were elected, changes made in the rules and schedule.

Only one deal was announced, Hugh Lehman coming to Vancouver, although several are pending. Mallen will likely come to Vancouver in exchange for either Nighbor or Hardie.

Change in Rules.

Two changes were made in the playing rules of the league. One prohibits the body checking of an opponent within ten feet of the boards, and the other stipulates that no offside will be called from the goalkeeper from the first section from his own goal. The teams will remain as at present constituted, seven men a side, and the new rule eliminating offside in centre ice will again be in operation.

An important feature of the meeting was the announcement that P. C. H. A. would continue to work in hamony with the National Hockey Association.

His Hot Dinner.

The voice of the tempter was heard outside the works at Saturday midday.

"Bill, come and 'ave a pint."

"Not me; I've a nice 'ot dinner waiting."

"Jus' one pint, Bill."

"I can't miss a nice 'ot dinner."

"It won't take you a minute."

"That 'ot dinner'd be spoilin'."

At this point the hospitable man lost his temper. "Go 'ome, ole man, to your bread and mustard."—Manchester Guardian.

Easy.

The teacher had been trying to explain the law of gravitation to the juvenile class.

"Now, Morris," she said, "can you tell me why it is impossible for you to lift yourself up by your bootstraps?"

"Yes, ma'am," answered the young scientist. "It's because I wear shoes."

Quarantined.

Aleck, who is a very "smart Aleck" indeed, came rushing in to his mother saying:

"Mamma, did you know they had closed the city library?"

"No, Johnnie. Why?"

"Because they found smallpox in the dictionary."

COMMENT

As You Like it

The fact that the recent world's baseball series went only four games, despite that every additional game would have meant thousands of dollars in the pockets of the club owners and baseball magnates, is striking and conclusive proof that the American national game is both clean and honest, and run, not with an eye solely on the box office, but rather in the interest of healthy, legetimate sport.

For this splendid position of affairs the principal credit, the lion's share, must go to that stalwart gentleman and upholder and promoter of all that is clean, fair and above board in baseball — Ban Johnston, President of the American League and the dominating spirit in the National Commission. A power in the baseball world he has insisted ever since his entry into it upon club owners and players alike being honorable in their dealings and fair in their tactics on and off the field. Unlike those who talk of "elevating" the stage—and never succeed — he did not talk at all about the necessity of elevating the American national game but proceeded to insist that it should be done—and the less talk about it the better.

That the American public and the American national game owe much to this big-hearted, whole-souled, clean-minded gentleman is now admitted on all sides. He well deserves all the good things that are being said about him. — Kingston Standard.

Golf Balls.

The first golf balls were made of untanned bull's hide, two rounds forming the ends, another the middle. These pieces were softened, shaped and firmly sewed togther, a small hole being left through which feathers could later be stuffed—a difficult process accomplished with the aid of a steel rod.

He Nearly Did.

When Napoleon was a youth of ten while at the military school at Brienne he wrote to his mother in Corsica, "With Homer in my pocket and my sword by my side I hope to carve my way through the world."

The Adjutant Bird.

It is stated that the adjutant, or marabou, a tall bird of India, of the stork species, will swallow a hare or a cat whole. It stands five feet high, and the expanse of the wings is nearly fifteen feet.

MAID'S STATEMENTS NOT TRUE MRS. CARMAN SAYS

Negro Girl Declares She Heard Shot and Prisoner Said "I Shot Him"

New York, Oct. 24. — Warned by the district attorney that her cross-examination would be a lengthy one, Mrs. Florence Carman entered the court at Mineola yesterday to fight with all the force of her personality literally for her life in the crucial ordeal.

With her word against that of her negro maid, the trial resolves itself into the issue of credulity. Celia Coleman, the maid, is a girl to whom life has meant nothing but drudgery for white folk and enforced respect for white folk. The only good time she ever had in her twenty odd years, she admitted, was when she was in the hands of the State's detectives during the past few months, awaiting this trial. She is just a plain "colored girl," with all the limitations enforced by lack of education and of social rank.

But for all that her story blanched the cheeks of her smartly gowned former mistress.

"Mrs. Carman came into the kitchen where I was," the girl swore. "She sent her little daughter away from there. She had on a kimono, a lace shawl and a house cap. She walked fast through the room and went out to the lawn.

Heard a Shot.

"I heard breaking glass and then a shot. She came back again a minute afterward and said, 'I shot him!' She said, 'See!' and pulled a revolver from under her shawl. She went into Dr. Carman's office and saw Mrs. Bailey's body. I tried to stop her from going there told her not to go in. But she did.

"The next morning she came to my room and said, 'Oh, why did I kill that woman? Will God forgive me? I hope God will forgive me!' I told her God would forgive anything but self-murder.

"Two days afterward she told me she wanted to get the revolver out of the way. She had me get her father, Mr. Platt Conklin. She talked to him. He got a hammer. Then he went out to the barn. She had me make a wood fire in the stove and she burned some letters there."

She swore, too, that Mrs. Carman had afterwards given her $5 "for keeping her mouth shut," and that Dr. Carman had promised to look after her if she told before the grand jury the same story she had given at the preliminary inquiries.

For hours after the Coleman girl had narrated her brief story, John J. Graham, called the best criminal lawyer on Long Island, hammered at the slim little coal-black negress with all his skill and strength.

He made her admit that just after the shooting she had given an affidavit to George Levy, the Carman family attorney, saying she hadn't seen her mistress downstairs that night; that at the coroner's inquest she had lied under oath when she hadn't told all she knew to the first grand jury before which she appeared on July 13.

She lied at first, she said, because she was told to lie by Mrs. Carman. Every one in the house knew of the doctor's wife's guilt, she vowed. Mrs. Carman said that she would care for Celia's little boy if she lied for her. Dr. Carman told her he would pay her wages regularly to a man cousin in case she should be arrested as a witness. Before the first grand jury she didn't tell all she knew, because she wasn't asked certain questions.

Prosecutor Not Friendly.

District Attorney Smith gave a hint of his attitude when Mrs. Carman during her testimony yesterday smiled pleasantly at him and casually asked him to corroborate a bit of her evidence. He bluntly and coldly her that she was testifying, and by his manner intimated that he was for the time merely the prosecutor. The accused, when called to the stand, walked steadily to the box.

After Mrs. Carman had told all the incidents in conection with the purchase of the dictograph, which she had concealed in her husband's offices, Attorney Levy began to question her regarding events on the night of the shooting.

"Now, Mrs. Carman, on the following day, July 1, was the dictograph taken out of the house?" he asked. She said she had taken it out before breakfast time. "I thought the doctor had enough trouble on his hands, and I did not want him to know I had become suspicious of him," she explained.

When She Used It.

"On the night of June 30, were you listening on the dictograph?" "No, sir. The only time I had ever listened over it was when women patients came to visit the doctor who came frequently."

"Did you know Mrs. Bailey?" "No, sir."

"Did you look at her body after she was dead?" "Yes, sir; at the undertaker's."

"Had you ever seen her before that time?" "I had not."

Did Not Shoot.

"Did you fire any shots through the window?" "No, sir."

"You heard Celia Coleman testify that she had a talk with you in the kitchen. Is that true?" "No, sir," she replied, and gave similar response when questioned on each point of the maid's testimony. She admitted having once had a pistol in her hand, a small one she found in clearing out drawers. This had been turned over to the authorities.

"Did you tell Celia Coleman to say that you were not downstairs on the night of the shooting?" "No, sir."

"Did you tell Celia you wanted to get your father there, to get the revolver out of the house?" "No, sir."

Under Cross-Examination.

This morning Mrs. Carman appeared in court aparently cheerful and refreshed and stepped smilingly into the witness box to undergo the ordeal of cross-examination. Among the 200 or more spectators who occupied every available bit of space, were long-time friends and neighbors. Ranged directly opposite her chair, within the enclosure, and less than a dozen steps away, were the mother, the daughter and the husband of the woman whose life the State asserts she took.

"Mrs. Carman," said the district attorney, in a low voice of suppressed emotion, "you said you were suspicious of your husband. When did you get suspicious?" "About a year ago."

Her story, denying all participation in the crime, was unchanged. When she had concluded, members of her household followed her to the stand and swore that what she had testified to was true.

Elephant Dentistry.

It is not easy to tell when an elephant has got the toothache, but it is best to keep out of his way when you do know it. A London surgeon, who had been for many years in India, says he would sooner risk a railway accident than meet an elephant with toothache.

"It appears that toothache affects an elephant in a more severe manner than it does any other animal. Elephants have very sensitive nerves, and a touch of toothache often brings on madness.

"Providing you are able to chain down an elephant and draw out the offending tooth, the brute is certain to be affectionate to you afterwards. Here is an instance.

An elephant in Bengal, India, became affected with toothache, but the keepers managed to secure it while a dentist drew a decayed tooth —the cause of the trouble. After a time the elephant seemed to understand that the dentist was trying to do something for his pain, and he gave every evidence of appreciating the attention. When the operation was over he frisked round the dentist like a young lamb.

Contrary Minded.

"Do you believe in a hereafter?"

"Hereafter?"

"Yes."

"Sure."

"Why?"

"Because I don't see much reason to believe in the heretofore."

Slam.

"My memory is so poor."

"Too bad; must be sort of hard on you."

"Why on me specially?"

"Your sort are supposed to have good memories."

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Hatton entertained at bridge Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. A. E. Coulthard is spending a few days in Toronto.

Mr. V. C. Hanks, Toronto, is at the White House.

Peter O'Connor, Lindsay, is here on a business trip.

Mr. J. P. Lawrence is registered at the Snowden House.

Mr. Chas. F. Mason, Montreal, is here on business.

H. S. Greenleese, Montreal, is a guest at the Empress.

D. C. Edmonds, Toronto, is visiting friends here.

Miss Hare, who has been staying with Mrs. Cameron, left yesterday for Toronto.

Mr. J. W. Bennet has returned from Stoney Lake, and is very greatly improved in health.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lawrence and daughter, Toronto, are visiting in the city.

A new club, which should prove most interesting and delightful, has been formed in conection with the Y. W. C. A. for the study of Browning. This club will be under the able leadership of Mr. Morris of the Collegiate Institute.

A very pleasant luncheon was held at the Golf Club on Friday, with about thirty members present. Amongst those noticed were Mrs. Gardiner, Mrs. Aylmer, Mrs. Travers and Mrs. Begg, Mrs. Matthews, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Kingan, the Misses Kingan, the Misses Hall, Miss Hall, Mrs. Cameron, Miss Hair, Mrs. Goodwill.

An entirely novel method of raising money will be employed next Saturday by the enterprising ladies who are in charge of the Women's War Fund. Mr. T. C. Elliot has most kindly offered them his store for that day, and a certain percentage of the sales for the day will be given by him to this fund. This will be quite a new departure for the city, and should arouse tremendous interest.

The men of Peterboro will have no reason to complain on Sunday that their welfare is not considered by the churches of the community. A meeting will be held on Sunday afternoon at St. John's Church at 3 p. m. conducted by Bishop Bidwell. Another is to be held at St. Paul's Church at 4 p. m. conducted by Dr. Gordon, and a mass meeting will be held at the Grand Opera House at 8.30 p.m.

The first dance of the season given by the Marlborough Club in their well-appointed rooms on Tuesday evening was an unqualified success. The committee in charge were N. C. Lewis, honorary secretary; V. V. Elliot, S. Armstrong, S. C. Kerneghan, and G. V. Dulmage. About fifty couples were present and all united in saying that the entertainment was quite up to the standard of those given by this justly popular club.

This week has been a most active one for church circles in Peterboro. The mission at St. John's Church, conducted by the Right Reverend Bishop Bidwell of Kingston, has been deeply appreciated by all those who were priviliged to listen to him. The meetings held at St. Paul's Church under the auspices of the Laymen's Civic Improvement Association have attracted immense audiences each evening. Dr. Gordon proved himself a most eloquent and forceful speaker, and with the music which was so beautifully rendered, will make a lasting impression on the minds of all who heard him.

PETERBOROUGH CHORAL SOCIETY.

The executive committee desire to tender their sincere thanks for the assistance rendered at the recent Patriotic Concert to Miss Olive Casey, Miss Dorothy Allan, Mr. Geo. Kenyon, Mr. Rupert Gliddon, Conservatory and Grand Opera House Orchestras, the commanding officer 57th Regt. and band, Messrs. Turner & Sons for use of Opera House, Messrs. Coleman Bros. for gift of flags worn by chorus, also to any others who assisted to make the concert a success. Rehearsals will be continued as usual every Tuesday evening in the Collegiate Assembly Hall.

Local News in General

Knox Church Ladies' Aid will hold a tea, Oct. 28th, in the school room. A good programme. Admission 25c.

Sacred Heart Church.

The sermon at the Church of the Sacred Heart tomorrow night will be preached by Rev. Father McGinnity, of St. Peter's, the subject being "Papal Infallibility."

Spread for Officials.

Monday evening has been selected as the time when the city officials will attend luncheon at the Empress Hotel and formally open that building.

Service and Great Subject.

Rev. James Rollins will preach on "What is Eternal Life," in St. Andrew's Church on Sunday Evening and close the service at 8 o'clock so that all who desire to attend Dr. Gordon's meeting at 8.30 will have ample time to do so.

German Philosophers and the War.

On Sunday night at St. Luke's Church the rector will take as his subject: "The German Philosophers and the War."

Planting Trees.

Some fifteen members of St. Peter's and Sacred Heart T.A.S. went to T.A.S. Park on the banks of the Otonabee today and made the first move toward planting trees along the water front of the athletic field. The addition of these trees will greatly assist in beautifying the scenery of the river in general.

St. John's Church.

The Bishop of Kingston will preach at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. in St. John's Church tomorrow. The evening adress will conclude the mission. Afterwards, an informal reception for the Bishop will be held in the school house.

There will be a special service for men from 3 to 4 o'clock.

Plate Glass Broken.

Early Friday morning something mysterious happened. The large plate glass window of McDermid's drug store, facing Charlotte street, was broken. It was in good condition at 2 a.m. Friday morning, as reported by the police. No clue is to be obtained as to the cause of damage.

Be sure and see the feature Film Pictures at the Grand Opera House Tonight at 7.30 and 9 o'clock. Admission, 10c to any part of the house.

LODGE INVESTS $1000 IN SHORT TERM BONDS

The regular meeting of the Sons of England was of unusual interest and brought out a large attendance of the members. The advisability of investing part of the funds of the lodge in Peterboro short term bonds was thoroughly discussed and finally it was decided to invest $1000 in this way. It was felt by the members that here was an opportunity to not only help the lodge but also to help the unemployed of the city.

WHERE HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS SUFFER

Major Louis Livingston Seaman is not only a military man, and a medical man, but a traveller and journalist of international repute. His work in the Balkans and elsewhere in connection with the Red Cross movement has made his name familiar all over the United States. He went to the front some weeks ago as special correspondent of the "Independent," New York, one of the liveliest weekly journals in that great city. In view of the statements written by him concerning German atrocities in Belgium, the publication of which the pro-Germans in the United States considered as a virtual breach of neutrality, Major Seaman was requested by the authorities to explain his action, as it is contrary to regulations for an officer of a neutral country to express himself definitely as a partisan in favor of either combatant.

"On the day of the Zeppelin massacre at Antwerp, Major Seaman sent the following letter to President Wilson:—

"My dear M. President:—

Preferring liberty of speech to military or other service where it is denied, especially when silence would be a crime against humanity, I herewith tender my resignation as a member of the Medical Reserve Corps of the United States Army."

The following correspondence, within the limits imposed by the censorship, hints at the pitiful sufferings of which Major Seaman has been a witness, and which impelled him to take this action.—The Editor.

"I am writing from the Hotel de la Paiz in Ghent, the city whose people for two thousand years have done so much to wring from their rulers the concessions upon which constitutional government is founded. In feudal days it was one of the first of the Free Cities of Europe, and its historic monuments bear witness to the part it played during the Reformation. I believe no city on earth has contributed more to the development of civilization than Ghent. Here, the 24th of December next, it was the purpose of representatives of Great Britain and the United States to celebrate in the Old Convent des Charteux the one hundredth anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Peace between England and America. Two months ago in the Royal Casino and Palais de Fete the international exhibition of flowers was held. France sent many roses of rarest hue and variety many of which still adorn the extensive exhibition grounds, and in the Palais de Danse the Fench Opera Company made gay music.

But what a change, the Palais de Fete is now a Palais de Misere, transformed almost in a night. Fourteen thousand desolate peasant women and little children, refugees from the country near Louvain, Malines and Termonde, whose husbands or fathers or brothers had been butchered or driven to parts unknown, their homes pillaged and burnt, their crops destroyed, their only possessions the clothing on their backs, have been, or are now, being sheltered here. Could the reader but hear fo himself the tales of suffering and horror that come from every mouth, or see the ghastly wounds of many, even among the little children, what testimony to the agonies they have undergone, his indignation would know no bounds.

I have participated as an officer or observer, in eight campaigns, in almost every country in the world. But in none have I ever witnessed such exhibitions of atrocious barbarism as this war is furnishing.

Another Side.

Thank heaven there is another side to this dark picture. In that Palais de Fete, now the Palais de Misere, the Red Cross is doing a noble work of rescue and mercy. Refugees are carefully treated, clothed and housed. Many had not tasted food for two days preceding their arrival here, M. de Bruyne, who so ably represented the Burgomaster at the meetings of the International Peace Celebration, some fourteen thousand in number, in a systematic way, sending them to suburban villages where houses are open to them, shipping them to England, and so distributing them that they may eventually be repatriated. I was informed at Ostend that children under fifteen would not be received in England as refugees, but I have since learned that the Government is welcoming all.

The work of the Red Cross in Ghent cannot be too highly praised. It has many hospitals (ambulances as they are called here) under the direction and is working most efficiently and in perfect harmony with the military authorities. The most severely wounded are sent to the military hospital while others are distributed to the hotels, schools, convents, private houses and private clinics which have been thrown open for them. At present comparatively few of the severely wounded remain, the majority having been transferred to other cities in anticipation of the coming enemy. Thousands of empty beds, with attendants and nurses from the most aristocratic and highly cultured families in the land, are waiting the arrival of more, ready to care for them with gentleness and skill, German and Belgian alike, in surroundings of elegance such as the majority of them never dreamed of.

Many of the shrapnel wounds are terrible, shattering bony structure and causing extensive laceration of tissue. A very large proportion of the bullet wounds are found in the legs and feet, showing that the Germans, who shoot for the hip, are firing low. The Belgian shoots from the shoulder. Dr. Dulet in Anvers has a dum-dum ball which he extracted from a wounded Belgian. Many of the invalided suffer from extreme exhaustion, after three days' incessant fighting, but they soon rally and beg to return to the colors.

The three characteristics of the Belgian people that have most deeply impressed me during the past month are their patriotism, their bravery and their gentleness. In the military, civic and Red Cross hospitals of Bruges, Ostend, Ghent, and Antwerp, over forty of which I have visited, the wounded German soldier has always received as careful surgical, medical and nursing care as the Belgian whom he came to murder, for this most unjust war was deliberately planned for conquest and extermination.

Whatever may be the outcome of this monstrous holocaust the justice and honors and the humanities belong to Belgium. When the victorious allies make their triumphant entry into Berlin (and I believe they will) the Belgian should have the line, the royal restitution should be made for his sacrifice, in memory of Liege, Malines, and Louvain. All honor to little Belgium.

MAYORALTY CANDIDATES

Aldermen Johnston, Duncan and Duffus to Run ?

It is generally understood that Mayor Buller will not ask the ratepayers for a second term in the chair as chief magistrate, and many citizens are endeavoring to figure out who the successor will be.

There are three possibilities for the Mayor's chair in Ald. Johnston, Ald. Duncan and Ald. Duffus, who from point of service, are eligible for the office.

All three candidates have been approached by ratepayers and although not willing to give a definite statement it would not be surprising if all are mayoralty candidates.

Mutilated Girl in Montreal?

Montreal, Oct. 24. — It is reported that a Belgian girl, whose hands were cut off by German soldiers, has arrive din Montreal, but she has not yet been located by the Belgian relief committee, who do not know her name, but are trying to find out about her.

Early Visiting Cards

Some authorities hold that the origin of the visiting card lay in the circumstance that when Pericles first laid siege to the heart of Aspasia he sent her a bouquet to which, fearful lest she might not guess from whom the compliment proceeded, he caused to be attached a strip of wood wherein his name was cut.

According to Bertarelli, who, among others, has been at much pains to compile the history of the card, it is difficult to say whether it was first used in Greece or in China. However that may be, it seems to be an ascertained fact that the visiting card did not really obtain to any extent in Europe until the time of Louis XIV. It crossed the Pyrenees with Philip of Anjou when he was installed in the palace at Madrid, and Louis himself was the cause of its being introduced into the Netherlands.

Then it was adopted in Italy, where it was subjected to much elaboration. First, the cards showed a modest border of flowers or leaves; then appeared landscapes, bits of architecture, allegories, etc. Finally came scenes of rural life, alternating with views of monuments and towns. The name was printed on the picture of a wall, a tree or a fountain.

TO REVIVE COTTON DRESSES.

(From the Boston Post.)

It may be that the exclusion of foreign fashions by reason of the obstructions of export from Europe, may lead to the revival of the use of material and designs which will be recognized as to the manner born, carrying the approval of traditional taste.

Fabrics of cotton formed the material of the garments of our grandmothers and of their mothers in ancestral sequence. These were woven, dyed and fashoned here at home. Silks were worn for ceremonious displays. But to-day cotton goods of even more artistic worth and decoration are produced by our great factories, and, for that matter, American silks, in American designs, can be had equal to the goods imported from the French producers.

A movement is now taking shape for the rehabilitation of the cotton dress for our women. A "fashion show" is projected at Washington in which society women are to take the leading part. But the idea is receiving wide approval elsewhere.

In this way, this is a practical declaration of independence parallel to if not surpassing in its significance, the suffrage conventions.

HOW THE GOSPEL TRANSFORMS.

(From the Living Church.)

Some 40 years ago, when a British admiral cruising in northern waters anchored off the Indian town of Masset, on Graham Island, British Columbia, a chief drove his war canoe alongside the man-of-war. A covering which concealed some object in one end of the canoe aroused the admiral's curiosity and he questioned the man about it. With pride the chief lifted the covering, revealing a heap of the gory heads of his enemies!

Recently the bishop visited the home of this man's son and found a Christian family, who entertained him in their home with every evidence of comfort and refinement. The change had been wrought by a mission of the Church of England. Every native in the place is an enthusiastic Christian. Their place of worship, which holds 300, is well filled at every service, and at least three of their number are able to take charge of the service and preach. What a testimony to the transforming power of the gospel!

A boy's idea of a delightful climate is a long, hard winter with plenty of snow.—Atchison Globe.

NEW ASPECTS IN MURDER CASE

Employe is Dead and Employer's Condition is Serious

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Brantford, Oct. 26.—The Chinese murder mystery bears some new aspects this morning. The poprietor of the store is named Lee You and it was his employe Lee Duck who died from wounds but not until this morning at six o'clock. Lee You is still in a serious condition.

The police theory is that Lee You caught Lee Duck robbing his cash box and that Duck when discovered used a cleaver on his boss but the latter got the best of it.

Germans Who Have Crossed River Yser, Held From Making Further Progress

Kaisers Forces and Austrians Are Being Forced Back by Russians

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Oct. 26. — The official afternoon communication says the Allies' front throughout yesterday was maintained at all points.

The Germans who crossed the River Yser at Nieuport and Dixmude have not been able to make any progress. The enemy's losses for the last several days have been considerable.

The Russians have been forcing back the Germans and Austrians on all the fronts.

Germans Swear Order to Kill all Prisoners Was Given and Obeyed

Officers Personally Superintended Execution of Soldiers Taken Prisoners By Germans --- Order Was Issued by Commander of Brigade of German Army in France

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—The French Embassy gives out the following:

"A report appeared in the press some time ago, according to which Gen. Stenger, commanding a brigade of the German army in France, has given orders to his troops ordering them to give no quarter to any prisoners, but to shoot them all and to finish the wounded."

An official statement from Berlin via Sayville was issued thereupon declaring this was an impudent lie. The atrocious order had nevertheless really been given and carried out, and proof of it is in the hands of the French Government. Over twenty German prisoners of the 112th and 142nd Regiments of infantry (forming Stenger's brigade) are now held in France at Mont Brison and at St. Etienne. They have declared under oath before a magistrate that this order was actually issued on August 26th, and that in accordance with it, all French wounded found that day were at once dispatched. Officers and notably Captain Curtius of the 112th Regiment personally superintended the execution."

VETERAN LOST TO THE EMPIRE

Gen. Sir Charles Douglas Chief of Staff Dies in London

LONDON, Oct. 26. — Gen. Sir Charles Whittingham Horsley Douglas, chief of the Imperial General Staff and first military member of the Army Council, died yesterday.

GEN. SIR CHARLES DOUGLAS.

Gen. Douglas was appointed chief of staff of the British army on April 1 last, following the resignation of Sir John French, the present commander of the British expeditionary force on the continent. Sir Charles was born in 1850 and had served in all Great Britain's wars since the Afghan campaign of 1879. He had been inspector-general of the home forces since 1912, when he was made chief of the general staff.

BLACK WATCH AND ROYAL IRISH HARD HIT IN FIERCE STRUGGLE AROUND LILLE WHERE BRITISH ARE CHIEFLY INVOLVED

British Losses While Heavy Are Smaller Than That of the Germans, Who Fought in Solid Formation.

PARIS, Oct. 26.—The hardest engagement since the commencement of the war is now on from the coast down to Arras. The principal scene of conflict is around La Bassee, virtually dominating Lille, where the German troops threw themselves in masses against the allies. For the most part British troops are engaged here.

Both sides have suffered terribly. The Black Watch and Royal Irish Regiments have been in the thickest of the fighting, and the British casualty list is very great, although much smaller than that of the Germans, who encountered them in solid formation.

There has not been a minute's respite in the conflict since Friday morning except during the darkest hours of the night, but even then the artillery of both armies kept up a continuous duel.

The Germans appeared at this point to have an inexhaustible supply of men, whom they did not spare. Everywhere where one man fell two seemed to appear to fill the gap. The allies, however, have at their disposal fresh troops, and succeeded in repulsing the Germans whenever they pushed a formidable attack home.

All the transport arrangements of the allied troops are working splendidly and the men at the front are kept well fed and supplied with ammunition. The ambulance services are admirable; the wounded are not left long on the field, but are transported to nearby hospitals.

The Government authorities have been making special efforts to attend the wounded; all the railways have joined in the organization and have placed sufficient ambulance cars at the disposal of the authorities to carry 70,000 men, while many can be transported by the river canal barges, which are fitted with beds and supplied with surgeons and nurses.

The battle right along the Belgian frontier is of the most violent character, and, according to latest advices brought in by officers from the front, the allies are holding their own well and the general position is considered satisfactory. Near the coast the valley of the Yser has been inundated by the allies in order to offset the offensive of the Germans, who are not able to advance through the boggy land, which at one time formed an arm of the sea.

LICENSE REDUCTION.

London, Ont., Oct. 26.—The hotel men of London are organizing to wage a strong fight against the campaign of the London Social Service Federation to reduce the number of licenses from 26 to 20 in January next. The campaign promises to be the warmest in years. Harold W. Lyons, a graduate of Knox College, is directing the reduction fight.

CANNOT STOP RAID ON CANADA

German Ambassador Flouts Monroe Doctrine

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26. — Germany's right to land tropos in Canada, if possible, and thus secure at least a temporary foothold on the American continent, was upheld yesterday by Count Von Bernstorff, German Ambassador here, who declared this would not be a violation of the Monroe doctrine. The Ambassador suggested that, as Canada was sending soldiers to Europe to fight against his country, the United States should not consider it in any sense an infringement on the Monroe doctrine if Germany should land an armed force on Canadian soil.

Discussing his now much talked of note of Sept. 3 to the State Department here, explaining the attitude of the German Government towards the Monroe doctrine, and giving assurances that Germany was not contemplating any South American colonization scheme in the event of victory over the allies the Ambassador said only South America was referred to at that time because there had never been any question raised as to possible German attempts to seek colonization in any other part of the American hemisphere.

LANDING PARTY SUFFERED MUCH

Only Few of British Soldiers Got Back to Ship

LONDON, Oct. 26.—A despatch to The Evening News from Dunkirk gives heretofore unpublished details of the bombardment of the Germans on the coast of Belgium by British monitors.

"The Admiralty had stated previously that the British naval loss was slight, and the correspondent sustaining this says that only one ship was damaged, but adds that the landing party which the Admiralty statement referred to as going ashore with a machine gun, suffered severely, losing a lieutenant and a number of men who were picked off by German sharpshooters. The gun was of necessity abandoned and only a handful of the Britishers got back to their ship."

The correspondent states that the Germans placed guns in gaps between houses along the shore, adding:

"The British ships steamed down the coast at full speed, giving the Germans their starboard guns. Then they turned and came back, letting go their port guns. By the time they next came by the German guns were silent, and an ambulance had appeared and was picking up the dead and wounded."

APPEAL AGAINST JUDGMENT GIVEN IN THE POLICE COURT

Some six months ago Raymond Sullivan was fined $100 in the local Police Court on the charge of keeping a gaming house, namely, Joe's store, owned by J. Levasseur and managed by Sullivan. At the same court, Nelson Parsanson and David Patterson of Toronto were each fined for being found in the gaming house.

G. N. Gordon, counsel for Sullivan, has given notice of appeal before Judge Huycke, and the law firm of Curry, O'Connor, Wallace & MacDonald, of Toronto, have given notice that they will appeal against the judgment of Magistrate Dumble in the case of Parsanson and Patterson. Instead of having trial on this appeal as is usual, by consent, the evidence taken at Police Court has been submitted to Judge Huycke, and the counsels have put in written arguments. Acting Crown Attorney Wearing has placed the arguments of the Crown before Judge Huycke.

PARTY HAD TO HOOF IT HOME

Motor Boat Failed to Come to the Rescue

Recently a local navigator attempted to guide a party of young people up the river late at night in a launch and got lost. After struggling in the fog for over two hours and doing everything but climbing the falls at the locks he eventually docked at Rye's. Those who heard of the incident gave him the laugh but there's a better joke on some eleven members of St. Peter's T.A.S. who went to the T.A.S. Park on Saturday afternoon to plant trees. The elms, oaks and maples were placed in the proper place and when darkness fell the men assembled in the pavilion to enjoy luncheon and a game of "forty-fives."

H. Rye, who brought them to the park early in the afternoon was expected to be back for the crowd at nine o'clock.

According to Pat Kane's Ingersol nine o'clock came but no puffing of a launch could be heard. Nine-thirty came and yet the stillness of the night remained unbroken. Ten o'clock arrived but still no launch. Ten-thirty was about due when Patrick's timepiece stopped and Arthur Sharpe took up the task of timekeeping. After he and George A'Hearne settled an argument as to which watch was right, eleven o'clock slipped by. Some of the men began to talk of sleeping all night in the T.A.S. summer home but the majority favored the idea of "George Goulding" it home. As the hour hand on Arthur Sharpe's watch was nearing twelve, the complete contingent set out. It was an early hour of the morning when they stole a silent march on the southern section of the city and encamped at their respective homes.

Investigation on Sunday morning revealed the fact that Mr. Rye made several attempts to get down to the grove but the fortification in the shape of a fog refused to be broken. He only gave up when he was in danger of breaking the law of the Sabbath day. The members of the society who enjoyed (?) the midnight ramble through the country were A. Sharpe, J. Dwyer, George A'Hearne, John Dwyer, P. Heenan, D. Donahue, Jos. Sharpe, E. Heffernan, P. Heffernan, A. Costin.

ENEMY CROSS YSER RIVER

Advance Made Between Nieuport and Dixmude in Hard Fighting

PARIS, Oct. 26. — The chief announcement of the day in Paris concerns the hard fighting which is going on near Dixmude.

The following official communication was issued by the French War Office last night: "The action has continued under the same conditions as on preceding days. A battle of a very violent character is in progress between Nieuport and the River Lys. The German forces have succeeded in crossing the Yser between Nieuport and Dixmude."

"To the west end and south of Lille, spirited attacks by the enemy have been repulsed.

"Between the Oise and the Argonne there is nothing to report, except several small advances by our troops to the northwest of Soissons and in the region of Craonne.

"On the heights of the Meuse there is an artillery engagement. In the Woevre region our heavy artillery holds to-day under its fire the road connecting Thiacourt, Nonsard, Brussels and Joinville, which is one of the principal lines of communications of the Germans near St. Mihiel.

"It is reported that yesterday in the Argonne region an entire regiment of German infantry was annihilated during an operation which was extended to the wood to the north of La Chalade."

The Sunday afternoon French official communication follows: "There is no change to report between the sea and the region around Arras.

"In the Argonne region our situation is maintained under the conditions announced yesterday.

"On the upper Meuse our field artillery has destroyed three more German batteries, one of which was composed of guns of heavy calibre."

The last previous French official statement, issued late Saturday night, said that from the sea to the region to the south of Arras violent attacks of the Germans had been everywhere repulsed, and that "west of the Argonne region we have [illegible] the village of [illegible] the road leading [illegible] the valley [illegible]

A COMPARISON.

JUST SUPPOSE the Germans had invaded Canada and were within a few miles of Peterborough. Imagine the whole population of this city hurrying off to Lindsay or some other place with what property they could carry on their backs. After a week or so perhaps half the population would return, to find their houses burnt or smashed, the pavements torn up by shells, shops emptied of goods, and general disorder and privation prevailing. That is actually the condition of a large part of Belgium today. It was caused through no fault of her own. She has been resisting an invader, fighting in defence of her homes, nationality, and treaty rights, and this is the result. In view of the terrible plight of this plucky little country, if Peterborough can do anything to help it, for which the Board of Trade has made some effort, such support should be given. However, while we should bear one another's burdens, we must not forget our own necessities, but for the much greater necessities of Belgium, perhaps we can afford some assistance.

THE NEED OF TECHNICAL TRAINING.

THE BREAKING OUT of the European War, with the consequent disruption of international trade and almost total cessation of imports from Germany, has called attention to the marvellous development of that country within the past generation. Coming out of the struggle with France at the close of 1870 with a disorganized condition of business generally, she yet possessed one valuable asset, viz., that of big men, farseeing men, men capable of discerning opportunities and of grasping them. Germany's leaders realized that to make their country great, to increase her foreign trade, and to hold her own markets against foreign competition, it was necessary to produce goods of an equal or better quality, and to sell them at an equal or lower price.

One of the requisites for this purpose, and probably the most important, was that German artisans and experts should be thoroughly trained for their work. Investigations, analyses and experiments were necessary, and qualified men were required. To meet this need Germany instituted and developed a system of practical and technical education which has made her schools an example to the world.

Germany is now at war, and will no doubt emerge badly crippled industrially. The attention of manufacturers is therefore being called to the opportunities presented for capturing a share of Germany's export trade as well as for supplying the home market with our own goods.

In June, 1910, the Canadian Government appointed a royal commission on technical schools for the purpose of investigating and reporting on the needs of Canada in the matter of technical education. The report of the committee of the Privy Council instituting the commission stated that "industrial efficiency is all-important to the development of the Dominion and the promotion of the home and foreign trade of Canada in competition with other nations, and can be best promoted by the adoption in Canada of the most advanced systems and methods of industrial training and technical education."

Canada today faces a golden opportunity for trade expansion. There is immediate need for the public laboratory and experiment station, for the technically-trained and expert analyst, engineer, and tradesman, in order that manufacturing processes may be discovered and applied. This requirement is not for the present only, but will be a continuous demand. The royal commission has made its report and recommendations, strongly advocating the establishment of industrial training as a public policy and suggesting the appropriation of a large sum for the purpose by the Dominion Government.

As the key to securing and holding her share of Germany's export trade, will Canada, through her governments, give to her rising generation the industrial and technical training necessary for them to win?

THE HEATING OF OUR HOUSES.

NO ONE will question for a moment the bad effects on health of improper ventilation. We emphasize the beneficial effects of open-air treatment of tuberculosis and pneumonia, forgetting that the same fresh air treatment, if as rigidly carried out, would prevent a large proportion of cases of both of these diseases, says the St. Thomas Times.

In the heating of homes, the three cardinal points are; proper temperature, proper humidity or moisture, and a current of air—in short, the securing of proper climatic conditions.

The normal outdoor air contains from 65 per cent. to 75 per cent. of moisture. Pass this through a hot-air furnace, and by the time it reaches our living or sleeping rooms it will not contain more than 40 to 50 per cent. of moisture. The same is true in houses heated by hot water where no provision is made for supplying moisture. The result is that this dried-out air craves moisture, and will take it up from all surrounding bodies — from our skin, the mucous membrane of our mouths, noses, and throats; and is in a large measure responsible for the dry, hacking laryngeal coughs so prevalent in winter. Furthermore, from an economic standpoint, this method of heating without moisture is very extravagant, for very dry air requires a higher temperature to produce the same sensation of warmth and comfort than does an atmosphere with proper percentage of moisture.

To overcome this dryness, small reservoirs for heating water have been attached to the furnaces; but these are rarely kept full, and even when they are, they are not at all adequate; for instance, air at 25 degrees Fahrenheit (7 degrees of frost), even if saturated with moisture, if heated to 70 degrees, would require the addition of a half a pint of water to every 1,000 cubic feet to give it a humidity or moisture of 65 per cent., which is practically normal.

Some conception of the amount of moisture required, and how far the air in our homes, schools, and factories falls short of it, can be had from the following description of the precautions taken by the American Bell Telephone Company in their chief building in Boston, which has a capacity of 450,000 cubic feet and a day population of 450 persons.

The fresh air, which is distributed by a mechanical system, is drawn into the building at the rate of 26,000 cubic feet per minute, and has moisture added so as to contain about 50 per cent. of relative humidity. To secure this condition, 675 gallons of water, in the form of steam, are mixed with the air, in ten hours, or about one and one-half barrels per hour. Certain parts of the building which had been heated with difficulty before are now made more comfortable; and in the whole building three degrees less heat is required to maintain a comfortable temperature. There has been a noticeable absence of coughs during the winter among the employees.

Various humidifiers have been suggested, of which a very efficient and simple one is the exposing of the air from a register or radiator to moisture, by having it pass through a surface of cotton wick—one end of which is submerged in a reservoir or vessel, containing water, and which is attached to the radiator. It has been demonstrated that by means of this contrivance the relative humidity of a room can be kept between 55 and 60 degrees Fahrenheit by evaporating about four and a half quarts per day; and a temperature of 65 degrees so maintained is as comfortable as one of 70 in a dry atmosphere.

A practical illustration of this is the fact that we can sit and read in comfort on our verandahs in a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees, having a normal humidity; while the same temperature in our homes, with a dry atmosphere, would be very uncomfortable, owing to the more rapid evaporation of moisture from the surface of our bodies in the dryer atmosphere.

Obviously, then, whatever the method of heating may be, it is imperative that provision be made for having the air sufficiently charged with moisture.

The Religion of War.

(Austin Harrison, in English Review.)

So all these years, while we have been thinking what "nice" people the Germans are, how "musical," how "homely," how "splendidly vital," how "cultured," etc. Germany has cut her teeth on the religion of war, in expectation of the call of destiny. All these years, while Liberalism has looked to the "good, clever" Kaiser with his sympathetic Lutherism, and we have clung like barnacles to her materialistic "civilization," real Germany—the Germany of the Kaiser and of the professors, of the German church and the German army—has been arming for the great "opportunity," for the conclusion with England and Europe, which, "with God's help," was to liberate the Greater Germany. Nor is any other theory admissible. It stands recorded in a thousand German books, in every speech and action of the war lord since he came to the throne. War was not only the idea of Germany: it was her religion and state science. More: it had become the intellectual article of national faith in every professorial chair in the empire.

It's an Ill Wind, Etc.

(Westminster Gazette.)

The calmer feeling as to the risks which might be involved to these islands is reflected in the tone of the insurance market. At the beginning of the war a large number of policies were taken out against damage to property by warlike operations in these islands. That business is now almost at a standstill. The underwriters have had their harvest, but the supremacy of our fleet has removed any fear in the public mind of serious attacks on our shores. There is still a good deal of business being done against the risks of airship raids, and at a price which should yield enormous profit to the underwriters. These have had a wonderful year, for they are now pocketing the whole of the premiums paid by Ulster against the risks by riot and civil war. At least one class in the community owes a good deal of prosperity to the German threat.

Cause for Sympathy.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

The local paper which described the arrival of the Canadian troops in Britain by announcing that the "yelps of the lion" were now ready is as deserving of sympathy as the London newspapers which recently came out with a huge heading intended to declare that the enemy had been repulsed with great slaughter. The hurried typesetter made a fatal error, however, and London was amazed to read in large letters across the page that the enemy had been repulsed with great laughter.

The Farmer's Good Position.

(Barrie Advance.)

Town weddings are few this Fall; country weddings more numerous than usual, says an exchange. So the jewelers tell us, and their sales of rings and wedding presents are the best available guage. This is what might be expected. In towns the business depression is more or less felt, whereas the farmers were never better off.

Experts From Orillia.

(Orillia Packet.)

"A professional gambler entered Vancouver with $3000 intending to increase his fortune. It took the local talent of the city one week to relieve him of his cash." It is barely possible that part of Vancouver's "local talent" received its training in Orillia, which has from time to time sent out experts in that line of no small calibre.

Strange for the Globe.

(Toronto Telegram.)

Strange that the Globe did not object to M. Blondin, new Cabinet Minister, on the ground that it was against the rules of civilized war to run a blonde as a dark horse.

FALL MUSINGS

By Walt Mason

The summer is over, retired is the plow; the millet and clover are safe in the mow; the cornfield is yellow, in sunshine awash, the pumpkin is mellow, and so is the squash; and so is the singer, who warbles with zest, to Autumn, the bringer of coolness and rest. She brings us a number of ardent delights, including a slumber unbroken at nights. How sweet is our sleeping, how tuneful our snore, when Autumn is keeping her watch at the door! No fly or moskeeter to break up our rest, no chigger to teeter around on our chest! The pests are all banished when Autumn arrives, they've scooted and vanished, dad swivel their lives! The evenings are longer, and slowly they go, the wind's growing stronger and whispers of snow. How pleasant I find it, to sit by the fire, the backlog behind it, and punish my lyre, or read a good novel by H. Rider Doyle, while round my cheap hovel the storm makes turmoil. But soon I am yawning and bedward I creep, and then till the dawning like thunder I sleep, and rise in the morning as good as when new, when cook sounds the warning that sinkers are due! How sweet is the season of frost and of squall; we surely have reason to stand up for Fall.

WOUNDS IN WAR.

These Caused by Shrapnel Are Most Liable to Infection.

A French doctor who went through the recent Balkan war gives an interesting account of wounds and how they are got.

Dr. Laurent's experience shows that in modern warfare, where the soldier fires under cover as much as possible, lying prone in a trench, bullets from the enemy either hit him on the head or catch his hands. The right hand is protected by the rifle, so that it is the left that gets hurt.

Many soldiers have had their lives saved by the chance presence of a pocketbook filled with papers or even of a metallic cigarette case in the left breast pocket of their tunic. Superposed sheets of paper have always constituted, even in ancient wars, an excellent shield.

Dr. Laurent's statistics show from 82 to 84 per cent of bullet wounds, from 15 to 17 per cent of shrapnel wounds and 1 per cent of wounds by cold steel. Infection by the projectile was observed in 40 per cent of cases by shrapnel and from 10 to 28 per cent of bullet wounds.

The number of wounds cured without any complication was 75 per cent. Shrapnel bullets have a much less penetrative force than rifle bullets, at any rate when the shrapnel does not burst close to the soldier. Shrapnel bullets are very often found embedded in the clothes, but never rifle bullets.

Superstition.

"What worries me about my wife," said Mr. Meekton confidentially, "is that she is getting superstitious."

"What about?"

"Me. Whenever anything goes wrong she always manages to figure it out that I'm the person who brought bad luck into the family.

New Start For Poor Boys.

"I'd like to start at the bottom," said the young man applying for work.

"I'm sorry, but we can't use you there. All those places are reserved for the sons of our directors, who think it fashionable to start that way. We can give you a place a little higher up, though, at less money."

Right Up to Date.

"Now, my child," said the kind old judge, "which do you prefer to go with?"

"That depends," answered the fashionable child. "Is mother to get large alimony?"

"Yes."

"Large enough to embarrass father financially?"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

WHAT IS WRONG WITH OUR MUSIC.

Editor Review,

Sir,—To ask the question even will be deemed rank heresy, and to voice it through the newspaper the veriest presumption, yet there remains the inward conviction in the minds of many despite the large salaries paid by the various denominations to their organists, the results are hardly commensurate with the outlay involved.

Probably it may be advanced that the material at command is the best obtainable, also that it is impossible to find singers capable, and willing enough, to give their services gratis, therefore the organists themselves are per force, compelled to make the best of the situation.

How frequently one notices the same singers being brought into prominence who though possessed of voices of average quality, yet are deficient both in time as well as sufficient musical knowledge to sing anything but the most elementary music, and yet according to reports in the newspapers are lauded as stars of "capable," etc., choirleader or organist.

Criticism of this kind surely cannot but be detrimental to budding talent, moreover it gives an absolutely inflated idea of its powers with the result such as one might expect, viz., mediocrity. But do our choir leaders and organists avail themselves of the material offered them? The view is they do not, rather does it appear as if they used their position to further their own advancement, in that the unwritten law in choirs, except in extremely rare instances, is that only the organist's pupils are to be encouraged, non-pupils being quietly shelved. We are in a city of some 20,000 inhabitants or more, yet it is possible to count the really first class singers on the fingers of less than one hand. The same statement applies to the teacher of music, that is thoroughly competent ones.

Distinctions are made between teachers of lower, and higher mathematics, and so on, yet here we have a promiscuous system prevailing of teachers, often in their teens, some hardly beyond their 1st or 2nd senior examination serenely profession to teach music and voice production, while the number of teachers both male and female without any qualification whatever is positively astonishing.

Is there any wonder the average person asks, What is wrong with things musical.

FLOREAT PETERBORO.

WE MUST BE CAREFUL.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—The following pathetic item appears in today's Mail. Miracles have their reverse side as well as the obverse. It shows that we must be careful not to assume too much.

Rabbi Dies in Battle Holding a Crucifix.

London, Oct. 25.—News has reached the Jewish world of the manner in which the Chief Rabbi of Lyons was killed on the battlefield. He was in the midst of the fighting, attending Jewish soldiers, when called to the side of a dying trooper, who was a Roman Catholic.

The poor fellow begged the rabbi, whom he probably imagined was a priest, to hold before his eyes the symbol of his faith and give him his blessing. It was while holding a crucifix before the soldier and whispering him words of comfort that the rabbi fell the victim of a shot from the enemy.

Another illustration of the necessity of being careful was that of the overturning of an ancient rock weighing hundreds of tons at Lourdes during Mass at the Eucharistic Congress when over two hundred people were killed. A Protestant Church in the U. S. was struck by lightning killing one-third of the congregation, and so on. Dr. Gordon is right. We must do well not because we are to get a piece of cake hereafter for doing it but because it is right to do right or as right and as well as we know. When we learn our duty we will find we have the knowledge. We do not lack that. It is the will we fail in.

Yours,

P. B. P.

What Uncle Intended

By SARAH BAXTER

An old man lay on a sickbed, pale and emaciated. At a table close by, with writing materials before him, sat a man with that expression on his face which is best described as a business thoughtfulness and is usually to be found on the face of a lawyer.

"Read to me these bequests, Mr. Cutler," said the sick man.

Mr. Cutler read over two or three items, none of them amounting to over $100.

"Now," continued the testator, "I wish you to put the following in legal language: 'My nephew, Edward Hendry, son of my brother of the same name, and my niece, Lillian Clegg, the daughter of my sister, Elizabeth Clegg, are to be notified after my death at the same hour and minute that whichever is first married shall inherit the residue of my estate.'"

The lawyer laid down his pen and looked fixedly at his client.

"I fear, Mr. Hendry," he said, "that by such a course you will so entangle your estate that it will go to neither your nephew nor your niece, but be absorbed in the chancery court."

"I'll risk that," replied the other. "I have certain intentions, and if they can't be carried out I don't care where my fortune goes after my death. Put it down as I say in proper form."

The attorney spent nearly half an hour over the item, then read it to the sick man, who appeared to be satisfied with it, and said:

"Now write, 'I direct that my will remain in the keeping of my attorney, Ebenezer Cutler, who is directed to keep secret this provision and to announce it to my nephew and my niece at the same moment, giving no advantage whatsoever to either, and that said attorney is to receive the sum of $10,000 for faithfully carrying it out.'"

"Who, may I ask," said Mr. Cutler, "is to decide whether I carry out your intention faithfully?"

"The courts, if the matter is questioned."

The attorney immediately went to work to express the provision in legal parlance and when it was finished read it to the testator, who, after making a few minor corrections, seemed satisfied with it. Then the lawyer copied all that he had written, called in witnesses, who signed the will, gathered up his papers and, after an encouraging remark to the sick man, withdrew.

Two days later Edward Hendry received a letter bearing the official stamp of Cutler, Morrison & Hyde, attorneys, notifying him of the death of his uncle, David Hendry, and saying he was interested in the estate. He was requested to call at the office of the firm on the 16th day of September at 10 o'clock a. m., when he would be informed as to the nature of his interest. Miss Lillian Clegg also received a notification to the same effect.

On the morning of the 15th of September Miss Clegg drove up to the office of Cutler, Morrison & Hyde and was shown into a private room. She had not been there ten minutes when the door was opened and in walked her cousin, Edward Hendry. Each started on seeing the other, and each appeared greatly embarrassed. Mr. Hendry bowed stiffly, and Miss Clegg returned the bow with hauteur.

"It is some time since we met," remarked the gentleman, in order to break an embarrassing silence.

"Yes, it is."

"Uncle David was a very good man."

"An excellent man."

"Rather singular, though."

"Very singular."

"His intentions were good, but he was not always wise in carrying them out."

There was no reply to this. Miss Clegg knew very well what was meant. Her uncle had endeavored to make a match between her and her cousin Edward Hendry, when he was twenty and she was barely eighteen. Ned had at the time become temporarily infatuated with the daughter of a butcher and had shown plainly that even a million of dollars, which his uncle had agreed to settle on him in case he married his cousin, was not sufficient to cause him to give up the lady of his love.

"I've often thought," he continued, "that if Uncle David had chosen a different time and had not made it a matter of money"—

"There's no use going backward. It's too late now. Uncle is dead, and I'm engaged."

The young man looked very much disappointed.

"I'm engaged to a splendid fellow. He's considered to be one of the finest young men in America."

Hendry when he had been absent for some time from the butcher's daughter and returned to see her as she was—commonplace and homely—had sought to undo what he had done with his cousin. She had declined even to speak to him when she met him on the street. She was now inflicting upon him further punishment. However, he was not minded to take his drubbing easily. He told an untruth, pretending to be engaged.

"My fiancee is very lovely, too," he said, looking at his cousin to observe the effect upon her. But if she had any interest in his heart she refrained from showing it. She made no comment on his engagement whatever.

"I suppose Uncle David has left us something," he added, turning the subject, "but I fear we shall have to be content with a mere pittance compared with what we might have had."

"I don't see why you say 'we might have had.' I was not aware that I consented to his plans."

"True, you did not. But possibly"—

"No such thing. I had made up my mind before you made up yours."

"I have no doubt of it."

"All the wealth of the Indies would not have tempted me"—

At this point a clerk entered and told these two young persons that Mr. Cutler would like to see them in his private room. The lady sailed out first, with her head held high, and was followed by the gentleman, who looked as if he would like to have some man give him an excuse to strike him. When they entered Mr. Cutler's office they found him sitting at a long table, and he motioned them to seats on the opposite side. Then, taking up a document that lay before him, he said in a professional tone:

"This is the last will and testament of David Hendry. After making a few minor bequests he leaves the residue of his estate, which I think will foot up something over a million dollars, to whichever of you two shall first be married."

The announcement was received with a profound silence, but stirred a volcano of emotion in the breasts of the cousins. The first word spoken was by the young man.

"In that event," he said, "the estate will undoubtedly go to my cousin, since she is engaged to be married and can comply with the provisions very quickly, while I should be obliged to find a girl who would be willing to marry me and whom I would be willing to marry. This would take up considerable time. Besides, I would not choose a wife simply for the purpose of securing a fortune."

"I thought," said Miss Clegg, "you said you were engaged?"

"Did I?"

"Yes; to a lovely girl."

A sickly smile came upon Hendry's features and passed immediately.

"Pardon me," said the attorney. "The testator appointed me to notify you of this singular provision of his will. Further than that I have nothing to do with the matter except to say that if either of you marries and claims the estate I shall expect undoubted evidence not only of the marriage, but of the hour, minute and even second on which you are pronounced married by the person who performed the ceremony. This must be sworn to and certified by a notary."

"It is not necessary for my cousin to take all this trouble so far as I am concerned," said Hendry. "I would not be so ungallant as to keep her from a fortune if I could, and I'm not minded to marry at present. I see no reason why she should not marry her lover and enter upon the possession of the property."

"I wonder why uncle didn't divide it between us," said the girl after a pause.

Hendry rose from his chair and, addressing his cousin, said:

"You may take your time in making your wedding preparations without fear that I shall deprive you of your inheritance, though as to this you must act your own pleasure."

"One moment," said Lillian. "Mr. Cutler, can't we divide the property?"

"Not until after one or the other has been married and satisfied the terms of the will."

Miss Clegg thought hard for a few moments. "Ned," she said at last, "suppose you get married and after the wedding give me a part of the property."

"Suppose you do that."

"Whom would I marry?"

"Marry? Why, that very fine fellow to whom you are engaged."

"Oh, dear, I forgot! I'm not engaged. I said that only to make you feel bad for the way you treated me when Uncle"—

"Not engaged?"

"No."

"Excuse me for a moment," said the lawyer. "I have a client waiting for me. I will return presently."

When he had closed the door behind him Lillian said:

"Dear uncle! He was very fond of us both."

"Yes, and he wished us to inherit this property together. If I had not made a fool of myself over that red headed, freckled"—

"Don't speak disrespectfully of one you have loved."

"Love be hanged!"

"I have no doubt that uncle made his will as he did to bring us together."

"That intention was"—

"Thwarted by you. I could do nothing since you preferred another."

"I didn't—I mean I don't."

"If you say a word against the girl you loved I shall not respect you. Suppose it had been I that you loved and she were now charging you with having preferred me to her."

"You can forgive me."

She was sidling up to him and he was putting his arms about her when there was a faint rap at the door, and Mr. Cutler returned with the same businesslike air he had worn when he went out, though his knocking before entering belied it.

"Mr. Cutler," said Lillian, "you needn't trouble yourself further about this matter. We have compromised."

"Indeed."

"Yes; Ned has apologized for his brutal treatment of me when Uncle Dave tried to bring us together some time ago, and we are going to do just as the dear old man wished we should."

"Yes, go on."

"And even when I broke down and cried he didn't give in and say I could have it."

IT PAID THE PEASANT.

Story of an Auction In the Middle of a Stream.

Czar Nicholas I. of Russia was an incorrigible joker. On one of his journeys, it is related, he came to an out-of-the-way post station, and learned that because of the bad roads it would take several hours to travel by coach to the next station. They told him, however, that a footpath led through the forest, and that if he cared to walk he could reach his destination sooner than by coach.

The Czar and his adjutant decided to walk, and set out through the forest. Presently they came to a river. The bridge had broken down, and they were considering how they should get over, when a peasant came along. The Czar asked him if there was no other way of getting over.

"No, sire," replied the peasant.

"How are you going to cross it?"

"Oh, I just walk across on foot."

"How about your pack? Can you carry that?"

"Surely; on my shoulders."

"My man, you shall have ten roubles if you will carry me to the other bank."

The peasant agreed, took the Czar on his back, and carried him over.

"Now bring my companion over for ten more roubles," said Nicholas.

The peasant recrossed the stream, picked up the adjutant, and was in the middle of the river when the Czar called out, "I'll give you twenty roubles if you throw him off!" The peasant found himself in an embarrassing position.

"You shall have fifty roubles if you take me to the other shore," said the adjutant, nervously.

"Sixty," called the Czar from the other bank, "if you pitch him in!"

"The peasant let go of the adjutant, but the frightened officer threw his arms round his neck and cried out, "A hundred roubles! Now take me over!" The peasant accepted the offer, and carried him to where the Czar stood.

After breakfast the adjutant wrote in his account-book:

"For breakfast, ten roubles; for transporting His Majesty over the river, ten roubles; for transporting the adjutant over the river, under highly amusing circumstances, one hundred roubles."

THE INCA TREASURES

Priceless Remains of Peruvian Civilization May Be Recovered.

New attempts are being made by a number of explorers who have formed a company to discover the ancient gold deposits of Peru.

Many efforts have been made to find the hidden treasures of the Incas, but so far without success. After the Spaniards under Pizarro killed the Inca King Atahualpa, they marched upon Cuzco, then the fabulously wealthy capital city of Peru. But the Indian knew their foe's greed for precious metals, and the greater part of the immense Inca treasures was buried secretly.

Tradition says that the millions of dollars' worth of treasure was thrown into the little Lake Uscos high up in the Andes.

There was a great golden chain which ran around the main piazza of the capital, relates a traveler now in the Inca country. This plaza remained intact until a few years ago. It was about 500 feet long and several hundred feet wide, so that the length of the chain was probably between one and two thousand feet.

The chain was, according to old accounts, of pure gold, wrought into links about a foot long and as large around as the wrist of a man. The links were so heavy that a man could not lift more than one of them at a time, and it is said that hundreds of Indians were required to carry the chain.

They took it up the valley of Cuzco and threw it into the lake, and there it is supposed to lie to this day, although many have searched for it in vain. The treasure hunters have dived into the waters and clawed over the mud near the shore.

They have also dragged the lake with grappling hooks, but in places it is exceedingly deep, and so far the treasure has not been discovered.

At one time a syndicate was organized to drain the lake. This syndicate had a capital of $5,000,000 and its plan was to tunnel the mountainside. But the rock was tough, political reasons interposed, and the enterprise was abandoned.

The amount taken from the temples of Cuzco alone is said to have been worth more than $90,000,000, and a part of this went to Cajamarca to free the Inca Emperor Atahualpa when he was treacherously imprisoned by Pizarro.

The Inca Emperor had come in friendship. He was carried to Cajamarca in a litter of massive gold covered with a cloth embroidered with the plumes of tropical birds.

This cloth was studded with gold and silver plates. Atahualpa's hair was decorated with gold. He had on a golden crown, and around his neck was a collar of emeralds.

At the start Pizarro treated Atahualpa well, but a little later on charged him with treachery, and put him in a prison about 14 feet square. The Inca King took a stone and scratched a mark on the wall as high up as he could reach, telling Pizarro that he would fill the room to that height with gold if he could only be free.

This proposition was accepted, and gold in the shape of vases, utensils and plates was brought in from all parts of the Empire. It was melted down by the Indians under the direction of the Spaniards.

When the prison room was filled to the mark made by Atahualpa, he was released. But he was still kept under surveillance, and a little later was accused of plotting against the Spaniards. He was given a mock trial, and was condemned to be burned, his execution being commonly attributed to Friar Valverde, who was afterward made Bishop of Cuzco.

HUNTING A SPY

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Shortly before the war broke out in the Balkans between the Turks and the allies I left Adrianople one evening about dark for Belgrade. There was one passenger in the compartment besides myself, and I noticed that while waiting for the train to start he was very ill at ease. When the guard shut and locked the door he seemed to breathe easier, but was still evidently impatient for the train to be off. When at last it began to roll out of the station he put his head out of the window eagerly.

Following the direction of his eyes I saw a man, whom I knew to be a Turk by his fez, running for the train. He ran like a deer, my fellow passenger watching him breathlessly. The latter occupied the window so that I could not see if the Turk caught the train, but presently my companion fell back gasping.

"Lost!" he moaned.

I had some knowledge of one or two of the many languages spoken in the Balkans, so that I understood the word. I also spoke some French and German and tried the man in both, getting an understanding in the latter tongue.

"What is your trouble?" I asked.

"Are you German?" he asked instead of replying.

"No; American."

"Oh, American. You then are a lover of liberty. Certainly you have no sympathy with Turks. I am doomed. I have been in Adrianople spying on the fortifications. I was arrested, and drawings were found on me. I was sentenced to death. While waiting to be executed I caught my guard napping and escaped. I hoped to get away by this train, but this man, in whose charge I was placed, will go through the train when it stops and recover me."

Then, taking out a pencil and tearing a bit of paper from an old letter, he wrote his name and address on it and handed it to me.

"When you reach Sofia," he continued, "will you tell my wife what I have told you and what follows? Say that my last thoughts were of her and our dear children."

"If you are sure to be executed, why not take the chance of jumping from the train?"

"I am going to do that, but death is as sure as if I suffered myself to be taken back to Adrianople."

"You may strike soft ground."

By the time I had spoken the words he was out on the footboard. I put my head out through the window and saw his dim figure not far from it. It was very dark. Presently I ceased to see him and believed that he had jumped.

The first stop the train made was at Tchivmen, which we reached in about half an hour after the spy had disappeared. The guard unlocked the door, but would not let me alight till after the compartment had been examined by the man whom I had seen running for the train. As soon as he had passed I stepped down on to the platform and followed him to see if he got his quarry. He did not find him, and the train moved on.

I wondered what had become of the spy. He must have jumped or he would have been found on the train. Nearly all the passengers were Turks, and I noticed the moment I alighted that there was a chain of men wearing fezzes surrounding the train, probably passengers who had volunteered to help the official in his efforts to arrest the spy.

Before we passed over the Turkish line to enter eastern Roumelia the train stopped for a long while, and I felt sure that it was for the purpose of making a final search for the spy. In time we started on and in a few minutes were among a different nationality. "What a pity," I said to myself, "that the man could not have concealed himself on the train till we had passed the border! In that case he would have been safe."

The first stop we made in Roumelia was at Hermanl. There I alighted to stretch my legs, slowly walking toward the forward end of the train. I saw a man coming who I supposed was a coal shoveler on the engine, only he was blacker than any stoker I ever saw. What was my surprise when, rushing toward me, he threw his begrimed arms around me.

"Don't you know me?" he said. "I am the spy."

Then in the blackened features I recognized the man with whom I had sympathised.

"Is it you, and alive?" I asked.

"Yes it is I, and very much alive."

"How did you do it?"

"I walked forward on the footboard till I reached the locomotive tender. Climbing over the coal, I told the engineer, who was a Servian, my story. He suggested that since the train would be searched I had better hide under the coal. So I lay down on the floor of the tender, and they covered me with the coal."

When we reached Sofia nothing would do but that I should go to the man's home with him. I did so, and so begrimed was he that his family did not at first recognise him. His wife knew the errand on which he had been to Adrianople and its danger. He was a week overdue, and she had given him up. Covered as he was with coal dust, she embraced him.

I was entertained royally at his house and left it with regret.

WORKED HIS WEAK POINTS.

Mr. Ape Had No Memory, but Lots of Curiosity and Cowardice.

"Curiosity and cowardice," said the one legged veteran, "are the chief characteristics of all monkeys and of most men. I worked in a zoo after the war. I was the keeper of the monkey house. My biggest charge was an ape the size of a twelve-year-old boy, and it was through his curiosity and cowardice that I used to manage him.

"We exercised this ape in the big room every day, but when we wanted him to go back to his cage he'd climb up to the roof of the big room, and even with food you couldn't tempt him down.

"So I would go to Jack Lover and take him gently by the arm and direct his attention in a quiet, mysterious manner to the dark passage under the steam pipes.

"Lover and I every day tiptoed to the pipes. We pretended to point out to each other some horrible, unknown creature in the passage, and we'd say: 'Look out! There he is! There he is!'

"As we held each other's arms and bent over and peered into the darkness we'd hear very soon the delicate patter of small, active feet. The ape's curiosity had got the better of him. He crouched beside us. He, too, peered into the dark passage fearfully.

"Then suddenly Lover would shout: 'Look out! He's coming out! He's coming out!' And we'd scamper away in the direction of the ape's house. But the ape would be ahead of us. He'd rush into his house in a perfect whirlwind of excitement and terror. Then—click! We'd snap the door to on him, and he'd look very foolish.

"Every day we fooled the ape in this way. He was long, you see, on curiosity and cowardice, but very short on memory."—Chicago Herald.

RESISTANCE FEEBLE

Austrians Are Putting up a Stubborn Front Says Petrograd Bulletin and Engagement of Considerable Size is in Progress Near Radom--- Austro-German Forces Are Now Forty Miles From Warsaw.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 26.—The Russian General Staff yesterday issued the following statement:

"Our troops beyond the Vistula are pressing the armies of the enemy in full retreat. North of the Pilitza river the Germans are offering only feeble resistance; they have been driven back as far as Skiernienwice.

"South of the Pilitza on the roads to Radom, we have forced the Austro-German rear guards who were attempting to hold positions along the Rivers Ravka, Skernevka and Rylka.

"Lovinz, Skiernienwice and Rawa were taken by bayonet attacks.

"The Austrians in retreat with the Germans on the roads below Radom, having received reinforcements, and profiting by the wooded and rolling character of the region, offered stubborn resistance to our offensive, which developed into an engagement of considerable dimensions. At that place we captured prisoners, cannon and rapid firers.

"Along the River San and south of Przemysl, desperate fighting continues. An attempt by the Austrians to turn the Russian left wing south of Przemysl failed, the Austrians suffering great losses."

It is declared that the nearest point to Warsaw held by the troops of the Kaiser and the dual monarchy is 40 miles distant from the Polish stronghold. Seemingly the Russian tactics in retiring to the Vistula and encouraging the Germans to attempt an assault on that city, have met with complete vindication. The invaders' lines are bent out of all semblance to a strong defensive, and both armies are declared reeling from the effects of Russian blows. The rejuvenated Austrian corps on the right wing are exposed to a particularly deadly fire and victory rests with Russian arms all along the front.

The steady advance of the cold season will greatly improve the position of the Russians. The Czar's troops are not only inured to cold weather of the worst kind, but actually joy in a temperature that would freeze the marrow of ordinary men. East Prussia, where it seems the next Russian drive will take shape, is a climate of exceptional hardship, and here the Germans will be called upon to face an advancing well provisioned and well satisfied army, in the rigors of an Arctic-like region.

LEARNING THE TRUTH.

Germans Beginning To Feel Despondency As Facts Are Realized.

LONDON, Oct. 26. — An Amsterdam despatch says: "Messages received here indicate that the fighting south of Ostend has caused depression and pessimism, which prevails not only in Berlin but throughout the German empire, the old boastful, cocksureness having passed away. From many quarters confirmation is received of the rumor that German officers have been advised to send their women folk from Brussels at once. Now that the troops are gradually learning that the Germans are not in Paris and that all news of victories supplied to them during the last few weeks was false, the feeling of despondency among the enemy deepens."

A telegram from Basel received here confirms the retirement of Gen. Helmuth Von Moltke as chief of German General Staff on Oct. 22. He requested Emperor William to be relieved from his post because of his poor health. His resignation was accepted, but it is not definitely known who will succeed him. Three candidates are seeking the position.

Many Women Spies Captured.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—A large number of German women spies have been captured and promptly shot in the vicinity of Dixmude. In some cases the women declared they had been terrorized into practicing espionage. Almost without exception they had no idea of the risk they were running or the penalty for their offence.

SUBMARINE IS RAMMED

German Craft Sunk by British Destroyer Badger

SANK LIKE A LOG

LONDON, Oct. 26. — Official announcement is made that a German submarine has been rammed and sunk by the British destroyer Badger, Commander Charles Freemantle, off the Dutch coast. The Badger's bow was somewhat damaged.

Details of the ramming of a German submarine by the British destroyer Badger, indicate that the action was Homeric in character, and that the commander of the Badger acted with great presence of mind. It seems that the German craft appeared on the surface suddenly, but a short distance from the Britisher, Capt. Freemantle immediately swung his vessel to meet the foe bow on, thus reducing the probability of a hit by the German. Without waiting to train his guns on the submarine, Capt. Freemantle ordered full speed ahead and rammed the German before she could fire a projectile. The little craft sank like a log. Although the bow of the Badger was considerably crushed she made her base without trouble.

Canadians Making Shirts.

OTTAWA, Oct. 26.—An order for one and a half million shirts for the British forces has been allotted among the various shirt manufacturers in Canada by the British purchasing agents now in Canada, acting in conjunction with the Canadian Government. The order will keep almost every shirt factory in Canada busy during the winter work,.

Italian Mother Slew Babes.

NORTH BAY, Oct. 26.—Mrs. Chipperrous, an Italian woman living in North Bay, murdered her two children in the early hours of Saturday morning by drowning them in the well which supplies water to the Chipperrous home. At the inquest held Saturday night in the council chamber she made no attempt to deny the crime.

Sunday War Bulletins

BORDEAUX, Oct. 25.—Great importance is attached to the capture by the Allies of Melzicourt, which is announced in an official communication. The rival forces have been fiercely disputing the possession of Argonne region for weeks past. Melzicourt, according to military opinion, is the key to the position.

LONDON, Oct. 25. — Fierce fighting is going on in the district between Nieuport and Ostend, as well as around Thraucourt, Thilt and Deyneze, according to a late despatch received by the Reuter Telegram Co. from Sluis, Holland, by way of Amsterdam. The despatch says that the Yser canal is being obstinately defended by the Belgians.

PARIS, Sunday afternoon. — The official announcement says: No change is reported between the sea and the region around Arras. In the Argonne region the situation is maintained under conditions announced yesterday. On the upper Meuse, field artillery destroyed three new German batteries, one of which was of heavy calibre.

LONDON, Oct. 25. — The Sunday Observer says in the Department of Pas-de-Calais, through cutting dykes in the low country southeast of Dixmude ,a large German force was flooded out. Estimates place German losses at 5000 drowned, 30,000 killed and wounded.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 25. — An official communication says our troops beyond the Vistula are pressing the armies of the enemy in their retreat. North of the Pilitza river the Germans are offering only feeble resistance.

LONDON, Oct. 25. — The Times correspondent says: The battle in Northern France still rages furiously. The enemy has thrown into the battle line great masses of troops. Heavy guns again are belching their shells and columns of black smoke into our trenches.

The Allies are holding the enemy in check and driving them slowly back. Our men are fighting with splendid courage and steadiness and are inflicting enormous losses upon the enemy, who are mowed down by shrapnel and machine gun fire.

LONDON, Oct. 25. — A German submarine has been rammed and sunk by the British destroyer Badger, Commander Charles Freemantle, off the Dutch coast. The Badger's bow was somewhat damaged. This is an official announcement.

CANADIANS IN EGYPT?

Berlin Advices Say 14,000 Are Guarding the Suez Canal.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—A despatch to Reuter's from Amsterdam says that the following message has been received at Berlin from Constantinople:

"According to news received from well-informed quarters in Constantinople, the British Government during the last few days has sent numerous Canadian troops to Egypt. Fourteen thousand men have been stationed along the Suez Canal.

Must Behave In Antwerp.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—The military commander of Antwerp, Maj.-Gen. Von Dodenhausen, has issued a proclamation which also bears the signature of Burgomaster Deves, instructing all German troops that they must not commandeer whatsoever, the privilege being confined only to officers, and may be used by them only in cases of military expediency. Soldiers are explicitly forbidden to break into shops or in any way abuse the populace. Antwerp, says the proclamation, was only surrendered on the understanding that the troops would not misuse their power.

Hon. Colin Campbell Dead.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 26.—Hon. Colin H. Campbell, formerly a member of the Manitoba Government, in which he was successively Attorney-General and Minister of Public Works, died on Saturday at 9.30 p.m., after a long illness.

ALLIES PRESS FORWARD

Appreciable Advance East of Nieuport Without Aid From Naval Guns and General Repulse of Desperate German Attacks is Cheering News.

PARIS, Oct. 26. — The success of allies in repulsing the furious attacks of the Germans, as indicated in Saturday's official statement, was the basis of encouragement to the French and British when the battle of the north resumed yesterday.

The Germans, in a mighty effort to gain a victory, continue rushing up all the reinforcements that can be spared.

The situation on the front in Flanders to-day is uncertain for the most part. It is known authoritatively that the Belgians continue to hold their lines around Dixmude. One report says that the Germans have fallen back from Dixmude in the direction of Thielt. Despite the fact that heavy artillery protected this retirement, a column of French infantry succeeded in cutting off several thousand prisoners.

The fact that the allies have advanced appreciably east of Nieuport, as officially announced, has helped to reassure them, since in this vicinity the British naval guns hardly could continue to exercise an influence in gaining ground. The slight retrogression at other points, which was , counterbalanced by progress somewhere else, was considered as inevitable in a great conflict of this kind, and apparently it did not cause the slightest discouragement.

The strategic consequences of this battle of the north, it is felt in some quarters, will be greater to the Germans than to the allies. If it should be necessary for the latter to withdraw it would be upon the normal lines of the allies without risk, it is declared, and the bonding of the left wing would not compromise the situation in general. The French also are confident as to the line at other points.

A correspondent at Sluys, Holland, sends the following on the fighting in Flanders: "The Germans are guarding the lighthouse at Knocke, close to the Dutch frontier on the North Sea, as a measure of precaution against a possible landing by the British. The sand dunes also are being guarded. German marines have occupied the Village of Hevst and the villages between Sluys and Bruges.

"Great movements of troops have taken place from Bruges, and Saturday an army corps arrived from Antwerp, Bruges and Ghent, on the way to Thourout and Westende, from which points many wounded are being brought back.

"Long trains conveying wounded soldiers have arrived at Bruges, where it is impossible to accommodate all the unfortunates. The medical stores are inadequate, and the number of surgeons not large enough to cope with the work.

"The fighting has been of a most sanguinary character. One German soldier relates that 1,500 of his comrades were buried in a single field."

It is apparent that the Germans gained ground at La Bassee on Saturday, but the extent of their progress at this point cannot be ascertained. Furious fighting continues in that neighborhood.

At Pont-a-Mousson, the invaders have been thrown back a considerable distance, and French troops have also taken all of the roads leading from Varennes to the River Aisne. This latter success is a big step forward in the movement to isolate the German crown prince.

Lille is still the goal of the allied armies in northern France, and a big movement of troops in that direction yesterday gives rise to the belief that an assault in great force will be delivered very shortly. Most of the ground won in this vicinity has been at the point of the bayonet.

Dutch newspapers declare that behind all of the desperate efforts of the Germans to hack a way through the allied lines, there is careful preparations under way for a retirement at the first sign of disaster to their forces. Many fortifications have been thrown up from Metz to Namur, and it is believed likely that this will be the next line of defence.

From Ostend to Nieuport, it is said, the allied fleets are keeping up a steady bombardment of the German land forces that has driven the invaders inland, beyond reach of the heavy naval guns. Ostend is declared to be under a continuous fire, with the gunners striving to place their shells at points of concentration only, thus sparing the city as much as possible. It is stated that one shell crashed through the roof of the Hotel Majestic when the German staff was at dinner. The casualties are not known.

British papers yesterday, which is the anniversary of both the battle of Agincourt and the charge of the Light Brigade, look for an early occupation of Ostend by the forces from the fleet of Admiral Hood, standing off the coast of Flanders.

RAIN FALLS AS BOBS SEES TROOPS

Lord Roberts Pays Visit of Four Hours

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Lord Roberts made his round of Salisbury camps in almost uninterrupted rain. His stay extended over four hours, during which the officers of every brigade came under his notice, several battalions also parading for inspection. Before leaving camp the veteran soldier expressed his keen pleasure at everything that he has seen. He extended his congratulations to Divisional Staff Bishop Taylor Smith, chaplain general of the forces. On his visit to the camp, he was attended by Major Stacy, divisional chaplain.

Services were held at Bustard, west, down south, but owing to the wet, there was no parade, services being held in the marquees.

A noteworthy fact on the voyage to England was that holy communion was celebrated daily on those transports carrying chaplains.

Should Breed More Horses.

OTTAWA, Oct. 26. — Reports to the Department of Trade and Commerce from England show that the food supply in some respects at least is not seriously affected by the war. In Manchester, the supply of fresh fruit and vegetables is obnormally large and prices are lower than in former years. One firm of fruit preservers is packing 40,000 pots, or 325 tons, every day for the soldiers at the front and in training. British authorities on live stock are advising the farmers actively to turn to horse breeding, because of the enormous sacrifice of horses in the war, and the great demand for them that is bound to continue after the war.

Sand, putty, and light bray are among the few light colors to be worn this winter.

Harvey Council Regular Session

The Harvey Council met in the True Blue Hall, Buckhorn, with all the members present and the reeve in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. A communication was read from Thos. R. Hill re ½ lot 8, con. 2.

On motion of Messrs. Allen and Graham, the clerk was instructed to have the W. ½ of lot 8, con. 2 assessed on the non-res. roll for as many years back as possible. A communication was read from Marshall Young stating that if they could not keep the gates locked on the road he had leased to the council it would be better to open the 12th con. line.

Mr. Chas. Kreger addressed the council re locks on the aforesaid gate and stated that it was necessary to keep the gate locked.

Cecil Crowe addressed the council re bridge across the marsh at the entrance to his place.

On motion of Messrs. Allen and Shaw, Messrs. Flynn, Graham and Wilson were appointed a committee to make a thorough examination of the bridge and report at the next meeting.

D. R. Montgomery addressed the council asking to have the street at Hall's Bridge opened from the Sandy Lake road east.

On motion of Messrs. Graham and Wilson the clerk was instructed to notify Peter Nicholls to remove his fence from off the aforesaid street as an application had been made to have said street opened.

The following orders were drawn on the treasurer:—

CHINAMEN MURDERED.

Lee Yuen and Lee Duck Discovered Dying In Brantford Store.

BRANTFORD, Ont., Oct. 26. — A murder was discovered here yesterday afternoon at 14 1-2 Dalhousie street, in a Chinese store, where the proprietors, Lee Yuen and Lee Duck were found with their heads smashed in with a hatchet. Both were alive when discovered, but Yuen died on the way to the hospital and Duck has no chance of recovery. A blood-stained hatchet found in the sleeping-room, where the tragedy was enacted told the tale of an early morning struggle. The discovery was made by a friend of the pair who was making a Sunday afternoon call. It is believed that the murder took place early Sunday morning and that robbery was the motive. The people upstairs heard the cries of the Chinamen as they were being struck down, but dismissed the matter as a trivial incident and did not investigate the cause of the alarm.

A New Epoch in the Phonograph World

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

THE J. M. GREENE CO. are pleased to anounce that after several years' experience handling the different makes of talking machines and watching the evolution that took place in the production and perfection of these marvellous musical instruments, we have arrived at the conclusion that the New Edison Diamond Disc is by far the greatest triumph yet produced in a sound reproducing instrument, and have decided to handle the Edison goods exclusively convinced that our patrons will receive more real satisfaction and pleasure from the use of the Edison Diamond Disc or Cylinder Machines than from anything else we could sell them. We thoroughly believe this move is the best not only for our own interests but for those of our patrons. We must believe in the goods we sell before we recommend them to our customers, and to the Edison Diamond Disc Cabinet Machines and Amberolas, we can give our unqualified endorsement in every case. Sound reproduction by the Diamond Disc Machine is undoubtedly far superior to all previous achievements of Mr. Edison. No more needle changing. The reproduction point is a genuine diamond that never wears out, and requires no changing. The Edison Diamond Disc Machines are bound to be the choice of discriminating music lovers in the end, thus we are following our principle—to offer the best only.

PUT WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

WITH the advent of our adoption of the Edison goods exclusively, we want to give every home in Peterboro and District a special opportunity to install one of these magnificent instruments, whether they already have an Edison instrument or older style, or a talking machine of any other make already in the home or not. In case you have an instrument, which no doubt you have enjoyed in the past because it was good at the time you bought it, we will gladly take it as part payment on a New Edison Diamond Disc Amberola or Cabinet Machine, and make a liberal allowance for it. The balance we will arrange on the easiest possible terms of payment. Where there is no instrument of the kind in the home at present we will be pleased to place the instrument you may select from our splendid stock, in your home for a two or three days' demonstration, and in case of purchase can make the terms of payment most favorable and easy for anyone to handle. This Free Demonstration will put you under no obligation to buy whatever but is following out of the wish of Mr. Edison, the great inventor, to see "an Edison in every home in Canada."

FREE DEMONSTRATION IN OUR TALKING MACHINE PARLOURS AT ANY TIME. LET US SHOW YOU.

Peterborough, Ont., Oct. 1, 1914.

MR. W. H. HILL,
City.

Dear Sir:

I wish to thank you for the very prompt manner in which my claim was settled by the Fidelity and Casualty Co., of New York.

I have carried accident insurance with this Company for a number of years and have always found them and their representatives courteous at all times.

Regarding my recent claim, the claim papers were filled out and sent in on Sept. 29, 1914, and to-day I received a cheque for the full amount of the claim.

Again thanking you for the prompt manner in which this claim has been handled, I am,

Yours truly,

R. G. STURGEON.

Asked Parents To Co-operate

At the Church of the Sacred Heart yesterday morning Rev. J. J. O'Brien assured the parishioners that the epidemic of diphtheria among the pupils of the School of the Sacred Heart is under control, and with the co-operation of the parents it will in a short time be stamped out entirely. He urged them to report to the Separate School nurse, Miss M. McNicholl, or to Dr. McPherson, the medical health officer, at once should any of the children show signs of a discharging nose or any other symptoms of the disease. Father O'Brien commended the work of the M. H. O. and other officials, on their energetic efforts to overcome the epidemic.

LAD IS INJURED IN RIGHT EYE

Melville Thompson, the 16 year old son of Police Chief Thompson, met with a painful accident on Saturday afternoon.

It appears that in company with several other boys, he journeyed to Jackson's Park to do a little shooting. They had a blank cartidge of a Ross rifle, for a target, and young Thompson stood directly above it. When he fired the cartridge exploded, and something hit him on the lid of his rigth eye, causing a bad gash. Two stitches were required. The doctors are unable to tell yet whether the sight is injured or not.

Put a pair of old gloves in the shoe box to keep the hands clean when polishing shoes.

OUR LENS GRINDING DEPARTMENT

We have our own Lens Grinding Plant on the premises, fitted with the very latest automatic lens grinding machines. Here our lenses are ground absolutely correct, mechanically and scientifically. HIGH TEMPERATURE IS NECESSARY IN RELIGION

Emotional Signs Right in Other Things, Then Why Not in Religion?

DR. GRIFFIN AT MARK ST. CHURCH

Two largely attended services marked the fifty-ninth anniversary services of Mark Street Methodist Church, which were celebrated yesterday. No less distinguished preacher than the Rev. Dr. Griffin, who in his eighty-eighth year is still working for the cause of Methodism in Canada, was present, and the two messages he delivered were helpful and inspiring. In the morning he spoke on the love for the sanctuary of God, choosing his text from Psalm 137, verses 5 and 6: "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy." In the evening his text also was from Psalms, 103, verses 1 and 2: "Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul and forget not all his benefits."

An old Methodist preacher who labored in the United States some fifty years ago and whose name was at that time a very familiar one, said that these words, as uttered by David, sounded like the words of a Methodist. He was so anxious to leave nothing out, he cried, "Bless the Lord, O my soul," and further exclaimed, "and all that is within me." He wanted all to be included, and wanted all to bless the holy name of the Lord. That was an exhibition of religious fervor.

There are two kinds of Christian people — there is the living and the dead. There are a great many Christian people who become converted and members of the Christian Church in their youth, and although the ages have wrought changes in their appearance, they still possess the same spiritual life. They always respect the church of God and are willing to support it and assist it in its work. Then there is the other class of people, who are without spiritual experience — those who have never expressed their love for God. For them there are no birds singing in the trees, no flowers blooming in their garden, no pure winds from a far-off heavenly clime blowing over their nature. They are dead. They make no ado over religion. That is to them something their grandfather and father did, but of course, grandfather and father were not as educated as people of today, and thus didn't know any better. Grandfather and father had the true spirit. It is those people of today who are dead Christians, who are utterly alienated from the heart of the Lord Jesus Christ and cannot exclaim, as David did: "Bless the Lord, O my soul."

High Temperature.

High temperature in religion, the venerable speaker claimed, is as necessary as in Nature. How much growth do we expect in Siberia or Greenland, where perpetual snow covers the land and eternal ice the rivers? There is no growth of any description there. Trees are small and amount to nothing but shrubs, while the people themselves who inhabit those regions are small. It is impossible to have growth in such a climate. What's true in Nature is true in religion and in the life of the Christian soul. During the winter in this country there is absolutely no growth, but when the war sun comes in the spring and the rains descend, the growth commences. The same thing is true with the Christian who is dead. There is a little life in their hearts, and all they need is the flame of righteousness to bring them to life. By life is meant the desire to express their love for Christ.

The religion which demands the outward expressing of one's love for God is criticized and condemned. Those who criticize and condemn it claim it is not right. Emotional signs are right in other things, then why not in religion? The lover of music will exclaim, "O how beautiful," when he hears an instrumental or vocal selection which he admires. The naturalist grows eloquent when speaking of the classification of stones and flowers. The collector of old coins which bear dates of ages long ago will talk for hours on his collection, and a listener will admire the man for his enthusiasm. His demonstration of interest is beautiful to behold. How much more beautiful to behold is the exclamation of David. He heard the voice of his Master when discouraged. He came to the altar and felt divine life in his veins. He was filled with joy and he broke into the words of the text.

The same feeling with which David was seized once was felt at the camp meetings of a few years ago. That religious emotion was to be found and was not condemned by anyone. The man who condemns it today is wrong. Political emotion on election day is in order, then religious emotion is always in order. Dr. Griffin did not leave the impression that it was right to carry it into the streets, but rather when men and women are gathered together in a house or church.

There are some cases when the expression becomes fanatic, but is the right to be condemned because the wrong appears? If all was truth there would be no liars. If all were honest there would be no thieves. Where grain grows, there also do weeds grow. Where grain cannot be grown, weeds will not grow. The fact is many churches produce no weeds, but neither do these churches produce the golden grain. Churches of that nature invariably go to a premature grave. The golden grain can only be reaped after a great deal of hard work, when, if one possesses the idea of being filled with righteousness, he must work for it, pray for it, and live for it.

Dr. Griffin Praises Singing of the Choir

At the close of his sermon at Mark Street Methodist Church last evening Rev. Dr. Griffin stated that the singing of the choir was wonderful and the superior singing he had not heard for the past ten years. It surpassed the singing of the choir of the Eaton Memorial Church, in Toronto, he remarked.

This is a very fitting tribute to Mr. A. Nicholls, the organist, and the members of the choir. Solos at yesterday's services were sung by Mrs. Wand, of this city and Miss M. Dickson of Campbellford. Mr. Greenlaw, who is in the city with Dr. Gordon, also sang at the evening service.

MOTHER KILLED TWINS.

Sudbury, Ont., Oct. 26.—At the assizes the jury returned a verdict of guilty in the case of Mrs. Hawyriuk, 18 years of age, charged with murder. In June last accused destroyed her newly-born twins by strangulation. Counsel for prisoner admitted the crime and set up a plea of pubertin insanity, expert testimony on which was disallowed. A recommendation for mercy was attached to the verdict and concurred in by Justice Latchford.

LITTLE GROUNDS FOR FEAR FROM ZEPPELIN RAID

Many Difficulties Make an Attack Almost Impossible

Sir Hiram Maxim, in a statement in Pearson's Weekly, says:—

"It is quite on the cards that Germany will, sooner or later, attempt an air raid on this country, but if they do, I am strongly of the opinion that they will not be able to inflict any damage worth speaking about upon us or our property.

"It is largely thought that they will try to fly over London and drop bombs on the town, but personally I am not at all convinced that it is within the power of German Zeppelins to get to London.

"It is inconceivable that Germany can so far subjugate France as to use, say, Calais, of Boulogne, or Dieppe, as a base for their air fleet; and from anywhere else, even from Belgium, they would have to cross an arm of the sea which is very rough and stormy, especially in Autumn and Winter. To cross the North Sea by air is a most hazardous enterprise at any time, and one requiring abnormally good weather and fortune to be successful.

Might Arrive With Wonderful Luck.

"If the Germans were to dispatch a fleet of twenty Zeppelin balloons, and if, by some extraordinary luck, they did get over the North Sea safely to London, I do not think the damage they could do would be very great; it would cost them more than it would cost us. Flying, say, two miles high they might pass our fleet unseen, and on a dark night—they would certainly choose a moonless or cloudy night—they might get to London unobserved, but it would be necessary for them to descend to withing striking distance if they wished to place their bombs with any degree of accuracy. And this would be to reveal themselves. Now, a rifle will carry well over a mile, and you can take it that London's scheme of defence against air invasion is not solely represented by rifle fire. Still, a rifle bullet is quite sufficient to bring a Zeppelin down; the fabzric of which these balloons are made offers practically no resistance to the passage of a projectile.

"Even if Zeppelins were to come here, and remaining high enough up to be safe from rifle shot, should turn on their searchlights to show them the town, they would also reveal themselves, and so enable our guners to train on them.

Too High to Be Dangerous.

"From the height at which they would have to keep to be safe, I am convinced that a Zeppelin attack on London would be little more than an annoyace to us. As to being able to drop bombs into Woolwich Arsenal or to wreck the Admiralty wireless masts, the idea to my mind, is very problematical. If they tried to blow up Woolwich Arsenal they would do well if they wrecked a porter's lodge.

"And even if they did succeed in reaching London, I do not believe that many of them would get back to their base. For one thing, a Zeppelin has to be "fed" with pure hydrogen once a day, and, for another, its petrol-carrying capacity is limited. A little buffeting about over the North Sea and these airships would run short of the spirit which supplies their motive power.

"The case of an aeroplane raid is rather different. Aeroplanes, I think, would stand a betther chance of getting here, and would do more damage than Zeppelins. If the Germans sent a fleet of a hundred aeroplanes, twenty-five might reach our coasts successfully and perhaps half of them could return.

"But then areoplanes could not carry many bombs, and it would require a great number of bombs dropped on London to do any appreciable amount of damage.

"In the elegant and euphonious language of the wild and woolly West, 'they have bitten off more than they can chaw,' and no one in London need tremble at night or hide in a cellar for fear of German bombs dropping into London."

OBITUARY

MRS. FRANCIS WARD.

The death occurred Saturday night, at Manvers, of Mrs. Francis Ward. She was born in North Monaghan, 78 years ago, and had resided in this part of the country all her life. Her death which was very sudden, will be a great shock to her many friends, by whom she was held in high esteem.

Left to mourn her loss are three brothers, George Campbell, British Columbia; Robert of Manitoba, and Francis of this city.

Two sisters are Mrs. John Waldon, Lindsay; Mrs. C. Kennedy, Coldwater; and two daughters, are Mrs. A. Potts, Manvers, and Elizabeth, at home. The sons are George of North Monaghan; Alfred of Smith; Henry and Hiram at home.

The funeral will take place from the family residence in Manvers, tomorrow afternoon, at 1 o'clock to Bally Duff Cemetery for interment.

PARENTS BEREAVED.

The death took place this morning of Marjorie Rosina, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Milton, of Barrie.

The funeral took place this afternoon at 4 o'clock, from 431 Rogers St., to Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. F. J. Sawers officiated.

VIVID TALE BY SURVIVOR OF LOST CRUISER

Rescued Unconscious After Four Hours in Heavy Sea

The following is compiled from information which was the outcome of an interview with Mr. W. Moon, A.B., who was a survivor of the crew of the ill-fated H.M.S. Cressy, which was sunk by German submarines along with H.M.S. Hogue and Aboukir, in the North Sea, on Sept. 22nd, 1914.

He says:—

We, the Hogue, Aboukir and Cressy were engaged cruising in the North Sea on the morning of the 22nd Sept., 1914, when we were attacked by what seemed a flotilla of German submarines. When the Hogue and Aboukir were struck, we sent all our boats to their assistance and also threw overboard everything possible which would help to save any man from going under. We though that we were getting out of it alright, when we were rammed by a torpedo which pierced us below the waterline in the forepart of the ship. I was sent to see the carpenters and ascertain the damage. When I returned to give my message to the captain I was stood at the foot of the steps leading to the bridge when the ship was again struck in the engine room. Our captain calmly exclaimed, "That's finished us. Now it's each man for himself." Not one of us seemed to realize any immediate danger till the ship began to keel over. By this time the water was alive with the dead and dying mixed up with the wreckage from the other two ill-fated ships. We had no boats to look to as they had gone to help the others. Then I made up my mind to have a go for it. So I made a jump into the water. It was awful, moans and cries on every side. I swam away from it all. When I looked round I spotted a sail which was a good long way off. So I made for it. When I got within hailing distance, I thought I would be picked up, but, to my horror, the boat actually turned round and went away. I learned afterwards, that it was a German smack used as a covering party for the submarines. Anyway, I kept going. Every now and then bumping up against wreckage or a big wave. I came across a chap who seemed to me to be fairly comfortable on a mess form. So I managed to get a change by holding on to one of the legs of it. I tried to cheer him up a bit, but he did not answer me. The look on his face was past all human description. After a little a chum of mine got hold of the other leg of the form and we exchanged greetings. This put new life into us both. But still we could not get any answer from our other friend in the middle of us. Then we had a surprise. We were horrified to see the poor fellow oll over and he toppled to a watery grave. Poor chap! The bodies of our poor lost comrades were washed past us by the dozen. I have no recollection of being picked up. The next thing I remember was on board the Titan. They told me I was rescued (unconscious) about 11.15 a.m., so that I must have been nearly 4 hours in a heavy sea.

He concludes by saying that he could never believe that a system of discipline could be maintained when circumstances like those arose if he had not been an actual living witness. The cool and calm manner in which all orders were carried out was superb.

It becomes a fitting tribute (out of respect for those brave men who died at duty's post, whilst trying to maintain the supremacy of the sea), for us to meet the needy circumstances by helping to eliminate the sufferings of those who are left behind to mourn their loss, and bare our heads and bow to those who still remain to uphold our national supremacy.

SERMON BY REV. FATHER McGINITY

Infallibility of the Pope, His Subject

At Vespers sung last evening in the Church of the Sacred Heart by Rev. J. J. O'Brien, Rev. Father McGinity, of St. Peter's Cathedral, delivered an eloquent sermon of the Infallibility of the Pope. His text was "For I have prayed for thee, Peter, that thy faith fail not and that being once converted confirm thy brethren."

The Catholic Church is infallible, the reverend speaker explained, because the founder, Jesus Christ, was infallible, and the Pope is infallible because Jesus Christ, whom he represents, is infallible. Papal infallibility in its real sense is very often misunderstood. Those outside the Catholic Church generally believe that infallibility means that the Pope cannot err in anything he undertakes but far from it, the Pope can err in many things. He is human like any other man and can readily make natural mistakes but in his teachings of the dogmas of faith he is, beyond all doubt infallible. Thus, Papal Infallibility means in regard to dogmas of faith spoken by the Pope to the Church he cannot err.

The Pope, being the visible representative of Jesus Christ on earth, must be a virtuous, pious man, the embodiment of all that is good and holy. In the old law the High Priest was made infallible by Jesus Christ and in the new law the High Priest or the Pope is also infallible.

Though small and poor the Catholic Church has withstood numerous heresies and persecutions for nineteen centuries and will do so till the end of time. Protestantism though it is only in existence since 1600 is already losing ground, not from external persecutions but from internal disorder. If three centuries have made marked havoc with it, how will it stand in the future?

As the house of the wise man of old was built on the rock and withstood the storms so the Catholic Church built on the rock of Peter will withstand the storms of persecution and heresy forever. Rev. Father McGinity urged the large audience to pray as Christ did, that the faith of Peter fail not.

Solos were sung by Miss K. Masterson and Mr. T. Bartley. Mr. J. Armstrong ably presided at the organ.

"BLACK JIM" THE CONVICT

By M· QUAD

The man known as "Black Jim" had been sent out to the penal colony of Australia for forgery.

They sent him up to Woona Wally after his first two years of imprisonment, and he fell into the hands of George Stebbins. In those days an Australian convict was bid off—that is, a settler in want of help would bid a price for so many men, and they were turned over to him for a certain length of time. He was responsible for their feed and care, and his word was law. He could work them as hard and as long as he wished. He could starve and beat them and there was no one to come between. In case of insubordination he could shoot them down, and the government simply accepted his statement of the affair. All convicts were glad enough to get away from prison and out upon the ranches, and in most cases they found good masters and were decently treated. As a member of the mounted police I knew that Stebbins was a hard man to get along with. He had been a tavern keeper and a bully in England, and his wife had committed suicide, and his two sons had been taken away from him by the law on account of his cruelty.

Black Jim came up to Woona Wally with six other men, and the gang were up at police headquarters for the night. It fell to us to take their pedigrees and post them as to their new master and what would be expected of them. In our district we always gave a convict a fair start. He was told what would be required of him, advised to do his best to please his master and given to understand that if he went straight we would see that he had fair usage. I was interested in Black Jim at once. The law had made a convict of him, but it hadn't degraded him.

I had an idea that Stebbins would be down on him from the first because of his superior looks, and I went pretty thoroughly into details. When I had finished the prisoner said:

"I thank you, sir, and shall do my best to please."

Things came about as I feared. As Stebbins inspected his gang he picked Black Jim out for special attention. He had little to say to the others beyond making bloodcurdling threats of what would happen if they didn't toe the mark, but to Jim he said:

"So they have sent me a gentleman, have they? They thought I needed somebody to teach me manners perhaps. Mebbe the idea was for you to sit on the veranda and give me daily lessons. Well, you've come to the wrong shop. Look, now, I'm goin' to keep an eye on you! You think yourself head and shoulders above the crowd, but I'll take the conceit out of you!"

Not one convict in a thousand would have stood the insults and degradation put upon Black Jim the next year. I know he tried his best, but there was no pleasing Stebbins. He was always boasting that he had a gentleman convict and that he was bound to "break" him, and he spent a good share of his time worrying the man. One day, as I was returning with the troop after hunting down a false alarm of bushrangers, my horse shied and threw me almost in front of Stebbins' house, and as I struck on a stone and had several ribs broken I was carried in. He was not glad to see me, but under the circumstances was obliged to give me a bed. On the fourth night of my accident four men and three women arrived for an evening visit.

When dinner had been finished and the drink had gone around Stebbins sent for Black Jim and ordered him to dance for the amusement of the company. The convict respectfully but firmly refused, and his master cried out in indignation:

"You won't dance, eh? Too much of a gentleman to give us a hornpipe! Mebbe this company isn't swagger enough for the likes of a bloomin' murderer!"

"The charge against me was forgery, sir," quietly replied the man.

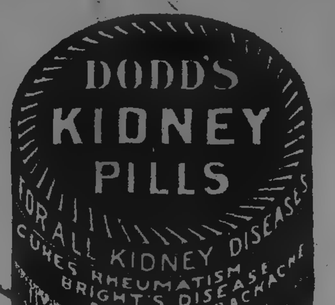
"I don't care what it was. You are insubordinate, and up you go by the thumbs! After hangin' till daylight you'll probably be a little more humble."

The man had been hanging ten minutes and the agony had almost brought unconsciousness when the door was kicked open and bushrangers crowded in. It was a complete surprise. The women screamed out and began to cry, but the men, with the exception of Stebbins, took it rather coolly. The bully and coward went white as death and fell into a chair, and it was almost pitiful to hear him beg for his life.

The next instant Stebbins toppled out of his chair with a bullet in his head, and the leader said:

"Sorry we have interrupted the festivities, but it was our calling night. We were after Stebbins alone, and the rest of you need not fear. Come, Jim, we want you."

Two of them helped the forger-convict out of the house and upon a horse, and that was the making of the most notorious bushranger in all Australia. He had a career of five years and then died from a bullet, and it was two years after his death before it became publicly known that he had let the law make a convict of him in order to shield a brother. I had always believed him innocent of the crime, and, knowing how he had been persecuted and abused by Stebbins, I almost rejoiced when the bushrangers carried him off to make a leader of him.



Speed of the Street Song.

One of the curious things about the popular song is the rapidity of its dissemination among the street children. Few of them can hear it at first hand at the music halls, yet long before the latest catchy tune has found its way to the barrel organs or Sunday newspaper you will hear it rendered with amazing accuracy by tiny boys and girls. It seems to travel like rumor through an East Indian bazar.—London Standard.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Sprains.

A sprain is often extremely painful and if neglected when in the ankle may lay a person up for a long time. As soon as possible remove the shoe and stocking and apply a wet bandage (use old, clean muslin or roll gauze; buy it in any drug store) of epsom salt solution. Dissolve a pound of epsom in water, enough water to use it all up and not leave any salt. Dip the gauze or muslin into this solution and place closely around the sprain. Keep the application wet all the time. Continue the treatment for twenty-four hours.

LURE OF LIGHTHOUSES.

Perches Near the Lanterns Lessen the Slaughter of the Birds.

Every year the lighthouses all over the world are the cause of the destruction of thousands of birds. In four nights during the migrating season 10,000 birds were killed at the Barfleur light. Most of the birds fluttered about the lantern until, finding no resting place, they at last died from exhaustion.

Some time ago the matter was taken up in Holland, where at the Terschelling lighthouse great numbers of deaths occurred. A number of perches were placed about the lantern, and it is now claimed that during the whole of the migrating season, when thousands of birds pass the lighthouse, not more than 100 are killed. At night every perch is crowded, sometimes as many as 10,000 birds roosting at one time.

The Royal Society For the Protection of Birds, following this example, set up perches at St. Catherine's and the Caskets, and now Trinity House (the British lighthouse board) has permitted the society to furnish other lighthouses with similar accommodation.

The perches are made in the form of a small ladder of wood and iron within view of the light, but so placed as not to obstruct it. The perches from which the birds cannot see the light are always empty, and at St. Catherine's many such were removed as useless.

The sacrifice of bird life takes place only upon nights when no stars are visible. When the sky is clear the birds never approach the lantern.—London Globe.

Good Advertisement.

Father is an advertising man and has had the misfortune to be laid up with the rheumatism. For some time, when he has been able to walk at all, he has limped along at a snail's gait with a cane. Things seemed blue enough, but it was for his small son to point out that which, in the little boy's mind, was one of the large benefits of the situation.

They had walked down the street together, and dad had been stopped several times by people who wished to know what was the matter or to inquire how the disease was progressing.

"Do you know, dad, this is some advertisement?" said the son enthusiastically.

"What is?" groaned his father.

"Being all crippled up and walking poky with a cane," replied the son. "I never did see so many people pay so much attention to you before."

Father was too stiff and sore to whip him.—Indianapolis News.

Memory.

Memory is that faculty of the mind which enables us to know that we have forgotten something. Without memory there would be no history; hence no fiction.

Memory furnishes the only background for liars that is needed. It enables many people to labor under the continuous illusion that there is a past, when in reality there is nothing but a present.

Without memory there would be no worry, because worry is fear for the future, based on recollection of what has happened—usually to someone else.

Memory enables us to store our minds with useful facts—until they are proved to be wrong by other useful facts which in turn take their place.—Life.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Oct. 24.—There was a fair inquiry from overseas buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today and cables in some cases were stronger at an advance of 4½d to 6d per quarter, but exporters declined to accept them. Cables on oats were quieter and as the bids were no higher no sales were made. The local market for coarse grains is firm, but the demand for carlots is still limited. Flour continues quiet for both local and export account, but the undertone to the market is very firm. Millfeed is unsettled and prices are being shaded in some cases for carlots. The trade in butter is quiet, but the feeling is better. Receipts for the week 6,154 packages as compared with 8,199 for the like week last year. Cheese is quiet, but there is no actual change in spot prices to note. Receipts for the week were 48,466 boxes as against 36,806 for the corresponding week a year ago.

Demand for eggs for export account continues good and the tone of the market is strong with prices tending upward. Receipts for the week were 6,233 cases as compared with 2,335 a year ago. The exports for the week were 4,010 cases.

Stocks: Wheat, 4,328,117; corn, 59,275; oats, 980,880; barley, 155,446; flax, 102,287; flour, 68,581 sacks.

STAINED GLASS WINDOW MAKING

Canada Is Gradually Developing Beautiful Art.

Canadian artists in oils have their art exhibits, but the Canadian artists who work with glass are quite unknown to fame; the usual inscription to their creations being "Sacred to the Memory of," or "Industry, Intelligence, Integrity." This is very inspiring, but gives little data as to the whereabouts of the window's creator.

The art of making these windows is progressing in Canada, but silently. Only on some Sunday when the congregation cannot keep its mind on the sermon for admiration of a new picture inserted in place of the old diagonals of green and blue grass, is any attention called to the quiet work that has been in progress somewhere in the city for months past. The first windows used in Canada, those in the old churches of Quebec, were imported, and Canada still imports some of her windows. Three magnificent specimens of the art have recently been inserted in St. Michael's Cathedral during the past year from Meyers of Munich.

In the early years of Canada the interesting task of dodging Indian tomahawks long enough to raise the family vegetables fully occupied the heads of the families and it was not until the year 1840 that any attempt at the art was made in this country. Then an artist named John Craig built up a little kiln in the back yard of his house on Wellington street, Toronto, and here was made the first stained glass window for Canada. It is now in St. Mark's Church, Niagara-on-the-Lake. This window is not what is technically known as a "subject window," but is emblematic of the relation of Church and State. A few years later a homesick Englishman named Walter Bull tried to reproduce on glass his memories of English landscapes. He achieved some beautiful effects in brown enamel landscapes on glass with ornamental framework outlined in gold, and these were placed in many of Toronto's finest old homes. Most of them have since been bought by art and curio collectors, and whenever an old residence is about to be demolished some of these experts are at hand to look for a Bull panel sidelight, or door glass.

In 1866 a French artist named Martin, a friend of the Comte de Charbonnel, living for a time in Toronto, burned into window form the immense series of pictures at the front of St. Michael's Cathedral.

Canada now has so many famous windows that a selection of types is difficult.

The glass windows spell many tragedies, both in inscription and subject. In the little church at Deseronto the late Dr. Oronhyatekha placed a large window of the Good Shepherd rescuing the sheep in memory of his beloved wife Deyoronseh, and it was destroyed by fire. The old doctor immediately ordered its duplication, and, while the new window was in process of construction, he himself was summoned by death. Thus the window was altered to receive his name with that of his wife, and the verse: "They were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in death were not divided."

Almost all the large windows ordered now are ordered in Canada. One is being prepared now which will be the largest in Canada, but its name cannot be made public yet. Part of the beauty of the old world cathedral windows comes from age. Dust and decay form around them. They are never washed, and in time their colors are softened and mellowed into an unbelieveably beautiful glow."

Where the Hippopotamus Lurks.

Herds of hippopotamuses are not found everywhere in central Africa. They stick to the swampy shores overgrown with the papyrus plant, which affords them cover by day when they come out to rest. At night they feed on land, sometimes walking long distances away from the lake or river in search of palatable herbs. The hippopotamus is a great eater. A cow hippopotamus stays with her calf until the young one gets strong enough to walk and swim.

COLOSSAL BRIDGE

Progress is Being Made with Quebec's New Structure.

Some idea of the enormous size of the new Quebec Bridge—the structure that is to replace the half-built bridge which collapsed suddenly in August, 1907—is afforded by figures and illustrations given in The Engineer. The substructure of this colossal work was completed last season, and preparations are now being made for the erection of the great superstructure which is advancing rapidly in the works of the St. Lawrence Bridge Company at Montreaal. The company was formed, and the works established, for this one purpose. Already some 8,000 or 9,000 tons of material have been sent out to the site.

The proportions of the bridge as a whole, as well as a large number of the members, constitute a record in bridge construction of the kind. The bridge, which will carry railways and foot passengers, but no wheeled traffic, is 3,239 feet long between the faces of the abutments, and has one 140 feet approach span at the south end and two spans aggregating 269 feet at the north end. The general form is two immense pairs of cantilevers, borne on two piers in the river, with a suspended span between them. It is as if two-thirds of the Forth Bridge were taken. The anchor arms are 515 feet long, the cantilever arms 580 feet long, and the suspended span 640 feet measured from centre to centre of pins. The same measurements in the Forth Bridge are 689 feet 9 inches, 680 feet, and 350 feet.

The bridge is 88 feet wide from centre to centre, and has a clear height above extreme high water of 150 feet—the same as the Forth Bridge. It differs from the famous Scotch bridge in that it is built up of plates and bars, and not of tubes. The vertical post over the piers stands 310 feet high, as against 330 feet of the Forrth. It is probably the largest single member of this type ever constructed. It is composed of four separate columns latticed together, and weighs 1,500 tons, and its lower end rests on a huge steel shoe. The base of the shoe, built up of four steel castings, measures no less than 25 feet 4 inches by 20 feet 10 inches. There are two of these posts, and two shoes corresponding, on each pier. The shop at Montreal which was specially built for carrying out this work, is 660 feet long and 160 feet wide for the greater part of its length. Amongst the lifting appliances are two 27-ton traveling cranes.

King George's Indigestion.

Queen Mary has much more to do with events of the day than might be supposed, says the London Globe. She lightens the King's tasks a good deal by making arrangements for royal progresses, and all the details that are necessary. Supposing the King decides that he will go to Yorkshire, Lancashire, the Midlands, or to Scotland on a tour, it is the Queen who revises the programme, gives a decision upon the repasts to be served in the trains, and so on.

The general managers have among their treasured possessions menu-cards annotated in the Queen's own clear handwriting, making alterations in the meals suggested by the refreshment departments. Some of these are dictated by King George's liability to indigestion.

Spain's Royal Bodyguard.

The Spanish royal family has an especial and historic bodyguard to prevent intrusions. For centuries the Monteros, who must be natives of the town of Espinosa and have served with honor in the army, have had the exclusive privilege of guarding the royal palaces by night. In their historic costume and wearing felt shoes they take up their posts at midnight outside the rooms of the king, queen and other royalties, while detachments patrol the halls and corridors all night long. They speak no word, acknowledging each other's presence by sign and countersign. In the morning they disappear as silently, giving place to the ordinary sentries and attendants.

Holsteins In British Columbia.

A new plan for the introduction of pure bred Holstein cattle will be tried out this fall in British Columbia. An auction of 40 Ontario bred heifers, together with 20 head of young stock consigned by J. M. Steves, of Lulu Island, will be held by the B. C. Holstein Breeders' Association at New Westminster. If this sale is successful, others will be held. Few female Holsteins, other than culls, can only be purchased in the coast province, and the necessity for some action is considered urgent by the dairymen. The matter was taken up with the president and secretary of the Holstein Fresian Association of Canada, on their recent visit to the coast, and the officials promised to manage the Ontario end of the sale. Both men visited practically every Holstein breeder on the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island, and were much impressed by the splendid, profitable herds.

"Conditions in the British Columbia valleys, especially the Fraser Delta," observed Secretary Clemans, "are ideal for Holsteins, probably better than in Holland, and eastern breeders will need to bestir themselves if they wish to prevent all the championship records failing into the hands of the men on the Pacific coast."

Among the British Columbia record breakers to which the secretary made referance, was Madame Posch Pauline, owned by the Colony Farm, Coquitham, which is the Champion Canadian mating cow for both seven-day and thirty-day butter-fat production. She seems now in a fair way to break the 12-month record for milk and butter, for in five and a half months she has given 18,000 pounds, and is still going strong.

How Hadley Proposed.

The way President Arthur Twining Hadley, according to a Yale legend, asked his prospective father-in-law for permission to marry his daughter was characteristic. At the time this gentleman, Luzon B. Morris, occupied an anomalous political position. He had recently been elected governor of Connecticut, but his claim was disputed, and the state was in a political turmoil.

"Mr. Morris," was the way Mr. Hadley approached the subject of his call, "I hope that I—at least—may be permitted to—to call you—governor."—World's Work.

VICTORY FOR VARSITY TWO MINUTES BEFORE END

"Gamey" Stratton is Worked at Quarter for Collegians and Makes Good

Toronto, Oct. 26.—Coming from behind and scoring a try with two minutes to play, Varsity defeated T. R. and A. A. Saturday in the city championship semi-final by the close score of 14 to 12. It was a hard-fought contest, and one featured by seemingly safe leads enjoyed by each aggregation at different stages, with the initial quarter being the closest of the game, as the score at the end of the first fifteen minutes was 2 to 1 in favor of the students. In the second period, Varsity rolled up six points, while T.R. and A.A. were held scoreless, although they had just as much of the play as the students, but Bryans, for the latter, pulled the unexpected by stealing the ball out of a T.R. and A.A. scrimmage thirty-five yards out and romping over for an unconverted try.

Varsity lined up without "Red" McKenzie on the back division, the latter being under the weather with a bad knee, while Gamey Stratton, of the intermediates, was tried at quarter and made good. In fact his work was the feature of the game, he being slippery as an eel, and always in the thick of the play. Like Pete Campbell, the former quarter, it looks as if Peterboro will again be represented at quarter for Vasity. On the line, Clarkson was an absentee at outside owing to boils, while Adelard was forced to retire when his bad ankle went back on him. McLaren, of T.R. and A.A., was also forced to retire through a bad ankle in the last quarter.

While Varsity were not as strong as they were in the Queen's game, yet the match with T.R. and A.A. showed that from this end of the woods there is very little difference between the Intercollegiate and O.R.F.U. The play, with the exception of a few incidents, was very clean, although there was a lot of good hard tackling. Burkart, of T.R. and A.A., was benched three times by Referee Wright, not for what he did, but for what he said, while Sheehy and DeGruchy were one pair that were canned and Whale and Cassells another pair that were banished for five minutes each.

The game showed that both clubs will have to improve a lot in their team-play if they wish to win their respective leagues. They will also have to learn to take advantage of openings, both teams on Saturday having numerous chances to scrimmage the ball, and then have off-sides called on their opponents, who had not got back into their own territory. T.R. and A.A. had a grand chance to gain another ten yards in the last quarter, just before Doyle made his run, by scrimmaging the ball, as Gage and several other players had gone down the field on Doyle's supposed kick, the latter being downed when he tried to run through the middle. However, they waited until the Varsity men were in their positions. Varsity had just as many opportunities as T.R. and A.A., but they never pulled the play once. The teams:—

T.R. and A.A.—Flying wing, McLaren (Grimshaw); backs, Heffernan, DeGruchy, Vivian; quarter, Hobbs; scrimmage, Hoare, Lajoie, Crawford; insides, Richards, J. Smith; middles, Whale, D. Smith; outsides, Moore, Burkart.

Varsity—Flying wing, Peterkin; backs, Doyle, Lindsay, Sheehy; quarter, Stratton; scrimmage, Nicholson, Campbell, Horner; insides, McMullen, Bryans; middles, Cassells, Hughes; outsides, Adelard (Gardner), Gage.

Referee, Dr. Wright; umpire, F. Robbins.

BENDER TO STICK TO THE FINISH

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—"I'll pitch until they tear the uniform off my back."

These were the exact words today of Chief Bender, Athletic twirler, in denying that he was about to retire from baseball. An article recently appeared over Christy Mathewson's signature deploring the fact that Bender was about to quit the diamond.

Bender asserted that he never was in better condition than during the world's series.

GROVE SCHOOL LOST TO P.C.I. SECOND TEAM

The P.C.I. second team met the Grove School from Lakefield at Nicholls Oval on Saturday and had very little trouble in handing the visitors a 48-0 trimming. The boys from the northern village showed great skill in tackling but their weight was as nothing when compared to the P.C.I. squad, the result being that the latter went over on bucks almost at leisure. Mr. Hone of the P.C.I. staff refereed.

Won Game by Three Points

The P.C.I. rugby team visited Lindsay on Saturday and succeeded in carrying off a 9-6 victory over the rugby aggregation representing the Lindsay Collegiate Institute. A better game was never witnessed in Scugogville. It was the old story, condition and good tackling conquered over weight. The P.C.I. team was comparatively light but the tackling of the halves and outside wing Skuce was marvelous.

Both teams played grand rugby in the last half, only one point being made and that by the Petes. The half time score was 8-6. One of the biggest assists for the winners was Long's punting. Time and time again he outbooted the Lindsay halves. The running of J. Smith, the right half for Peterboro was also very brilliant.

The locals lined up as follows:—Flying wing, Huycke; halves, Jobbitt, Long and Smith; quarter, Knapman; outside wings, Carmichael and Skuce; middle wings, Eastwood and Austin; inside wings, Smith and Caniff; scrimmage, Crawfod, Stevenson, and Kirn.

Officials, Weeks and Brown.

COMMENT As You Like it

According to dispatches from Peterboro, the Canadian League franchise and club of that city is on the market. The present owners are anxious to sell, and are at present making efforts to dispose of some of the players. Other clubs in the league are being communicated with in the hope that they will grab off some of the men. London ought to go after Catcher Mully Miller. He looks like the only player worth anything on the club. Louis Schettler only held a one-year contract, so he is a free agent. The Petes have two or three infielders who would bolster up some of the other clubs in the league nicely. Byrne, Fox and King were all good men. Welsh and Rooney are two promising outfielders also.—London Advertiser.

Knute Belting, the local Canadian League twirler, has accepted the position of manager of Yeotes' pool and billiard parlors for the winter months. The "Swede" is a general favorite with the fans in the city, and many will be pleased to learn that he is to winter here.

Mr. Jas. P. Fitzsimmons, late of Lebrun's Gents' Furnishing Establishment, has been appointed manager of the cigar business in connection with Yeotes' store.

Duchess Is of German Birth.

The Duchess of Connaught, who, to-day, is regarded as an English princess, is nevertheless the daughter of Frederick Charles of Prussia, the Red Prince, "whose name the mothers of Lorraine villages invoke today as the Scottish peasants of old invoked the name of the Black Douglas to terrify their children." He was a conspicuous figure in the Franco Prussian war.

The following young men made the trip:— R. Stevenson, E. W. Crawford, D. S. Caniff, F. A. Huycke, L. J. Stewart, H. H. Webb, A. G. Anstry, J. Douglas Macdonald, Marvin Kerr, Vincent M. Eastwood, H. J. Jobbitt, Harland Skuce, C. T. Smith, Hugh Carmichael, A. C. Darling, E. D. Smyth, H. J. Long, McNeely.

"Are you eager to have your mother spank you that you run home so fast?" "No," shouted the boy over his shoulder, as he resumed his homeward flight. "but if I don't get there before pa he'll do it!"

IS DIVORCED FROM CHINESE HUSBAND

Springfield, Oct. 26.—For the first time in the history of Hampden county the marriage relation between a white woman and a Chinaman was dissolved, when Justice William F. Dana granted a decree in the divorce case of Jenne D. Tole of Boston against her husband, Chin G. Tole of this city. The case was uncontested.

A STAR FOR EVERY PERSON.

(From Popular Mechanics.)

For years the approximate number of stars visible to the eye, a matter of 3,000 or 4,000, according to the definition of average vision, has been known. By most persons, however, and by many scientists, the total number of stars in the heavens has been considered countless, if not limitless. The universe is now declared to be finite, yet of a magnificence of dimension and of a populousness far beyond all earlier conceptions. This assumption is a result of very recent investigations into the motions and distances of the stars.

The latest studies on the subject of the number as well as the light of the stars have been made at the royal observatory at Greenwich, England. The late Franklin Adams succeeded in making a set of 296 photographs covering the entire sky. After counts were made on these pictures, from which the brightness of the self-luminous bodies between practically the twelfth and seventeenth magnitudes could be inferred, it was concluded that they recorded about 55,000,000 stars. From this a formula was determined showing the change of number in passing from one magnitude to another. With these figures it was reasoned that the aggregate number of stars is not less than 1,000,000,000, probably not more than 2,000,000,000, and probably approximately 1,600,000,000, the estimated present population of the earth. In making computations it was inferred that there would be as many stars fainter than magnitude 23 or 24 as there are brighter.

MANY QUESTIONS ARE ANSWERED BY DR. GORDON

Grand Opera House not Large Enough to Accommodate all Who Sought to Hear Addresses on Sunday—Meetings All This Week in George Street Church

The two special meetings in connection with the Citizenship Campaign were held on Sunday in the Grand Opera House, a meeting for men only in the afternoon at four o'clock, and a general mass meeting at half-past eight o'clock in the evening. Both services crowded the edifice to the doors. There were two thousand men present at the men's meeting at four o'clock.

Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw sang selections entitled "Ninety and Nine," "Would You Believe," and "Lord, I'm Coming Home."

President James Connal, of the Young Men's Christian Asociation, made a brief address. Mr. E. O. Weber, chairman of the general citizenship campaign committee, presided. The address was of a confidential character, and had to do with the sacredness of the marriage relationship, and the purity of the home life. It was a great meeting and every available foot of legitimate ground and every seat and all standing room of the proper source fully occupied. Several hundred young men were unable to gain admission.

At the meeting this evening, Mr. Edward Hesselberg the eminent Russian pianist, will render a number of his best selections, and Mr. Greenlaw will sing three songs, "Where the Sweetest Flowers Grow," a selection of his own composition, "A Clean Heart," and "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" the latter by special request.

There has been such a demand for Dr. Gordon's booklet, entitled "The Day When Everything Goes Wrong," that fifteen hundred additional copies will be distributed free at the service this evening.

Some Questions Answered.

Last evening at half-past eight o'clock Dr. Gordon conducted a question drawer in the Grand Opera House, in the presence of the vast gathering. He answered the following practical and pertinent questions:

First: What percentage of wealthy church members are expelled from the church, when it is no secret either to the minister or the officials, that they live ungodly lives?

Dr. Gordon's opinion was that the matter of church discipline in this generation was altogether too lax, and that any individual on the continent of North America in possession of a million dollars could command a position in social or ecclesiastical circles, and in some churches might be able to command official positions.

Second: What would you say of an employer who gave a thousand dollars to charity and cut down his men's wages fifty cents the next week?

I should say that this was a mighty mean specimen of personal advertisement.

Third: Can a man tell the truth and succeed in business?

The realm of business and the realm of baseness are as distinct, one from the other, as a full-blooded African is distinct from a white man, in the color of his skin, without any reflection upon either. When a man passes over from the realm of business to the realm of rascality, he can no longer be classed as a business man. Any man can make money, if he is disposed to ignore his God and fling his conscience overboard.

Fourth: Would you accept a position as a bartender if you couldn't get any other kind of employment?

It is hard to say what a man will do when his home is cold and his children starving, but so far as I am personally concerned, I would rather see myself in the poor house, family included, than have anything to do with the liquor traffic. The barroom is a national nuisance and an individual curse. You good Christian people will wake up to that fact some day.

Fifth: Does not a man have to crucify his intellect in order to be a Christian?

No. Christianity is the only religion in the world today that makes a personal and direct appeal to the human reason. Any man who knows enough to read and has read enough to know, knows this, if he knows anything at all, that the religion of Jesus Christ rests upon the solid granite of historical fact. A man does not have to throw his brains overboard when he becomes a Christian.

Sixth: Is Christianity the final religion, or will it be superseded by another?

No. Nominal Christianity as we find it in the churches and in the community at the present hour will certainly be superseded. Nominal Christianity does not come within ten thousand miles of the ideals enthroned by Jesus Christ, but if you ask me if these ideals will ever be superseded, I answer, no. The world will never find anything better than the Bible, or the Sermon on the Mount.

Seventh: Is there not a prejudice against the man in the business world, when his hair is growing gray?

No, not if his ideas are progressive and he keeps himself modern and up to the times.

Eighth: Has an unemployed man a moral right to take the job of a fellow-worker who is on strike?

No, not if the strike is justified.

Ninth: Did you ever know a church to be run by one man, such as Eldon Parr, described in Winston Churchill's novel, "The Inside of the Cup"?

Yes, I have known churches run by one man, sometimes a good man, sometimes a bad man, but the average church is run by the preacher, and a church is what the preacher makes it.

Tenth: Would you advise a man to go to church if he found the church services unbearably uninteresting?

I would advise a man to go through all the churches of the community, Protestant and Catholic, and find the church that provides him with spiritual food, and the priest or minister who makes him an inspiration, and I would advise him to attend that church.

Eleventh: Would capitalists attend church in such large numbers if a genuine gospel was preached?

If a genuine gospel was preached for the next fifty years in our churches, there would be neither prince nor pauper, capitalist nor working man. The present competitive, economic system must inevitably give way and be supplanted by something better. Christianity must be interpreted in the terms of democracy, brotherhood, fraternity, and equality. There is no good reason why the poor should be with us always.

Twelfth: Should a man obey an unjust law?

John Ruskin says, "Obey a poor law until you find a better one." The man who is responsible for the making of a law is the man who has the vote in his own hands. Many of the men who are complaining about the character of our laws, fail to vote on election day. When they do vote, it is because some interested politician sends a rig and drives them to the ballot box. The man who neglects to vote should have the ballot taken from his hands, and the crown of citizenship stricken from his brow. If things are not right in the community, it is the fault of the average man, and the average man is the poor man.

Thirteenth: Can God answer prayer in a universe which is governed by law?

The fact is that God does answer prayer, and I presume that there are two classes of law in the universe. The lower laws and the higher laws. When God answers prayer, He operates in harmony with the higher law.

Fourteenth: Is there any time in a man's life when it is too late to pray?

Yes, it is too late for certain physical benefits when a man has burned out the fuses of his body, by twenty years of modern drinking. It is small use to ask God to provide him with a new body. Such a prayer is never answered.

Fifteenth: Are you here in Peterborough, speaking in the interests of capitalists?

Come and hear me every night this week, and come to your own conclusions.

Dr. Gordon will speak this evening in the George Street Methodist Church on "The Fashion Craze," or "The First Steps Downward in the Life of Shame."

AUSTRIANS OUTFLANKED.

Montenegrin Force Inflicts Severe Blow On the Enemy.

NISH, Oct. 26.—(By way of London.) — The Servian War Office has issued the following:

On Oct. 19 a detachment of the enemy advanced from Modropolje, north of Kalinovik (Herzegovina), against the flank of the Montenegrin troops east position at Kalinovik. A Montenegrin detachment from Bovarits perceiving the enemy's movement, attacked their flank and defeated them, capturing a mountain gun, nine caissons and a large number of rifles.

On Oct. 21 a battle took place along the Bosnian front, both Servians and Montenegrins taking part. The Balkan allies repelled all attacks and took 200 prisoners, including one field officer and four subalterns.

In view of the enemy's severe attacks, the Montenegrin troops have been compelled to fall back a little behind their positions.

An official statement issued at Vienna on Friday said that Servian and Montenegrin forces which had penetrated the southeastern Bosnian frontier, were defeated on Oct. 22, after a battle of three days.

Seeking To Inculpate Hero.

DUNKIRK, Oct. 26.—According to advices from Halle, Germany, a movement is under way that seeks to identify Gen. Leman, the heroic defender of Liege, with a Heinrich Lehmann, who deserted from the German army in 1870. It is declared that the resemblance between the two men is very striking.

Gen. Leman is now a prisoner in the fortress of Magdeburg.

RIEVRS-BULKELEY KILLED.

OTTAWA, Oct. 26. — A cablegram received at Government House yesterday announces the death in action of Major Sir Charles Rivers-Bulkeley, C.M.G., M.V.O., formerly comptroller of the Duke of Connaught's household.

Major Rivers-Bulkeley, who was a member of the Scots Guards, married Miss Pelly, who was lady-in-waiting to the Princess Patricia, and who is now in England with her infant son, on April 19, 1913. The marriage in London, which was attended by members of the royal family, attracted wide attention, and the wedding gifts included many from Ottawa, where Major Rivers-Bulkeley and Miss Pelly had been most popular.

SINKING OF GERMAN SUBMARINE.

A seaman on the British cruiser Birmingham has written home an account of the sinking of the German submarine U.15: "We were scouting about 160 miles from Germany when an able seaman on watch sighted a periscope above the water. He opened fire at once. The captain altered his course and dashed towards the submarine, which could not fire when broadside on. Just imagine, I was sleeping, when all of a sudden I was awakened by about half-a-dozen guns going off and the sounding of the bugle. I turned out quicker than I have ever done in my life. I often laugh as I think of dashing along the upper deck with one leg in my trousers and one out. Nearly everybody was the same; the lieutenants came in their pyjamas. When the firing started the periscope got blown away, then she came to the top. All the guns were trained on her, and just before she was hit the second time she switched on a small light, and a lieutenant came up in the conning tower. Just as he poked his head up a shell hit the tower and blew it and him to atoms. Then she sank. I felt a bit sorry for the crew, but if we had been a second later we should have been up in the air."

Go By Way of Cape Race.

The British Government has directed that for the remainder of the present season all shipping between Canadian and British ports should abandon the route through Belle Isle Strait and use that by way of Cape Race exclusively.

This will enable the cruisers now employed on the North Atlantic to give more efficient supervision to shipping and protection from possible interference by German warships from now until the close of navigation.

The wireless station at Cape Race has been restricted from any general business and required to handle only naval and official messages. A cordon of British warships stretched from Cape Race eastward to the British coast and another patrols the ocean sufficiently far south to enable the guarding of all British shipping traversing the North Atlantic to be efficiently carried out.

Men imagine that they communicate their virtue or their vice only by overt actions, and do not see that virtue or vice emits a breath every moment.—R. W. Emerson.

German Batteries Destroyed in Engagements Between Soissons and Berry-au-Bac --- French Drive the Enemy Across the Frontier

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Oct. 27.—The afternoon official announcement says: Fighting continues particularly spirited between the mouth of the Yser and the region of Lens, where the Allies have maintained their positions.

Between Ypres and Roulers, they have continued to make progress.

Artillery engagements between Soissons and Berry-au-bac were successful and resulted in the destruction of several batteries of the enemy.

In the region east of Nancy the French have assumed the offensive and driven the Germans across the frontier.

QUAKES IN ITALY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MILAN, Oct. 27. — An earthquake was recorded in Milan this morning. Considerable alarm was caused among the people, but there were no casualties. A shock was also felt at Florence, and panic resulted, but no damage. There have been disturbances in Northern Italy the last 24 hours, but no loss of life.

ONLY ONE MAN WAS WOUNDED

Rebels Under Col. Maritz Give Way After Action of One Hour

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 27. — An official report says in the defeat of Colonel Maritz, in command of the rebel force in Cape Colony, by the Government force, under Colonel Brits, the latter lost only one man wounded. The number of rebels captured, surrendered and wounded was large. The remainder retreated hurriedly after an action of only one hour, abandoning tents and munitions.

Two Miners Sink To Their Death

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Two others were pulled out in time.

PEOPLE WERE SURPRISED BY CANADIANS

Trip of Troopships is Discribed by Lieutenant Dick Russell

The following is a letter received from "Dick" Russell by a friend of his. The writer's name is quite familiar to a number of people here, he having held a responsible position with the De Laval Company. He is a lieutenant with the Nova Scotia Battalion. He also saw active service in South Africa:

Plymouth, England,
October 15th, 1914.

We just arrived here this morning, and it is some place. We had a very nice voyage. We were fifteen days in crossing the ocean. We had one death at sea. I can't say where we will land. At present we are anchored off shore about one hundred yards. I haled a boat this morning and the boatman went ashore and got me some papers, but there was not very much news in them about the war. The town people were much surprised to see al the Canadian transport ships in port when they awakened this morning. We were going to Southampton, but there were some German ships got out to sea, so they put in here to be on the safe side.

It was a very pretty sight to see us on the way over; there were 32 transport ships, six cruisers, and two large battleships. We crossed in three lines, with three cruisers in front, abreast, about 300 yards apart and the same in the rear, and the transports made three lines, one behind the other, with about 200 yards between each. We were guarded on each side by a battleship. It was a wonderful sight, and one that will long be remembered. Well, I guess this is all for now.

Germans in England are not allowed to change their names, but there will be one change in Germany. Very shortly the Kaiser's name will be Denis.

MR. C. A. McGRATH.

Ottawa, Oct. 27. — It has been practically decided that Mr. C. A. Magrath, former member for Medicine Hat, will move up to the chairmanship of the Canadian Section of the International Joint Commission. The Government has decided that hereafter the chairman of the Canadian section must reside in Ottawt. This is rendered necessary by the increasing importance attaching to the work of the commission and the desirability of keeping the commission in constant touch with the Government. The former chairman, Hon. T. Chase Casgrain, although an indefatigable worker as a member of the commission, was a resident of Montreal and was unable to give the larger share of his time to the business of the Ottawa office. Mr. Magrath is a resident of Ottawa and has been for the last four or five years.

Snow Makes Good Sleighing in Forest

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

FOREST, ONT., Oct. 27. — Eight inches of snow fell here last night and there is good sleighing.

Cheerful prospect for the German navy. England has 120 submarines just like the E9.

Hog cholera has broken out in the German army, but whether among the officers or the live stock is not stated.

Canadian Nurses in Military Hospitals

Ottawa, Oct. 27.—The Canadian corps of nurses who went to England with the first contingent is already at work. Word received by the authorities here is that the nurses have been detailed for duty in the military hospitals in England. They will remain there until the Canadian division goes to the front, when they will, of course, leave with them as an integral part of the division. Meanwhile they will be receiving a splendid training for the work they will do.

VON FALKENHAYN IS NEW CHIEF

War Minister Succeeds Count Von Moltke

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The Rome correspondent of the Havas Agency says that according to despatches received in Rome from Berlin, Major-General Erich Von Falkenhayn, the German Minister of War, has been appointed chief of the General Staff, succeeding Gen. Helmuth von Moltke, who is ill.

GEN. VON FALKENHAYN.

Advices from Amsterdam state that Gen. Helmuth von Moltke, chief of the German General Staff, is in a dying condition, and has been started for his home in Berlin on a litter.

Whether or not this is the reason for the change in staffs is open to doubt, but circumstantial stories have been current for some time to the effect that Von Moltke has been suffering from a grave affection of the liver ever since war broke out, and that campaign conditions have brought about complications which make his life a matter of weeks.

TWO HUNDRED MINERS DEAD

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 27. — Two hundred and fifty miners are entombed at Royalton, Ill., and thirty bodies have been taken out.

A telephone message from the owner of the mine said that of three hundred men who entered the mine this morning, about one hundred escaped.

Thirty or forty have ben found dead, and one hundred are known to be on the lover level, which is burning.

Take Calais At all Cost

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 27. — The Copenhagen correspondent of the Times wires that Emperor William has commanded that Calais must be taken as a vital part of the German strategic plan, no matter what sacrifice of men and war materials.

Japan has over 425,000 female mill operators.

Attempt to Assassinate Gen. Villa

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

EL PASO, TEX., Oct. 27. — An attempt has ben made to assassinate General Francis Villa by an agent said to be commissioned and paid by Gen. Pablo Gonzales and Gen. Carranza, according to a message sent to the Associated Press today, by Louis Aguirre Benaxdes, General Villa's first secretary. The would-be assassin, Francisco I. Mugia, was executed after making a confession before the American Consul Agent.

RUSSIAN CAVALRY STILL AT HEELS OF THE AUSTRIANS FOE'S LOSSES ARE LARGE

New Agreement Makes Emperor William Leader of Both Armies --- New British Gun Provides New Terror to German Airmen

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 27. — Reuter's Petrograd correspondent says Russian cavalry still pursues the Austrians, whose losses continue to be large, and south of the Stry river and along the railway tracks the ground is congested with Austrian corpses.

The Daily Mail's Flushing correspondent says that the general belief there is that the Allies soon will be in Ostend, which, like Bruges, Ghent, and Antwerp, is now overflowing with German wounded.

The Times' Copenhagen correspondent says that a new military agreement between Germany and Austria makes Emperor William leader of both armies.

The Times' corrependent in Northern France says a new British gun recently brought into use is most accurate and proving a new terror to German airmen.

A despatch from Rome says German losses average ten thousand killed and wounded daily. Seventy or eighty per cent. are not seriously wounded, and return to the ranks in a short time.

MILLIONS FACE FAMINE

Only Two Weeks Supply in Belgium According to American Minister

BRUSSELS, Oct. 27.—(By way of London)—Nearly 7,000,000 people in Belgium face famine unless they receive help from the outside at once.

The American Minister to Belgium says that less than two weeks' supply of food remains in the cities, while conditions in the country districts are even worse. Though Germany has seized the food in some cities for her soldiers, she still disclaims responsibility for feeding over 100,000 of the needly in Brussels. Families formerly rich are discharging their servants because they are bankrupt. Noblemen may be seen slipping into the soup kitchens.

Reports received by the United States Minister from Louvain, Liege and Namur say that the conditions in these cities are even worse than they are in Brussels. Louvain has only a four-days' supply of flour, while Liege has no flour at all.

The meat and milk supplies also have been cut off, the army having taken the cattle.

Belgians of all classes appear disheartened. Old women and cripples may be seen sitting near their shattered homes in Malines, nodding mutely at the cathedral with its shattered windows and tottering walls, damaged beyond repair by shell fire.

Similar conditions are found in the small villages between Antwerp and Brussels. Few stores are open. Those attempting to re-establish their homes find their roofs, which have been pierced by shells, no protection from the rain that is now falling every day. The villages that stood near contested forts were literally razed, yet many of the inhabitants remain living in rudely constructed sheds or tents.

RETURN MAYOR BULLER FOR SECOND TERM

Ald. Duffus Would Like to See Him Continue the Good Work

Interviewed by a Review man this morning on the possibility of his entering the Mayoralty contest, Ald. J. J. Duffus stated that he was not even considering it. He was of the opinion that Mayor Buller would satisfy the requests of a large number of ratepayers and remain in the chair to continue the great work accomplished, and that which is under way. Ald. Duffus is extremely hopeful that Mayor Buller will continue in office, and intends putting forth every possible effort to have him do so. He claims that it would be but proper for Mayor Buller to stay the usual term of two years when he has demonstrated such energetic ability as to overcome the unemployed situation and secure finances to carry on the city's work. Such energy directed along other lines during 1915 would undoubtedly set Peterboro far to the front.

FRENCH SHIP DESTROYED BY BOILER EXPLOSION

Was Carrying Refugees From Boulogne to Havre and Between Thirty and Forty Passengers Were Killed or Drowned

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 27. — The Chronicle says the French steamer Admiral Ganteaume, which was destroyed by an explosion on Monday afternoon while carrying 2,500 refugees from Boulogne to Havre, was the victim not of a mine but of an explosion of a boiler. Passengers were rescued by a trawler, torpedo boats and the British passenger ship Queen. When the latter left the Ganteaume was still afloat. Thirty or forty passengers were killed by being crushed between the Ganteaume and the Queen or drowned by falling overboard.

GERMANS WERE ORDERED TO CROSS CANAL AT ANY COST

Twenty-five Hundred Bodies of Foe in the Canal and Streets of Dixmude Were Thick With Dead

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 27. — The Daily Mail correspondent, writing from Northern France, says that after the fighting of Sunday night along the Yser Canal there were twenty-five hundred German bodies in the canal, some of them drowned and some bayoneted. The very water was bloody and Dixmude's streets were thick with dead.

Sunday night was a hell from dark until dawn. The German attack was so violent and so general, so sustained, and such numbers were employed, that its defenders at every point supposed their particular position was being made the object of a concerted attack. Captured officers affirmed that the delay of a week in crossing the canal had enraged military headquarters, who ordered that it must be crossed Sunday night at any cost, and probably five thousand gave up their lives in effecting the order.

When Sunday morning broke, despite their awful losses, a small body of Germans held a position in the woods near Dixmude. They were reinforced, and the Allies could not oust them. They still hold the woods, and their fate is problematical.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1914

EXTEND THE PAVING OPERATIONS.

THE AUTHORITIES have done well in proceeding with the building of pavements in this city, and when the present contracts are completed, Peterborough will have made a splendid beginning. But it is only the beginning. Other streets require attention, and as soon as possible, these should receive improvements.

The City Council would do well to consider the re-surfacing of many streets with tar macadam, particularly those in connection with the proposed driveway. The famous driveway in Ottawa and many of their best street roadways are built of tar macadam. When tar is so used it prevents ruts and holes, presents an even, smooth surface impervious to moisture and unaffected by rains. There is no such thing as rain washing off the top dressing and leaving a surface of nobs and hollows. Moreover, these roads possess splendid wearing qualities, and, in the long run, are cheaper than ordinary macadam. At the same time they give greater satisfaction and are cleaner in that they are easily washed off and create less dust. In most cities possessing tar macadam roadways, sprinkling with oil is adopted, instead of using water, and this has been found quite satisfactory, one treatment being, in many cases, sufficient for a year. There is much data on this subject, and now that Peterborough has done a good deal of construction of permanent pavements, these should be linked up with outside portions of the city by means of tar macadam or other improved roadways.

"WHEN THE FROST IS ON THE PUMPKIN."

ON Sunday we took a tramp out the first line of Smith. Like other rural sections around Peterborough, it was singularly beautiful. Great, high shocks of corn were standing in the fields, rich green patches of fall grain contrasted well with the dark brown of freshly-turned furrows. In the orchards were to be seen ladders, baskets and bags for the gathering of the harvest of the trees. Throughout this section there are numerous pine and cedar trees, and the tops of some hills give a view of country many miles in extent. There is a good road out that way, the farms look prosperous, the houses comfortable. Most things required to make a farm attractive appear to be present. To be sure, we saw a few stones, but where will you go, and not find some difficulty? Besides, the stones did not predominate, and altogether it appears an excellent section of country. Nevertheless, it could stand improvement. Prosperous and beautiful as it is, the people who live there should not consider it a finished settlement. There is always something that can be done in the way of improvement, and this can be understood by travelling or visiting and seeing what other parts of this Province are doing. The trouble with a good many farmers is that they are tied too closely to their farms. They need to get away once in a while to air their intellect, see how others do, and return in most cases appreciating their home better.

A STRANGE THING.

IN ALL THE COUNTRIES involved in the war, either directly or indirectly, efforts are being made to make and manufacture what formerly was imported. Thus, the great principle of free trade, which was considered sound because it recommended to buy in the cheapest and sell in the dearest market, goes totally by the board. This old war-cry is found out to be not only futile, but foolish. Men without work are not in a position to buy, and men cannot be supplied with work if that work is given elsewhere. It is strange how all these old fads hang on until experience proves that there is no sense in them. It has taken the rough remedy of war to knock the last gasp out of this foolish free trade talk.

THE NEXT ELECTION.

ALTHOUGH the next election is understood to be postponed till after the next session, which is to be an unusually early one, the trial of strength between the People and the Senate cannot be longer delayed. It would, of course, be very gratifying to hysterical Liberal journals if the Government would quietly submit the will of the people and the policies of the Conservative party to the insensible machinations of political jobbers, who would hold up the Government by means of the Senate and compel it to go to the country without a record and looking like old Aunt Sally at a country fair. If it would be objectionable to call an election during war-time, it is ten thousand times more objectionable for a defeated party to presume to run the country in spite of King and Constitution.

THE ECONOMIC CIRCLE.

THE BUSINESS of buying goods made in Canada is not a problem of "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours." It's a programme of "You keep factories open, and I'll keep my wages circulating in Canada for the benefit of both of us." It all goes in an economic circle. The wages of Canada are spent in Canada; three hundred millions a year. Deplete that wage total spent in Canadian stores for the upkeep of Canadian homes, and you strike an axe at the root of business. Your dollar spent for goods made in Canada keeps the factory open, pays the interest paid on investments, pays the factory wages, keeps the banks doing business and the stores of Canada from having "To Let" posted on the windows. Do you want to keep the melancholia of 1893 from recurring in 1914? Then you will join the grand co-operative circle of production and distribution that keeps prosperity in Canada.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE LONDON TIMES has the following extract from a recent letter from an officer: "I hear a delightful story of a German prisoner, very dejected amidst his guard: 'Damn the Kaiser! I wish I was back in Sheffield!'—spoken in good English."

WE HEAR of big contracts for shirts, shells, boots, and other articles being handed out by the Government, but there is no word of anything coming the printers' way, not even an extra "adv."

THAT DESPATCH in the Globe about 14,000 Canadian troops guarding the Suez Canal looks about as near the truth as the transporting of Russians through Britain. Its contradiction may be expected in a day or so.

OWING TO THE FACT that German foreign trade has ben practically cut off, we presume that little German boys and girls will get extra toys this Christmas.

WE HAVE just had our first snowstorm. Indian summer will be due very shortly. Whether it will come or declare a moratorium instead is another question.

WE UNDERSTAND, when Belgian mothers wish to quiet an unruly child, they will in future tell them the Kaiser will get them if they don't watch out.

DID YOU notice that the Toronto Star has adopted wide columns for its editorial page similar to The Review?

GRADUALLY, the Globe is trying to work around to Borden's naval policy, but the process is slow and labourious.

ACCORDING to our custom, we may say to those having the wherewithal to do so—Do your shopping early.

The Dreamer.

(By John Boyle O'Reilly.)

I am tired of the planning and toiling,
  In the crowding hives of men;
Heart-weary of building and spoiling,
  And spoiling and building again.
And I long for the dear old river
  Where I dreamed my youth away—
For a dreamer lives forever,
  And a toiler dies in a day.

I am sick of the showing seeming
  Of a life that is half a lie,
Of the faces lined and scheming,
  In the throng that hurries by.
No, no; from the streets' rude bustle,
  From the trophies from mart and stage,
I would fly to the wood's low rustle,
  And the meadows' kindly page.

Let us dream as of yore by the river,
  And be loved for the dream alway—
For a dreamer lives forever,
  While a thinker dies in a day.

Right Sort of Evolution.

(Stratford Beacon.)

West Elgin rightly plumes itself upon contributing to the national service two Ministers of the Crown—Hon. T. W. Crothers, Dominion Minister of Labour, and Hon. Finlay G. Macdiarmid, the new Ontario Minister of Public Works, who has just had acceptance of that office ratified by his constituents by re-election by acclamation. Both are men of ability and integrity, who reflect credit on their constituency, and have great capabilities for distinguished public service. Elgin County, under Conservative auspices is looking up. At the same time it is living down the bad reputation which it gained through unwelcome operations there some years ago of the Liberal "machine." The opprobrious memory of those days has given place to a distinguished memory. That's the right sort of evolution.

Sir Robert Borden's Leadership.

(Victoria, B. C., Colonist.)

We think that all Canadians, irrespective of party connections, will join with us in expressing very hearty satisfaction with the manner in which Sir Robert Borden has acquitted himself during the grave and unexpected crisis, which, as Prime Minister of the Dominion, he was called upon to face.

Canada has not only lost nothing, but has gained much from his patriotic conception of her duty and from the manner in which, under his guidance, she has been able to discharge it. His absolute singleness of purpose is worthy of the highest praise. The fact that his colleagues have stood loyally by him, while honorable to them, in no way detracts from the merit of his splendid work for our own country and for the Empire

How Would You Like It?

(Montreal Star.)

Canada is a land in the temperate zone, rich agriculturally and with limitless natural resources. It is precisely such a territory as the Germans would dearly love to get into their possession. They could send their surplus population here by the millions and create in our fat provinces and on our broad prairies a new Germany.

This would imply German rule at Ottawa — German domination in our cities — German garrisons throughout our country — German officers swaggering about our streets — German insolence to our civilians, our women and even our children. We should have Zabern incidents by the score — Montreal would become another Strassburg.

SHOOT THE BRUTE

By Walt Mason

Oh, bat the rat and slice the mice, and make this country clean and nice! From every house where people dwell let's drive the rodents forth, pell-mell; in every store and every shop, let's chase the pests and never stop, until the waving banner waves above ten billion rodents' graves. The rats consume the farmer's oats and gnaw the whiskers off his goats, and rob him yearly of a sum, which, figured up, would strike him dumb. The rats destroy the grocer's cheese, his early prunes and seedless peas, and do such damage in his store the sheriff comes to close his door. They spoil the housewife's cherished flour, and make her sunny temper sour, and so she jaws around, of course, until her husband gets divorce. The rat's a nuisance, without end, and there is no one to defend the noxious critter, foul and vile, the world's most hated animile. Let us with pitfall and with gin beset the path he wanders in. Let us go forth with bombs and guns, explore his alleys and his runs, and slay him as St. George of old laid out the dragon, fierce and bold. This world will be a better place when every tribe and every race of filthy things which crawl or fly, curl up their legs or wings and die. So on their heads we've set a price; go, bat the rats and slice the mice!

Theoretical Activity.

"Lady," said Plodding Pete, "have you any wood you want chopped?"

"Yes, indeed!"

"How much?"

"There's about half a cord that you can start on."

"Thanky, ma'am. Could you lend me a lead pencil and a piece of paper?"

"Don't you want an ax?"

"No. I'm representin' the Association of Industrious Inspectors. The secretary wants me to turn in a report on how much woodchoppin' there is to be done in this township. It'll make a right interestin' paper to read at our next meetin', an' mebbe we can think up some way o' gettin' it chopped."—Washington Star.

Gone, but Not Forgotten.

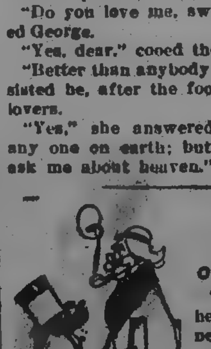
William had not been in the other world long when George wooed and won the promise of his widow.

"Do you love me, sweetheart?" asked George.

"Yes, dear," cooed the widow.

"Better than anybody on earth?" persisted he, after the foolish manner of lovers.

"Yes," she answered, "better than any one on earth; but, George, don't ask me about heaven."—Judge.



Ought to Know.

"Have you heard about my new novel?"

"No. How is it selling?"

"I haven't written it yet."

"Well, haven't you any imagination?"

Encouraging.

"Doctor, tell me the worst. I am strong enough to bear it."

"Sure you want to know the worst?"

"Yes, indeed."

"Well, your bill now amounts to an even $100."

Made It a Pleasure.

"I thought you were engaged to Mabel?"

"She has learned to love another."

"Was it hard for her to learn?"

"No. The scamp gave her free tuition."

FLOWERS AS A FOOD

The Mahua Tree of India Produces Blossoms of Extreme Sweetness.

The mahua, malwa, mowha, mowa or mowra tree of India is a large deciduous tree throughout the forests of Dekkan, Karnatik, west coast, and central India, and Gujrat, stretching north as far as Oudh and Kumaun and eastward across to Orissa. Though found in a purely wild state in many parts of India, the value of the flowers and fruit has caused it to be brought under more or less cultivation. The economic value of the tree lies in its edible flowers and oil yielding seeds, although the gum or gutta that flows from incisions or abrasions on the stems shows an average of 48.9 per cent. gutta, 38.8 per cent. resin and 12.3 per cent. ash. The bark also is used as a dye, while all the properties of the tree are used to some extent medicinally.

The mahua puts forth its leaves from February to April. Cream colored flowers appear in great clusters of thirty to fifty near the ends of the branches from March to April. About the end of March the flowers begin to arrive at maturity, and every morning about sunrise the succulent corolla tubes fall in great showers to the ground, which has been cleared of grass and underbrush and prepared for the harvest. This continues to the end of April, but usually the fall from a single tree is complete in seven to ten days. The flowers are then spread out and left to dry in the sun. In a few days they shrink in size, change in color to a reddish brown, and their peculiar sweet odor becomes more apparent.

These flowers are eaten extensively while fresh, but, generally speaking, they are dried thoroughly and cooked with rice and other grains. Sometimes they are completely dried and reduced to a powder and in this condition are cooked in round cakes and mixed with a variety of foodstuffs. Mahua is extremely sweet, and the ability to eat and digest it must be acquired. Few Europeans are able to eat more than one flower on a single occasion without having disagreeable after effects. Sugar and molasses of a good quality are also made of mahua. It is estimated that in the central provinces alone 1,400,000 of the native people use mahua as a regular article of food.—Consular Report.

Are You a Freeman?

To be a freeman of an English town in the old days carried with it all sorts of privileges, but now the only place where the freedom flourishes is in the City of London.

There a man may not vote for the Lord Mayor, or the members of Parliament, unless he is at the same time a freeman of the City and a liveryman of his company. Any man of good character can become a freeman of London on payment of a small fee, but admission to a livery is difficult and costly. Election to what is called the Court of Assistants, with the certain prospect of becoming Worshipful Master of the company in due course, is an honor as exclusive as the peerage, and a seat in some of the big courts is estimated to be worth as much as $50,000.

The Goldsmiths still have the right of prosecution, the Fishmongers to condemn fish, the Spectacle-makers to hold examinations, but many of the other guilds are simply trading companies by name. The Royal College of Surgeons is directly descended from the old Barber-Surgeons.

Caught It Too.

Lord Kitchener is a rather grim person and hardly a subject for a joke, but on one occasion Gen. Botha scored on him rather neatly. While terms of peace in South Africa were being discussed there were several interviews between the two leaders before a working basis for a treaty was agreed upon. There was still a good deal of skirmishing going on, and at the end of one interview Gen. Botha got up with the remark, "Well, I'm afraid I must be off."

"There's no hurry," replied Lord Kitchener pleasantly; "you haven't got to catch a train, you know!"

Gen. Botha laughed.

"Perhaps not," he answered, "but I must go now."

Bidding Lord Kitchener good-bye, he hurried off. Next morning came the news of a successful Boer raid on a British armored train on the Delagoa line.

"Ah!" Lord Kitchener commented when the news was brought to him. "So Gen. Botha did catch his train."

Don't try to convince a mule that he is stubborn. He knows it.

A Mistaken Identity

By EDITH V. ROSS

One summer evening while strolling in the twilight Albert Hamilton was walking along beside a wall over which he could look into attractive grounds. Suddenly he heard a voice call:

"Bob!"

Turning, he saw a girl dressed in a dainty white costume coming down a slope. She was looking intently at him, so he stopped and waited for her.

"When I saw you coming," she said, evidently much agitated, "I supposed you had made up your mind not to believe that malicious story and were intending to tell me so. When I saw you pass my heart sank. Do come in and listen to what I have to say."

Mr. Hamilton was young; the girl was very pretty. She had evidently mistaken him for some one else, probably her lover. Surely the likeness must be something remarkable. He was about to set her right when it occurred to him that he could do so a few moments later just as well. He stood looking at her without speaking.

"Do come, Bob," she pleaded. "I can explain the matter to your satisfaction if you will only listen to me."

Here is a girl, thought Hamilton, who has been maligned to her lover. He has got up on his ear and gone off in a huff. Quite likely I may be of service to her. He mounted the wall and entered the grounds. Still undecided as to just when he had better make himself known, he said nothing, acting a part that might mean that he was or was not the person the girl evidently mistook him for. She stood before him, her eyes moistened with tears, and told him a story of woman's malignity that astonished him.

He resisted a temptation to take her to his breast and assured her that her explanation was perfectly satisfactory. But while he was straining a point of honor in listening to a story intended for another he would be expected to bestow a caress intended for that other. He racked his brain for a subterfuge in order to avoid doing so, his intention being to take advantage of the girl's mistake to benefit her. Moreover, he believed he could serve her better in his present position than under his own identity. Turning to her, he looked her in the eyes with a reassuring, a kindly expression, and said:

"I believe every word you have said, but there are reasons which I cannot explain to you why any outward reconciliation should not take place between us at present."

"There can be no other reason than that you have put her in my place and don't feel that you can be untrue to her until you have heard her reply to the charges I have made against her."

What luck! How kind of her to give him a far better reason than he could have invented himself.

"Nevertheless," he said, "it is only the form that needs to be observed."

"When shall I see you again?"

"Not till I hold every ace, bower and trump in the pack, including the jolly joker."

"Oh, what a relief!" she exclaimed, giving his hand a fervent pressure and looking up at him through tearful eyes.

He remounted the wall and dropped to the sidewalk. Turning, he saw her throwing a kiss, which his conscience permitted him to return in kind. Then, passing out of sight, he said to himself:

"By Jove! If I fail to bring the fellow round I'll lose my identity in his and do all the lovemaking myself."

Mr. Hamilton made the acquaintance of friends mutual to himself and the parties concerned, keeping himself in the background. Those who saw him were astonished at his likeness to Bob Mesereau, the recent fiance of Miss Leila Bartholow. Through them Hamilton transmitted his explanation. Unfortunately it came too late. Mesereau, unknown to Miss Bartholow, had been dividing his attentions between her and the girl who had traduced her and had gone too far with the latter to withdraw. He proved to be a weak man, and it is questionable if he dared withdraw. Her influence was strong enough to hold him.

Hamilton now considered how he could become Mesereau's substitute. He had found a Miss Everett, a bosom friend of Miss Bartholow, through whom he had sent his explanation, and with this lady he consulted. She fully exonerated him for the part he had played, and after the failure of her efforts to move Mesereau assisted him in extricating himself with the lady whom he had sought to benefit. Miss Everett volunteered to explain his action to Miss Bartholow.

All that passed between the two friends was never made known to Hamilton, but after a time he received a note from Miss Bartholow thanking him for his kind intentions toward her. Later Miss Everett went with him to call on the jilted lady, and when the latter saw him she studied his face, then admitted that she saw a difference, but was not surprised that she had not seen it under excitement.

Hamilton's first visit was not his last. He had surmised that his likeness to Mesereau would be an advantage with the lady. It proved the reverse, for she had turned bitterly against her former lover. Hamilton had not only to win her anew, but under this handicap. However, he succeeded in the end, the handicap being offset by Miss Bartholow's approval of what she was pleased to consider his honorable conduct when she mistook him for another.

Unmoral and Immoral.

Are you unmoral or immoral? Do not answer too quickly, for if you are only unmoral we may be able to overlook it. Unmoral stands to immoral in much the same relation as unregenerate stands to degenerate. If you commit some act of which the arbiters of ethics disapprove the category that you go in all depends on whether the arbiters have previously brought the ethical constitution and bylaws to your notice. If they have already told you that a certain thou shalt not exists then you are immoral if you disobey it. If, however, you are still in an untaught state of sheer savagery then you are merely unmoral, and instead of being the victim of execration and contumely you are entitled to all the emoluments and perquisites of any other savage. Ignorance of the civil or criminal laws excuses no one, but ignorance of the moral law does count for a little these discriminate days.—Ellis O. Jones in Lippincott's.

BRITAIN'S RED ALLIES

Home of Mohawks has Historic Associations

A visible link between the Red man and the white, the aboriginal and the civilized in Canada, is the Mohawk Church outside the city of Brantford, Ontario.

This old and historic sacred edifice was reared as a reward of the Redman's loyalty to the British Crown.

History tells us that before the Revolutionary War between the American colonies and Great Britain, the Mohawk Indian lived along the valley of the Hudson in the State of New York, where a church had been built for them by the British crown. When the revolution broke out Captain Joseph Brant and his Indian followers were compelled to leave the state, as they remained true to the English King, and they sent their families to Lachine and Niagara.

At the close of the war the Government selected a tract of land upon the Bay of Quinte, to be set apart for the use of the Six Nations, in recognition of their loyalty.

Capt. Brant, however, preferred an allotment on the Grand river and after considerable delay, caused by disagreement among the Indians themselves, a meeting of the Mississaugas and chiefs of the Six Nations and Delawares was held at Niagara, and the sale of the land was made by the Mississaugas for the use of the Six Nations.

They were granted six miles on either side of the Grand river, from its mouth to its source, and the greater part of the Mohawks, Senecas, Cayugas and others settled.

The Government had promised to build a church to replace the one of the former Mississaugas settlement, and in 1784, Dr. Fuyster let the church contract to John H. Smith, a United Empire Loyalist, and in 1785 Smith and his sons began the building of the new church now known so familiarly as "The Old Mohawk Church."

The building is of frame, and the timber for it was cut and sawn near Paris and floated down the river to where the church still stands. The old clapboards, beaded in those days by hand, may be readily distinguished from those added in recent years.

Originally the pulpit was in the centre of the south wall facing north, and on the west side of that was a large pew reserved for the historic Brant family. Facing the Holy Table on each side were two pews reserved for the white members of the congregation. The remainder of the old-fashioned high box pews were occupied by Indians.

The church was the first built in Ontario, and the first Protestant church in either Upper or Lower Canada, yet it had no regular minister in charge during the first forty years of existence.

Early records of the church may be found in "Hall's Travels," where Lieut. Hall writes of his visit to the church in 1816. He describes the services conducted by "Aaron, a grey-headed Mohawk, who touched his cheeks with a few spots of vermillion in honor of Sunday. He wore a surplice and preached."

In the records of Dr. Stuart, a still earlier visit to the Mohawks in 1788 may be found. He describes the village as consisting of a great number of good houses, with an elegant church in the centre. "It has an elegant steeple and bell, and is well furnished within." He also mentions that the psalmody was accompanied by an organ, and there was a service of plate and crimson furniture for the pulpit.

In 1823 the Six Nations Mission was assumed charge of by the New England Company, which charge is still retained to the present day. The Rev. Wm. Hough was the first missionary and a parsonage and two schools were built.

In 1829 the church was considerably altered, the spire being rebuilt to form an entrance, porch, vestry and belfry.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Liquids and Diet.

The amount of liquid consumed in the twenty-four hours is one of the most important questions in connection with diet, especially for any one suffering from headaches, rheumatic pains, malaise, undue fatigue and a variety of like complaints, "minor ailments," as they are called. These ailments are anything but minor, we may observe, in regard to the amount of suffering they cause and the train of symptoms and diseases to which they lead.

Without a sufficient quantity of liquids the waste matter in the tissues is apt to become too condensed and on this account less able to reach the eliminatory organs, whose function it is to throw it off. The liquid may be taken in any form, hot or cold, or in tea, coffee, lemon water or any other beverage the person may prefer. It does not matter how it is taken, so long as it gets into the system.

A Bargain In Pearls.

Five fine pearls for 2 cents apiece was the bargain picked up by Miss Grace Lane shortly before the war broke out. Passing down a busy street in London, she saw a peddler with a trayful of pearls and a placard inscribed, "Real Pearls—Two Cents Each." Afterward she found that they were worth $30 apiece. A jeweler had hawked the pearls around to win a wager, firmly convinced that nobody would believe they were real, and so nobody would buy them.

Before taking "Fruit-a-tives", I took salts and other pills but the treatment was too harsh. I thought I might as well suffer from the illness as from these treatments. JAPAN OYSTER FARMS

Remarkable Artificial Culture of the Popular Bivalve.

Like others of our natural resources the extensive natural American oyster beds have been considered as practically inexhaustible, capable of producing oysters abundantly for all purposes. But the oyster is such a universal favorite that with improved shipping facilities and wider distribution the demand is already greater than the supply, so that while the beds are in the aggregate enormous, it is predicted that in time they will be doubled in area and oysters actually farmed as closely and intensively as in market garden crops.

Real oyster farms are no mere theory. Growing oysters artificially is an extremely ancient art, and in France, Holland and Japan there are regular oyster parks where oyster culture is carried on to a degree of refinement and under Government regulations and restrictions which would make the Canadian oyster man who rakes at will in the open range, shiver with apprehension. Nevertheless the oyster output from these intensively cultivated oyster farms is probably from four to five times what it is from the most productive natural beds.

Oyster growing for market in Japan is a matter of two and one-half to three years, but when a farm is well established the yield of mature oysters is heavy, continuous and regular. In starting a farm, branching bamboo stakes are driven into the oyster grounds at low tide, and to these the baby oyster or "spats" attach themselves in great numbers. These stakes are arranged in close rows with garden-like precision and in such a manner that the tides and currents can freely sweep the eddy between them continually refreshing and feeding the oysters with the tiny ocean life upon which they thrive. Growing to a considerable size upon these stakes the oyster parks soon assume the appearance of a bristling phalanx of shell-covered spikes set at every conceivable angle.

In some parts of the inland sea of Japan where the farms are thickest, the tide falls as much as 10 or 12 feet, leaving great acreages exposed of rows and parkings of certainly the most fantastic appearing "vegetation" imaginable. Every limb and twig of the bamboo "shibi" is populated with oysters, and with other oysters growing on oysters, large and small, millions and billions of them to every acre, while in the immediate background rises the rugged mountainous relief of Japan—truly a strange and picturesque scene. The young oyster will attach itself to its bamboo host only in comparatively shallow water and to grow to a marketable size it must be transplanted; so that in about 18 months the oysters are knocked off the shibi with knives in great numbers and transported to the "living grounds," in deeper water.

The final stage of cultivation to secure "selects" is to transfer the oysters to the "maturing grounds" where the water ranges from a few feet at low tide to 18 to 24 feet at high tide, although oysters are successfully cultivated in water as deep as 50 feet. Many of the oyster farms form a succession of beds from the shore to a long distance out from the land, all densely populated with oysters ranging from the "spat" to the large, mature oyster ready for market.

The Japanese oyster grounds are all the property of the state and are leased or rented to the highest bidder, the tenants having the privilege of renewing the lease indefinitely at the original rental, a privilege, however, which is not transferable and cannot be used speculatively.

The Price Paid For a Wife

By EUNICE BLAKE

"Father," said Paul Alexandrovitch, "will you not buy Tatiana for me? We love each other. Tatiana is a serf, while I am free. I cannot marry her unless her master will sell her."

"I fear, my son," replied the father, "that the count will not sell Tatiana. I have never been on friendly terms with him, he being a rich landowner and I a small farmer. Besides, there was that trouble about the woodcutting. No, I do not believe he will grant any request of mine. But I will go to him and offer him a good price for the girl."

That was a time when a large proportion of the Russian people were serfs. Paul and Tatiana had played together as children when the little ones of other nations were at school, for education of the lower classes has never been permitted in Russia, and after they were old enough to work they continued the intimacy. And now that they had reached a marriageable age the fact of Tatiana's slavery loomed up a great barrier between them.

Alexander, Paul's father, counted up the money that he might spare to buy Tatiana and found by straining a point he could gather 1,000 rubles. He went to Count Korloff and very humbly told him of the affection between the boy and the girl and asking him if he would not make them happy by selling the latter so that they could be married. "I will give them a slice off my farm," he added, "and, as for the price, I will pay you 1,000 rubles."

"I cannot spare Tatiana," replied the count. "The countess needs her to dress her hair."

The refusal came so curtly that the farmer dared not pursue the matter. He went away and told his son the result of his mission. Paul was crushed by the news, for in Russia the autocratic system has prevailed for so many centuries that the weak—until the recent revolution—did not think of resisting the strong. Paul told Tatiana of the reason given for refusing to sell her, and she said that she had never dressed the countess' hair.

Paul had a great many friends, and Tatiana was also much beloved. All the world loves a lover, and their case excited a good deal of sympathy. A few of those who heard of the case clubbed together to add to the price that Alexander could raise to buy Tatiana, and one of them went to the count and asked him if he would not fix a price on the girl. He was a very avaricious man, and, thinking this might be an opportunity to get a good deal of money for what was not worth very much to him, he replied that if 5,000 rubles were offered he would accept them.

An effort was made to raise 4,000 rubles, which was the amount required in addition to what Alexander could give. But there is no great wealth in Russia except among those connected with the government, and the subscriptions came in such small sums that the amount finally subscribed was far below what was required.

The matter looked hopeless when Paul went one day to do some work for one Mouriensieff, a well to do man of the middle class. In talking with Paul he learned about his love affair and how he and Tatiana were made miserable by Count Korloff's meanness. Mouriensieff asked Paul how much was lacking altogether of the fund to buy Tatiana, and Paul said that it was 1,600 rubles ($800). Then Mouriensieff told Paul that he would lend him the money at the legal interest and he could pay off the loan in eight years, or 200 rubles a year.

Paul accepted the proposition gratefully and sent word to the count that he was ready to buy Tatiana, paying 5,000 rubles for her. Count Korloff was astonished that so much money could have been raised for such a purpose, and it occurred to him that, after so much had been got together, a little more might be added. He replied that he had found a new use for Tatiana that made her much more valuable, but, since he did not wish to stand between her and Paul Alexandrovitch, he would complete the bargain for 5,500 rubles.

Paul's disappointment was all he could bear. He went to Mouriensieff with tears in his eyes to tell him of the failure.

"It would be of no avail," said the latter, "to continue to follow such a man up the scale of his prices. Let the matter rest for awhile."

Paul took this to mean that he would never possess the girl he loved and went away sorrowful.

A few weeks after this when Paul was working in a field a messenger from Count Korloff came to him and said that the count had decided to accept 5,000 rubles for Tatiana. Paul replied that he did not know if the money would now be forthcoming, but he would make inquiries. He did so and succeeded in collecting the necessary amount. But just as he was about to start with it to the count a man rode up to the house where he was and scattered printed copies of a ukase of the czar. Paul read one of them and threw his cap in the air with a shout:

"The Little Father has freed the serfs!"

And so it was that Count Korloff received nothing for Tatiana. She was free to marry Paul, and no wedding among those people was celebrated with greater rejoicings than hers.

SOME FRUGAL CONGRESSMEN

The average senator or representative who accumulates what to him means a comfortable fortune while serving a couple of terms does it by living on his "mileage and mucilage."

There are at least a score of representatives who are living on $1,800 a year and supporting families. There are one or two senators whose expenditures for household expenses do not run over $2,500 a year. The perquisites attached to their offices furnish the sum necessary for their living expenses, and their salaries of $7,500 a year are "salted" away.

The mileage allowance of members of congress varies according to the distance they have to travel to get to Washington, but the average is between $400 and $500 a session. It usually costs about a quarter of this sum to make the round trip.

Every representative and senator gets a stationery allowance of $125 a session, but as any member can get all the stationery he needs from his committee without cost a frugal member can draw this amount in cash.

Representatives are allowed one clerk at $1,500 a year and senators have two, ranging from $1,500 to $2,500 a year. The frugal representative appoints his wife or some other member of the family as his clerk and gets along by writing the necessary letters himself.

Both senators and representatives get "free shaves" and "free baths," and the stationery room furnishes most of the household necessities, except food and clothing, at cost price.

The senator or representative who attempts to live on his "perquisites" may not have his residence in the fashionable part of Washington, where rents are high and where it is expensive even to board, but within a few blocks of the capitol the economic member may obtain rooms for light housekeeping for $15 to $30 a month.—Chicago Tribune.

Wearing Flowers.

The kind of flowers that are fitting for a woman to wear depends upon her age and personal appearance. Blossoms that are becoming to a young girl look out of place on the elderly woman, and the woman who is tall can wear certain varieties which the one who is short cannot.

Banksia roses are for the quite young girl. Violets are charming for either youth or age. Daisies belong only to youth. Pansies seem fitted for riper age, though the pansy eyed girl looks well with them. Chrysanthemums look well on youth or maturity, but do not seem to belong to the old. Roses belong to all ages, but need to be chosen with care as to their color and size. Lilacs can only be worn by a tall figure. Neither are poppies for the petite nor things that grow in branch form. Snowdrops that would look foolish on a middle aged woman look sweet on a young girl. Lilies of the valley are for youth or middle age. Mignonette does not belong to youth, nor do sweet peas and daffodils belong to age, but any one can wear the fragrant carnation.—Exchange.

IOWA WOMAN TELLS OTHERS

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Carried Her Safely Through Change of Life.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.—"At the Change of Life the doctor said I would have to give up my work and take my bed for some time as there was no help for me but to lie still. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and kept up my work and now I am over the Change and that is all I took. It was better for me than all the doctor's medicines I tried. Many people have no faith in patent medicines but I know this is good."—Mrs. E. J. RICKETS, 354 8th Avenue, West, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

BATTLES SEEN FROM THE CLOUDS

Is Awfully Interesting Writes Member of Flying Corps

The following letter was written by a member of the Royal Flying Corps, who is at the battle front:

My Dear Mother,—I have settled down in front of a table, with the fixed intention of writing a whole letter to you straight off the reel if I can, because I don't often have much time to myself. . . .

I am having a grand time, the time of my life, and I wouldn't have missed it for anything. Life out here is so totally different from anything you could possibly imagine that it is almost impossible to describe it. As I write I hear the sounds of a great battle — guns firing, shells bursting; men are being killed and wounded, while here am I comfortably writing a letter after a comfortable breakfast and expecting an equally comfortable lunch. But that is because it doesn't happen to be my turn for reconnaissance, worse luck.

It is most amusing to compare one day with another, or even one hour with the hour after it. For instance, take a typical day. At six o'clock you are just finishing breakfast. In less than an hour you are up in the air, twenty odd miles away, with a battle going on under your very nose — hundreds of thousands of men in various positions pegging away at each other from their various trenches (a good many of them pegging away at you). It looks so funny from the air, because you can see it all, and both sides, whereas down below they can't see what they're firing at in a good many cases; it is merely scientific slaughter. A battery will perhaps know that some of the enemy are entrenched in a certain area. It will train its guns on to that area without perhaps even seeing if their guns have effect. For instance, the other day I saw guns dropping shell after shell into a certain area and there wasn't a man within miles of it!

A Grand Sight From Above.

The day before yesterday I saw some German shells bursting bang in the middle of some of our trenches —one after another. The slaughter must have been terrific. It is a grand sight from above We have our share as well, because they have anti-aircraft guns popping at us all over the place, not to mention rifle fire and shrapnel. It is awfully interesting to notice the old positions which have had to be abandoned owing to shell fire. You can see great holes where the shells have burst all round them. I wish I could describe some of the things I have seen.

Yesterday an old peasant brought me some powder which he said he had taken out of a bomb. I made him show me the bomb, and hanged if it wasn't one of our bombs which hadn't gone off! He had actually hacked it open with a hammer and a screwdriver. It's a lucky thing for him that he didn't start hammering the striker, because if he had he would have been in kingdom come by now. One of those bombs killed fifteen men a few days ago! . . . Good-bye and best love,

Your affectionate son,

In the harbors and the Kiel canal the German dreadnoughts are surrounded by big booms, chains and small fishing boats, against torpedo attack. There is no truth, however, in the rumor that they wear petticoats and get the doctor to feel their pulses every night before bedtime.

The Kaiser can punch his way into Antwerp, but the world will miss his guess if the Krupp guns will get him into Heaven.

TROOPS FROM ORIENT REPULSE GERMANS

Regiment at La Bassee Held in Reserve Was Given Task of Recovering Lost Trenches.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—A despatch to The Daily Telegraph dated "Northern France," relates the first instance of the British Indian troops coming into action.

"It was at La Bassee last week," says the despatch, "when by a great effort the Germans carried the British trenches, and the position looked dangerous. An avalanche of the enemy poured through, evidently supposing that the way was open to the coast. They had a rude awakening.

"The supports of the British line here were the Indian troops, who had been thirsting to prove their quality. It was a bayonet affair and the German advance was beaten and broken.

"The Indians ran through them, using the steel in their workmanlike fashion and thrusting the foe back to receive the right and left fire of the British infantry who awaited their coming.

"Not only did the Indians regain the lost trenches, but they pursued the enemy down the hill until their commanders recalled them."

At Ypres an unsuccessful German attack resulted in casualties of 3,000. At La Bassee they are apparently doing somewhat better. Their masses of infantry with heavy artillery seem at present to be slowly advancing in this section. Their progress is by no means alarming and can be firmly held should it become dangerous.

The heavy punishment inflicted on the German troops in the last few days has raised the hopes of everyone to a high pitch. An officer who flew over the enemy's lines yesterday morning says that the Germans now advance to the attack shouting like dervishes. The British are unperturbed by this noisy demonstration and wait until they come within 300 yards' range, and they give them 15 rounds and it is all over. But the German artillery fire is still very good.

GERMANS ARE PRESSED BACK SEVENTY-FIVE MILES FROM WARSAW

Precipitate Flight of Kaiser's Armies From Capital of Russian Poland Continues and Many Guns and Men Have Been Captured by the Victorious Russians.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—In the eastern scene of operations the Russians continue a successful offensive against the Austro-Germanic armies in Poland and Galicia. The flight of the Germans from before Warsaw and Ivangorod continues, and latest despatches indicate that the enemy has now fallen back seventy-five miles from Warsaw, driven with the bayonet from every place where he endeavors to check the Russian advance.

An official despatch from Petrograd, issued yesterday afternoon, says:

"The precipitate flight of the Germans continues. They are seventy-five miles west-southwest of Warsaw. They made an unsuccessful attempt to arrest the offensive Russian movement by clinging to positions at Sokhatchoff, from which, however, they were dislodged with heavy losses."

Last night the following Russian official despatch was received:

"The combats upon the routes leading to Piotrkow and Radom have assumed the character of a great battle, of which the front extends over thirty miles, from Rawa to Nowemiasto and Bialobrzegi as far as the mouth of the River Iljanka.

"The evening of Oct. 24 north of Rawa we attacked the Germans at the point of the bayonet, inflicting upon them considerable losses. In the village of Morchildo alone we buried over seven hundred Germans.

"In a bayonet combat near the village of Mazamerjeff we captured two batteries of machine guns.

"Our troops command the forest of Nemglovo, southeast of Rawa, where we took over 400 prisoners. In the forest between Radom and Kozenits tenacious combats continue.

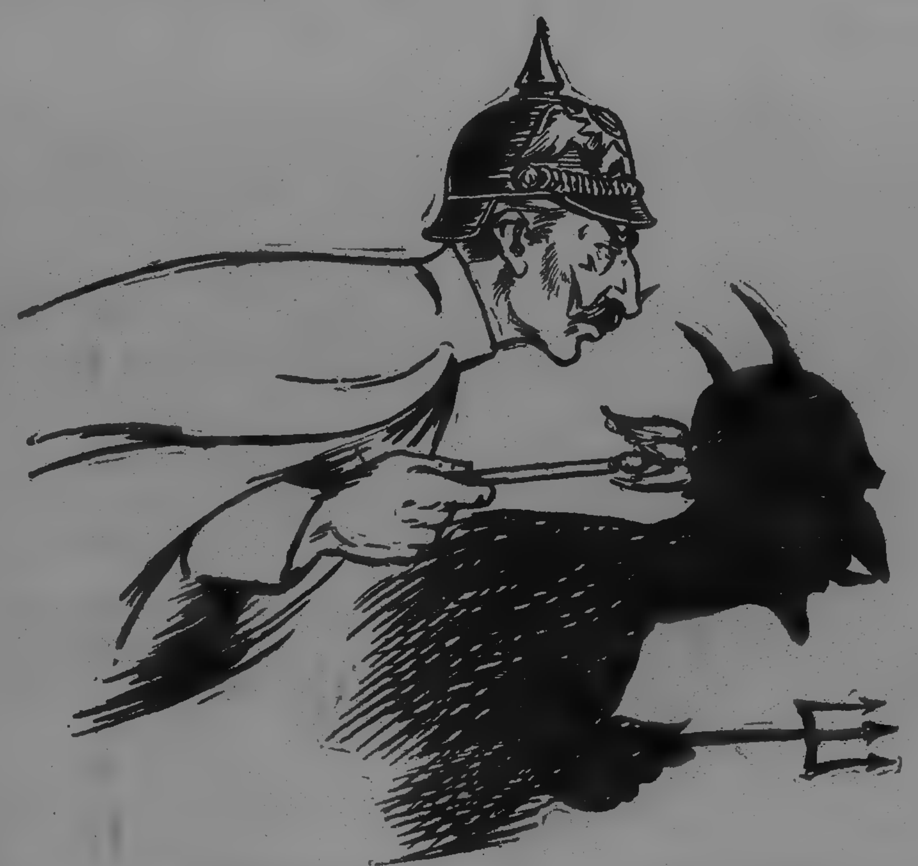
"We have progressed along the routes from Nova to Alexandria, where we captured numerous prisoners and cannon."

"The stubborn resistance of the Austrians in Galicia is weakening, and our troops are making vigorous progress in the region south of Sambor and Starnmiasto, where we took 11 cannons and many caissons.

"The entire valley of the River Spryne is covered with bodies of the enemy, estimated to aggregate at least 5,000.

"All attempts by the Germans to resume a partial offensive on the eastern Prussian front have been repelled."

An Austrian report from Vienna claims that northeast of Przemysl and on the lower San the Austrians have had several successes.



COMING EVENTS CAST THEIR SHADOW BEFORE THEM.

DAILY MAIL IS SUED FOR LIBEL

LONDON, Oct. 27. — Mark Hambourg, a famous Russian pianist, whom The London Daily Mail called a German, has sued the proprietor of that newspaper for libel. The case will be heard next Wednesday.

During a discussion before Justice Darling yesterday the defendant's counsel urged delay on the ground that "there is no reason why the plaintiff should be awarded damages on a rising market."

The judge refused to adopt the view that the Germans would be more popular in London at any time than they will be next Wednesday, and fixed the hearing for that date.

CANADA IS SAFE

Germany Has no Intention of Attacking Dominion Says Ambassador

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27. — Although Germany contends that Canada, by sending troops against Germany, has violated the spirit of the Monroe doctrine, Germany has no intention of attacking Canada nor attempting to colonize the Dominion, according to this statement issued here yesterday by the German embassy:

"The German point of view is that by joining in a European war Canada has put herself outside of the pale of the Monroe doctrine. But Germany has not the intention of attacking Canada, nor colonizing Canada."

The statement was in amplification of the view expressed by Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, that by taking part in the war, the Canadians had justified an aggressive campaign against themselves.

HAS PARTIAL PARALYSIS

Recovery of the Kaiser's Youngest Son is Doubtful

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 27. — It is learned in Berlin that the German medical authorities attending Prince Oscar, son of Emperor William, regard his recovery as doubtful.

The young prince is suffering from partial paralysis of the pneumogastric nerve, and his brain has become affected. His condition is believed to have been caused by the shock of having all his officers killed by Turcos in the fighting near the Meuse.

Professor Predicts Long War.

OTTAWA, Oct. 27. — Prof. Masae Kambe of the Imperial University of Kyoto, Japan, who is here on his way back to Japan after a trip around the world, was in Paris when the war broke out. Having visited Holland, Sweden and Denmark afterwards, and seen how Germany was getting munitions of war and other supplies from them, he says that he is convinced the war will be a prolonged one.

He stated also that Russia for some time had been buying large numbers of rifles, field artillery and siege guns from Japan.

Brindilla Allowed To Sail.

LONDON, Oct. 27. — The British Government, satisfied after an examination of the innocence of the destination of her cargo, has ordered the release of the American oil tank steamer Brindilla, which will be permitted to proceed from Halifax to Alexandria. The question of the transfer of the vessel from the German flag to the flag of the United States will not be raised by the Government.

The Brindilla, which was carrying a cargo of illuminating oil, was seized by the British cruiser Carona on Oct. 19.

PREPARING TO RETREAT?

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The correspondent of The Times at Rotterdam sends the following:

"It is clear that the Germans are putting Antwerp in a state of defence. In most of the important forts the Belgian guns have been replaced with German fortress artillery of the largest type.

"The bridge between Antwerp and Pays de Waes, which the retreating Belgians damaged, has been repaired. Evidently the Germans are preparing a line of retreat from the Ostend-Dixmude line."

Mine Sweeper Blown Up.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—A Times' despatch from Libau states that the Russian steamship Worms, engaged in sweeping mines from the Baltic, struck a mine fifteen miles from Libau and was sunk. Only one of her crew was drowned.

UP AGAINST SOLID WALL

Passage of Yser River Availed Germans Little

PARIS, Oct. 27. — The smashing tactics of the Germans along the North Sea coastline continued incessantly, when the big guns were turned on Nieuport, and the allies had to withstand constant attacks of masses of troops. Very little progress, however, was made by the Germans yesterday, who were faced with the strongest resistance.

Sunday's crossing of the Yser apparently had only a moral effect as the Germans were confronted by solid lines of allied troops, and were prevented from advancing without overwhelming efforts further toward the Channel ports. The character of the country prohibits a rapid movement as the land is cut up by canals, and two strong series of defensive works separates them from Dunkirk.

The German infantry executed a number of night attacks, not only on the extreme wing but also in the vicinity of Lille, where they encountered a most obstinate resistance. The allies are displaying wonderful energy in this region. The commanders are sparing their men many hardships and are able to give constant reliefs to the troops on the firing line.

When they come from the frontier for a rest the troops are accommodated in the numerous villages scattered in the rear, where they seem to throw off all feeling engendered by the critical situation and play cards, dominoes and other games in the cafes until the bugles call them together for a further spell of fighting. Then they go forward cheerily to the inferno, where they must face the shrapnel and machine guns, bidding "so long" to their comrades, whose places they are taking.

PRIVY COUNCIL GIVES RULING

TORONTO, Oct. 27.—What is regarded in Great Britain as well as in Canada, as one of the most important constitutional decisions handed down by the Privy Council since Confederation was received in Toronto yesterday. It involved the validity of provincial company licensing and incorporation laws. The two appeal cases, Deere v. Wharton, and Deere v. Duck, on which yesterday's decision was made, were fought out in July before the Privy Council. They had to do with an application for a license in British Columbia by the John Deere Plow Co., which has been operating in different parts of Canada under a Dominion charter. The license was refused by the Province of British Columbia, and the question arose whether or not the province could exclude a Dominion company from carrying on business within its boundaries. The Privy Council in its decision gave the company the right to operate in the province without having a provincial charter. The decision will have a marked effect on provincial revenue.

MEADOWS ARE PILED WITH DEAD

LONDON, Oct. 27.—"The position on the coast is stationary this morning," says a Daily Mail despatch from Flushing, Netherlands, under date of Sunday. "There is less firing and it is more to the southward.

"The German losses are frightful. Three meadows near Ostend are heaped with dead. The wounded are now installed in private houses in Bruges, where large wooden sheds are being rushed up to receive additional injured. Thirty-seven farm wagons, containing a convulsive mass of wounded, dying and dead, passed in one hour near Middlekerke."

Germans Claim Victory.

BERLIN, Oct. 27.—An official report yesterday says:

"In the eastern theatre of the war our offensive on Augustowo is progressing. The battle near Ivangorod is favorable, but till now there has been no decision."

British Cavalry Exploit.

PARIS, Oct. 27.—According to the newspaper Cri de Paris, a naked detachment of British cavalry routed a Uhlan patrol near Noyon. The Britishers were playing water polo in the Oise when the approach of the Uhlans were signalled. There was not enough time to dress, so, quitting the water, they leaped into their saddles as they were and, dripping wet, chased the Germans five miles across country.

Hindus Horrified at Murder.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 27. — Local Hindus here had a meeting with Dr. Ragunath Singh, protesting against the murder of Immigration Inspector Hopkinson. Resolutions were adopted by the 35 Hindus present expressing regret and horror at the tragedy

Maritz Defeated.

CAPE TOWN, Oct. 27.—It is officially announced that the rebel, Lt.-Col. Maritz, and his forces have been completely defeated at Kakamas, in the Gordonia district of Bechuanaland, by Union of South Africa troops. Lt.-Col. Maritz was wounded in the engagement and fled to German territory, according to the statement.

ADVANCE OF ENEMY IN FLANDERS PETERS OUT

DESERTION OF OSTEND LIKELY

Franco-British and Belgian Forces Are Holding Them Sternly in Check at Nieuport, Dixmude, Roulers and Ypres, and Germans Have Nothing to Show For Immense Loss.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The allies still hold their positions along the line between Dixmude and Nieuport, and are effectually resisting the German offensive north of Ypres.

The crossing of the Yser has apparently marked the end of the German advance there, although a battle is now going on in that region, and both sides have rushed reinforcements there.

Reports from Holland indicate that the Germans are preparing to evacuate Ostend, and are making extensive preparations in Antwerp, as though anticipating a siege there.

The allies have been successful in fierce fighting in the vicinity of Lille.

That the German advance along the Channel coast is well over the Yser river at a point between Dixmude and Nieuport, but has been unable to make any further progress, is the result of the great German drive in Flanders. Reports from other parts of the 300-mile front are entirely favorable to the allies, and it is said now that the French have succeeded in throwing large masses of troops into the Argonne forest, penetrating as far as the Village of Metzicourt, effectually splitting the armies of the German crown prince on the east of the Argonne and the forces of the Duke of Wuertemberg on the west.

In spite of the Homeric efforts of the Kaiser's armies, the drive southward from Flanders to Dunkirk and Calais seems destined to perish midway, after a terrible loss of life, and with nothing to show for the enterprise, not even a moral advantage. First the Belgians and latterly the Belgians supported by British and French have frustrated each new attempt to strike a decisive blow. The Flanders coast line from Ostend to the French border, for a distance of three miles inland, is free of the Germans, driven away from the ocean's fringe by the tremendous fire of the allied warships. But the invaders have planted artillery that commands evrey available approach for a flanking force from the naval contingent, and for the present a landing will not be attempted.

After ten days of the most stubborn fighting the Germans forced a passage of the Yser in the district lying from six to ten miles inland, and they are believed to hold the allied side of the stream for a stretch of about five miles. This, of course, was sufficient to permit bringing troops across the river in force. The final and successful assault of the Germans on the Belgian lines, when great masses of infantry and hundreds of heavy guns co-operated, is understood to have occurred early on Sunday morning.

With the Belgians falling back in good order and contesting every foot of the way, British reinforcements reached their lines by noon Sunday, when the defence immediately stiffened and halted. A few hours' later French infantry arrived in large numbers, and a re-offensive movement was started that has completely checked the German drive, and which has hemmed them in on two sides, with the River Yser behind and a solid defensive before them. A part of their forces are said to have been cut off by flying columns of French infantry, with a tremendous loss of life and many prisoners to the Germans. In fact, the number of killed and wounded in the great Flanders contest is far greater than either at the battle of the Aisne or the Marne.

Sunday's conflicts were characterized by many bayonet charges, in which the French and British more than sustained their reputation, never failing to gain ground after their heart-breaking rushes in the face of a destroying fire from rifles and machine guns.

From Ypres to Roulers an action only less violent than that between Dixmude and Nieuport is under way. It is significant that all four of the towns named and all cardinal points, are held by the allies.

Lille is another vortex in the kaleidoscopic battle front. Here the Germans have fought with desperate resolution to hold the French advance but without reward. British and French troops hold many points of vantage around the city and every attempt to upset their progress has so far failed.

Armentieres also remains securely in the hands of the Franco-British and the Kaiser's commanders are fuming fruitlessly in an attempt to dislodge them. The town commands communication lines vital to the Germans and its occupation by the allies has stopped troop movements of vast importance.

The Cause.

"There is one thing only which with reason could give that idiot a swelled head."

"And what might that be?"

"A good punching." — Baltimore American.

Government Loan To Railway.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 27. — Official announcement is made of a loan of $6,000,000 by the Dominion Government to the Pacific Great Eastern Railway now under construction from Vancouver to Fort George. The loan will tide the company over until the bonds can be sold in the old country. The railway is guaranteed by the Provincial Government, and the work is two-thirds completed.

Many Aliens Naturalised.

OTTAWA, Oct. 27. — When the High Court opened yesterday, the names of 143 aliens who are desirous of becoming British subjects were called, and there being no objections, they were declared eligible for naturalization. The list was longer than has ever been presented at an Ottawa court. A large proportion of the applicants were Germans.

RECITALS BY HESSELBERG TO PRECEDE MEETINGS

Solos From Chopin, Vientemps and Rubenstein on Program for Tonight

THE FASHION CRAZE

The Gordon meeting last evening, was held in the George Street Methodist church, and in spite of the inclement weather, the edifice was crowded to the doors.

The programme for the evening, began with a musical recital by Mr. Edouard Hesselberg. These selections by Mr. Hesselberg are highly appreciated by the music-loving people of Peterborough, and in compliance with numerous requests, Mr. Hesselberg, the master pianist, has consented to render nightly, short preliminary recitals, consisting of the best known works, by the most famous classic, romantic and modern composers of the pianaforte literature.

These recitals will commence at seven-thirty sharp, and last until seven-forty-five, at which time the regular program of the Gordon campaign, will invariably begin. All musicians, music students and music lovers are cordially invited, but are requested to be punctually on time.

The solos of tonight will include Chopin, Vientemps and Rubinstein.

Last evening, Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the colored singer, rendered three selections, one of his own compositions entitled "Where the Sweetest Flowers Grow," and also two other selections entitled "A Clean Heart," and "Where is my Wandering Boy Tonight." The congregation joined feelingly in the chorus of the last selection. Tonight, Mr. Greenlaw will sing "The Heavenly Song," by Hamilton Gray, "There is a Shout in the Camp," and a plantation melody entitled "Steal Away to Jesus."

Dr. Gordon answered the following questions last evening.

1. What is the difference between Christianity and Religion?

2. How can a woman have a happy home whose husband though a professed Christian, is wrapped up in himself?

3. Why is it that preachers have such a warm regard for the wealthy?

4. What do you think of people sitting in church for years, and never passing the time of day?

5. Is it right for a business man to keep his store open so late on Saturday night, that the delivery man cannot get through before Sunday morning?

6. Why did not God prevent this great calamity of war?

Dr. Gordon's subject last evening was "The fashion craze," or "The first steps downward in the life of shame."

First: You are taking a step downward when you sacrifice the dignity of you womanhood, for the unquestionable glance of the passing crowd. Speaking with reference to the abnormal fashions in vogue during the past seven or ten years, Dr. Gordon said, "The world has seldom seen, in the matter of dress, such a manifestation of feminine immodesty, as we have witnessed during the past ten years. Our daughters have been dressed like the representatives of the underworld. Our best girls in Canada and the United States, many of them, dressed in the garments worn by the representatives of the underworld in the city of Paris. This should not be. The common sense of parents ought to be so strong as to prevent a repetition of that which we have seen and witnessed."

Second: You are taking a step downward, when you dream of a life of ease. A lady of wealth and position, converted in one of Dwight L. Moodie's meetings, exclaimed, "I have only been a magnificent doll." The age in which we live is material. We are magnifying and worshipping the outer shell. We have forgotten the main thing, "Love, Truth, Light and Righteousness."

Third: You are taking a step downward when you associate with those who are morally inferior. John Wesley said in his early days, "I will associate with no one who will not help me on my way to Heaven." That spirit should dominate us today. If religion is anything it is everything. Either there is a God or there is not a God. The Bible is true or it is not true, and if we are convinced of a future life, we should live in the light of it.

Fourth: You are taking a step downward when you exercise in yourself that which you condemn in others, and that, by the way, is the easiest thing to do. It is a dangerous thing to play with your conscience and to fool yourself by an unwise use of words. We sometimes speak of innocent flirtation, but there is no innocency in flirtation. Why not be brave enough to look ourselves right in the face and to know the truth of things?

Fifth: You are taking a step downward when you grow careless about your good name. The young woman who says, "I don't care what people say of me," is on exceedingly dangerous ground. Theodore Tildon, in the days of his decline and degeneration, remarked: "I never knew I had a reputation until I had lost it."

Sixth: Women are the greatest gamblers in the world. They gamble with fate, destiny, reputation, character, and eternity.

Seventh: You take a step downward whenever you ignore the voice of your conscience. During a great revival in New York City, a business man in a lawsuit said to his lawyer: "Withdraw my case. I am wrong." Follow your conscience and believe that the man who ignores his conscience, or the woman either, will find in the end that conscience is a rebuking monitor, and the worst enemy of the soul.

Dr. Gordon will speak this evening on the subject of "Mistakes in the Life of a Married Man." Before the address this evening, Dr. Gordon will answer the following questions:

1. Is it right to go motoring on Sunday, if it does not interfere with church attendance?

2. What is your opinion of card-playing and dancing?

3. Is a woman justified, when it is not convenient to receive a social caller, to ask the servant to say: "I am not at home"?

4. Do you believe in baptism by mersion?

5. Should a man whose conduct is known to be grossly inconsistent, judging by church ideals, be selected to occupy five minutes introducing Dr. Gordon to the Christian Citizenship Campaign meeting?

6. Do you think that ratepayers should be expected to tolerate a teacher of either public school or collegiate, who is known as an ungodly man?

7. Apart from all flippancy in religious unbelief, is not honest doubt and an earnest seeker after the truth more worthy of the name of true godliness than the professed creeds, to many who make no sincere effort to live a Christ-like life?

How Submarine Sights the Enemy

The great fault of the early submarines was that they could not see once they were below the surface of the water. The invention of the periscope altered all that, and gave the modern submarine a marvellous eye by means of which it could see over the surface of the ocean, though the body of the submarine is completely below the waves.

The eye of the submarine is a straight, hollow tube starting from the steering chamber of the vessel, and projecting above the surface of the waves when the boat is submerged.

As the periscope is only a matter of six inches in diameter and only projects some eighteen inches above the waves it is a most difficult thing to see by an enemy. The total length is about fifteen feet.

The submarine's eye is really a combination of telescope and camera obscura. At the top is a powerful lens, and inside, at intervals all the way down, is a series of mirrors which carry the reflection of what is above the surface to the watcher in the submarine fifteen feet below.

INCREASE IN C.M.B.A. RATES

Meets With Disfavor at Local Branch

At the meeting of the Sacred Heart branch of the C.M.B.A., held last evening, several members expressed themselves as dissatisfied with the increase in rates on the members who joined the organization previous to 1907. Grand deputy M. Quinlan will be requested to attend the next meeting of the branch to be held on Monday evening, November 9th, and explain the cause of the increase.

At a recent meeting of the Kingston branch it was decided to issue a circular to all the branches of Canada asking for a donation to a fund which will be utilized in opposing in the courts the increase. Whatever action the Sacred Heart branch will take will be governed by the favor with which the Grand Deputy's report is met.

The report of the meeting of the Kingston branch as chronicled in the Kingston Standard is as follows:—

At the regular meeting of the local branch of the C.M.B.A. last night it was unanimously decided to issue a circular to be sent to all the branches in Canada explaining the attitude taken by the local branch in regard to the proposed increase in rates on old members.

The circular will ask for contributions to a fund, which will be used in fighting any action by the Grand Council to oppose the issue of an injunction. The members of the local branch are firmly determined to oppose the new rates, and the decision to engage expert counsel to secure an injunction restraining the Grand Council from putting into effect the increased assessments until the next convention of the association, which was reached at the special meeting held on Sunday last, was endorsed. The officers of the local branch and a special committee, which was appointed, have now full authority to take any action which may be deemed necessary.

The question of raising funds was discussed and seveal plans were suggested, the most popular one being to request each branch, in the circular to be issued, to make a special assessment of $1 on each member, to go towards the fund. There are over 25,000 members of the association in Canada and it is expected that by this means $25,000 will be raised. The matter, however, was left in the hands of the executive and the special committee. Legal counsel will be engaged immediately to take the injunction, and if one is granted, and if the Grand Council take the matter to a higher court, the local branch is prepared to go to the Supreme Court, if necessary, for a ruling.

The increase in rates, which the Grand Council purposes to put into effect next January, has raised a storm of protest throughout the whole country, and many very prominent Catholics in the country are with the local branch in its fight. At the meeting on Sunday last Mr. C. J. Foy, K.C., of Perth, a brother of Hon. J. J. Foy, Provincial Attorney-General, was to have spoken against the increase, but owing to illness he was compelled to cancel the engagement. A letter of regret for his unavoidable absence was read at the meeting. It is said that in this letter he expressed his hearty sympathy with the members in their fight."

PATRIOTIC MEETING AT GREYSTOCK

Active Organization is Underway and Good Results Are Expected

A very successful patriotic meeting was held at the Foresters' Hall at Greystock, in the township of Otonabee, last evening for the purpose of organizing a local Patriotic Association for the purpose of raising funds and doing work for the soldiers and others in need of assistance caused by the great war. A representative attendance of residents was present, including a large number of ladies, and in addition a number of Peterboro citizens were present to assist in the organization.

Mr. Josua Smithson occupied the chair, and Reeve Anderson acted as secretary. Miss Peck, Mrs. Travers and Mrs. Arthur Stevenson of Peterboro gave interesting explanations of the nature of the work, and Dr. Cameron, Reeve Anderson, the chairman, and Mr. F. D. Kerr also addressed the meeting.

At the conclusion of the addresses active organization was at once commenced, and the following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. W. A. Anderson.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Greystock.
Secretary—Mrs. J. Collins.
Treasurer—Miss Rutherford.
Committee — Miss Dixon, Miss Crowley, Miss J. Thompson, Mrs. R. Nurse, Mrs. Pickel, Miss Hamilton, Mrs. Smithson, Mrs. C. Greystock, Mr. F. Foote, Mr. S. Rutherford and Mr. E. Dixon.

From the enthusiasm displayed it is evident that the township of Otonabee will do substantial work in patriotically meeting the demands caused by the gigantic struggle in which Great Britain and her colonies are engaged. The township authorities are holding a special meeting of ratepayers on Friday evening at the village of Keene, and it is expected that all the local centres in the township will organize on similar lines.

DINED AS GUESTS OF THE EMPRESS

Members of Council and City Officials Were Entertained

After the Council meeting last evening the aldermen and city officials journeyed to the new Empress Hotel as the guests of G. N. Graham. Those present were: Mayor Buller, Aldermen Dobbin, Stratton, Duffus, Green, Duncan, Johnston, Weir and McIntyre.

The city officials present were: T. A. S. Hay, assistant city engineer; Street Commissioner H. Evans; P. Thompson, Plumbing Inspector; W. Howard, Fire Chief; Dr. McPherson, Medical Health Officer; G. L. Howse, Manager of the Utilities Commission, and J. C. Anderson, of the Utilities Commission.

The dinner provided was a very sumptuous repast. There was everything that one could desire, and a little more, to use a little expression, "everything from soup to nuts."

After justice had ben done to the spread, Mayor Buller, in a few remarks, said everyone present should feel grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Graham for their hospitality. The new hotel was a credit to the city and worthy of a lot of praise.

Ald. Stratton told of just coming from the back country, and needless to say he enjoyed himself to the fullest capacity. He said Mr. Graham deserved a lot of credit for his fine place. It was finished second to none, and he remarked that the furnishings were something to be admired. Ald. Stratton closed with wishing Mr. Graham every success.

Dr. McPherson said that to those who knew Mr. Graham is was no surprise that he had provided his hotel with such grand style. He hoped that the outlook would be made as pleasant as possible. Dr. McPherson closed his remarks with singing, "Drill, ye tarriers, drill," which was enjoyed by all, especially by the Mayor, who led the boys in the chorus.

Chief Howard agreed with what had been said, and he hoped that it would not be the last time that they would be gathered around the festive board.

It wouldn't be the Chief unless he had a little story, so he told one fresh from the Fire Chiefs' Convention.

Peter Thompson then put the smoke test on the ginger-ale, and found it came up to the specifications of the plumbing bylaw. He made the biggest speech of the evening in declaring himself "Not guilty."

Ald. Johnston, in moving a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Graham for their hospitality, said he had travelled a little, and he had not found a hotel that was better equipped than the Empress. He expressed the wish that Mr. Graham would meet with great success in his new house.

Ald. Duncan, in seconding the vote of thanks, said it gave him a great deal of pleasure. The hotel was a credit to Mr. Graham, and it had meant a lot of work for the different tradesmen.

Mr. Graham, in responding, said he was glad to have so many present, and any time they had any advice to offer, he would be only too glad to have their suggestions. He thanked them for their kind words, said he appreciated them very much.

The singing of the National Anthem brought the gathering to a close.

No Fresh Air for Him

No doctor would ever have made Lord Brampton—best remembered as Sir Henry Hawkins—subscribe to the new theory that it is beneficial to sit in a draft. "Few people had a greater objection to fresh air than Hawkins," writes J. A. Foote, K.C. "At one time he had a sort of movable sentry box constructed for his use in court in order to prevent any possibility of a draft. He once expressed his preference for suffocation rather than chill on the ground that it was a slower death.—London Standard.

Lifting Dead Weight.

There is a more or less popular belief that it is easier to lift up a living body and carry it some distance than to carry a small, compact "dead" weight, such as iron dumbbells. Somebody several thousands of years before any art of writing was invented imagined this thing and told it to his next door man. He told it and so all along the ages and centuries. Pure hallucination, along with hundreds of others now injuring this modern scientific age. If a person weighing 150 pounds appears lighter than anything weighting fifty or seventy-five pounds, it is simply because a distorted mind of some weak man imagined it, maybe 100,000 years ago. Same origin for all current myths.—New York American.

ALDERMAN WEIR WELCOMED BY CITY COUNCIL

Small Items of Business Receive Attention of City Dads at Short Meeting

At the meeting of the City Council last evening Mayor Buller in a few words, welcomed Ald. Weir to the council. He said it gave him a great deal of pleasure, and he hoped that he would get a share of civic improvements for his constituents in East City.

Ald. Weir thanked his worship for the hearty welcome extended him.

On motion of Ald. Duffus and McIntyre it was decided to grant City Treasurer three weeks holidays, and that a by-law be prepared to appoint Miss Jessie Swinton to act as Assistant Treasurer.

A communication was received from Peck, Kerr, and McElderry, re Dr. Cameron running his car into a manhole top that was left on Brock Street. The amount of damages claimed was $40. This was referred to the legal committee. The Board of Works is to report on the matter. Dumble and Johnston wrote the council in regard to the taxes due from George Street Church for the collection of garbage. They claimed that it was not called for in the by-law, and that there was no value received for the money spent. This matter was referred to the legal committee. Father McColl wrote the council to the effect that the work of constructing the sidewalk at the East City school was completed and that it cost $20.

Communications were received from the Street Railway Co., stating that it was impossible for them to present to extend their car lines out Charlotte St.

Mr. Kane appeared before the council wanting to know why the stand pipe in front of his residence at Wolfe and Aylmer Sts. was not moved. It was decided to have an electric light installed over the weigh scales at the market.

On motion of McIntyre and Weir it was decided to have the cement arches on the city buildings repaired. The council then adjourned to the Empress Hotel.

The following reports were read:

Your Finance Committee beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

1. That a grant of $50.00 be made to the Peterborough branch of the Industrial Association of Ontario to enable the branch to try the plan for an employment bureau and similar work.

2. That an account from H. J. McCannon for $200 be paid.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

ALD. JOHNSTON,
Chairman.

Board of Works.

Gentlemen:—

Your Board of Works beg leave to report and recommend as follows:—

That the City Engineer and City Solicitor be requested to report to this Committee as to how an outlet can be obtained for a sewer on Bethune Street north of Smith Street and whether it can be constructed as a local improvement.

That the request for the construction of a sewer on Rubidge Street from No. 406 Rubidge Street to Murray Street be referred to the City Engineer for report.

That the City Engineer attend to a complaint of the sidewalk in front of Dr. Greer's residence having been heaved up by trees, and that the Engineer be instructed to have any other parts of sidewalks repaired that need repairing.

That a crossing be constructed on Rogers Street at the new church.

That the Street Commissioner be given two weeks' holidays at a time to be arranged by the City Engineer.

That a request for the construction of a concrete crossing on Smith Street at J. W. Fitzgerald's residence be granted.

That the Mayor, Chairman of this Board and the City Engineer, interview the Utilities Commission in regard to the Radial Railway using the city's poles for their feeder lines.

That the City Engineer take up with the Utilities Commission the matter of having a pole on Bethune Street moved to enable the Grand Trunk Railway to move a siding farther out from the sidewalk, and that the Engineer be authorized to move the pole if necessary.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

ALD. DUNCAN,
Chairman.

SAFETY RAZOR FOR VOLUNTEER

Presentation Made by the Members of Medieva Club

A very successful smoker was held last night by the Medieva Club, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Young, 41 London Street, in honor of a departing member, Mr. P. Gray, who is leaving Peterboro with other volunteers, for the second Canadian force.

Mr. Gray was presented with a handsome safety razor by Mr. W. H. Quibell, president of the club, and Mr. P. Young, secretary-treasurer, read an address.

Progressive euchre was played and refreshments were served.

GENERAL'S SON DEAD ON THE BATTLEFIELD

The Russian journal Sviet tells the following story of the spartan conduct of Col. Lopoukhine. He was listening, after the first great battle in Galicia, to the reading of the report of his regiment's casualties.

"'We have lost 200 killed and wounded,' he was told.

"'How many soldiers killed?' demanded Col. Lopoukhine.

"'So many.'

"'How many officers killed?'

"'Only one.'

"'What is the name of this officer?'

"'Lieut. Lopoukhine.'

"Not a muscle of Col. Lopoukhine's face moved.

"'Where was the officer killed?' he asked.

"The place was indicated. He went to the body of his dead son, dismounted from his horse, kissed the forehead and lips of his child, made the sign of the cross, remounted, and continued giving orders."

STORY OF A TRAIN HOLDUP

By RYLAND BELL

When I was a boy I lived beside a railroad. There was a bridge across the river near where I lived, and I spent a great deal of my time on this bridge holding a fishpole over the water. I perched myself on an abutment where I would not be interfered with by trains, and when any of the engineers I knew came along I would wave my hand to him, getting a nod in reply.

There was a time, when I was about sixteen years old, that a train went over the bridge carrying an express car. The engineer was Josh McCurdy, the best friend I had among the brotherhood. When I was a little kid playing about among the switches where the men were making up trains he had jumped from his cab and yanked me out of the way of a car that was being backed right on to me. As I grew older I appreciated what he had done for me and loved him accordingly. And he loved me the more because he had done it.

In July and August I was usually fishing on the bridge nearly all day. One morning when Josh McCurdy's train was coming I heard a shot and saw his train slowing up. But it didn't come to a full stop till the engine and forward cars had got on to the bridge. I saw the heads of passengers thrust out of the windows of the coaches and other evidences of excitement which convinced me that something serious had happened.

The shot I had heard, together with the fact that I knew the train always carried an express car, suggested to me that the train had been held up by robbers. Boylike, I was curious to see what was going on, besides being solicitous about my friend the engineer. So, instead of keeping out of the way, I went as fast as I could go over ties and stringers toward the train. I was not likely to be noticed, coming from the bridge; but, feeling sure that my inference that robbers were at work was correct, as I neared the hissing engine I dropped down on to some supports below and made my way along them.

I was now over the bank, which sloped from the abutment to the river. I couldn't see what was going on in or about the train, but one thing I saw that set me to thinking. The locomotive and one car—either the baggage or express—were on the bridge, and I could look up from under them. In those days the old fashioned coupling had not completely passed out of use, and the cars of this train were linked together with a pin.

A man was hammering with his fist at the rear door of the car above me, but suddenly turned and ran down the steps and disappeared from my view. I was not slow in divining that he had gone for something with which to break in the door, an ax or a tie. There right over my head was the link that held the car to the rest of the train, hanging loose. A plan of action flashed through my brain. Catching a stringer, I pulled myself up to where I could reach the pin and pulled it out. Then, lowering myself, I made my way with a boy's agility to the cab of the locomotive and, climbing the steps, found myself in it, alone. Opening the valve, I let on steam, slowly at first, but rapidly increasing the power till I was well under way.

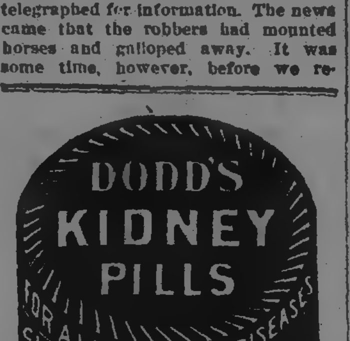
I expected to die for my act, for the robbers could jump on to the rear platform of the car, come forward, and I was defenseless. The reason they didn't do this was that they had been told off for different purposes. Two were going through the cars robbing the passengers, one was guarding the engineer, who had been taken from his cab, and the fourth man was hunting for a tie with which to batter down the door of the express car. He did not see that the car was moving till it had gone too far to be reached, walking as he would have had to do on ties, which is a slow process.

I crossed the bridge with my engine and one car and was well on the other side when, hearing a sound behind me, I turned and saw the express agent coming over the coal in the tender. He had taken in the fact that his car had been hauled away and when he saw me at the throttle informed me that in some mysterious way I had saved the treasure for which he was responsible, as well possibly as his life. Without a word he threw his arms about me and hugged and kissed me till I thought he would smother me. Then he fired a few short questions at me, to which I fired back as short replies, and the story was told.

We had no fear of being followed across the bridge, so, pulling up at a station not far beyond the river, we telegraphed for information. The news came that the robbers had mounted horses and galloped away. It was some time, however, before we received an order to back across and, when we did, found that no lives had been lost, though the robbers had got considerable plunder from the passengers.

Jack McCurdy set an example by hugging me, and pretty much every one present followed it. I was sent for by the president of the road and asked what I wanted as a reward for my feat. I said I wanted preferment for Jack McCurdy. The president smiled at this and said, "I think I can take care of both of you."

And he did. Jack became a division superintendent, and a quarter of a century later I became president of the road.



Something She'd Never Tried.

"Oh, Mildred," cried one young lady, meeting a school friend of some two summers past, "I've heard the greatest piece of news. Can you keep a secret?" "I don't know," said the friend. "I never tried. What is it?"—Atlanta Journal.

THEY WERE PREPARED.

A Surprising Reception Greeted the School Supervisor.

It is the fad of a supervisor of schools in a certain town constantly to advise pupils what to do in case of fire. When such advice is imparted the supervisor is generally alone in his visits to the schools, but one day not long ago there was a board meeting, when five of his colleagues, in company with the supervisor, descended upon the class all at once.

The pupils had been carefully drilled and from previous experience knew just about what the principal supervisor would ask them. So after a period of hesitating answers and mistakes with the other visitors it was with great relief that the children saw their old friend the supervisor rise to address them.

"Boys and girls," said he, "you have listened to what my colleagues have had to say to you and have told them what you know on the subjects they have chosen. What would you do if I were to make you a little speech?"

"Form a line and march downstairs," yelled the youngsters in chorus.—New York Times.

THE SWISS NAVY.

Not Very Big, Perhaps, but It Beats That of Bolivia.

For many years a favorite comic opera role has been that of the "admiral of the Swiss navy." Now it appears that, so far as the department of state or congress or perhaps the American minister to Switzerland is concerned, the admiral of the Swiss navy has a real standing. At all events, the extension to Switzerland in due form of an invitation to send a naval representation to San Francisco is an acknowledgment by this country in the eyes of the world that we at least regard the Swiss navy as no joke. Yet the United States is not alone in the field of diplomatic eccentricity.

A good many years ago Great Britain, becoming offended at the treatment of its representative at the capital of Bolivia, declared a blockade of the ports of that country, regardless of the fact that Bolivia is about the most portless national organization in the world.

Switzerland at least has a large assortment of good sized lakes, and doubtless there are some government boats on them. Certainly there is one small armed vessel on Lake Geneva. Perhaps the little European republic might turn the joke on the world if it were to send an actual naval representation to the big fair, shipping a vessel overland in sections and assembling it at the seacoast. At all events, the old jest about the Swiss admiral gets something of substance now in view of this diplomatic incident. —Washington Star.

Signor Caruso's Nerves.

The eminent tenor Signor Caruso in a recent interview in Vienna said that nothing prevented his singing every night except his nervousness. His voice was quite capable of the effort, but his nerves would break down under the strain. Although he never sings a role without studying it for a year, he is always timid and nervous when the time comes for going on the stage. The three hundredth time he sang in "Rigoletto" he trembled in his dressing room when preparing to appear. Signor Caruso stated that he was ready to retire the instant he found the public sparing in their applause or if his nervousness developed to an excessive degree. "I will not publish my memoirs," he said, "but will devote myself to agriculture."

Germs in the Air.

According to the researches of Messrs. Trillat and Fouassier, published by the Academie des Sciences, microbes suspended in the air act as centers of condensation when the air is humid. The authors give evidence of the existence of microbian drops in the atmosphere and have studied their properties. One very interesting result is that the sudden cooling of the atmosphere has the effect of transporting the microbes and localizing them in determinate regions. The cool surfaces attract them from a distance almost instantaneously, the smaller being transported farther. These new ideas throw light upon the genesis of certain epidemics and may be useful in planning the distribution of inhabited places.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Oct. 26.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 2303 cattle, 1117 hogs, 1371 sheep and lambs and 254 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice butchers' steers at $7.50 to $7.75; good butchers' steers at $7 to $7.25; medium butchers' steers and heifers at $6.50 to $6.75; common butchers' steers and heifers at $6 to $6.25; choice cows at $6.50 to $6.75; good cows at $5.75 to $6.25; canners and cutters at $3 to $4.50; bulls at $5 to $6.75.

Stockers and Feeders.

Choice feeders at $6.50 to $6.75; good feeders at $6.25 to $6.50; stockers at $4 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a good demand, but the number on sale was limited, prices ranging from $60 to $90, the bulk selling at $70 to $80.

Veal Calves.

Receipts were moderate and prices easier. Choice veals, $10; good, $8.50 to $9; medium, $7.50 to $8; common, $6 to $7; inferior, $4 to $5.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts were moderate and prices about steady. Light ewes, $5 to $6; heavy ewes and rams, $3 to $4; culls, $2.50 to $3; lambs, $7.50 to $7.75, the bulk of the choice selling at $7.50 to $7.65; common lambs at $7 to $7.25; culls at $5.50 to $6.

Prices unchanged. Selected fed and watered at $7.50, and $7.75 weighed off cars, and $7.15 f.o.b. cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Oct. 26.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market, altho supplies of cattle were increased, a steady feeling prevailed at steady prices. Choice steers sold at $8, and picked lots at $8.25, but the bulk of the trading was done in good steers at $7.50 to $7.75, and fair grades at $7 to $7.50 per cwt. The demand for canning stock was good, bulls selling at $4.75 to $5, and cows at $3.75 to $4.50 per 100 pounds.

The demand was only fair for sheep, ewes selling at $4.75 to $5, and bucks and culls at $4.25 to $4.50 per cwt. Lambs were firmer, Ontario stock selling at $7.25 to $7.50, and Quebec stock at $6.75 to $7 per cwt. Heavy, grass-fed calves for shipment to the United States were in good demand. The demand for milk-fed calves was also good, and sales were made at 7c to 9c per pound, live weight.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for hogs, and prices, as compared with this day week, show a decline of 50c to 65c per 100 pounds, which makes a net reduction since the first of the month of $1.50. The supply today was only fair, but it was ample to fill all requirements, and sales of selected lots were made at $7.75 to $8, sows at $5.75 to $6, and stags at $3.75 to $4 per cwt., weighed off cars.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, N.Y., Oct. 26.—Cattle—Receipts, 6200 head; choice, steady; prime steers, $9.25 to $10; shipping, $8.25 to $9; butchers, $6.75 to $8.75; heifers, $6 to $7.75; cows, $3.75 to $7; bulls, $5 to $7.25; stockers and feeders, $6 to $7.25; stock heifers, $5 to $5.75.

A WOMAN'S WAY

Who says a woman's part is only "watch and wait"?

True, a woman cannot shoulder a rifle and go to the front, but there is a way in which she can help and which is just as important. That way is in supporting the prosperity of Canada.

Women do the buying. A million of them in Canada are buying, every day, most of the necessities and luxuries for eight million people, expending and influencing the expenditure of perhaps a billion dollars every year.

At present much of that expenditure goes for imported products.

Suppose it were all switched to Canadian-made goods. Think how many Canadian workmen would be kept busy supplying this enormous demand! Think what it would mean to Canadian industries! Think what an era of prosperity it would create!

This is a woman's way to help. To create prosperity for Canada, to lay forever the spectre of unemployment, to create resources to carry on the war.

It's very easy too, just

TIMBER WOLVES

The Canadian Varieties are Anything but Cowardly

It is often stated that the Canadian timber wolf is a coward, like his Russian cousin, but this accusation is far from being true. The wolves have become skulking and nocturnal in habits simply because they have learnt, by sorrowful experience, that man is a creature to be avoided. Today the wolves in prairie regions are as timid as the coyotes, but in the days when they followed at the heels of the great buffalo herds, picking off the stragglers, this was not the case. Seton tells of a wolf that entered the camp of a party of buffalo hunters, where it was attacked by a dog. The men scared the brute away by firing at it. Later in the night, mortally wounded though it was, the wolf returned into the glare of the camp-fire and killed the dog that had molested it.

Some years ago a wolf took up its quarters near Winnipeg city and became a notorious murderer of dogs. Night after night it ventured into the streets of the city, within the glare of the lamps, killing dogs belonging to citizens.

About five years ago a little girl visiting an Ontario lumber camp lost her way one dark night in passing from the cookhouse to her father's bungalow, and wandered off into the forest. She wandered till midnight, when she was much frightened on hearing the howling of wolves quite near at hand, and, of course, climbed a tree. Shortly the wolves, running her trail, appeared, and gathered in a silent group round the foot of the tree.

Later the girl saw lanterns moving in the forest towards her, and, guessing rightly that it was the rescue party, she shouted a warning to them. Hearing her voice, her father ran towards the tree, the remainder of the party holding back. The wolves vanished as he drew near, but as he gained the foot of the tree one of them suddenly leapt from the shadows, dashing the lantern from the man's hand and leaving him in darkness. It then leapt again almost immediately, snapping at his face. The lumberman called to his fellows to assist him, but so great was their fear of the wolves that they hesitated to do so. Presently, however, a young Englishman, the camp "cookee," arrived upon the scene and at once went to the "boss's" assistance, whereupon the wolves slunk off.

A Nelson gentleman was attacked by a single wolf while camping in the Kootenays. The wolf entered his tent at night-time and began worrying at his blankets, evidently intent upon killing him. The man, however, had his hunting-knife handy, and stabbed at the animal several times in the ribs, at which it left the tent whining and coughing. It was found dead next morning within a hundreds yards.

Peter Nigosh, an Indian trapper, was killed in the Lake of the Woods country on January 5th last. The tragedy occurred near the international boundary, a few miles from the old war road on the Canadian Northern Railway. Nigosh was surrounded before he had time to scale a tree, and two days later his people found his bones in the snow, together with his long-bladed hunting-knife. The half-devoured bodies of nine wolves lay round, showing how desperately the Indian had fought for his life.

On the other hand, a Porcupine prospector ran right into the middle of a pack in full cry one winter's night on Nighthawk Lake, North Ontario. The wolves scattertd immediately upon seeing him, which was fortunate, since he was unarmed.

An Observation.

"It is usually reported to be largest at the period of his life in which his wife tries to show the court how much alimony he could pay."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

SEEING BY WIRE

The New Invention and the Way it Works

Dr. Archibald M. Low, a London consulting engineer, claims to have discovered a method by which light may be transmitted by wire. The invention is thus described: The contrivance consists of a transmitter and a receiver connected by wire. The transmitter is a screen divided into a large number of small squares—cells of selenium, the electrical resistance of which element varies according to the light that touches it. Over the screen is passed a synchronously running roller consisting of a number of pieces, which are alternately conductors and insulators. The roller is driven by a motor of 3,000 revolutions per minute, and the resulting variations of light are transmitted along an ordinary conducting wire. The receiver is made up of a series of cells operated by the passage of polarized light through thin slats of steel, and at the receiver the object before the transmitter is reproduced as a flickering image.

The process is referred to by the inventor as a "kinematographic application of common electrical principles." The system has been tested through a resistance equivalent to a distance of four miles, but in the opinon of Dr. Low there is no reason why it should not be equally effective over far greater distances.

It is stated that the selenium in the transmitting screen may be replaced by any diamagnetic material. The cost of the apparatus is considerable, due to the fact that the conductive sections of the rollers are made of platinum and that many wires are required for the transmission of the images. The invention is called the "televista."—Consular Report.

A Home-Made Pistol.

A rare example of skill, patience, and perseverance is found in the remarkable piece of handicraft that is attracting much attention at Toronto's big fair this year.

Mr. William McArthur, of Goderich, Ont., has filed and fitted without the aid of any machinery a pistol that is at once the admiration of everyone. But when one learns from what a miscellaneous assortment of oddities the weapon was made, one can be excused for doubting at first that such an intricate work could be performed by hand.

From a sewing machine shaft the firing barrel was filed, a rat-tail file changed its shape to a firing bolt; a flat file at once became the trigger; a tuning fork was utilised for the barrel-brake, while a piece of copper steam pipe was cut and fitted for the stock sides. Surely no other weapon of modern time has had its multitudinous parts shaped from so varied an assortment of material.

Nine years ago the pistol first took shape in the mind of the old Huronite, now well over the allotted span of life, and many a dreary winter night has been spent filing and shaping the manifold parts that each might fit its proper place with exactness.

An Odd Problem.

Can you place ten lumps of sugar in three teacups so that there is an odd number of lumps in each cup? A statistician to whom this problem was once propounded declared it was impossible to accomplish such a feat, but the following explanation shows that it is not only possible, but very easy to accomplish: Put one lump in one cup, two lumps in another cup and seven lumps in the third cup, and then put the cup with one lump in the cup with the two lumps. By placing the cup that holds one lump inside the one that holds two lumps it can be correctly stated that every cup contains an odd number of lumps, for if a cup contains another cup it also contains the contents of that second cup.

FUNNY JOHN BUNNY.

His Is One of the Most Familiar Faces in the World.

The face of John Bunny (the funny fat man of the movies) is at once his fortune and his misfortune. It has established him as one of the highest salaried actors in the world and at the same time has made him so easily recognizable that he cannot hide. If Mr. Bunny enters a Broadway restaurant the diners stop dining long enough to wave a Chautauqua salute. If he goes to a prizefight or ball game the fans stand and cheer his entrance. If he walks down the street a crowd follows and congests traffic.

It seems scarcely necessary to state that John Bunny is the very funny fat man who falls out of airships and tumbles off skyscrapers in the movies, since it is estimated that more than 7,000,000 people in the United States and between fifteen and twenty million in the world attend the movies daily and most of these at some time or other have laughed at Bunny's antics.

When Mr. Bunny had been acting for the films only a year and a half he went abroad to be photographed in photo plays with foreign backgrounds. His trip proved a triumphal tour from the moment he mounted the gangplank. At every station at which the boat train to London stopped the loungers recognized him immediately he stepped upon the platform. In London whenever he walked upon the Strand or in Ludgate Circus he was given a young ovation. In Paris, Berlin and St. Petersburg the cry, "There goes Bunny!" in as many respective languages always greeted his appearance in public.—American Magazine.

Infielders and Outfielders.

It would take a modern Solomon to select the premier ball player from the galaxy of headliners. Leaving out the twirlers and the heavy stickers, and taking only the field work of the players at large into consideration, I have found that a majority of fans agree on the proposition that infielders are more useful than outfielders, and that, if a man to stand at the head of the baseball class is selected for his general usefulness, he will be chosen from among the men covering first, second, third or short. Take Cobb and Collins, for instance, who are wonders at fielding their positions. Last year Cobb had 300 chances to retire batsmen and Collins had 804. Speaker, out among the daisies, had 488 opportunities to make errors, while Weaver had 960, and McInnes 1,595 chances.—Ed A. Goewey in Leslie's.

THE SPORTING WORLD

CANADIAN GIVEN CREDIT FOR TEACHING AMERICANS

Canucks Are Showing the Yanks the Fine Points of Hockey and Football

Arthur Duffey, writing in The Boston Post, says:— "It speaks well for the Canadian football game when American football coaches have to invite Canadian coaches to cross the border to show our teams how to solve the passing game in football. It was the same way with the American ice hockey. Try as our American ice hockey players did to master the Canadian style of passing the puck, is was impossible. Every time that Canadian teams came to town it showed just how much our players didn't know about the ice game. Now it seems to be the same case with football. When it comes to the rip, rushing, line-plunging style of American football American college players don't have to take their hats off to anybody, but in the passing game it is another story. Despite the fact that the passing game is supposed to be one of the real features of the new American game our college teams have much to learn about this specialty. Just what effect the advent of the Canadian coaches is going to have on the American game is hard to say, but there is no doubt but what the Canadian coach is going to be much in evidence, and that the passing game is going to revolutionize the American game more than ever. Gradually are the American coaches getting wise to this fact, and those football followers, who have been waiting to see soccer come into the attention that it deserves appear to be rapidly getting their wish."

THREE BRAVES ARE UNSIGNED

Boston, Oct. 27.—All but three of the world champion Braves have signed for next year. Stallings announced that only three men of the entire staff had not come to terms with the club for 1915.

One is Pitcher Bill James and the other two are Outfielders Whitted and Moran. There is little doubt but that the trio will fall into line, for hardly a player who belongs to a world's championship outfit can afford to throw away such a chance to share in another melon such as the Braves sliced recently for a jump to the Federals.

SIX SENATORS FOR THE FEDS.

Minneapolis, Oct. 27.—That there will be a sweeping change in the Minneapolis baseball team's lineup in 1915 became apparent when Mike Cantillon announced that six members of the Washington American league club had been secured for next year.

"We are unable to make known the names of the players at the present time, as it might spoil the deal," declared President Cantillon.

COULD KNOT THE EQUATOR.

Unexpected Reply From Small Boy Upsets Dignified School Inspector.

The class was at the moment engaged in geography. That is to say, about thirty small boys sat in a state of utter boredom while a little man stood up in front of a map and made thin remarks through a ragged mustache about unimportant facts.

In these circumstances the unexpected entrance of the inspector was almost in the nature of a relief to the weary youngsters.

"Now, my little man," said the inspector in that patronizing tone really learned people always adopt when speaking to children, "can you tell me what the equator is?"

"Yes, sir," said Tommy Stiles, seeing that he was being addressed. "It is an imaginary line drawn round the world."

"Quite right, my little fellow. Now, let us see whether you really understand what that means. Could you, do you think, tie a knot in the equator?"

"Yes, I could, sir!"

"Could you, indeed?" answered the learned one in fine scorn. "And what sort of a knot, now?"

"An imaginary knot, sir."—London Answers.

COMMENT

As You Like it

One of the followers of the P.C.I. team won cigars on the game in Lindsay. This same fellow lost us as a friend when he passed over one of the smokes. It is supposed that they are the only line of smokes carried at the general store up there and one can appreciate their loyalty at this time in forcing "made-in-Canada" and "grown-in-Canada" goods. For without a doubt the fine Havana leaf in those Lindsay cigars came from Granby, Quebec. If we had to speak this piece instead of write it, the deaf and dumb alphabet would be brought into use. The throat is a tender organ and ours is sore, or ather lacerated, and head surcharged with the awful fumes of the chemicals that went into the projectile which we took trustingly. Thousands of Germans could be exterminated by the igniting of a number of these Lindsay cigars.

One poet has written:—

"A woman is only a woman,
But a good cigar is a smoke."

A Lindsay cigar is not only a smoke but a conflagration. It is pneumonia, asphyxiation, croup, whooping cough, asthma and bronchitis, all rolled into one, the wrapper being made of green paint. It may be said that one should not look a gift horse in the mouth. The correct version is that one should not put a gift horse in his mouth, proven by the fact that there was no doubt a strong flavor of equine hoof injected into the cigar we received. Next time this fan makes a bet he should insert a clause that the Lindsay fan smoke Lindsay cigars.

The cold weather and snow has driven us to talking hockey. It's to be talk—not dope. Last spring writing appeared on the walls of the hockey circle. A shake up was due and a war was to be raged in 1914-15. Since Kaiser Bill and John Bull got a scrapping the price of ammunition has taken a jump, hence it may be possible that peace negotiations will be brought about in the hockey ring.

A couple of hockey players from the west came east last summer and located in Peterboro, these with Park, Kelly, Halpin and Kennealley on hand a good team can be brought out. Evidently "Skid" Janes and Joe Dwyer will be fighting it out for the job between the irons. Harold Mathews, the R.M.C. man intended to wear a blue and white uniform this season but he passed it up for a chance to try the defence of Kaiser Willie. How "Abbie" Rose, Long, Richardson or any of the last year's junior will fare in an attempt to secure a berth is dubious. Frank Barrie, recognized as one of the niftiest men on the junior roster last season will not be available.. "Dank" is back at North Bay and may be seen in action in that clime. Wherever his scene of activities is, the same Frank is bound to acquit himself creditably for beyond question he was a sure comer. His work in the Junior O.H.A. and with the Tool Room team in the Mercantile League met with great favor among the critics.

For a Junior O.H.A. team this season there will be abundance of material. Last year's City League served the purpose of developing new men. O'Connell, Lornie Rose, Jackson, Cranfield, Legros, Graham and Butcher are only a few of them. With a month's training in a gymnasium before they get on the steels the youngsters should go strong right off the reel.

Irony of Fate.

On Thursday night, July 23, Chancellor Lloyd-George in the house of commons declared that a cessation in the strife of armaments was at hand, and that reduced expenditure for battleships would be possible in the near future. At 6 o'clock on the same evening Austria had sent its ultimatum to Servia. Surely the genius of ironic destiny was abroad that night.—Springfield Republican.

Windy Adelie Land.

The windiest region of the world of which we have any knowledge appears to be the coast of Wilkes Land, where Dr. Mawson's expedition recently spent two years. Records at Adelie Land for 1912 showed an average wind velocity throughout the year of about forty eight miles an hour, while velocities of 100 miles an hour were common.

TRIALS OF HANS THE COBBLER

The Tailor's Tip a Fluke

By M. QUAD

[Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.]

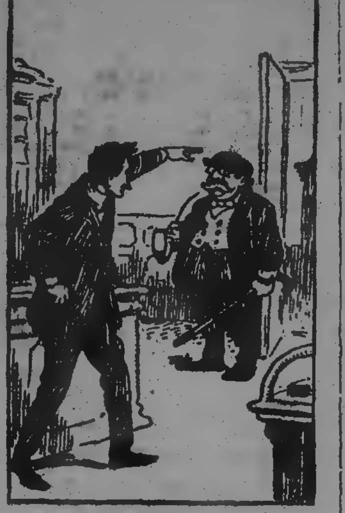
I VHAS putting some cement patch on a shoe for 15 cents vhen dot little tailor calls at my shop und says:

"Hans, where vhas der crowd?"

"Only two peoples comes in today," I says.

"Look here, my frendt," he says, "der trubles mit you vhat dot you don't understand der peoples in dis country. Put on your Sunday clothes und go und look at somo pianos and iceboxes und new furniture und say you vhas a cobbler. If dey gif you some cobbling, you buy your goods of dem. Dey shall belief be vhas rich und keeps fife men."

Vhell, dot looks all right to me und my wife und I put on my black suit und take a walk. By und by I comes by a piano store und goes in. Dot man bows und shmiles. He shows me ten pianos und I says to him:



"UND TELLS ME TO PEAT IT."

"I like to ask my wife first. Maybe we shall take eight pianos and mebbe only seven, but if you want some patches on your shoes or lifts on your heels, you come by my shop. My price vhas low und my work good."

"I don't like some cobbler shops," says dot man as he looks mad. "If you don't vhant some pianos vhy you come in here und take oop my time? Maybe you vhas looking for a mouth-organ at fife cents?"

He says my friends better put me in some crazy house before I do damage und tells me to peat it. I vhas discouraged, but I goes down der street to a hardware store und looks at some refrigerators.

"She vhas der best in der world," says der man ash he comes opp. "You can put some onions und milk in dot box togther, und dey shan't shmell of each odder. He vhas brass hinges outside und der Arctic ocean inside, und your ice bill vhas only 10 cents a week. If you vhant a bargain, here she vhas, I knock der price down from $70 to $8.50 to close out."

"Vhell, maybe I like to buy feefteen refrigerators," says I.

"Feefteen! Den dot price vhas reduced to $8.40 apiece. Vhas you building feefteen new flats?"

"Oh, no; I vhas der German cobbler, you know. If you do peesness mit me I shall mit you. I can put some new soles on your shoes for 00 cents."

"But do you vant some refrigerators today?"

"Do you like some of my cement patches or pearl soles on your shoes?"

He don't answer me. He takes me by der arm und leads me to der door, und pooty queek I vhas oudt.

I vhas going home when I meets a real estate office und I belief I shall try once more. Dot man he has ten houses for sale und twenty to rent, und I says to him:

"Maype you like to sell a house for $40,000."

"I shall sell you a palace for dot," he says as he shakes hands. "Do you like a house on a hill mit forty rooms und a basement?"

"I belief I do."

"How mooch you like to pay down?"

"I can't say, I like to talk peesness mit you. If you come by my cobbler shop for repairs I shall buy my house und lots from you. Do you like cement patches on a shoe, or shall I sew him on?"

"I vill put some patches on you if you don't go out!" he shouts, und he don't let me shpeak to him again before I vhas on der sidewalk.

I goes home und takes off my Sunday clothes, und pooty queek dot little tailor comes in und says:

"Vhell, Hans, vhas be all right? Do you scare opp some peesness?"

I tells him how it vhas und he shakes his head und says:

"Some'tings vhas wrong, Hans—somet'ings vhas wrong."

"But how shall I do now?"

"I guess you shall keep quiet und shtay by der shop. I see now it vhas deeferent. You don't look some peesness about you, und nopody beliefs you vhas a candidate for aldermans or haf a pull by der poleece force."

Y.W.C.A. NOTES

The spirit of Hallowe'en will be rampant at the Y. W. C. A. on Friday evening, when the annual Hallowe'en masquerade will be held. There will be no formal program—and no one knows the fun the entertainment committee have been planning behind closed doors, but we are certain several witches have been imported for the occasion, and visits to the market would lead us to believe there will be pumpkin Jack-o'-lanterns.

Letters from the Old Country seem to say that at present almost every girl and woman are taking up the St. John ambulance course. A letter received from a talented pianist in Glasgow said: "We take our lectures every day." Dr. Sutton is now giving the first course of lectures in First Aid at the local Association. Every girl and woman in Peterboro should attend these lectures.

The Peterborough Choral Society meet tonight in the Collegiate Hall at 8 o'clock. The new work to be rehearsed is Sir Edward Elgar's "Banner of St. George," which has achieved a world-wide popularity. Elgar's compositions are as well, if not better, known than any other modern writer of choral music, and in view of the present great war the story of the destruction of the dragon presented in solo and chorus will be of particular interest. Every member is requested to be present and bring along cash and tickets relating to the recent production of "Judas Maccabaeus" in aid of the Patriotic Fund.

Local News in General

Rifle Association.

A general meeting of the Rifle Association is called for this evening at 8 o'clock. It will be held in the Recreation Room at the Armouries. A full attendance is requested.

No Stamps on Letters.

Some of the soldiers' letters received in the city have no stamps on them. Across the letter is written "War service," which insures their delivery.

More Donations.

Among the latest donations to the Patriotic Fund are $5 from Mrs. (Rev.) Mansell of Cincinnati, formerly of this city, and $5.50 from the employes of the Peterborough Cereal Company.

Kitchener Red Cross Club.

The regular weekly meeting of the Kitchener Red Cross Club will be held this evening at 8 o'clock in the green room of the Y.W.C.A. As there is special business to come before the club a good attendance is asked for.

Recruiting at Armouries.

Interest is still keen in the recruiting at the Armouries. Last evening there was a large number of applicants again, and the boys are very anxious to enlist. About 30 more recruits are needed to complete the quoto from this district.

We cannot control the markets nor the expenses created by war but we can control the quality of "SALADA"; that is why it's always unequalled in the cup. Brown Label 35c., Blue Label 45c., Red Label 55c., and Gold Label 65c. a pound.

Ready for Arbitration.

The city solicitor was in Toronto yesterday in connection with the expropriation of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., and informed The Review today that everything was in readiness for the arbitration proceedings to settle the price of the property of the company. As yet no date has been set.

Parade at 2 P.M. Daily.

Volunteers for the second contingent who have already been enlisted will parade for drill at the Armouries hereafter at 2 p.m. daily. More men are required, and all those who have not been enlisted and those who intend to do so should be at the Armouries tonight at eight o'clock for medical examination. The list cannot be kept open much longer.

MONTROSE PLAYERS AT OPERA HOUSE

The Montrose Players opened a week's engagement at the Grand Opera House last night and the performance which was preceded by a three reel comedy, pleased the fairly large audience.

The moving pictures were a scream from start to finish and the presentation of the three act piece "The sweetest girl in Dixie" was well received.

Running a Ship Without a Crew.

It is reported from Germany that a successful test has been made of a device whereby a vessel may be run without a crew. A transmitter with a mast similar to that used in wireless telegraphy "commands" the ship, and this operates systematically during a period of hours. The ship turns to the right and left, backs and comes to a stop as if run by a man in the engine room. Multicolored lights show the maneuvers to the men ashore. This invention was primarily intended for use in connection with the discharge of torpedoes, but now, it is thought, it may serve as a medium for the control of dirigible balloons.—New York Tribune.

Something Doing in Baseball.

Long before "play ball" is called for the first game of the 1915 season the Federal league will be taken in by the forces of organized baseball. This is a prediction rather than a statement of positive fact, but stick a pin in it just the same and then sit tight and await developments. Though they are not yet ready to admit it, tentative plans to bring about a permanent truce between the magnates have been discussed, and a fulfillment of arrangements will be made after the close of the current season.—Ed A. Geoway in Leslie's.

REPORTS SHOW GOOD WORK BY THE KING'S DAUGHTERS

The annual meeting of the King's Daughters was held on Tuesday last, at which the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—

President—Mrs. A. E. Coulthard.
Sec.-treas.—Miss M. A. English.
Hospital Committee—Mrs. Travers and Miss Pearse.
Home Committee — Mrs. Harvey and Miss Munro.

The secretary presented the following report:—

"During the past year the King's Daughters have held ten regular meetings, which through the courtesy of the Library Board we were permitted to hold in the Board Room of the Public Library. The work has been carried on quietly and systematically. The Hospital and Protestant Home have been visited regularly by our energetic committees; the annual distribution of Christmas Cheer was carried out when over 109 baskets were sent out; over 150 vists were paid by the different members to families in need of sympathy and material help. Besides this, which is along the usual order of our work, our Circle has been instrumental in securing an artificial limb for a young girl at the expense of over $90.00 part of which was collected from friends outside our society.

The annual Charity Ball was held on New Year's night which netted the Society the sum of $269.33, and for the success of which much of the credit is due Mr. Gerald Rackham, who again acted as Hon. Secretary of the Ball Committee.

Respectfully submitted.
M. A. ENGLISH.

DR. GORDON WILL HOLD CAMPAIGN IN OTTAWA

Mr. E. O. Weber, the chairman of the general committee on Christian Citizenship Campaigns, has just returned from Ottawa, where he went on invitation of the Presbyterian Ministerial Association. He reports that a special citizenship campaign, such as is being conducted in Peterborough at the present time, will be inaugurated in Ottawa, beginning on Sunday evening, November 8th. The Presbyterian churches of Ottawa are thoroughly interested in these campaigns, and are planning for great things. The meetings will be held in the Chalmers Presbyterian Church, which is one of the largets churches in the city of Ottawa, and centrally located.

ALL IN READINESS FOR PLOWING MATCH FOR COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP WIDE INTEREST HAS BEEN AROUSED

The stage has been set and all that is required now to ensure the success of the plowing match to be held tomorrow on the farm of Mr. Sandy Matchett, Con. 16, Lot 19, Otonabee, near Stewart's Hall, is fine weather. The match has created wide interest throughout the county. Word having been received by the officers that a considerable number from a distance are expected to come to the city by train, and that they did not know how they would get out to the farm, the executive have arranged with Blewett & Middleton to run a bus from their stables at half past eight in the morning and at two in the afternoon. This will give business men in the city who would like to see the completion of the match without spending all day on the field, a chance to do so.

It was at first announced that the cup given by Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., is worth $50, but Mr. Burnham's letter made other arrangements whereby the cup is really worth $80, and which he has already turned over to the County Council. Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., has contributed a $12 prize which completes the prize list. All those who have contributed prizes have been invited to attend the match tomorrow and present their prizes in person to the successful competitors after the match is over. The contestants, judges and officers are to be entertained by Mr. Matchett. Permission has been granted by the directors to a caterer to erect a tent and attend to the wants of the public.

As this is the first match that has been held in Peterboro county for over 20 years, the art of fine plowing has died down to such an extent that this year it is possible that there will not be as many competitors as there will be in future matches. Quite a number of farmers and their sons have signified their intention of attending tomorrow's match with the idea of learning some of the fine points of the game in order that they may compete next year. The entries already received ensure a good competition in the men's class in sod and fair competition in the boys' class in stubble. Competition in the men's class in stubble and in the young men's class in sod is not likely to be very keen unless ome entries are received by mail or are accepted by the judges tomorrow. Any young men who have not yet entered and would like to are advised to take their plows tomorrow as it is quite possible the judges will accept their entries. The ground is in excellent condition for the match.

The Dead Larks.

In Baluchistan even the wolves go mad. In his book, "The Frontiers of Baluchistan," G. P. Tate writes: "The shepherds give a strange reason for the epidemic of rabies. According to them, it was caused by the wild beasts eating dead larks. In some years, they said, the larks develop extraordinary vitality and pour forth such a flood of songs as they rise on the wing that they become suffocated and fall to the ground dead. A wild animal which eats one of these dead birds invariably develops rabies. This is a widespread superstition and seems not unfamiliar to the natives of India who were with me."

Ending a Letter.

The simplicity of "Yours" as a letter ending would have astounded Jeremy Taylor, whose letters to John Evelyn often wind up with perfect triumphs of complexity in this respect. His best is, "Believe me that I am, in great heartiness and dearness of affection, dear sir, your obliged and most affectionate and endeared friend and servant," or "Your very affectionate friend and hearty servant." Even in his shortest perorations of the kind the "affectionate" and the "servant" are always the two indispensable words. Probably no man, woman or child would combine these two at the end of a letter to-day.—London Tatler.

INTERESTING POINT IN CASE OF CORDAGE CO. CONTRIBUTORIES

An interesting turn in the action of the liquidator of the Canadian Cordage Co. against the contributories has ben made as a result of a judgment by Mr. Justice Lennox in the appeal court at Toronto.

Judge Huycke made an order striking the name of Hugh Ferguson from the list of contributories and against this order counsel for the liquidator entered an appeal.

It is probable that this case will be used as a test case.

The finding of Mr. Justice Lennox is as follows:

"No calls have ever been made by the company, but the question of calls has no bearing upon the matter in issue.

"The liability or non-liability of Hugh Ferguson to be made a contributory is to be determined by the express terms of his contract; and by it the balance of his subscription for stock, $400, became due on the 1st January, 1903.

"In my opinion the learned Local Master did not err in finding that the Statute of Limitations began to run on the 2nd January, 1903; but, with great respect, I am of opinion that he did err, as did counsel, in assuming that the limitation is six years. The fact that the contract is by specialty seems to have been overlooked; and on such a contract the time for enforcement is not six years but twenty years.

"The order appealed from will be set aside, and an order issue directing that Hugh Ferguson be placed upon the list of contributories; but, as the point upon which the matter turns was not taken either upon the agreement before me or in the court below, the liquidator will have costs of the application against the contributory down to and including the order appealed from only, and will have his costs of the appeal out of the assets of the company."

JOHN JONES FACES CHARGE OF POLYGAMY

His Wife in England Put Toronto Police After Him

Toronto, Oct. 27. — Learning that John Jones, who married her in Uxbridge, London, England, on June 26, 1885, has again married in Toronto, Mrs. Catherine Jones wrote to Inspector Gregory of the morality department in Toronto, asking him to assist her in locating her husband, at 136 Chester avenue, Balmy Beach. He was arrested yesterday by Detective Massey and charged with polygamy.

Previous to marrying the complainant, Catherine Holt, he had married Sarah Ellis at Battersea, County of Surrey, England, in 1880. At that time he was 23 years of age and his wife was 21.

In 1908 Jones was sent to Canada by Baron Rothschild, who is the prime mover in the Central Aid Society of London, England. It was thought then that Jones would send for his wife as soon as he secured a position, but instead, on May 3, 1909, he took to wife Jane Spooner, in Toronto. They were married by Rev. Canon Dixon of 417 King street east.

By his second wife he had four children. One son is married in England, and another is single in England; another is in Toronto. There is also a daughter in England. Jones has no children by his other wives. He was employed as a laborer.

On Charge of Bigamy.

Not satisfied with the man she had secured as her mate, Emily Brewer last Wednesday contracted a marriage with Alex. Matthew, of 90 Beverley street. She was arrested yesterday, charged with bigamy.

In 1907, when she was only 16 years of age, she married Peter Kreeshewich, in Glasgow, Scotland. The couple moved to Canada in 1908. The former husband's address now is 448 West Queen street.

ATTACKS BY ENEMY ARE LESS VIOLENT

ADVANCES BY THE FRENCH AND BRITISH ARMIES STILL CONTINUES

HUNGARIAN DIVISION AND DETACHMENTS OF THE LANSTRUM ARE DESTROYED

NIGHT OFFENSIVE MOVEMENTS BY GERMANS ARE REPULSED

POSITIONS MAINTAINED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Oct. 28.— The French official announcement issued this afternoon, says: "During Yesterday, German attacks between Nieuport and Arras were less violent. Our positions were everywhere maintained, and we continued to advance to the north and to the east of Ypres. We also made some progress between Cambrin, to the southwest of La Bassee, and Arras."

"Further information continues to confirm previous reports that the German losses in dead, wounded and prisoners have been considerable in the northern region."

"On the right bank of the Aisne the Germans attempted at night a very violent offensive movement in the region of Craonne, and on the heights of the Highway-Des-Dames. They have been repulsed.

"In the Woevre district our troops have continued their advance in the forests between Aprimont and St. Mihiel, as well as in the forest of Le Petre.

"In the region to the northeast of Rawa, Russians have inflicted heavy losses on the Germans. There has been furious fighting in the forests between Kozienca and Radom.

"In Galicia the Russians are making progress. To the south of the Sambre, in the narrow valley of the Podbuj, they surrounded the 38th Division of Hungarian Honved together with detachments from the Landsturm, and destroyed them completely, capturing twenty pieces of artillery and a quantity of war material.

"In East Prussia partial attempts at a counter offensive movement on the part of the Germans resulted in failure."

GERMANS MADE SURPRISE ATTACK ON ALLIES TRENCHES

Petroleum Soaked Bushes Were Set Ablaze But Plan Proved Futile — Enemy Fell by Hundreds Before Bayonet Charges and Hand-to-Hand Encounters

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 28.—A correspondent of The Times in Northern France, sends the following regarding fighting in Belgium, under Tuesday's date: "The British fire at Ypres after a glorious stand for five days against overwhelming odds drove the enemy back fifteen miles. The German forces were commanded by the Bavarian Crown Prince, who it is reported was wounded.

"The British foces captured Langemarck, five miles northeast of Ypres on Friday after inflicting enormous losses on the enemy and established entrenched positions beyond the village. Last night after the roar of cannon had ceased, there was suddenly a shrill whistle and bushes soaked in petroleum broke into flames throwing a glare over the scene. Masses of men sprang up from beet crops within a few hundred yards of our trenches and with bugle sound, yell and song, they came dashing forward to our positon.

"Though taken by surprise our brave men were not unprepared. They took their places in the trenches and held them, pouring a terrific fire into the advancing hosts, answering with rifle and machine gun the enemy advanced, till with the bugle playing and amid shouts of "Hoch, hoch" they were in dense masses and they fell by hundreds. They got within thirty yards of our trenches when they recoiled. "Then came three blasts of a whistle sounding the retreat. Our men sprang out of their trenches and went in among them with the bayonet. The slaughter was terrible and there were many hand to hand encounters. In the dim glare of the burning bushes, some of the enemy threw down their arms and pleaded for mercy. No quarter, however, was given on either side. The work was too desperate for that. Bayonet and bullet did their work and the enemy was driven back on Roulers.

"A battery and several machine guns were captured and thousands of prisoners taken including a general and several other officers."

London, Oct. 28. — The Lugger Vlaardingen struck a mine forty miles north of Ymuiden a seaport of Holland, according to an Amsterdam despatch to Reuter.

The crew and ship were lost.

FOE IN DESPAIR, TRIES NEW MOVE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 28. — The Daily Mail says Germans despairing of breaking through the line between Nieuport and Dixmude, are now attempting a movement between Dixmude and Ypres. The Amsterdam Handelsblad says there is no change along the battle front. Heavy fighting continues.

Observation from a British captive balloon in Belgium reveals that not a single wall remains standing in the villages of West Kerke, Slype and Novie, as the result of bombardment from British warships, and several other villages also are in ruins.

Belgian troops have completely defeated the Germans at Kissenia on Lake Tanganyika, between the Belgian Congo and German East Africa.

A Times despatch from Berne says the Germans have received large reinforcements in Alsace and that an attack on Belfort is being prepared for.

DEATH TRAP CONFRONTED ENEMY AT EACH ATTEMPT

Battle at the Yser Shows but Few Signs of Slackening Germans Receive Reinforcements

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 28. — "The bloody massacre" as it is described by those on the spot among the sand dunes and canals of Flanders shows as yet but few signs of slackening. The valor of the German attack has been persistently countered by equal valor from the steady ranks before them.

Seven times altogether Germans have cossed and recrossed the Yser. Each time they succeeded in gaining the left bank, they found themselves in a death trap commanded by guns of defenders entrenched behind a railroad embankment running more or less paralley to the Yser and completely barring their progress.

Some German forces according to latest reports in London succeeded in finding shelter enough among sand hillocks to enable them to retain a footing between the Yser and the railroad running from Dixmude to Nieuport but this number up to the present time has been insufficient to dislodge the allies. German reinforcements are still rolling up and the efforts to break through the line show no sign of cessation. Nor is it expected that they will until exhausted masses of men reach the limit of their endurance.

ENEMY LOSES OPPORTUNITY IN POLAND

Germans Misjudged the Attitude of Population

Occupation of Lodz Threatens Line of Communication

Russian Winter Has Set in With It's Usual Severity

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Oct. 28.—Newspaper despatches from Russia aver that Germany has definitely lost her opportunity in Poland because she misjudged the attitude of the population, that the occupation of Lodz by Russian cavalry, seriously threatens the line of German communication and that the Russian winter with its usual severity has already set in.

Despatches from Basle state that reports from Cologne and Coblenz declare the battle of the German right flank in Belgium has become a massacre. Long trains containing wounded continue to pour into those towns and doctors and hospitals are overwhelmed.

REPORT SAYS TWO FORMER PETERBORO MEN ARE INTERNED AT FORT HENRY, KINGSTON

Inquiries have been forwarded to Peterborough from Kingston, where they are detained, regarding Messrs. L. Mendel and B. Laster, who are suspected of being in league with the German authorities, pending the result of the investigation. When residing here the former kept a photograph establishment known as the Moule Studio, and the latter was proprietor of a clothing store on Simcoe street. The news came from quite reliable sources, but several inquiries that The Review made were not successful in establishing confirmation of the story. The report is one that could be true, and the character of the men in question, as residents of Peterborough knew them, is such as to cause suspicion that they might have a connection with the German Government. Speaking to a local resident, we were informed that a letter had been received from Mendel that was written in New York which would seem to discredit the report. However, a fairly large number of men are imprisoned in Kingston, and that these two men are among them may be true. It seems foolish to many people that spies would be operating in Peterborough, as this is not a strongly fortified or military place. However, if the Germans contemplated an invasion in the event of a severe reverse to the Allies or the British fleet, information of cities and lines of communication would be valuable to the Germans. Besides, efforts might be made to prevent factories completing their contracts for military supplies. Whether anything is contemplated in this respect could not be ascertained.

If the Kaiser decorates all his soldiers with Iron Crosses and is puzzled to know how to dispose of the surplus, he might start to pin them on all the telegraph poles he passes.

SIGHT NEVER TO BE FORGOTTEN

When Troopships and the Convoys Crossed the Atlantic

PTE. RUSH WRITES

Mr. Herbert J. Rush, of this city, who was one of the volunteers in training at Valcartier, has written his mother, upon his arrival at Plymouth, England, on board H. M. S. Arcadian, on the 11th inst. He embarked at Quebec on the 1st inst. He speaks in glowing terms of the delightful sail across the ocean. The steamship company did their utmost to make all on board happy. They had an orchestra on board, and every evening held a concert of considerable merit, in which he took part. It was a wonderful sight to see thirty-five transport ships in three lines convoyed by cruisers, and one never to he forgotten. All ships that came in sight were held up to secure secrecy as to the whereabouts of the transports.

He also caused to be sent a large photograph of the 7th Battery, C. F. A., Canadian expedition force, Valcartier, 1914, which comprised the volunteers from St. Catharines and Peterborough, who numbered about 250. The photo is a handsome one, and measures about four feet in length, and depicts each one clearly.

SOME OF THE HUMOROUS SIDE TO OCEAN TRIP OF CANADIAN SOLDIERS

Pte. Jas. H. English, son of Mr. S. W. English, 309 Margaret avenue, sends an interesting letter, which was written on board the SS. Cassandra while the Canadian soldiers were at sea. He says:

I will post this letter at the first post office in the Old Country—if we get there. I posted another letter for home today. We threw a big bundle of mail into a fishing boat.

It is a lovely night. From across the water comes the music af a brass band, and the crowd outside our room is singing "Last Night Was the End of the World." Tomorrow some of them will wish it had been, especially if it is rough. Do you remember, we heard that song the night before we left Peterborough.

A soldier's life is sleep, eat, and and work. Billy Gibson, Ernie Dummitt and I were scrubbing floors this morning.

Heard at Valcartier.

If you had ever dropped into camp at Valcartier you would have heard something like this:

"They are putting salt petre in the coffee."

"I can taste something funny."

"Do they call this coffee or soup?"

"The cook didn't even think about sugar."

"I don't mind pork rare, but when the pig walks in—"

On shipboard we had soup at every noon meal, hence the following:

"Chicken soup, huh! The chicken went through on stilts."

Scornful One—You've got a weak stomach.

What a sad sight it is to see the bold soldier boys scurry for the railing, amid a loud chorus of laughter.

We came on deck today, and found the fleet stopped. Our signallers told us one of the vessels signalled, "Man overboard." A lifeboat was lowered and later the signal to proceed was given, so I think the lifeboat got him. We could see a large warship in the distance, supposed to be H.M.S. Gloria. At noon we noticed great bustle aboard one of the cruisers. She was clearing decks and serving ammunition. I had a look through the glasses, and later we found out that she had sighted a vessel. It proved to be the SS. Florida, with troops from Newfoundland, and she swung into line behind us.

Thanksgiving Day—Soup.

Thanksgiving Day—We will have the same old soup. Yesterday the steward made us wait for the bugle call because we were a bit noisy

NORWOOD CITIZENS DO HONOR TO VOLUNTEERS FOR WAR

(Special to the Review.)

Norwood, Oct. 28.—Norwood has sent her quota to join the second contingent of Canadian volunteers in the "Great War." Monday night the town hall was thronged with people anxious to do honor to the brave lads who for the love of country have volunteered to go to the front and face death if need be for home and native land.

Drillmaster Mr. J. R. McKelvie with his stalwart home guard numbering about thirty marched into the hall at about 8.30 and took their seats in the front of the hall in the chairs reserved for them. Shortly afterwards the volunteers numbering ten stalwarts amongst whom were our esteemed townsmen Mr. Wm. Stares and Giddeon Walker. Mr. George Martin who has been working with Mr. W. T. Buck, Asphodel, a veteran of the South African war was also present. The others were all native born Englishmen who for the love of country are offering their lives to defend the honor and integrity of the "Old Land." Mr. B. W. Squire, Reeve of Norwood, acted as chairman and opened the proceedings with a very neat address. All the local clergymen together with Messrs. J. B. Pearce, J. S. Squire, and Dr. Ford of Norwood, and Col. Birdsall were on the platform and each delivered short speeches brim full of patriotism and appreciation of the self-sacifice of the lads in khaki. After the speeches ten ladies were called to the platform and presented each of the recruits with a box filled wth useful articles, including sweater coats, fountain pens and pipes for the smokers. Mrs. E. P. Cuffe, on behalf of the Daughters of the Empire gave to each of the volunteers a hand made pair of woollen wristlets which in the coming cold winter will only have to be worn to be appreciated. The gathering broke up about 11 o'clock after giving three cheers for the King, Lord Kitchener, Gen. French, Admiral Jellicoe and Sir Edward Grey. Three cheers and a tiger for the brave boys which needless to say was given with a spontaneousness not often shown.

On Tuesday the "Home Guard" assembled and marched with the boys from the armouries up town where they took motors and drove to Hastings to entrain for Cobourg.

VETERAN OF SOUTH AFRICAN WAR ASSEMBLES PRO GERMANS

De WET LEADS REVOLT

Official Statement of Governor-General of South Africa Says That Preparations Have Been Made For Rebellion by De Wet and Beyers, Both Irreconcilables of Late War---Several Commandoes in Revolt.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—It is officially reported that a number of burghers of the Orange Free State and in the western Transvaal have made preparation for rebellion.

The burghers of the Orange Free State are under command of Gen. De Wet, while those in the Transvaal are under Gen. Christian Frederich Beyers.

The Union Government is taking measures vigorously to suppress the uprising.

The Governor-General of South Africa informs the Colonial Office of the deep regret expressed by the Government of the South African Union that certain prominent individuals, including a number of burghers in the northern Orange Free State and in western Transvaal have been misguided enough to defy Governmental authority and launch into preparations for an armed resistance.

Although aware of these preparations for some time, the Union administration, says the Governor-General, has spared no effort to preserve peace without bloodshed, while at the same time taking adequate steps to meet any situation that might arise. The Government now learns that burghers in north Orange Free State are commandeering supplies for military requirements under the authority of Gen. Christian De Wet, and in the western Transvaal under the authority of Gen. Beyers.

Several rebellious commandoes are now in existence. The town of Heilbronn has been seized, and officials of the Government made prisoners. At Reitz a train was stopped and armed citizens on board, members of the defence force, taken from the train and disarmed.

"Under these circumstances," continues the Governor-General, "the duty of the Government is made clear, and it has been determined to deal firmly with the situation. All essential steps are now being taken.

"A very great majority of the citizens of every province are thoroughly loyal and resent the idea of rebellion. When they are thoroughly informed of the situation the Government is confident that they will give every assistance in restoring order.

"In order to not encourage the movement in any way, the support of all citizens has been especially requested. They are advised that a special alertness must be exercised and information given the Govrenmennt at the earliest possible moment which will help put down the rebellion.

"Citizens who for any reason have been guilty of disobedience under the Defence Act need have no fear of any action against them by the Government so long as they remain quietly at home and abstain from acts of violence against the constituted authorities."

Gen. De Wet in the South African war was commander-in-chief of the Orange Free State forces. He was commandant at Ladysmith and was sent to relieve [illegible] in command. After [illegible]

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1914

"THE HONOUR ROLL."

THOSE who peruse the illustrated London papers, like the News and Sphere, will have seen the page entitled "The Honour Roll." This page is made up of pictures of British soldiers killed in the war. It is one of the saddest, most tragic and pathetic pages ever given to the public by any journal. These pictures, mostly of officers, represent the best manhood of the Empire. The ages vary from eighteen years to about fifty-five, but the majority range from twenty-three to thirty-five. These were all fine-looking men, well educated, and possessed an excellent physique. Some were Oxford and Cambridge graduates, practically all were graduates of some college, usually an important military school. They are now all dead, shot to death by German bullets or shells, and buried hurriedly in some corner of a Belgian or French field (save a few bodies brought back), with no permament monument to mark their last resting place, beyond the honour of their noble and heroic death.

What were the possibilities of these men, had not war suddenly cut short their lives? Fine, young men of twenty or thirty years of age, capable of taking leading parts in the life of their country. Who can say what they might have become or what a great work for their fellows they might have performed? Now, it is all pressed down into one supreme sacrifice; all their futures and bright prospects, all their happiness of life, their fond care for mother, wife or child, all has been thrown on one dreadful cast, and the fates have cut them off.

But, on the other hand, what was the business of these men in times of peace? Many of them worked at the business of being soldiers, training all the time in the art of fighting. True, they were examples of fine manhood at all times, strong, healthy, erect, but accomplishing little for the progress of mankind, beyond an uncertain insurance against oppression and invasion.

No doubt, some were interested in mercantile pursuits or had estates or farms requiring supersion, but their main business was to be ready to fight and to destroy. In this regard their future may not appear actually to have had great possibilities, but what is important is that they had the energy, mind and will to accomplish more than simply soldiering.

There is another and more important consideration. Suppose all these men had decided to be soldiers no longer and engage in some productive work, such as lovers of peace policies would desire. Wealth would have been increased to a certain extent, but in a crisis like the present, the fact that would undoubtedly be staring all in the face would be the presence of German troopers in Paris, Bordeaux and London. These men have preserved the integrity of Britain; they have prevented the occupation of Paris, and are driving back the Germans. We have been accustomed to look on human sacrifices to strange gods as an echo of the distant, barbaric past. We wondered why they were so foolish as to do so, yet in our day, our vaunted civilization still requires its human sacrifices to preserve our homes, our cities, our nationality. Soldiers seem from one point of view an uncertain insurance because they do not prevent distress, because they do not save all homes from destruction and bereavement, and because they may not succeed in preserving nationality. But their purpose is to do this, and they try to do it to the extent of laying down their lives. These fine men, whose pictures are in print, are the human sacrifices to preserve the safety of the realm. Preparations for the Blood Feast have been in progress for a long time. Now offerings are being made of the finest men in a most costly manner and with tears and shouting and cheers, even to the playing of the bands. That is war. That is our civilization and the glory of our nationality. Is it not our religion also?

BUYING GOODS MADE IN CANADA.

FOR THE FIRST TIME in our lives as Canadian citizens, let's consider how we can be both sentimental and selfish at the same time. Sentimentally, we are sending 50,000 volunteer soldiers to fight Germany. We don't call that selfish. It's sacrifice. Selfishly and sentimentally both, we can win just as great victories at home as the troops are winning abroad. We don't have to drill or even shoulder a gun. All we have to do is to buy the goods that are made by the people in our own community instead of paying our money to workmen in other countries.

The goods are being made. They are as good value as any made elsewhere. There never was a time when Canada was so well equipped for making the goods that we need to buy. Never a time when the workers of Canada were in greater need of the wages of labour. Never a time when the prosperity of Canada depended so much on the loyal co-operation of every man and woman in Canada. And there certainly never was a time and never a movement that could bring so much rock-bottom, tip-top, enthusiastic satisfaction to the average man and woman, as this determination to pay out money in trade for the goods that Canadian national life need in this struggle at home caused by a great war abroad.

If the people will uphold Canadian trade as loyally as they shout for Canadian troops, they can boost their own prosperity and help this country win out in a struggle at home, while our soldiers are doing their part in the struggle abroad, for which we are cheerfully paying the price.

CANADA AND THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE means that the United States will not permit European countries extending their spheres of influence in the American continent, beyond those already in existence. As an effective policy, it is about worn out. Canada did not consider the Monroe Doctrine in sending a force of 33,000 men to fight Germany. The Empire needed the men, and they went. Canada has thus sent men to attack Germany. She is a belligerent country, and a German attack on Canada is legitimate warfare, Monroe Doctrine or no Monroe Doctrine.

The German Ambassador to the United States has made the position of Canada clear. The German Government, in a formal note delivered to the State Department on September 3 by Count Bernstorff, voluntarily pledges Germany not to attempt colonial expansion in South America, no matter what the outcome of the war would be. The note was written at that time because Winston Churchill had said in his message to the American people that if Germany was victorious in the present war she would attack the Monroe Doctrine.

The German point of view is that by joining in a European war, Canada has put herself outside of the pale of the Monroe Doctrine. But Germany has not the intention of attacking Canada nor colonizing Canada.

The probability is that if Germany were successful in this war, she would demand a slice of Canadian territory. Her declaration to the United States only binds her so far as South America is concerned. Even if Canada had taken no part in the war, she is a part of the British Empire; that would have been a sufficient pretext for German domination here. Canada has taken the one stand she honourably and safely could take in the European crisis. Canada is a self-governing dominion that has never sheltered itself beneath the Monroe Doctrine, but with her own resources and with the protection of the British navy, she asserts her claim to nationality within the Empire, for the integrity of which she has cast her lot.

TURBANED WARRIORS WIN THEIR FIRST BATTLE.

WHAT WE EXPECTED and have been looking for has happened. The famous Indian troops have participated in their first battle, and won it gloriously.

The despatches indicate that it was not intended to send them into action at that particular time, for, while they could hear the thunder of the German guns and were anxious to show their courage, they were stationed as a covering force in the rear of the advance line in the north of France. At the end of last week the Germans made a furious assault on the British lines near La Bassee and carried the trench by sheer force of numbers before a second line could advance to check them. Then the word came to the Indian troops, who dashed forward with the bayonet. Cold steel turned the German victory into a rout, and the Indians not only regained the trench, but pursued the enemy until their officers deemed it wise to recall them.

The Indian troops have thus won brilliantly their first engagement on European soil. That is a new and very important historical fact. It is the first time in modern history that a body of Asiatic troops has fought on European soil. They have acquitted themselves bravely and shown that they are dependable soldiers. The next big, important fact is that there are millions where these came from. Truly, the war strength of the Empire has as yet hardly been sounded.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A SUBSCRIBER objects to the statement that the first year of married life is the most critical and dangerous, and says it is the first thirty years.

A HEADING says, "Fighting in Belgium now going on is fierce." Is this meant for wretched humor or a real fact?

He Sees the Point.

(Collier's.)

The Kaiser is not our notion of a sober thinker or a careful statesman, but he does show a gleam once in a while. For example, in his endless field sermons to the soldiers and in the "ten commandments" which he has issued for them (as Mr. Dooley predicted) he inveighs against beer, wine, or liquors, since these "limit the physical strength." The Kaiser sees the point just as all our college athletic trainers have seen it for the last thirty years.

It Does Seem So.

(Kansas City Journal.)

"Why did you let him kiss you?"

"Well," said the candid girl, "after you have let a man hug you in the ball room it does seem inconsistent to refuse him a kiss in the conservatory."

(New York Press.)

If Britain had been as well prepared for war in her land forces as she was in her navy there would be no European war now.

FALL NOVELS

By Walt Mason

Jack London writes, pen dipped in gore, of scraps aboard the "Elsinore." The superman is there on deck, with caitiffs climbing on his neck, and decks and bulwarks are awash with forthy kinds of blood, b'gosh. A whooping tale of misfit men—the "Sea Wolf" warmed and dished again. Oh, Jack, your elbow's getting tired; one cannot always be inspired! "The Auction Block," by Rex E. Beach, is more than just a scream—a screech; Rex here forsakes the Arctic strand, the snowy pass and frozen land, and takes our social scheme apart, and shows it has no brain or heart; he writes of soaks and libertines, and sports who live in their machines, and draws a truly frightful sketch of maid for sale to wealthy wretch. And ever as we read we think, "This book is surely on the blink, we'll taste it for six months at least. Oh, Rex can write such corking tales of heroes lost in Arctic gales, of great things done by rugged men—why does he prostitute his pen, and write this twaddle, rank and raw? There surely ought to be a law." Alas, how far a man must look before he'll find a first-class book!

On the initiative of the directors of the Antwerp People's Bank, there has been formed an association, including British interests, which will lend money to Antwerp house owners to help them rebuild.

The authorities of Hong Kong and of other British possessions in China yesterday issued orders for the expulsion from British territory of German and Austrian subjects, except those of military age, who will be detained.

No nurses are wanted from Canada at present for service at the front, and none will be sent from here to England or the continent unless the Department of Militia decides to send ambulance units with the second contingent.

Fight With Long Knives.

In close quarters the Ghurka soldier throws away his rifle and takes to the kukri, a long heavy knife, which he uses with telling effect. When charged by cavalry, the Ghurkas stand up and fire at the horsemen until they are within sabring distance, when the natives fall. As the charging horsemen pass over them the little warriors are up and hamstringing the horses or clinging to the saddles and stabbing the riders.

This method of fighting is not unlike that of the Turcos of the French army, who also "play 'possum" when charged by a heavier enemy, only to rise as soon as they have passed over them. Neither Ghurkas nor Turcos, however, do much defensive fighting, except against cavalry, for they are usually leading any charge that may be taking place in their vicinity.

There seems to be a natural affinity between the Ghurka and the Scotch Highlander regiments. Like the Scotchmen, the Ghurkas use bagpipes, and their pipes accompany them on the firing line.

No Way of Finding Out.

Grumbling has always been considered a prerogative of John Bull, and not an agreeable one, but the incident taken from "England Without and Within" shows that it has its uses.

I had been a little over a week in London lodgings and had my breakfasts served by the housekeeper. One morning the maid said:

"I'm afraid we shan't satisfy you, sir, with your breakfasts."

I told her my breakfasts were very good; that the tea, eggs, bacon, fish, muffins and marmalade were good enough for any man and all I wished.

"Yes sir, but you never grumble about anything you have, and so we don't know how to please you."

Roses For Rent.

The ancient custom of paying with a bunch of roses the rent of what is known as the "Red Rose Estate" was observed during the prize-day proceedings at St. Olave's School, Southwark. The history of this curious ceremony dates back to 1656, in which year a portion of the freehold field conveyed to the governor of St. Olave's Grammar School was leased to trustees for the benefit of the poor of the parish. The lease was for "a term of 500 years at the yearly rent of a red rose, payable at midsummer, if lawfully demanded." This is the two hundred and fifty-eighth time that the custom has been observed.—Evening Standard.

Absent, Yet Swarming.

"Some time ago Mr. T. P. O'Connor, one of the best-known Irishmen in the House of Commons, perpetrated an amusing "bull."

"Are there as many absentee landlords in Ireland as there used to be?" he was asked.

"My dear sir," Mr. O'Connor replied seriously, "Ireland is swarming with them!"—London Tit-Bits.

LEIPZIG CAUGHT?

Report Is Current In Vancouver of Capture of German Cruiser.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 28.—Rumors are again floating around regarding the mystery ship the German cruiser Leipzig. This time it is said, on what appears to be good authority, that the Leipzig was towed into Esquimalt harbor yesterday by a Japanese warship, presumably the Idrumo, which has been on this coast for some time, and that she is in a battered condition.

From the statements which have been made in Vancouver there must have been a fierce engagement somewhere in the Pacific, as the Leipzig had a large number of wounded, who are now being attended. Beyond this statement, no confirmation can be obtained of the story.

Steamer Sunk By Mine.

BELFAST, Ireland, Oct. 28.—The British freight steamer Manchester Commerce, bound from Manchester for Montreal, struck a mine at midnight last night off the Irish coast and sank. Captain Paine and thirteen men were drowned. Thirty other members of the crew were saved by a trawler.

Cargo of Merchandise.

MONTREAL, Oct. 28.—The Manchester Commerce was 3,444 tons net, and was owned by the Manchester Liners, a British shipping corporation. She carried a crew of about 43 men. Her master, Captain Paine, is well known and highly respected in Montreal shipping circles. The lost steamer was one of the large freighters plying regularly between Montreal and Manchester, and she left Montreal for the last time on Oct. 3.

COLOR OF ARMY HORSES.

A Move to Have All White or Gray Mounts Discarded.

The color line is being drawn by the army in the purchase of horses. It has not been drawn in favor of white or light horses, but against them, and in favor of sorrels, browns, bays and even blacks. Because of their visibility white and gray horses are not considered desirable for mounts. In the field they are a mark for sharpshooters, and on this account the quartermaster corps has stopped purchasing light colored horses. Officers are permitted to purchase gray horses if they care to take the chances of being shot in the event that they are on the firing line, but the inspector general's department has condemned the general use of gray horses in the army.

This, however, does not prevent many of the officers of the army from riding gray horses, and they have refused to draw the color line. Some of the members of the general staff are advocating the issuance of a general order prohibiting the use of gray or light colored horses in the army, as they claim that with even a few officers on light colored mounts the enemy will be able to locate a regiment or a company which might be on scout duty. The question whether a gray horse is officially regarded as a suitable mount for an officer has been the subject of lively controversy at at least one army post.—Army and Navy Journal.

SPY WITH CONTINGENT.

While at Sea German Secret Agent Was Discovered Among Men.

QUEBEC, Oct. 28.—A letter received here yesterday from one of the Quebec volunteers in the first Canadian contingent, says that out at sea, a German spy was caught on one of the transports.

The letter says that the man was disguised as a Canadian soldier, having been at the Valcartier camp throughout the whole length of the manoeuvres.

The letter comes from George Matte, a local constable, who wrote the news to his wife here.

Recruiting for the second Canadian contingent in Quebec is going on swiftly and already out of the four companies that are to be mobilized from this district, one company is fully manned from volunteers of the 9th Regiment of Fusiliers, wholly composed of French-Canadian members.

Twelve officers will be required for the four local companies and so far six have enlisted from the 9th Regiment.

Perhaps the Cincinnati Germans are arming with a view of shooting the Lachine rapids.

A Story of Heredity

By EUNICE BLAKE

Mrs. Waterbury employed a maid who was not only comely, but there was about her an air of one to the manner born. So impressed was the lady with the belief that Silvia had good blood in her veins that she asked the girl to tell her something about her origin. Silvia refused.

"Where did you spend your childhood?" asked Mrs. Waterbury.

"I cannot tell you," was the reply, while Silvia hung her head.

"Don't you remember your parents?"

"I do not."

"How long have you been in service?"

"Two years."

Mrs. Waterbury gave up trying to find her maid's antecedents, but she was not convinced that she had been born a servant. Silvia's case interested her the more because she reminded her of a woman she had met when she was entering society. This Mrs. Marshall had been at the time a woman of forty and had become a social leader from the fact of a certain courtliness there was about her.

What it was in the servant that reminded her of the high bred woman Mrs. Waterbury could not tell. Mrs. Marshall had been socially prominent a quarter of a century before. Mrs. Waterbury, who was twenty years her junior, had not been intimate with her and had seen her only at certain functions.

Silvia came to be an important person to her employer other than as a servant. Arthur Waterbury, the latter's son, came home from college and had not been in the house a day before his mother noticed that he had become engrossed with her maid. Arthur struggled against the passion till withholding expression of it became unbearable, then confessed it to Silvia. His mother overheard him doing so.

"You were not born a servant," said Arthur. "No such high bred manner could come from a plebeian; it is hereditary."

"I am a servant and nothing else," Silvia replied.

"Whatever you are I cannot help loving you. I do love you, and you shall be my wife."

"I will not be your wife, because to marry me would deprive you of the social position which is your right. You would always be ashamed of me, and I would drag you down."

Mrs. Waterbury heard no more. She said nothing to her son about what she had overheard, but the next day did all she could to save her son from a misalliance. She sent the girl away and did not tell Arthur where she had gone.

Several months passed. Mrs. Waterbury saw that her son was not the same man he had been before he came home from college. Ambition had left him; he took no interest in anything. He had experienced a grand passion, and the breaking with his mate had blighted his life.

Then came a coincidence—a chain of coincidences. If there were no coincidences there would be no stories.

Dr. Shotwell, Mrs. Waterbury's family physician, one day drove up to her house, rang and was admitted.

"Why, doctor," said the lady, "what brings you? We are all well here. Surely you must have called socially and are welcome socially."

"I have called to tell you of a singular happening."

"Let me hear it."

"You remember the pretty maid you had here for a time. I have often seen her here and noticed how little like a servant she appeared—that ladylike air"—

"Yes, we all noticed that," interrupted the lady somewhat impatiently.

"Well, on leaving you she at once found a position in a family I also attend professionally. She is ill, and I was called in to treat her. In applying a hot poultice between her shoulder blades I noticed a birthmark shaped something like a Maltese cross. I had reason to remember that birthmark, for I had attended the mother of the child who bore it eighteen years before under peculiar circumstances. The woman was the daughter of a social leader, and I had not heard that she had been married, though I was afterward furnished with proof that she was. At any rate, the accouchement was secret."

"The name of this family, doctor?" Mrs. Waterbury broke in.

"Marshall."

"Marshall! Do you mean to tell me that Silvia is the granddaughter of Mrs. James Osgood Marshall, who flourished socially twenty-five years ago?"

"I do. Julia Marshall, the daughter, married clandestinely. There was trouble in the family, and her mother withdrew from society. Julia's marriage was never published. The child was consigned to a foundlings' home and was lost to her parents, both of whom died soon after she was born."

When Silvia recovered her health she was removed to the house of her former mistress not as a servant, but as the betrothed of Arthur Waterbury. Her identity was established, and she came into possession of certain property that had been left her, but could not be paid since no trace of her could be found.

Since Mrs. Waterbury noticed in her daughter-in-law the manner of a woman she had not herself seen in more than twenty years she has become a strong believer in heredity.

AN ALABASTER SPHINX.

Historic Discovery on the Ancient Plains of Memphis.

Another sphinx, weighing ninety tons and carved from a single block of alabaster, has been unearthed at a point between the world famed colossi on the water logged plains of Memphis in Egypt. For hundreds of years it has lain in a recumbent position, buried beneath the sands on the road to Sakkareh. Today it is half exposed to view, and next year it is to be raised to a vertical position above the water line.

This newly found sphinx was betrayed in its hiding place by its tail, which Mr. Mackay, one of the students of the British school in Egypt, discovered about a year ago. This year, when the water on the plain subsided, the complete figure was excavated and was found to measure some fourteen feet high and twenty-six feet in length. Alabaster being a rock foreign to the neighborhood, the new sphinx ranks as the largest that has ever been transported. The figure bears no inscription, but is considered by Professor Flinders Petrie, the director of the British school in Egypt, to have been carved about 1,300 B. C.—London Standard.

The Aeroplane Stabilizer.

Elmer A. Sperry, winner of the $50,000 prize offered by the French war department for a stabilizer which makes aeroplane flying safe, is an American, a resident of New York. The test was made at Paris. The inventor first attracted wide attention in this country by a gyroscopic compass, which is now used by the warships of a number of nations. It is asserted that his latest invention makes aeroplanes safe under almost any circumstances.

Carpet Mystery Solved.

MONTREAL, Oct. 27.—Interesting revelations will, it is said, be made as a result of the successful efforts of the city detective department to trace the mysterious disappearance from the city hall, of a $700 carpet, which originally did duty in the council chamber. Detective Gagnon, who has been engaged on the case for the past few months, at the instance of Mayor Martin yesterday reported that the missing carpet has been found.

FOR HOUSEWIVES

COOKING CHICKENS.

This is the time of year when we think of killing off our extra chickens, if we raise them ourselves, or when we can buy them to best advantage if we have to purchase them. Some simple ways of cooking them that have often been tested may prove acceptable.

Fried Chicken.

Chickens to be fried should be young and tender. Pluck carefully, singe, draw out everything inside, cut into ten pieces not counting heart, liver and gizzard. Wash carefully. Have a frying pan about an inch or more deep with melted butter and fry gently over a moderate fire until of a golden brown color. Lift to a hot platter and serve as soon as possible.

Boiled Chicken.

This is a very good way of cooking old hens or tough fowl of any kind. Pluck, singe and draw carefully. Wash thoroughly outside and inside. Put over a fire in a large kettle and cover with boiling water. Simmer slowly until very tender, but not to fall to pieces. Boil rice separately to serve with this. Make a gravy of the water which has boiled with the chicken and serve with the chicken, but not on it. Boiled onions are a nice vegetable to serve with this. Serve the fowl whole on a platter surrounded by boiled rice.

White Fricassee of Chicken.

Prepare as for frying. Simmer until tender. Lift chicken carefully to hot platter and make a white gravy of the water it has boiled in. Have ready small hot biscuits, unsweetened. Break these and place around the chicken on the hot platter. When every one is ready to eat pour the hot gravy over the chicken and biscuits and serve at once.

All these recipes call for salt and pepper to suit the tastes of the family.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Hardening of the Arteries.

"Arteriosclerosis no longer holds any terrors," said Dr. Julius Pick of Germany. "This 'premature old age' is easily treated. The method I have followed with success—and I have cured thousands—is to have the patient inhale air containing emanations of radium and to drink water containing similar emanations. I prepare this air by passing oxygen over a preparation of radium. By inhalation the radium emanation enters the lungs and thence the arterial system, whence it finally reaches the blood in the veins. Through the means of the drinking water the radium emanation gets into the stomach and the intestines, being thence absorbed by the venous system. That is the main feature of the treatment.

"While arteriosclerosis is the disease of the day in most countries, I believe it is more prevalent in the United States than elsewhere because of the speed with which everything is done over here and the consequent neglect of certain precautions. There is little reason to apprehend hardening of the arteries prematurely if one practices this rule: Be moderate in eating and drinking, rest after daily work to prevent injuring the nervous system and be careful of gout, whether inherited or acquired. Do not forget to breathe accurately, for proper breathing is as essential to health as proper feeding."

The Kit Carson Tree.

The famous old elm tree in Riverside park at Halstead, which is becoming noted as one of the objects of interest along the Santa Fe trail by reason of its connection with the life of the famous old Indian fighter and scout, Kit Carson, has been suitably labeled by the placing of an attractive metal sign on it with this inscription: "The Historic Kit Carson Tree."—Kansas City Journal.

Cattle of Chile.

In Chile it seems to be the custom to let cattle shift for themselves, with the result that many die and others become so weak that tuberculosis and carbuncle work havoc year after year. It is estimated that 30 per cent of the cattle of the country die of contagious diseases, and there has been no organized effort as yet in Chile to meet these conditions.

Predicts Brilliant Victory.

PARIS, Oct. 28.—Ex-Premier Briand, who now holds the portfolio of justice in the Viviani Cabinet, in an interview published in Le Temps yesterday gives his impressions of a visit to the battlefront at Verdun and the frontier and declares that he brought back the conviction, calmly reasoned out, that the battle will result, in a brilliant victory for the allies.

M. Briand says that the Germans have been blinded and rendered maladroit by fury owing to the checks they have sustained.

THE FALL GARDEN WORK

With a warm and dry Fall such as the present one, many vines and bushes will be bearing very late, and consequently many people will be neglecting the general cleaning up which usually takes place in October.

As plowing or digging must be done before hard frost sets in, it is high time that all rubbish be disposed of and the ground left clear for the plow or spade. Burning is perhaps the most satisfactory way of getting rid of dead plants which are too bulky to plow or dig in, unless one decides to make a compost heap, and this is certainly the most economical procedure.

Late celery can still be hilled up a little, in fact one can leave this vegetable in the ground until there is danger of the earth becoming too hard to allow of its removal.

Some hardy shrubs and deciduous trees may be safely planted, while apples, plums, pears, and cherries are better planted now than in the spring.

Turnips and beets may not be harvested; if not, this is a good time to get at it before wet weather sets in and makes the work harder and spoils the best chances of the roots to keep in good condition.

Where hens are kept they should be in the garden now picking up what green stuff they can before it is turned down by the plow or spade, scratching out grubs and worms after the plow and generally getting away with superfluous insects.

Where the ground is too heavy it is a good plan to plow in strawy manure in the Fall, although general manuring is better left until spring.

FALL PLOWING THE GARDEN.

It is a serious mistake to neglect plowing the garden in the Fall. The most productive gardens are those that are plowed in autumn and again in the spring. Fall plowing helps wonderfully in putting the soil in suitable condition for the making of an ideal seed bed in the spring. I am speaking from many years' practical experience in farm garden making.

We always plow our garden soil thoroughly in the Fall and again in the spring, and have no difficulty whatever in producing an abundance of the various garden products. The Fall plowing, however, is not done until after October 1 on account of the liability of wasting nitrates if plowed before that date. In fact, I prefer to defer the plowing as late as possible and yet complete the work before the ground freezes. After October 1 no damage from wasting nitrates will occur, as the temperature is not high enough to permit nitrification going on to any great extent.

Burn Litter First.

Before plowing it is well to make a clean-up of the litter that has accumulated on the grounds during the summer and burn as much of it as possible, thereby destroying as many of the weed seeds, also disease germs and some insect pests which harbor for the winter in the rubbish on the garden area. Then the land should be given a generous dressing of well decomposed barnyard manure. If the chickens are invited in to help distribute the fertility they will devour many worms and grubs found in the same. They will also enjoy following the plow in search for any insects and worms found in the soil.

The ground should be thoroughly harrowed just after plowing, and especially where the early vegetables, such as onions, peas, lettuce, radish, etc., are to be planted in the spring. Success with these vegetables depends greatly upon early planting, hence the necessity of plowing the ground in the Fall that it may be worked as early as possible in the spring.

Control Cutworms by Fall Plowing.

Cutworms, which are so destructive to tender plants in the spring, never do much damage where the land has been plowed in the Fall as where this has been omitted. Also the effects of dry weather on garden crops are not so serious when the soil is not so treated.

We should be liberal with our land for garden purposes. If one does not have a long row of asparagus plants in bearing conditions, now is a good time to prepare a place for at least 200 plants. The roots can be set in the spring. The same is true of other plants, such as rhubarb. An acre or two dedicated to a garden and prepared as I have indicated will yield a greater return in comfort and good health to the family.—W. H. Hardy.

MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED

TRANSFERED TO UNION BANK AT SMITH'S FALLS

Many local people will regret to learn that Mr. D. C. MacRostie, manager of the South End Union Bank, has been transferred to Smith's Falls. Although in the city but a short time Mr. and Mrs. MacRostie were very prominent in the social circle and their departure leaves a vacancy that will be hard to fill. "Mac" was also very popular in the sporting community being a member of the Bankers' hockey and baseball teams. Mr. MacRostie also belonged to the Bowling Green Tennis Club of which he was a valued member.

The business men and residents of the south end of the city who have formed the custom of transacting their business in the South End branch of the Union Bank will likewise miss Mr. MacRostie but undoubtedly the move means a movement upward on the ladder and in his efforts he has the sincere wishes for success from his many Peterboro friends.

SOLDIERS OF THE KING

Recruiting at the Armouries continues under favorable conditions. Last evening seven were successful in passing their examinations, which makes a total of 49 for the week. Drill has been discontinued until further orders, but recruiting will go on till the desired number is obtained.

A number of the companies had rifle practice last evening, and the members are showing a big improvement. Being a good shot is one of the best assets of a good soldier.

Local Officers Ranked.

Militia orders give the rank held by officers of the 57th Regiment, who left with the first contingent, as follows:—

Col. Clegg, supernumberary major; Major Bennett, captain second infantry battalion; Col. C. H. Rogers, major, second infantry battalion; Major Mills, Hon. Major, second infantry battalion; Lieut. Ackerman, first lieutenant, first infantry battalion; Lieut. Mathews, third lieutenant, first field artillery brigade.

Orders were read last night as follows:—

Headquarters,

Peterborough, Oct. 27th, 1914.
Orders by the O.C. 57th Regiment P. R.

1. Regimental drill will be discontinued until further orders.

2. Recruiting for overseas service will be continued each evening at the Armouries, at 8 o'clock, until the required quota of seventy-five men is made up.

3. The C.O. has been pleased to make the following promotions: B. Co., to be corporals provisionally: Ptes. H. Latimer and A. Cranfield.

We heard on Saturday that Antwerp was on fire.

About five o'clock one of the three-funnel battleships that had been away off from us, came in closer and steamed up the lines, and we could see what a battleship was like. We all lined up on deck, and were to await the colonel's whistle to cheer, but we broke out ahead of the whistle. It was a great sight, with the hundreds of sailors on board, all dressed in white. We gave cheer after cheer, and the tars returned our greeting. Then we heard a band playing "The Maple Leaf," and we cheered again. I missed the first table in the excitement, but I would have missed them all to see the sight.

Tuesday.—It is very rough today. "B" Company was standing on deck at attention, and a big wave broke over the side and drenched them. I was out enjoying the breeze, and received a share of the spray. We will dock tomorrow, but will sleep on the ship.

MAKE PLANS FOR SYSTEM OF SURFACE DRAINAGE

According to City Engineer Parsons, the Engineering Department will do considerable work this winter on making plans for a surface draining system. The new outfall sewer will not carry any surface drainage and for that reason something must be done to carry it away, particularly in the section of the city around Wescott, Lake and Parnell Streets.

Mr. Parsons at present is getting the surface drainage out of the sewer main as much as possible where the pavement is being laid and anticipates having a system next summer that will embrace all the city.

(Lindsay Warder.)

Unprecedented in a retrospection which dates back one-quarter of a century is the shallowness of the water in the Scugog river at the present time. It is a remarkable fact that the water has dropped four inches from Saturday night until today.

Should this diminution continue it will force the large lumber mill of the John Carew Co. to close down for a limited time, or until probably the coming spring.

It is understood that the cause of the shrinkage is through the removing of the stop logs at Bobcaygeon, which is evidently for the benefit of Peterboro millmen.

Is Lindsay going to stand with folded arms and permit such unwanton waste of water to the detriment of our mill owners and the working men of Lindsay?

Some proceedings must be taken at once to stop the waste, which, if permitted, will leave many idle men around Lindsay for the winter. Action on the part of proper authoities should be taken without delay.

A Reservation.

"Tell me, dearest — would you marry a spendthrift?"

"Surely—if he had the thrift."—Judge.

LAWRENCE D'ORSAY,

Britain's Famous Comedian, at "The Grand" next Monday in "The Earl of Pawtucket"

Mr. Lawrance D'Orsay, who is making his Canadian tour in his famour characterization of "The Earl of Pawtucket" is naturally a comedian. He feels the part he plays being absolutely alone in the kind of parts he plays; he carries not only the mannerisms of these favorite character, but their view points into private life. He admires them and says, quite frankly, that the reason he plays them so well is that he understands them.

Mr. D'Orsay is generally looked upon as the best stage representation of the British heavy swell, but the thoughtful observer of his acting must see in it a good deal more than the ponderous vacuity we involuntarily associate with that character. The fact is, he is a thinking actor. His impersonations have a meaning deeper than their superficial aspect would indicate. It is a truism that the hardest part an actor can undertake is "doing nothing." Any one can rear up and tear around and so create an impression of doing a great deal, but the actor who can make his presence dramatically felt by sheer force of cultivated repose has got a long way from apprenticeship.

Mr. D'Orsay's work is naturalness itself, and his portrayal of an English gentleman of rank remains one of the brilliant successes of the stage.

Mr. D'Orsay and his all-star company will appear at the Grand Opera House on Monday, Nov. 2nd, one night only. Theatregoers may look forward to the event of the season.

START OUTFALL SEWER OPERATIONS, FRIDAY

City Engineer Parsons informed a Review man today that men would be put to work on the outfall sewer on Friday. The first work executed will be at the south end of Lock Street. From the commencing point till the corner of King George Street is rounded, the ditch will be excavated in the regular way by the spade. Some two weeks will be required to do this section and then the hoist which has been built will be put to work on King George St. This hoist will consist of six buckets and a carriage. The buckets will be lowered and filled, then brought to the surface and run along the carriage to the part where the pipe has been laid. This will do away with placing the earth on the sides of the trench and as the rails of the carriage will be less than two hundred feet in length there will be but a small section of the road open at a time. The work will proceed along King George to Park and then north on Park to Rink Street. There the Park Street sewer main and the Rubidge Street main will be connected. The main on Albert Street will be connected at the corner of Albert and Park Streets.

"Do you expect to be able to work during the winter?" the scribe asked. In reply he was informed that the frost would be an assistance as it would freeze the sides and help in combating against any caving in.

The average depth of the trench will be fifteen feet. The sewer pipe will be placed in a concrete bed, the thickness of this concrete being five inches. Under the concrete a plank platform will be made if the bottom is not solid and in places where the bottom is very soft piles will be driven.

IT IS WRONG TO PLAY CARDS AND DANCE ?

Dr- Gordon's Address To-night Will Deal With Popular Amusements

The George Street Methodist Church was filled last evening, to the doors, at half past seven o'clock. One remakable feature of the gathering was the large proportion of young men and business men present. These were doubtless attracted by the special subject announced, "The Mistakes in the life of a married man," which Dr. Gordon dealt with in a most direct, personal and unconventional fashion.

Prior to the opening of the meeting, Mr. Edouard Hesselberg, occupied fifteen minutes in providing the waiting congregation with his special musical selections. These were especially appreciated by those present, and tonight, Mr. Hesselberg will provide another unique programme, beginning promptly at seven-thirty o'clock.

Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the colored singer, sang three selections, the titles of which were "Beyond the Hills of Paradise," "When the trumpet of the Lord shall sound," and an old plantation melody, entitled "Steal away to Jesus." He will sing this evening "Life's Railway to Heaven," "The Lord is my Light," and "My Mother's Prayer."

Seated on thep latform were, the Rev. J. R. Webb, of the Baptist Church, Adjutant McElhiney of the Salvation Army, the Rev. Mr. R. Pogue of St. Paul's Church, and the Rev. R. G. Peever, pastor of the George Street Methodist Church. The Rev. Mr. Webb opened the meeting by prayer.

Dr. Gordon answered a number of special questions and announced that this evening his whole address would be given up to the questions which bear upon the subject of amusements, answering such questions as these: Is it wrong to dance? Is it wrong to play cards? Is it wrong to go to the theatre? Is it wrong for a Christian to smoke? The address this evening, in answer to these questions, will be exceedingly practical and to the point.

In speaking on the subject announced, "The mistakes of married men," Dr. Gordon made ten points.

First: The mistake of living for your own family. There are men who have no other concern, save the well fare of their own children. They are absolutely bereft of anything which might be known, as a public spirit. Their enthusiasm for humanity never goes beyond the four walls of the house in which they reside.

Second: The mistake of not providing for the future welfare of the family. There are women who have been married for twenty-five years, who have no knowledge or information whatever, concerning the financial affairs of the head of the house. If they were to drop into the grave tomorrow, they would be in absolute ignorance of what provision had been made for the widow and children. A marriage certificate and a life insurance policy should go together. I have known life insurance agents who joked about their business. Life insurance is not a joke, and one of the best forms of modern socialism is manifested and crystallized in these fraternal organizations, associations and institutions, where we come together to help each other financially. Sir Bulwer Lytton said, "Never treat money affairs with levity, for money is character."

Third: The mistake of compromising your family by engaging in a mean business. There are men who are making money in the liquor business; lots of money, but I am not aware that it calls for any special application or any particular mental fitness to fish a man of his brains, and rob him of the money that belongs to wife and children. Think of the shame and chagrin which comes to the wife and daughters of the man whose business is of such a character that humanity universally crowns him with contempt.

Fourth: The mistake of supposing that your children are not acquainted with your habits. In the days of Charles the First, when a man was convicted of infidelity, they applied one hundred lashes to his back and branded him on the brow, with the letter "I." That was a mean contemptible thing to do, but by way of illustration let me remark, that your habits are written upon your face, just as contemptible as the letter "I" was branded upon the brow of the infidel, in days gone by. Father, your children know that you swear, they know that you drink, they know that you gamble. It is hard to hide anything from the sincerity and candour of childhood.

Fifth: The mistake of permitting club life to break and blast the home life. There are clubs and clubs, and we thank God for a decent club house, but there are club houses in almost every community, which are veritable hell holes, breathing forth a moral stench and blighting atmosphere. Would to God that we had the moral courage in our day and time, to rise and blot out from our cities, the social institutions which are spreading the virus of moral leprosy.

Sixth: The mistake of neglecting the boys who shall bear your own name. Wyatt L. Moodie said, that he knew twelve men in Philadelphia, who would give $250,000 apiece if their sons could be deemed to honour, sobriety and industry, but these men had been so busy making their millions that they had forgotten all about their boys until it was well nigh too late. How little joy a man can get out of his millions, when he has a drunken, idiotic, dissipated son, who calls him by the name of "Father."

Seventh: The mistake of working seven days in the week. The man who goes to his office on the Sabbath Day, to attend to some business matters which he is not able to handle, as he thinks, when crowded and jostled on the other days of the week, is unconsciously doing all in his power to break down the vital institutions of Christianity in the community. Voltaire was not a professed Christian, but Voltaire said, "There is no hope of destroying Christianity, so long as the Sabbath is kept sacred. The Sabbath is a physical necessity. If you do not take your Sundays regularly, the chances are, you will take them in a row. Man is so constituted that he must have one day's rest in seven. You owe it to yourself, and you owe it to the community.

No Sobbath, no Religion,
No Religion, No Morality,
No Morality, no Society,
No Society—ANARCHY.

Blot out the Sabbath and there can be but one result, anarchy.

Eighth: The mistake of allowing your business to crowd out every other issue. E. H. Harriman said: "I would control all the railroads in the United States, if I could get them. His ambition was to own a mountain. Tonight he lies buried beneath the mountain which he owned When he was sick, there were three telephones in his room and a telegraph instrument ticking in the room outside. He died scarcely more than 67 years of age. Was it worth while?

Ninth: The mistake of living and working on stimulants. The sad thing about the man who is becoming addicted to drink is that nobody will take him by the hand and tell him where he is drifting, and yet each day his hand is becoming more unsteady, and his power of self-control more unreliable. There are men in this audience tonight who have uttered contemptible words in the presence of wife and children, who five years ago would never have dreamed of such a thing. Rum is beginning to rot the brain. Said a poor fellow in New York City, whose nervous system had been inflamed by strong drink: "I'm dying, hopeless, friendless, penniless and an outcast and it might have been so different."

Tenth: The mistake of opposing your wife's religion in the presence of your children. Even an infidel might be proud of the religion of his wife. There is no brighter crown of spiritual glory for womanhood than that which is wrapped up in a woman's religious convictions. Whether Protestant or Catholic, a man's convictions should be reverred. The daughter of Colonel Allen of Vermont, the notorious infidel of the past generation—the daughter, when dying, exclaimed: "Father, shall I believe you or shall I believe mother?" After a moment of extreme agitation, he replied—"My child, believe what your mother has taught you." Infidelity always falls in the presence of death, while, on the other hand, there is deep meaning in the words of Hannah: "No man has ever been known to deny Christianity in his dying hour."

Dr. Gordon closed his address with an earnest evangelistic appeal.

Well Known Norwood Lady Passes Away After Long Illness

Norwood, Oct. 28. — A very sad death occurred in Norwood Tuesday morning when Mrs. Richardson, wife of Mr. W. A. Richardson, of Peterboro St., passed away after a long illness. Mrs. Richardson had been confined to her home for several months and during that time no hope was entertained for her recovery although everything that human agencies could do was done for her. Some few months ago, she was taken to one of the best hospitals in the country thinking that an operation might save her life but the surgeons deemed an operation an vise and she was brought home where everything possible was done to prolong her life and also make her few remaining days pass in peace and happiness.

Mrs. Richardson has been a lifelong member of the Methodist Church and before her illness took a very active interest in the affairs of the church and especially in the W.M.S. of which she has been an active member and zealous worker during her life in Norwood.

She leaves to mourn her loss besides her bereaved husband one son, Dr. Roy Richardson who since his mother's condition became helpless has remained at home doing all in his power to help alleviate her suffering and impart joy and consolation to the one who is the "boy's best friend."

The Late Jas. Nichol.

On Monday of this week death entered another home here and removed the head of the house and bread winner of the family. Mr. James Nichol, of Dummer Road, passed away peacefully after a busy life, having reached the grand old age of 81 years. Mr. Nichol has been a man of unusual robust physique and during his long life was nearly always as his post. For a long time he has been in the employ of J. Finlay & Sons Co., where he worked until his recent short illness. Deceased was born in the township of Dummer and has resided in this vicinity all his life. Messrs. Matthew and Richard Nichol of this place are brothers.

ELECTED FIRST VICE-PRESIDENT

C. E. Moore Elected to West Riding Conservative Association

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the West Riding Conservative Association last evening the resignation of Mr. Wm. Bullet was accepted. Mr. C. E. Moore of Smith was elected to the position of first vice-president. Mr. C. S. McClelland was appointed chairman of ward 3. A committee was appointed to confer with the member and executive of the east riding.

BRASS BAND WON FROM COMPANY 7

The Brass Band still maintain their winning streak at indoor baseball. Last evening they defeated No. 7 Co., 19-13. The battery for the band were Swanson and Grange, and for No. 7, Hall and Gribb. Mr. "Bob" Biggs officiated as umpire. This is his first performance in this capacity, and his work was very commendable. He umpired to the satisfaction of both sides.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

THE J. M. GREENE CO. are pleased to anounce that after several years' experience handling the different makes of talking machines and watching the evolution that took place in the production and perfection of these marvellous musical instruments, we have arrived at the conclusion that the New Edison Diamond Disc is by far the greatest triumph yet produced in a sound reproducing instrument, and have decided to handle the Edison goods exclusively convinced that our patrons will receive more real satisfaction and pleasure from the use of the Edison Diamond Disc or Cylinder Machines than from anything else we could sell them. We thoroughly believe this move is the best not only for our own interests but for those of our patrons. We must believe in the goods we sell before we recommend them to our customers, and to the Edison Diamond Disc Cabinet Machines and Amberolas, we can give our unqualified endorsement in every case. Sound reproduction by the Diamond Disc Machine is undoubtedly far superior to all previous achievements of Mr. Edison. No more needle changing. The reproduction point is a genuine diamond that never wears out, and requires no changing. The Edison Diamond Disc Machines are bound to be the choice of discriminating music lovers in the end, thus we are following our principle—to offer the best only.

PUT WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL.

WITH the advent of our adoption of the Edison goods exclusively, we want to give every home in Peterboro and District a special opportunity to install one of these magnificent instruments, whether they already have an Edison instrument or older style, or a talking machine of any other make already in the home or not. In case you have an instrument, which no doubt you have enjoyed in the past because it was good at the time you bought it, we will gladly take it as part payment on a New Edison Diamond Disc Amberola or Cabinet Machine, and make a liberal allowance for it. The balance we will arrange on the easiest possible terms of payment. Where there is no instrument of the kind in the home at present we will be pleased to place the instrument you may select from our splendid stock, in your home for a two or three days' demonstration, and in case of purchase can make the terms of payment most favorable and easy for anyone to handle. This Free Demonstration will put you under no obligation to buy whatever but is following out of the wish of Mr. Edison, the great inventor, to see "an Edison in every home in Canada."

FREE DEMONSTRATION IN OUR TALKING MACHINE PARLOURS AT ANY TIME. LET US SHOW YOU.

MAHOGANY OR QUARTERED OAK

SUCCESS ON RIGHT WING ANNOUNCED BY WAR OFFICE

Fierce Attacks in Region of Bakalarzewo Have Been Repulsed and Convoy of Prisoners Taken at Gombin—Germans in Retreat at Novo in Russian Poland—Warsaw Affair Puzzles Russians.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 28.—The following official communication from the Russian General Staff was issued here last evening:

"Fighting has begun on the front in eastern Prussia. We have repulsed fierce German attacks in the region of Bakalarzewo. We took at Gombin, on the left bank of the Vistula, a convoy of prisoners.

"The battle front on Oct. 26 extended from Koutno through Tezow, Rawa, Nowemiasto, Bailbrzegi and Glowaczow to the mouth of the Ilzanka.

"Among the German troops there were many recruits.

"The fighting was especially fierce around Tezow and Rawa, where we captured portions of the enemy's positions.

"We won a victory that was essential toward Novo, Alexandria and Zwolen (Russian Poland). The enemy there is in retreat. We took about 50 officers and 3,000 men, several machine guns and eight cannon.

"South of Solec our troops, after crossing the Vistula, took eight officers and 300 men and some machine guns.

"Around Przemysl we have advanced as far on the railway as Staremiasto and Surkas."

Reliable information received here from Warsaw, giving a detailed history of the attempted German advance in Russian Poland, says that the Russian generals are absolutely at a loss to explain what they call a German error in delaying a night attack until the opportunity was lost.

For unknown reasons the Germans suddenly decided to delay the attack until morning, which allowed the Siberian and other Russian reinforcements adequately to protect the city. Papers found in the possession of German officers indicate that the general plan was to attack Warsaw that night. One explanation for the change in the plan is that the Germans failed to secure the assistance of the Polish element upon which they had counted.

The Russians are now engaged in a constant succession of hand-to-hand battles with the columns falling back from the Vistula. The main strength of these now extends over an irregular line from the Radom woods westward in the direction of Piotrkow and upwards into the woods south of Rawa.

The bulk of the heavy casualties comes from bayonet fighting in the deserted villages where the Germans are seeking to establish themselves. From the nature of the operations now in progress it is foreseen that there would be several days of appalling casualties.

The Russians greatly outnumbered the retreating columns, whose wings are constantly threatened by the approach of Russian troops.

GERMAN ADVANCE ALONG CHANNEL, WASTE OF MEN

Invaders Are Held at Every Point and Allies Make Substantial Gain Near Dixmude—Unconfirmed Report Says Force of 5,000 Germans Has Been Annihilated.

LONDON, Oct. 28. — From the mouth of the River Yser at Nieuport in Belgium, to Lens, in France, which constitutes the allied line opposing the German advance along the channel, all efforts of the invaders were yesterday frustrated. Despite the orders of the German war lord that Dunkirk and Calais must be taken immediately and without consideration of the cost, the situation remains the same. The pick of the German troops, more than 300,000 in number, are being thrown away in a vain struggle to cut through the defence. The heaviest fighting of the day is understood to have taken place between Ypres and Roulers. To the southwest of Dixmude the allies not only held their positions but made substantial gains.

Although the Germans now have their big Howitzers in action, the guns which demolished Liege, Namur and Antwerp, these powerful weapons are proving much less effective against mobile forces than in siege operations. The allied commanders have adopted a policy of constant manoeuvring. Large forces never remain in the same place very long and the destruction from the German pieces is negligibly small. Another factor which is counting against the Germans is the character of the country along their route of advance. The land is extremely flat and entirely unsuited to intrenching on the scale carried out along the Aisne. This compels the German infantry to come forward in close formation across open plains and the execution of the allied artillery is described as terrible in the extreme.

Advices from the neighbodhood of Ghent state that the city has been practically evacuated by the German garrison, their place being taken by Austrians. Heavy reinforcements continue to come up on both sides.

The naval contingent is checking all efforts of the Germans to advance directly along the coast. The three monitors which rendered such splendid service in the early days of the fighting and which are said to have been damaged by fire from shore batteries, are understood to have returned yesterday and resumed their play on all German positions within reach.

An unconfirmed report says that a portion of the German army, numbering 5,000 men was annihilated west of the River Yser by a large force of French. The Germans attempted to storm the French trenches and were allowed to approach very near their objective when they suddenly found themselves subject to an enfilading fire. Only a few hundred of the attacking column escaped.

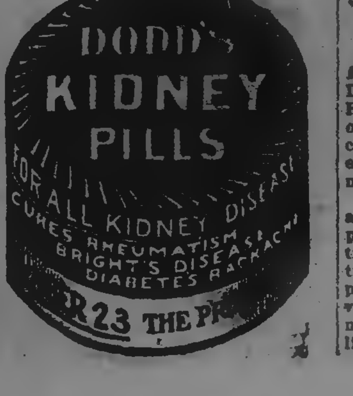
A notable success of the French is reported from the east end of the 300-mile front. A drive in the vicinity of Nancy threw the Germans over the French border into Lorraine. From Pont-a-Mousson to Pagny, the entire country is freed of the invader.

St. Mihiel is in the hands of the Crown Prince despite all efforts to dislodge his forces. But east of that town the French are making splendid progress and the enveloping movement against his position is expected to reach an early and successful issue. North of Metzicourt, the town in the heart of the Argonne forest, taken Monday, the Germans lost additional ground yesterday.

There was renewed activity on the centre yesterday morning when a bombardment from French guns drove the Germans from fortified posts between Soissons and Berry-au-Bac. Several German batteries are said to have been blown to bits. At all points the German offensive appears to have reached a critical stage. They must either go forward or backward. The latter eventuality seems most unlikely and military authorities predict a general retirement all along the front within a few days. On the other hand reliable reports say that the Kaiser was in Belgium on Sunday and gave emphatic orders that Dunkirk and Calais must be captured, laying special stress on the importance of the latter port.

Along the old front, stretching from the River Oise to the Meuse, from which the Germans withdrew their best troops to strengthen the army which is attempting to advance along the coast, the French have been taking the offensive, and to the north of Soissons have been engaging in an artillery duel with the Germans in which they have destroyed several of the German batteries. They seem to have been playing at this game for some time, for the last three reports from Paris have announced the destruction of German guns.

Further east, the offensive tactics of the French have driven the Germans, who were threatening Nancy back across the frontier. The Germans, however, are so strongly entrenched along the long line that it is believed they are preparing to remain for the winter, holding their positions until their present objectives, the northern ports of France have been attained.



Captured German Banner.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—In the fighting around Arras, George Andre, noted French athlete, outdistanced his comrades in a bayonet charge and suddenly found himself well within the German lines. He seized a banner from the hands of a nearby colorbearer and boothalled his way through the Germans surrounding him. They were so astonished at his conduct that he succeeded in regaining the French line, although wounded in the foot.

Contract Awards Non-Partisan.

OTTAWA, Oct. 28. — Sir George Foster, Hon. J. D. Reid, Hon. J. C. Doherty, Hon. Louise Coderre, and Hon. J. D. Hazen, the sub-committee of the Cabinet engaged in allotting contracts for military supplies required from Canada by the allied powers, met yesterday.

Most of the contracts have been awarded for the present order of supplies. The contracts are being distributed impartially, giving all localities a share and without reference to political leanings, but with the broad view of restricting unemployment as much as possible and of securing delivery in the shortest possible time.

LIEUT-GENERAL FRANKLYN DEAD

Leader of Third Division of New Army Passes Suddenly

LONDON, Oct. 28. — Lt.-Gen. Sir William Edmund Franklyn, who commanded the third division of Kitchener's new army, died suddenly last night.

Lt.-Gen. Franklyn, prior to assuming the command in Kitchener's army, was military secretary to the Secreatry for War, which post he had held since 1911. He was born in 1856 and served with distinction in India and other countries. He was director of the adjutant-general's department of the War Office in 1904-06.

A casualty list issued last night, dated Oct. 23 reports 16 officers killed, 35 wounded and 23 missing. Among the wounded are Brig.-Gen. C. T. McM. Kavanagh and Lt.-Col. E. B. Cook, First Life Guards; Lt.-Col. A. F. H. Ferguson, Second Life Guards, and Lt.-Col. B. E. Ward, Middlesex Regiment.

Capt. John Jacob Astor, First Life Guards, son of William Waldorf Astor, was wounded in a battle in France.

The 60th Prussian casualty list, with accompanying Saxon and Bavarian lists, was published in Berlin yesterday. The list is headed with the name of Lt.-Gen. Frederic of Saxe-Meiningen, who was killed in a battle near Montigney, Aug. 23.

VON BESELER A SUICIDE.

German General Who Took Antwerp Has Slain Himself.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—A startling development of the day is the suicide of Gen. Hans von Beseler, the conqueror of Antwerp, who, according to late advices shot himself at his headquarters in Bruges and died almost instantly. This information comes by way of Rotterdam on what appears to be good authority. No reason is assigned fr his act.

Gen. von Beseler is the second high commander of the Kaiser's forces to take his own life since hostilities opened, of which information has reached the public. The first was the leader of the army which besieged Liege.

Our Great Crops.

Cotton is not the king of our crops. The corn crop of the country in 1913 was worth $1,692,092,000, while the cotton crop for the same year was worth $797,841,000. The hay crop ran cotton a pretty close race, selling for $707,-077,000. Wheat comes a close third to cotton, $610,124,000, while all the other products are well in the rear. The number of bales of cotton raised in 1913 was 13,677,000—500 pounds to the bale.

When You Want to Laugh---Eat!

And If You Want to Eat Without Food Fears Take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet After Each Meal.

Laugh, smiles and mirth never go with a "caved-in" stomach. Fancy a-man-afraid-of-his - food laughing! There is always that haunting feeling that a sick stomach is nothing to be mirthful about.

"My old grouchy days are funny to me now."

Just make up your mind to help nature help herself. Give your body a chance to make good. Heal the raw edges of your stomach and give your blood the tools to make digestive fluids with.

There is only one way to make the body well — give it the chance to make itself well. Harmful and strong medicines handicap the system. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go into the stomach just like food. They are dissolved and they strengthen the weakened juices of the digestive apparatus until the digestion is made normal.

There is nothing mysterious or magical about them. Science has proved that certain ingredients make Dyspepsia Tablets are these concen- up the digestive juices. Stuart's trated ingredients—that is all there is to it. One grain of a certain ingredient contained in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest 3,000 grains of food. This illustrates how you aid nature to restore her worn-out materials. When a stomach which is filled with food receives a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet, it is more able to digest the food than it would be without it. The work is not so hard nor the task so long.

When the meal is finally assimilated the entire system absorbs more nourishment and harmful food effects are eliminated easily, quickly and with the maximum of benefit.

Every drug store carries Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. To anyone wishing a free trial of these tablets please address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., and a small sample package will be mailed free.

ICE-BREAKER IS RE-NAMED

Lady Grey Owned by Russia is Called the Canada

OTTAWA, Oct. 24. — The Government steamer Lady Grey, the icebreaker, used on the St. Lawrence river and in the Northumberland Straits, which has been sold to the Russian Government, is now at Archangel, where she will be used to keep that northern port open for general traffic and the transportation of war supplies during the winter. The privately owned breaker J. T. Hearne of Port Arthur, has also been delivered to Russia for the same purpose.

A cable from M. Timasheff, Russian Minister of Commerce, was received by H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught as follows: "I beg Your Royal Highness to accept the respectful expression of profound gratitude which I hasten to present in the name of all interested in the Archipelago sea route, for the valuable aid given by Canada in providing the fine icebreaker, which has now arrived safely at Archangel. It is renamed the Canada, in commemoration of the assistance rendered by the Canadian Government."

ANGOLA INVADED

Action of Germany Forces Portugal Into Conflict

PARIS, Oct. 28.—In a message from Lisbon, sent by way of Madrid, the correspondent of the Havas Agency says:

"Despatches received here say that German troops have forcibly invaded the Portuguese province of Angola, West Africa.

"Preparations are being made to despatch immediately warships and troops from Portugal to Angola."

Angola lies north of German Southwest Africa and borders on the Congo State, which, of course, belongs to Belgium. By traversing Angola and the Congo State the Germans would establish communication between their East and West African possessions. Recent despatches recorded the sending of 10,000 Portuguese troops to Angola under the escort of British warships.

PORTUGUESE ARE EXCITED

Government is Buying Uniforms and Mules for Army

LISBON, Portugal, Oct. 28.—Portugal is excited at the possibility of taking part in the war as an ally of Great Britain under the treaty which requires this country, if asked, to supply a contingent of at least 10,000 troops.

The Portuguese army is equipped with Schneider-Canet artillery which, it is said, Great Britain will be glad to have. The Government, anticipating a winter campaign, has ordered 18,000 thick uniforms and is buying great numbers of mules.

Independence Day, Oct. 5, was not observed with the usual festivities, but the money that would have been spent upon fireworks and public shows was contributed to the Belgian sufferers from the war. Addresses of sympathy were presented to the Belgian and British Ministers by a committee, at the head of a procession of 50,000 people.

Anti-Swearing Box Did Well.

LONDON, Oct. 28. — Salvationists who have friends among the Canadian contingent will learn with interest that four members serving in one company introduced an anti-swearing box, one cent per swear being the penalty imposed. Between Saturday and Monday the box received ten shillings.

German Casualties Heavy.

ROME, Oct. 28.—According to official reports received here the German casualties daily average 10,000 men in killed and wounded. All of those slightly or not gravely wounded, an average of from 70 to 80 per cent. return to the ranks after a relatively short time.

Corpl. Ogden Accidentally Shot.

LONDON, Oct. 28—Armorer Corpl. William Ogden, 12th Battalion, Canadian infantry, was accidentally shot at Bond Farm Camp, Salisbury Plains, Sunday, dying from injuries the same night. All his relatives reside this side.

REGIMENTAL NICKNAMES.

How Britain's Crack Corps Got Their Common Titles.

Such nicknames as the "Death or Glory Boys," the "Black Watch" or the 42nd Highlanders, and the "Tigers," so called because the Leicesters have a tiger for their regimental badge, are well known and commonly used, but there are others which are extremely curious, such as the "Snappers," the "Cherry Pickers," "Strawboots," and "Pontius Pilate's Bodyguard."

The "Snappers" are the East Yorkshire Regiment, and this title is one of great honor, although it sounds frivolous enough. On a memorable occasion their ammunition gave out, and, in ordinary course, there was nothing to be done but to turn and flee or stand still to be shot or taken prisoners. However, although they had no cartridges they refused to budge, and continued to snap their triggers in the faces of the enemy with such vigor that they were dubbed the "Snappers" ever afterwards, much to their credit.

The "Cherry Pickers" are probably not so proud of their sobriquet, because, although it is no disgrace to them, it is no particular honor. It is surprising how many regimental nicknames belong to the period of the Peninsular War, and this is one of them. It applies to the 11th Hussars, who have been known by this name exactly a century by reason of the fact—or fiction—that a number of men of that regiment were captured by the enemy in an orchard actually engaged in refreshing their parched mouths with cherries. "Strawboots," which is the nickname of the 7th Dragoon Guards, does not sound very euphonious, but it is a finer title than many a high-sounding one. It recalls a time of devotion and bravery and fortitude in very distressing circumstances. It was, in fact, bestowed upon them by their admiring compatriots when they returned from Warburg, for their boots being completely worn off their feet, they had bound them round with straw to keep out the wet and cold.

The First Foot have been called "Pontius Pilate's Bodyguard" time out of mind. At one time the regiment was temporary in the French service, and a camp-fire dispute raged as to whether they were not an older establishment than the men of Picardy, with whom they were associated. The result is reminiscent of the story of Murphy, the Irishman, who claimed that his family preceded the Flood, and when faced with the fact that none of that name are in the records of the Ark, replied, "Did innybody iver hear av a Murphy widout a boat av his own?"

In the same vein the men of the Picardy regiment claimed that as one of the Roman cohorts they were on duty on the night of the crucifixion, as indeed some of their ancestors might have been. To this the Britishers retorted that they also were there and very wideawake, too, for they were acting, while the Picardy men were asleep, as Pontius Pilate's bodyguard.

Would Wind Up Trust Company.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 28.—A petition was filed yesterday in the Supreme Court asking for the winding up of the Dominion Trust Co. The petitioner is A. J. Maxton, a capitalist of Calais, France, who claims to be a creditor to the extent of approximately $130,000. His agent in Vancouver is J. M. Mathers, the first president of the Dominion Trust Co., who now holds no interest in the concern. Quite a legal battle may take place in the winding-up process. The directors have called a meeting of shareholders to present a plan for voluntary liquidation.

SWITZERLAND TO STAY ARMED

BERNE, Switzerland, Oct. 28.—The triennial election for members of the Swiss National Council resulted yesterday in the change of only eight seats. The standing of the political parties in the council now is: Radicals 110, Conservative Catholics 39, Socialists 18, Liberals 13, Social Reformers 1, Independents 2.

The Government has spent $10,000,000 upon the mobilization and maintenance of Swiss troops guarding neutrality. The decision of the Administration has been that it would not be safe to disarm at the present time.

THE SPORTING WORLD

LOTS OF HOCKEY FOR TORONTO THIS SEASON

Rankin and La Flamme to Retire—"Ack" Hunter of T.R.C. in Peterboro — Big Year Expected for "Gamey Stratton

The Toronto professionals, who won the championship last year, will be almost intact, the only player not being available is "Scotty" Davidson, the big wing man, who is away with the soldiers. George McNamara one of the famous "dynamite twins," who was loaned to the champions, will be back with his brother on the Ontarios, but Holmes Cameron, Wilson, Foyston, Marshall and Walker are almost sure to again line up with the champions. Manager Marshall was in town a couple of weeks ago, and has lines out for a couple of crack players in the East.

The Ontarios will have to strengthen up in several positions, but have the nucleus of a good team in Macdonald and the two McNamaras, while Herbert, the little goaler from Ottawa, should be even better than last season. Owner Wall and Manager Murphy are looking around for material, and will not be satisfied until they have a good team.

Amateur Prospects.

In the senior amateur ranks the T. R. and A.A. champions will again be out, and as they have last year's septette intact will again be favorites for the honors. Eddie Livingstone can also be depended upon to dig up a couple of new men in case anything goes wrong with the present aggregation.

St. Michaels have not yet decided what they will do, but it is likely before another month rolls around, that Frank Disette will again line up his colts. Frank Rankin and Dr. LaFlamme have declared they have had enough, but it is hard to quit, and as they are both young men they will likely be out if the "green shirts" decide to put a team in the O.H.A.

Toronto Rowing Club broke into the senior line up with a vengeance last winter, and can be depended upon to give both St. Michaels and T. R. and A. A. a run for the honors this season. They have an enthusiastic bunch of officers, and the boys who played last winter will all be in line again with the exception of "Ack" Hunter, who is now located in Peterboro.

Argonauts started off badly last year, but as soon as they get through with football they are going to start right in at hockey, and if they play as well as they did towards the end of last winter they should be right in the limelight from the start.

Osgoode Hall will likely leave the game alone this winter as they failed to get the puck-chasers out, and Billy Young, the hustling manager, who did well with the material on hand, is at the front with the first Canadian contingent.

Varsity's Three Teams.

Varsity, of course, will be on deck with three teams at least, and prospects in the junior are especially bright. "Billy" Milne is the only one of last year's septette who is over the age limit, and Saunders and "Gamey" Stratton should be in great shape after the football season. The juniors did great work last year, and if Stratton had not been injured would have had an excellent chance of being junior champions of the O. H. A.

ALF. HARDY SEEKS MATCH WITH "ARTIE"

Toronto, Oct. 28.—Alf. Hardy, the English wrestler who has been down Peterboro way wrestling Jack Forbes, returned to town today and has again challenged Artie Edmunds. He wants Edmunds to finish the match they started at the Labor Temple three weeks ago Saturday night, and to this end offers to meet him again for $50 a side, the proceeds after expenses are paid to go to the Patriotic Fund. Hardy says he simply wants it understood that he is not backing away from Edmunds. Edmunds, however, says that he is positively through with the game and will not meet Hardy or anybody else.

LOCAL HOCKEY PLAYERS SHOULD START TRAINING

No Move Made as Yet by Local Club Although Officials in Other Towns do so — Condition is Needed if Championship is Aspired to.

The following appears in the Stratford Herald:—

The second workout for conditioning of hockey players will be held on Wednesday night at 9 o'clock at the Y.M.C.A. The Stratford Hockey Club officials are desirous that a grand turnout be on hand. You are requested to bring along a pair of running shoes and a jersey.

In our opinion that's what the ball players call "some of the old pep." That town Stratford turns hockey players out by the bale and from appearances the officials demand one thing above all—CONDITION. They have their men in shape to stand the strain before they get on the ice, then two or three practices puts them in mid-season form.

It is far from our intention to criticize or instruct local officials but it seems that a little move along the line of getting men in condition would be a wise one. If Stratford deems it advisable to put their men in training the first week in October can Peterboro suffer their men to neglect doing any gym work till December? Decidedly not. The boys should be taken in hand now and before the first of the new year they would be "hard as nails." Anyone who has ever watched a hockey game can readily understand the handicap it is for a player to be in poor condition. He is fagged before the fray has commenced and it little or no use excepting for the few moments after the puck is faced. To win the team must have condition and to have condition necessarily means getting to work immediately.

Speaking of the Peterboro men training it might be well to mention the fact that Intermediates as well as Juniors should be given gymnastic work. Last year the Intermediates stepped on the ice to play Whitby and the only man in shape was Maurice Park. He was the whole team and kept them in the running till the rest "hit their stride." That sort of thing must not be allowed this season. Every man should be able to go the pace before he dons a uniform. It is undoubtedly a hard task to get the men out but a little push on the part of the officials and co-operation of the officials of the Y.M.C.A. and the press should overcome the difficulty.

COMMENT
As You Like it

The match between Freddie Welsh and Ad. Wolgast which takes place at Madison Square Garden, New York, on November 2, brings together two of the foremost ring artists of the present day. Neither have suffered a knockout. Welsh lost the title "Champion of England" to Matt Wells on a close decision while Wolgast lost to Ritchie on a foul. Welsh is the only man to lose a title and win it back again, he having outpointed Wells at their second meeting. He is the first English lightweight to win the world's championship. Wolgast will have the chance he has long asked for in this bout.

It is a current rumor among hockey fans that there is a possibility of there being two Intermediate O.H.A. teams in the city this winter. That idea should be nipped in the bud. Peterboro can and will support one good Intermediate team and a Junior outfit but if two teams are entered in the Intermediate class, failure to both is inevitable. It is going to be a bad year for attendance and it's to be hoped that any "bucking" will be left over till 1916.

Ottawa will have two teams playing in Toronto next Saturday, St. Pats at T.R. and A.A. and the Ottawa at Argos. There is an effort being made to have the St. Pats-T.R. and A.A. fixture transferred to the Capital.

To win the Intermediate honors Varsity will have to win over Queen's in Kingston on Saturday and then beat Shag's squad in Toronto a week later. The dope says their chances are very poor.

A fan has asked us if the guy that put the can in MerCANtile League last year will be interested in hockey this winter? It is hardly probable as he's so busily interpreting the war BULLetins for inquiring spectators.

"Nowsy" Lalonde has not yet decided where he'll play. It matters not to the flying Frenchman whether it be in the N.H.A. or Western League so long as he gets his.

The Toronto Rowing Club has made application for practice hours at the Arena. Seem's as though the season is very close at hand.

The T.R. and A.A. team will be strong as ever this season. Harry Meeking is expected to land a berth.

BRESNAHAN HAS JUMPED

Cub Catcher to Manage Brookfeds — Toronto May Get Federal Franchise

New York, Oct. 27.—The acquisition of Roger Bresnahan by the Booklyn Club of the Federal League is considered one of the biggest coups of the "outlaw organization" since Joe Tinker cast his lot with the invaders.

Bresnahan is said to have signed to a three-year contract, and will have absolute charge of the Brookfeds. The terms of the contract cannot be learned, but it is admitted that the former Chicago catcher received a big bonus for his signature. Bresnahan expected to get the management of the Chicago Nationals, and had been negotiating with President Thomas for the position since the close of the season. They could not agree on terms, however, and evidently convinced that the sale of the Cubs, which seems imminent, might interfere with his opportunity of being appointed the Cub leader, decided to accept the tempting offer by the Federal magnate. Bresnahan came to New York secretly after a conference with President Thomas, in which he doubtless was convinced that he would not succeed Hank O'Day as the Cub's leader.

The contemplated shift of the Kansas City Club to Toronto is expected to open a place for Bill Bradley, the former manager of the Brookfeds. This change is said to be decided upon, and that possibly Indianapolis will also be shifted to Cincinati or Cleveland. It is believed in baseball circles in this city today that the Feds held off singing Bresnahan until the last moment in the hope that the organized factions would come to terms on a peace agreement.

Following the close of the meeting Saturday night it was learned that a number of trades had been made among the Federal League clubs. This probably means a revision of the playing strength of the league.

Most German towns ring bells whenever the Germans win a victory, and as the war office announces about 27 advances and no retreats a day the bell ringers of Germany must be working in 8-hour shifts.

Speaking of the world's series, it looks as if Von Kluk is heading for Germany and trying to make what is known to the talent as a home run.

WILSON—FLETCHER.

Keene, Oct. 28.—A very pretty church wedding took place at the Keene Methodist Church last Wednesday afternoon, at 3 p.m., when Miss Bertha, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fletcher of the village was united to Mr. John Wilson of Toronto, the ceremony being performed by the pastor, Rev. Edmison. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion by the League Flower Committee, pink and white being the predominating colors. The bride looked charming in a gown of white silk crepe cloth, wearing the customary veil and orange blossoms, and carrying a large bonquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid, Miss Lappy of Toronto, wore a dress of white embroidered voille, and carried pink and white roses. The groom was attended by the bride's brother, Mr. William Fletcher. After the wedding the bride and groom, and guests repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was held followed by an elegant wedding supper. About 80 guests were present. The bride and groom were the recipients of many beautiful presents.

ADAMSON—WOOD.

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wood, of Otonabee, on Tuesday, October 13th, when their only daughter, Aggie Lizzie, was united in marriage to Mr. Gardiner Adamson, son of Robert J. Adamson, also of Otonabee. Rev. Mr. Goodwill performed the ceremony in the presence of the members of the two families. The bride wore a charming dress of page blue silk, while the bridesmaid, Miss Irene Adamson, sister of the groom, wore lovely brown silk. Mr. Harry Bruce Wood acted as groomsman. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful gold watch and chain, to the bridesmaid a gold brooch set with a diamond, and to the groomsman a gold stickpin set with pearls. The happy couple will reside in Otonabee.

COOPER—VAN ZANT.

At the George Street Methodist Church parsonage last evening, Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., united Mr. Hillard Wilbert Cooper of Sterling and Miss Nora VanZant of this city, in the bonds of matrimony.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper will reside in Sterling.

Mr. Charles Dowling of Clinton, Ont., spent a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Dunsford on Water Street.

Mr. Donald Cameron of the Grove School, Lakefield, was in town last Saturday and spent Sunday at his home in Stewart Street.

A great deal of interest is being aroused in the undertaking of the ladies on behalf of the Women's War Fund. The Beehive is sure to be a centre of amusement on Saturday when Mr. Elliot will introduce an entirely new set of sales women for that day. It is to be hoped that the public will be very lenient with these new hands as they cannot fail to be a little inexperienced in handling the various lines of stock. It is to be hoped that their efforts will be crowned with the success which they certainly deserve.

A very merry luncheon was held at the Golf Club on Tuesday for the younger members, about sixteen being present. After luncheon, Miss Helen Davidson proposed the health of the ladies' captain, Mrs. Gardiner, in a very happy speech. She expressed the thanks of the members for the unfailing kindness they had all received during Mrs. Gardiner's period of office. The vote was carried unanimously and was followed by the singing of "For she's a jolly good fellow." Amongst those present were Mrs. Gardiner, Mrs. Suckling, Mrs. Goodwill, Miss Roger, Miss Marian Denne, the Misses Hill, the Misses Hatton and Miss Kingan.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES.

The girls' auxiliary of the Y. W. C. A. are very much alive to the interests of the association, and through their special efforts this winter it is to be hoped that every girl and woman in Peterboro will know more about what an association means to a city, and what the local association has to offer to the girls of Peterboro.

The first on the program is a tea to be given by the Household Science Committee in the green room on Thursday afternoon. Any lady in the city who has not visited the association's rooms is especially invited to do so on Thursday, from 4 to 6.

IT IS WRONG TO PLAY CARDS AND DANCE?

Dr. Gordon read, among the questions of the evening, the following sent to him by one of the Christian women of the city: "Is it right to have five minutes of precious time taken up by men that have done more to hinder moral reform or Christian citizenship than any man in Peterborough?

In answer to this question and other questions similar, Dr. Gordon stated that before the campign closed he would deliver a special discourse on the subject of "A Woman's Questions Concerning the Public Men of Peterborough.'"

HARVEST SERVICE AT BROWNTON MISSION

Farmers Should Provide Now for Labor on the Farm

Warning the farmers of the proince against a shortage of farm help in the spring, Mr. Macdonnel, Director of Colonization and Immigration, is urging them to respond now to the appeal being sent out to relieve unemployment in the industrial centres.

Applications are coming in at the rate of 15 to 20 a day, but they are away short of meeting the demands for employment. Mr. Macdonnel points out that while there are lots of men now, the absolute stoppage of immigration to Canada and the withdrawing of thousands of men for the Canadian contingents will make it less easy to secure help next spring just when the farmer will be planning to take advantage of the widened and profitable market the war has opened up.

DR. J. L. GORDON SPEAKS TO THE BUSINESS MEN

The banquet tendered Dr. Gordon by the local Board of Trade at the Oriental Hotel today at one o'clock brought together merchants, bankers, representatives of the Peterboro Law Association and various civic officials, employes, all of whom undoubtedly were greatly benefitted by the advice of the distinguished orator. After Adjutant McElhiney had said grace the immense gathering sat down to an excellent menu for which mine host J. C. Shook is well known.

Immediately after the luncheon Mr. A. E. Greenlaw favored the assemblage with a solo, the accompaniment of which was rendered by Mr. Hesselberg. The song was of a patriotic nature and sung in the eloquent voice which has endeared Mr. Greenlaw to the hearts of the music loving people of Peterboro, it brought great applause. So long and continuous was it that Mr. Greenlaw was compelled to give an encore.

Mr. Basil D. Hall, president of the Board of Trade, introduced Dr. Gordon who began by stating that it was always a delight for him to have a doctor of Divinity operate upon the Board of Trade. He said that he was pleased to be permitted to speak to the body of business men in the community and he would try and speak of matters of interest to them. His theme was urging the men to promote "Christian Citizenship."

Every man should love the land in which he lives. The man who goes to the front for the cause of Britain is a hero but the father who sends that son is a greater hero. Dr. Gordon voiced his feelings by quoting:

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself has said
This is my own my native land."

The second point the speaker urged was getting together and holding the community together. Set aside all Protestant and Catholic differences and have but one main object; good for the city. Every citizen should prophesy a little. Look outside his own fence and prepare for the future. Although Dr. Gordon did not claim to be a prophet or a son of a prophet he made the following statements of the future.

There will be but one language in the universe, and that the one of Milton and Shakespeare, spoken at present by one hundred and twenty million of people — the English language.

The removal of all tariff walls between countries.

Political equality among men and women.

An equal distribution of wealth according to skill and ability.

Restriction of the liquor traffic to the extent of bringing about universal sobriety.

Forming this opinion after making a trip around the city in an auto, Dr. Gordon exclaimed that Nature had done wonderful things for Peterborough, and the true citizen is the man who will look to the future and provide sites for parks and playgrounds.

For the future, according to the speaker, the man of tomorrow is the business man. He is the dark horse of history. In future it will not be the statesman or the politician, but the business man. They are far in the majority of any other class of men, and when they get him a clean, consistent man, he is the best recommendation of Christianity. Above all, Dr. Gordon made plain the fact that to accomplish anything the business man must lead a clean life. He then brought his address to a close by relating a few anecdotes that have sprung up while endeavoring to secure money for Y. M. C. A. purposes.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., thanked Dr. Gordon on behalf of the men present for his helpful advice.

WONDERS OF NEW ONTARIO

Displayed in Car of Exhibits at C.P.R. Station

Horace Greely said, "Go West young man, go West," but we would say go north young man, go north. Our reason is, north of the main line of the C. P. Railway lies 60,000,000 acres of land, covered by spruce, jack-pine and poplar. This land can be bought at 50 cents an acre. There is a demonstration car here today and tomorrow at the C.P.R. station which contains products of that country. It is sent out by the Provincial Government, under the supervision of the Agricultural Department. The products of the farm and field of that country are shown to good advantage. The car contains all kinds of vegetables, potatoes, pumpkins, squash, parsnips, etc., grains, such as wheat, peas, timothy, oats, barley, etc. The opportunities of Northern Ontario are unexcelled in Canada. Potatoes yield from 375 to 400 bushels to the acre. Spring wheat, 35 to 50 bushels an acre, and fall wheat, 40 to 50 bushels.

The car contains actual photographs of farms in the various sections, and to one who has never been there it is a pleasant surprise to say the least, to see the beautiful farms, and fine buildings in that north country.

The car is in charge of Mr. G. E. Palmer, colonization agent of Northern Ontario, who is an old Peterboro boy, being a son of Alfred Palmer. He is ably assisted by A. Morrow, a prominent farmer of St. Joseph's Island.

It is well worth the time to pay a visit to this car as it is of the greatest educational value.

PROGRESS AT YPRES AND ARRAS

FAILURE FOR FOE'S PARTIAL ATTACKS

TRENCHES ARE TAKEN IN FORWARD MOVE

No Change on the Front Between Nieuport and Dizmude— Advances In the Forest of Apremont

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Oct. 29.—The afternoon official announcement says: During yesterday we made progress at several points along the line of battle, but particularly around Ypres and to the south of Arras.

There is nothing new on the front between Nieuport and Dixmude.

Between Aisne and Argonne we took possession of some trenches occupied by the enemy and not one of the partial attacks undertaken by the Germans resulted successfully.

We advanced also in the forest of Apremont.

NOTHING KNOWN ABOUT TROOPS IN PORTUGUESE COLONY.

BERLIN, Oct. 29. — It is announced officially in Berlin today that nothing was known concerning the report that German troops had entered the Portuguese colony in West Africa.

STEAMER SUNK OFF NORTH IRISH COAST.

FLEETWOOD, England, Oct. 29. — Word has been received through a trawler which arrived here on Wednesday night that another steamer has been sunk off Malin Head, off the North Irish Coast. There are no details.

EMDEN, IN DISGUISE, ACTIVE AGAIN.

TOKIO, Oct. 29. — The British Embassy says that the German cruiser Emden, flying the Japanese flag, and disguised by the addition of a fourth smokestack, entered Penang, British Straits Settlements, and fired a torpedo, which sunk the Russian cruiser Jemtchug and a French destroyer.

GERMAN REINFORCEMENTS FOR CALAIS ASSAULT.

LONDON, Oct. 29. — The Times Copenhagen correspondent reports that reinforcements are being rushed to Belgium from all points in response to Emperor William's order to take Calais.

Such success, it is announced, would enable the Germans to control the southern part of the North Sea.

The Government will cancel permission for the enemy's reservists to travel unmolested in neutral ships.

TO PREVENT ABUSE OF NEUTRAL FLAGS.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—The Times, in an editorial suggesting that mines off the coast of Northern Ireland have been dropped by North Sea trawlers flying a neutral flag says: "The Germans have so flagrantly violated the precepts of international law that the only safe precaution seems to be to close the North Sea to all neutral maritime traffic in order to prevnt further dangerous abuse of netural flags."

WOMEN TAKE ACTION TO HELP SOLDIERS.

LONDON, Oct. 29. — In order to help soldiers observe Lord Kitchener's injunction to be no more than courteous to women, the National Union of Women Workers has undertaken the duty of patrolling territory outside the sentry lines.

The services of women police are gladly accepted since the army authorities complain that soldiers are being lured from Lord Kitchener's ideal by women camp followers.

Meantime an effort is made to increase camp attractions such as concerts, and to provide other means of diverting the men.

BRITAIN IS GRATIFIED

Eagerness of Canadians to Enlist Elicits Favorable Comment

LONDON, Oct. 29. — The greatest gratification is expressed here at the reports from Canada of anxiety to enlist in the second contingent. Comment is frequent on the fact that Canada is offering better terms of enlistment than are offered for the home army. The Liverpool Courier, for instance, says that Canada has spent enormous sums on emigration propaganda, and perhaps she is a little nervous lest the attractions of the old world should prove too strong for her newer sons, when they find themselves back amongst their English [illegible] and relatives. The Courier asserts that each man is promised a grant of land on his return to Canada.

A promising response is being made to Sir Edward Ward's appeal for gifts of books for the troops at Salisbury Plains. Fifty thousand volumes are asked for, and these will certainly be quickly obtained. Col. Ward has been appointed by the War Office generally to advise Lord Kitchener in regard to matters affecting the overseas contingents. His idea is to organize a lending library at Salisbury camp.

BEYERS REVOLT IS BRIEF

Botha Deals Swiftly With One of His Rebel Leaders

EIGHTY MEN CAPTURED

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The following official statement was issued last night regarding the rebellion in the Union of South Africa:

"Gen. Botha reports that he left Rustenberg (a district in the west part of the Transvaal colony) on Tuesday morning and proceeded in the direction in which Gen. Christian Beyers, with his commando, was supposed to be. He came in touch with Gen. Beyers' men in the forenoon and drove them in headlong rout the whole of the day and captured eighty of them, fully armed.

"In the fighting which took place towards the end of the pursuit one of Gen. Botha's men and several of Beyers' commando were wounded.

"When the report was made, the pursuit was still in progress."

The greater part of Africa has been drawn into the conflict. It is reported that the Germans have invaded Angola, one of Portugal's African possessions; that there has been fighting on the borders of the German and British colonies in that continent and that the British and the Germans have been having more skirmishes.

The invasion of Angola was not unexpected, for Portugal had declared her intention of helping the allies, and, in view of the possibility of a German attack on her colonies, had sent reinforcements to her garrisons. Portugal, if the report of the German invasion is true, is the nineth nation to be drawn into the war, and there is still danger of others following.

CANADIANS FOR BOTHA

Force May be Sent to Aid in Crushing De Wet's Revolt

OTTAWA, Oct. 29.—While no official communications have passed on the subject, it is considered here not at all improbable that Canadian troops may be sent to South Africa to help put down the rebellion in which Generals De Wet and Beyers with their followers have now joined, as well as to uphold British arms against the Germans in Southwest Africa. Canada could send a considerable force of mounted infantry such as are needed in that country. There are thousands of mer in the West who are eager to go to the front, and would probably be just as willing to fight for the British cause in South Africa as in Europe.

The greatest difficulty in sending early assistance to Premier Botha and his Government would be that of providing the equipment. This would be rushed with all speed, however, once a decision were made, and if the present trouble were prolonged, as in the former war, the Canadian forces would be in time to render effective aid.

RALPH CONNOR VOLUNTEERS.

Winnipeg, Oct. 29.—Among those who have volunteered for active service is Rev. C. W. Gordon, better known as Ralph Connor, the novelist. He expects to go to the front as chaplain with the second contingent.

J. J. ROUSSEAU,

(The young Belgian soldier seated between two comrades) who wounded and captured Count Von Buelow, son of the former German Chancellor, receiving as a reward from King Albert the military gold cross which he is wearing.

UNEASINESS IN HOLLAND

Discovery of Cement Gun Bed is Among Causes of Anxiety.

ROOSENDAAL, Oct. 29.—Holland is feeling the pressure of the war almost as much as if she were engaged in it. The report that the Germans are massing large numbers of troops on the eastern border is causng great uneasiness throughout Holland. The alleged discovery of a tennis court with cement nine feet thick on the property of a German in the vicinity of Arnheim and statements that German spies have been active near Arnheim and at other points close to the German border seem to intensify the anxiety of the Hollanders.

A Dutch army of over 300,000 trained men is scattered at strategic points along the Belgian and German borders. Roosendaal is the principal troops centre, as it is the only gate to Belgium that is now open. Hundreds of military automobiles leave here daily with messages and supplies for the border troops.

The mouth of the River Scheldt and all the canals are heavy guarded. A large garrison at Flushing is guarding the docks and railway stations in order to prevent any attempt to violate the neutrality of the Scheldt. The river is heavily mined and Dutch cruisers and torpedo-boat destroyers are lying at its mouth to give any necessary co-operation to the land forces

MAYOR W. H. BULLER

In response to the general demand of the citizens that Mayor Buller should sit for a second term in the mayor's chair, we understand that the Dominion Government will likely consent to his doing so. Legally there is nothing to prevent Mayor Buller from sitting and so a large number of citizens are desirous that he should be mayor for a second term.

ASSASSINS ARE SENTENCED

Austrian Enquiry Into Death of Archduke and His Wife Ends.

SARAYENO, Bosnia, Oct. 29.—(Via Amsterdam to London.)—Judgment was passed yesterday on the assassins of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir apparent to the Austro-Hungarian throne, and his wife, the Duchess of Hohenberg.

Gavrio Prinsip, the actual assassin, escaped with a sentence to imprisonment for 20 years. Four of the conspirators were sentenced to death by hanging, one to life imprisonment, two, including Medeljo Gabrinovic, who threw a bomb at the archduke but which did not explode, to 20 years, one to 16 years, one to 13 years, two to 10 years, one to seven years, and two to three years.

The other defendants were acquitted.

All men may be liars, but all liars aren't men.

WALKED FIFTEEN MILES TO ENLIST

Young Englishman Has Plenty of Nerve but he Could not be Accepted

Last night the examining physician at the Armouries was confronted with an unique application for enlistment with the Canadia forces.

A young Englishman, who had hoped to go to the war, walked all the way from his place of employment at a farm near Rice Lake, some fifteen miles. He could not pass the examination, on account of an affliction of the limbs.

He arrived here about seven o'clock and when he was informed that his application could not be accepted, the young fellow disappeared before the officers could assist him, in his return journey, which he evidently made on foot.

ALLIES ARE RICH IN MEN BRITAIN AND FRANCE HAVE 2,500,000 MEN DRILLING

There Are Now a Million and a Half Men in Great Britain and Lord Kitchener Has Issued a Call For Another Hundred Thousand—France Announces a Reserve of a Million Being Drilled in Camps.

LONDON, Oct. 29. — The British army on rolls and drilling in the United Kingdom, now amounts to approximately one and a half million men. Of this total about 800,000 men belong to what is termed "Kitchener's Army"—men who have responded to his two calls for 500,000 soldiers to serve three years, or for the duration of the war. About 600,000 belong to the territorials, while the remainder are enrolled with the special reserves, so-called, or with the regular army, and have seen service previously.

The territorials are considered the flower of the force, as a great majority of them belong to the middle and upper classes, and are men accustomed to athletic pursuits. Both physically and mentally they are considered by military men to be about the finest body of its numbers ever assembled under arms.

The Canadian and other overseas contingents are not included in the total.

Lord Kitchener issued an urgent appeal yesterday for 100,000 more men. He says the War Office machinery, which was somewhat clogged by the sudden creation of a new army of 500,000, is now reorganised. The minimum height for men has been reduced to 5 feet 4 inches, and the age limit raised to thirty-eight.

All fear of the numerical strength of the allies being insufficient to check the invaders are set at rest by a statemen of Gen. Cherfils, who says hat France still has in reserve more than 1,000,000 men who have not been under fire. He declares that the number of volunteers is so large that there is no immediate use for all of those who wish to enlist. It is known that every drill sergeant who can be spared from the fighting line is hammering such of these volunteers as are accepted into fighting units. Great concentration camps are located at many points in southern France.

MISS WEIR STATES HER POSITION IN REGARD TO COLLEGIATE INCIDENT

Editor, Review:

Sir, — Many persons have requested me, since the Review appeared on Saturday, to give a statement to the public concerning the Sukloff matter which was considered by the Board of Education on Wednesday and Thursday nights last.

I have been interested directly or indirectly in the advancement of educational affairs in the city of Peterborough for over ten years, and for that reason I feel that I have a right to explain to the public the exact situation of affairs, and of how they at present stand.

Louis Sukloff, a lad of about fifteen years of age, and son of Norman Sukloff, the dry goods merchant on George street in this city, has been a student at the Collegiate Institute for about two years. This boy is considered by myself, and at least one other teacher, as a "Romantitist," which is a fair description of the boy's habit of representing facts as they appear, to me. I do not wish to use a stronger term, as this probably sufficiently describes him. He had last year what is called a "speckled record of class attendance," that is, he was frequently absent, so that the register showed much irregularity of attendance.

A pupil is permitted to absent himself from class, provided he furnishes forthwith a written excuse from his parent or guardian, and the only excuses which the law apparently permits are sickness or some sufficient or urgent reason, but I believe

ROUSING SEND OFF TO MILLBROOK VOLUNTEERS

Fitting Farewell for Men Who Answered the Call to Duty, is Given at Armouries and Station

Millbrook, Oct. 29. — Yesterday, the first volunteers enlisted at Millbrook for active service at home or abroad left by the noon train for Port Hope, and later for Kingston, where they will be formed, with others, into companies and battalions, and instructed in the various duties of soldiers, before proceeding to join the Overseas Canadian Force for service at the front. A number of Millbrook and Cavan men are now serving with the First Canadian Contingent in England; they joined other corps, no recruits having at that time been called for here. The present occasion was taken advantage of to show appreciation of the men, who, in time of national danger, responded to the call of duty. From 10 a.m. the boys in khaki and their friends commenced to gather at the armouries, about 11 a farewell programme of addresses from Rev. Canon Allen and Rev. Mr. Westmacott, selections by the band, singing by the large number present, while the Rev. Mr. Brown led in prayer. The Reeve, R. J. Doak, Esq., presided, and gave a brief address. About 11.45 a procession was formed, led by the band and the volunteers under Captain Spencer, and followed by a large number of Millbrook and Cavan men. The procession was accompanied on the walk by hundreds of men, women and children. The march to the station was enlivened by spirited selections from the band, who also played several numbers while the men were bidding their friends good-bye (all the people were their friends) and taking their seats in the train. In a few minutes the train pulled out, amid hearty cheers from the crowd; then the five or six hundred assembled at the station dispersed to their ordinary pursuits, perhaps realizing more clearly than before the meaning of the call to arms, and the stern work awaiting the men who respond to the call.

One man who failed to secure a place on the contingent, John Moore, better known as "Scotty," accompanied the men to Port Hope, determined to get a place on the force.

The following is a list of the men who volunteered:

From Pontypool — Sgt. Maj. J. J. Powell, Ptes. B. F. Bethyl and Geo. Butler, accepted; Henry Jakeman, unfit.

From South Monaghan — Ptes. Fred Deyell and William Murney, accepted; Arthur Footitt, unfit.

Millbrook — Gussie McBride, Roy McBride, Fred Budd, Tom Dee, Alf Taylor, James Taylor, Frank Tingy, accepted; John S. Armstrong, fit, unable to go on account of father's objection.

J. A. B. Moore, too short Harry Orr, Walter Harkness, J. H. Cousens, H. W. Muspratt, unfit. Albert Muspratt and George Jenden, accepted, to go this week.

GARBAGE COLLECTION.

THE PROBLEM of handling garbage will have to receive the serious attention of the City Council very soon, if we judge from the number of complaints that are being made. In the first place, it appears that a good many people do not understand the by-law or have not read it, and it seems only reasonable that greater publicity should have been given the by-law. If the complaints arise out of a misunderstanding of what the by-law requires, it would require very little expense to make its provisions known so that the people would know what they were required to do and what the collectors' duties were.

Complaints come in that in parts of the city the boxes are only half emptied, bounced on the sidewalks, which are littered with refuse, and left in a dirty condition. Some complain that boxes are not emptied at all. This is true, in some cases, for a good reason. Citizens are required to keep garbage and ashes in separate containers, and if some one mixes them, it is not the fault of collectors if the refuse is not removed. New people coming and going, however, do not know such rules, and misunderstandings and complaints are sure to arise. It is also claimed that the collectors do not know all the lanes, and that there are some places never visited. It is manifestly unfair to tax a man for something he does not receive, and also, in some cases, for an abnormal amount. It appears that this city will not have its garbage properly handled until entirely taken over by the city and operated as a civic service. The aldermen who have the interests of Peterborough at heart should not let this matter pass without inquiry.

THE CANADA YEAR BOOK.

WE HAVE just received from Ottawa a copy of the Canada Year Book. In the matter of printing and bookbinding it is the best edition that has ever been published, and does the Government Printing Bureau credit. It is, besides, well illustrated, a new feature that adds much to its value and attractiveness. This Canada Year Book is supposed to contain authentic statistics on almost everything relating to Canada, and is one of the handiest and most extensive reference books to be had in the country.

The new issue is a decided improvement upon any that has gone before it, including a very fine map of the Dominion; the usual statistical summary of Canada for 1913 and preceding years; a short history of Canada from the pen of Dr. A. G. Doughty, C. M. G., the Dominion archivist, in which, in 28 pages, the salient features of our history are related in most reliable form, illustrated by a number of photographs, including very fine half-tones of Lord Durham and Lord Elgin; an article on geology by Prof. R. W. Brock, late deputy minister of mines; another on flora and fauna by Mr. James Macoun, C. M. G.; and so on. The volume is so up to date as possess the new distribution of seats in the House of Commons, and has a summary of the general events of interest of 1913, which will be most valuable. The work reflects credit both upon Sir George E. Foster, under whose auspices it is published, and upon Mr. E. H. Godfrey, who is its editor.

MORE ABOUT MONROE DOCTRINE.

NEW YORK newspapers have become somewhat wrathy over the German Ambassador's statement in regard to the Monroe Doctrine. They seem to think it applies to Canada, when it does not, so far as Canada and Britain are concerned. Canada looks not to the United States, but to Britain, for protection. However, the position taken by New York journals strengthens Canada's position in that the United States would not tolerate the invasion of Canada or the acquisition of Canadian territory by Germany. Canada isn't worrying about the Monroe Doctrine, but it is causing some concern to the United States and Germany. The United States has no control whatever over Canada. Let that be understood. Canadians, however, have no objection to, in fact, court, the approval and support of the United States in any crisis like the present, in which Canada is involved.

SASKATCHEWAN GRAIN CROPS.

THE GRAIN CROP of Saskatchewan in 1914 is valued at $100,904,192, by the provincial department of agriculture. On a very conservative estimate, the wheat crop is estimated at 74,610,-648 bushels, and valued at $66,030,419, or approximately 85 cents per bushel, but the grain market reports would seem to indicate that much better prices than that estimated are being received. The oat crop is estimated at 06,968,953 bushels, and valued at $22,679,591.20. The barley crop is estimated at 5,625,783 bushels, and valued at 2,627,960.95, and the flax crop is estimated at 5,086,475 bushels, and valued at $5,366,221.12. The acreage under wheat this year was 6,003,-622 acres, an increase of 243,373 acres, or approximately 4.2 per cent. over the previous year. The government figures are based on an estimate of 12 bushels of wheat per acre.

GERMAN EFFICIENCY.

IF THE GERMANS who reside and do business in London, England, are as egregiously and offensively impertinent as those Germans in Western Canada who recently petitioned the Dominion authorities at Ottawa to have the Canadian newspapers refrain from criticizing Germany and the Kaiser's conduct of the war, it is easy to understand and sympathize with the outbreak of feeling which has led the London mobs to sack the shops and houses of some of the expatriated sons of the Kaiser, says Beck's Weekly. Every day brings to light new evidence of German treachery — of her misuse and abuse of the hospitality extended by England and other countries to her people and of their sneaking, lying, despicable conduct in simulating a fawning friendship in order to gain a secret advantage over their unsuspecting hosts. Whatever the outcome of the war, it will take years to restore the Germans to anything like the esteem in which they were held by other nations before the war. Suspicion will always be the reward of treachery.

There are many stories afloat in Montreal as to the underhand work that is even today being carried on by German and Austrian residents and their sympathizers in this city and throughout Canada, and it should surprise none if an angered mob, coming in contact with this work, should at any time undertake to wreak vengeance upon these alien people, who have long been treated with too great tolerance. The instance of the Western Germans in petitioning for the supression of the Canadian press is typical of their blind ineptitude and their singular want of ordinary understanding. I wonder what would happen to a body of Britishers resident in Germany who would send a petition to the Kaiser asking him to suppress unfavourable expressions towards the British people in the newspapers of Germany?

STORY OF A STORE.

TOM TASKER had a corner store. He got it from his father, who built up his trade from the farmers that spent their money for things made in Canada. Taskerville grew into a little town of cement sidewalks and electric lights. Tom's business developed, and he got an automobile, a $10,000 house, and a big new store with plate-glass, patent show-cases, and a stenographer.

The blacksmith shop grew into a carriage factory; the local cabinet-maker became a furniture manufacturer. Tom sold goods to many of the employees of the factories as well as to the farmers.

A few years ago, when a wideawake man discovered that the country around Taskerville had the very best kind of soil and climate for raising tomatoes, cucumbers, field peas, corn and small fruits, and reckoned it a good stroke of business to start a canning factory in Taskerville, the farmers fetched their truck to the factory, which became as good a purveyor of canned goods as any in Canada. Its products were found in the mining camps, and the kitchens of the wealthy that went to grand opera. But whenever any farmer went to the store of Tom Tasker, built up from their farms in two generations, they never could find a blessed tin of the Taskerville factory's goods on his shelves. When they asked him why he wouldn't encourage home industry and stock up with home goods, he said he reckoned he knew his own business.

Wherefore the farm folk round about Taskerville boycotted the Tasker store, and Tom Tasker made an assignment. Which to most folks' way of thinking was the only way to prove to the Tasker intellect that you can't expect both boots to fit the same foot.

This is a homely illustration and localized to Taskerville; but if it doesn't prove that it's the business of the retailer in Canada to keep on his shelves the goods made in Canada by Canadian workmen at a time when Canada is making the fight of her life to stay industrially efficient — then there must be something wrong with the argument. Think it over.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IN the Canadian Magazine for November Britton B. Cooke, in an article entitled "Is This True?" almost charges the Canadian people with disloyalty in not demanding Canadian-made goods whenever there is equal value and attention given. He cites instances where preference has been shown to articles of foreign manufacture, but the gist of his article is intended to prod the conscience of the Canadian people on the point of patriotism of this nature.

A BRUSSELS DESPATCH says that hangers are being built under the supervision of Count Zeppelin at Bruges, Ghent, Antwerp and Brussels, for a squadron of Zeppelins, which are to invade England. These are, in other words hangers on, and show the depravity to which German air methods have risen.

JUST THINK, only fifty-seven days left in which to do your Christmas shopping.

England's Worst Enemy.
(New York World.)

Considering the dogged Briton in the trenches, the United Kingdom seems unconquerable. Reading London's talk about invasion by sea, Britain's worst enemy seems to be foolish fear. If such clamour should keep a large army at home to meet an impossible danger, what Berlin says of London would be justified. Lord Kitchener is too old a soldier, however, to forget the place to fight an enemy's army is where it is.

Bewitched with Militarism.
(Rochester Herald.)

Militarism has wrought havoc with German perception. And we fear very much they are going to act like barbarians until their power to work mischief is crushed by the success of the armies of the Allies. When that has happened the true German spirit will, we predict, again assert itself and be restored to its rightful place not only in Germany, but in Europe and the world.

The Horrible Thing.
(Puck.)

The horrible thing about war is the way it stirs our worst passions and our worst poets.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—May I as a one time resident of Peterboro express my regret that the children of Peterboro are to lose so valuable a teacher as Miss Weir of the Collegiate Institute. Every one knows the power a person has in a community whose life and teachings aim to uplift and strengthen the moral and mental calibre of the young people committed to his or her charge. Mothers know the value and force of examples and I am sure much regret will be felt at her summary dismissal. I hope I am not intruding in expressing my views by deeming it an honor to have had my children under the influence of and taught by so wise and good a woman as Miss Weir. I feel I owe it to her, to Peterboro and to myself publicly to express my opinions and ask how the citizens of Peterboro can afford to lose so valuable an example of wisdom and integrity. I have not seen Miss Weir for many months, but will be glad if you publish this very inadequate tribute to her worth.

DR. LANGFELDT'S LETTER.

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir, — I saw a letter in Wednesday's Examiner written by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, formerly of Peterborough, wherein this man is sympathizing with Germany. This man is a German by birth and an employe of the Dominion Government.

I do not think it becomes him to state his views through the public press, and especially so when he holds the position that he does. I think the Dominion Government, or our member, Mr. Burnham, should look into this matter at once and see that a Canadian or an Englishman is appointed to the position at once, and that Dr. Langfeldt gets his walking ticket immediately.

Yours truly,
OBSERVER.

PRINCE MAURICE FALLS IN BATTLE

Was Youngest Son of Princess Henry of Battenburg

LONDON, Oct. 29.—Prince Maurice of Battenberg, a cousin of King George, and a son of Princess Henry of Battenberg, has been killed on the battlefield in France. He was an officer of the King's Royal Rifle Corps. Prince Maurice was the first member of the British royal family to be killed in the present war. It was reported that the prince was not actually killed on the battlefield, but that he died afterwards from wounds received in an engagement.

Prince Maurice Victor Donald of Battenberg was the youngest son of Prince Henry of Battenberg, who married Princess Beatrice, a sister of the late King Edward. The prince was the brother-in-law of King Alfonso of Spain. He was 23 years of age and since 1911 had been a second lieutenant in the King's Royal Rifle Corps.

Announcement that the Iron Cross had been bestowed upon the King of Bavaria and the King of Wurtemburg by Emperor William because of the bravery of their soldiers was made yesterday.

Two Japanese steamers have been blown up thus far and a third damaged, while engaged in removing German mines, several thousand of which were laid off the German possession of Kiaochau.

James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador to Germany has succeeded in securing from the German Government the lifting of the embargo placed upon 1,000 tons of potash destined for America for the glass factories.

Cosmo Cartwright, aged 32, graduate of Queen's University in mining, and a son of Rev. C. E. Cartwright, a former chaplain of the penitentiary, is dead at Kingston. He was a nephew of the late Sir Richard Cartwright.

A Daily Mail special from Flushing says: "The German losses on the Nieuport-Dixmude line are estimated at 16,000 killed and 30,000 wounded. During Sunday 400 vehicles loaded with wounded soldiers passed through Ostend."

Belgians Defeated Germans.

PARIS, Oct. 29. — A Havre despatch to The Matin reports that M. Tombeur, vice-governor-general of Katenga, Belgian Congo, announces that Belgian troops, commanded by Resident Commissioner Henry, completely defeated the Germans at Kisenie, on Lake Tanganyika, which lies between Belgian Congo and German East Africa.

German Bomb Annoys Swiss.

PARIS, Oct. 29.—A Havas News Agency despatch from Belfort says that a German aeroplane which flew over the fortress of Belfort on Friday and into Swiss territory dropped a bomb which fell on Switzerland. Much irritation, it is added, was caused there against Germans by the incident.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—Altho wheat showed strength for most of the time today prices melted rapidly in the last half hour of the session. The turn in favor of the bear side was due to selling by speculators, who found the market temporarily without support. Heaviness ruled at the close, which varied from ⅝c to ⅞c under last night. Corn finished unchanged to ½c higher, oats off ⅛c to ⅛c, and provisions strung out from 25c decline to a rise of 22½c.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Oct. 28.—That the British Government in its purchase of war materials intends, whenever possible, to secure goods made within the empire, was demonstrated yesterday by an incident at the local purchasing headquarters.

At the Windsor Hotel, among other callers upon Frederick Stobart, British war office representative, were representatives of two American firms. After stating their object in calling they were met pleasantly but firmly with the remark that:

"As far as possible all the business to be given out will go to Canadian firms. It would, therefore, be wasting your own time as well as ours for you to talk over these orders. Canadian houses will be looked after first; if we cannot secure anything here we will advise you."

CHEESE MARKETS.

MADOC, Ont., Oct. 28.—On today's cheese board 600 boxes of cheese were offered and all sold at 14⅝c.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Oct. 28.—On today's cheese board the offerings were 1150 boxes of colored, 14⅞c being bid, with no sales.

Her Name's Shadow

It Melted Away Before the Bright Sun of Love

By ESTHER SANGBORN.

If she had not been named Beryl perhaps Miss Stanhope would not have thought herself so hopelessly plain, so thoroughly and utterly unattractive. But that name—so beautiful, so poetical, sounding like an utterance in on short burning word of a womanly beauty almost divine—was as a curse to her.

It made her morbid. She shivered lest people learn it and smile at the incongruity.

Superconscious of her angles, her lack of color and dark circled eyes, reflected in every shop window, Beryl wondered why she had been named so incongruously. She almost cried when a wizened old woman with a parchment skin, in charge of a fruit stand, answered to the name of Violet. What would she, Beryl Stanhope, be like twenty-five years hence?

She could not free herself from the tormenting thought. In old age, with ugliness intensified, she must still hear the musical Beryl applied to her, a name designed for a round, milk skinned creature, with hair like corn silk and eyes the color of a calm sea, the cool, restful blue that is more nearly green.

She was reasoning to silence her ever renewed womanly hunger for beauty of person when she tapped at the studio shared by her brother and Lindley Wood. Her brother was out, but Wood was painting feverishly, a seldom seen exultation on his serious face.

"Come in, Miss Stanhope," he called hospitably. "Dick will be back in a jiffy. We are both making hay while the sun shines this week. Miss Cuyler is kindly posing for us, and she leaves the city Monday.

Beryl had not glanced at the model throne, but at this she turned quickly and caught her breath with a little gasp. A girl with the sheen of corn silk in her hair and eyes like a lapis lazuli sea was silhouetted against a background of pale green plush.

A sharp pain that Beryl did not know was envy shot to her heart as she drank in the sumptuous coloring of the nonchalant beauty. Recovering her composure with an effort, she returned Miss Cuyler's greeting and stepped forward.

"Are you and Dick working on one theme, Mr. Wood?" she asked. "May I see?"

"Not one theme," answered Wood. "Dick is doing an Andromache, but mine is only a study, an ideal head. I'll be very glad of your criticism, Miss Stanhope. My work fails to satisfy me."

Lindley Wood's pictures usually received praise from his friend's sister, but for once there was no exclamatory remarks. After a long look she drew back a step with heightened color.

"Wherefore the name?" she asked haughtily.

"Beryl?" said Wood unconcernedly, touching up the round white throat on his canvas. "That is just a fancy of mine. Haven't you names to fit your ideal types? I would not think of painting a blond Judith or a dark Rosamond. I've always had a liking for the name of Beryl"—with boyish eagerness—"and Miss Cuyler happens to look my conception of it. Do you like the pose?"

"Very much," she replied, thankful she could say so honestly. But there was a strange inflection in her voice, despite her effort. Lindley Wood's keen ear caught it, and he responded with swift artistic intuition.

"You see something wrong with it!" he exclaimed. "I want to know what it is. Be frank and tell me why you do not like my Beryl."

The living Beryl trembled foolishly as she buttoned her coat. "Seek to please the institute committee, not me," she laughed. "My opinion is not worth that doleful expression, Mr. Wood. Tell Dick I shall expect him early." And, with a nod that included the model, she left the room.

Over their tete-a-tete dinner that night Beryl tried to question her brother about Lindley Wood's interest in Miss Cuyler. But she could not. Her brother had been strangely preoccupied of late, and table conversation was monosyllabic.

"Wood hasn't been here for some time," he remarked suddenly, and Beryl, surprised in her thoughts, was glad that the doorbell spared her a reply. When Dick returned his friend's name was not mentioned.

Beryl sat reading in the little parlor when her brother went out "to pay some calls," he said evasively. When the door closed behind him she dropped her book and assumed ease.

Pacing up and down the rooms, she assured herself that she would go to work at something presently and forget the episode. But, try as she would, her heart was filled with bitterness that her brother's friend—her friend, too, she had once thought—should have been so heartless, so utterly contemptuous of her, as to paint an ideal Beryl. "He could not have told me my shortcomings more brutally in plain words," whispered she passionately.

Then, seeing something white on the hall rug, she stooped and picked up a card. "Edith Cuyler," she read—her brother's Andromache and Lindley Wood's Beryl! In that moment she felt almost as if she hated both artists and their model.

A chaos of thoughts danced through her brain, but through it all she always saw the pink and white face that had smiled from Wood's canvas above her name.

Unable to stay indoors, she put on her wraps and went out, but even the clear ozone of the night did not arouse her from the strange thrall put upon her by the card.

She turned into the block where some friends, the Stones, lived, but she had no intention of going in, for she knew that Edith Cuyler was staying there. Suddenly a pillar of flame shot from a building ahead. In a moment the street was a confusion of hoarse shouts and screams. Beryl stood still and watched the residents, like a stream of human ants, carrying valuables to safety. Then, as one awakening from a troubled dream recognizes the environment, she realized she was looking at the Stones' house and that it was afire.

Attracted by a shrill scream, she raised her eyes to the third floor. The beautiful Miss Cuyler stood in a window, her blond head silhouetted against a curtain of fire.

Beryl was conscious of a commotion in the crowd. Then a man in evening dress fought his way to the burning structure and went up the ladder with eager steps. At the second floor a tongue of flame lit his features, and Beryl almost swooned with horror as she recognized her brother Dick.

The next five minutes were each a fearful, anguish laden century to the watching girl. At any instant the walls might collapse and engulf them both.

She saw the cameo-like face, pearl white against that red curtain, brighten with hope as she recognized the coming hero. Beryl saw Dick lift her from the narrow ledge and begin the perilous downward journey with her arms around his neck.

They reached the second floor in safety, though the ladder swayed unsteadily. Willing hands held it as well as inexperienced people could, but danger threatened every step. Forgetting that she stood among strangers, Beryl clutched some one near. "I can't look!" she cried despairingly. "Oh, if they should fall!"

"Why, Miss Stanhope," answered an amazed, familiar voice, "why are you here?"

She clung to Lindley Wood with a little sob of relief. "Tell me," she begged pitifully.

By the necromancy of intuition he understood. "They are safe," he said, tucking her hand under his arm. "Let me take you home. You are icy cold. Dick is all right," reassuringly.

She trembled violently. To reassure her the artist assumed a light, jesting tone.

"If Dick and Miss Cuyler were not already engaged they will be now," he went on. "How can I manage, I wonder, to make myself appear equally heroic to you, Miss Stanhope?"

"Why?" in a gentle whisper.

"Because I love you," drawing her into the shadow of a building away from the crowd. "I was coming to say it, but it is easier to say it here under the stars than it would be in your lighted rooms. I can better endure your 'No' if you cannot see its effect."

"Your ideal Beryl is a cameo blond," she reminded. "I am plain"—

"What has my ideal Beryl to do with you?" he interrupted, looking his surprise.

"My name is Beryl," she answered. "Didn't you know?"

"No!" he cried emphatically. And instantly the memory of his words in the studio stood before him in letters of flame, and he saw their significance. "Tom always calls you Sis, and—and—I believed your initial represented Barbara. A blond Beryl may be my ideal on canvas, but the woman I love and would call wife has eyes like deep, dark wells. Don't draw away, dear. Miss Cuyler is only a model to me." He paused a moment, as she did not speak. "Perhaps there is some one else," he said sadly. "I dare not hope that you can care for me."

The band on his arm tightened gently. "There is no one else," she said softly, "none but you. If you are satisfied I will never again complain or envy my—future sister—her beauty."

"Why should you?" cried he, pressing her to his heart. "Beauty of soul shines from your every lineament, my queen and wife, and—don't you know that you are a true type of dark beauty anyway?"

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Headache.

Here is a homemade remedy for headache which may work a cure if taken at the beginning of an attack: Cut a lemon in half and squeeze its juice into a tumbler. Add a few—a very few—grains of sugar and fill up the glass with cold water. Fill it, that is, about three-quarters full. Now stir into this lemon mixture half an eggspoonful of ordinary baking soda. This will fizz up, of course, and the draft must be swallowed while it is still effervescing. If one does fails to arrest the attack, repeat it three hours after. This mixture, taken fasting, the first thing in the morning, will do much to settle the stomach after a sick headache and will prevent recurrence for some time. This kitchen physic has been found to prevail when phenacetin and all other nerve quieters have signally failed.

Many a man who starts at the foot of the ladder manages by great grit and determination to be there at the finish.

Military experts who declare that this will be the last war in history express a devout hope as well as a prediction.

When a man is attacked with a desire to write letters of flame he should consult a physician or go on a long journey.

A merchant in London says the world's supply of lead for making bullets must give out. Then the sooner such famine comes the better for the world at large.

The object of modern warfare is to wound rather than kill adversaries. It is more trouble to care for the wounded than the dead, and maimed men have a bad moral effect.

TORTURED BY CONSTIPATION

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Paralyzed Bowels and Digestion

ST. BONIFACE DE SHAWINIGAN, QUE. Feb. 3rd. 1914.

"It is a pleasure to me to inform you that after suffering from Chronic Constipation for 2½ years, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". While I was a student at Berthier College, I became so ill I was forced to leave the the college. Severe pains across the intestines continually tortured me and it came to a point when I could not stoop down at all, and my Digestion became paralyzed. Some one advised me to take "Fruit-a-tives" and at once I felt a great improvement. After I had taken four or five boxes, I realized that I was completely cured and what made me glad, also, was that they were acting gently, causing no pain whatever to the bowels. All those who suffer with Chronic Constipation should follow my example and take "Fruit-a-tives" for they are the medicine that cures".

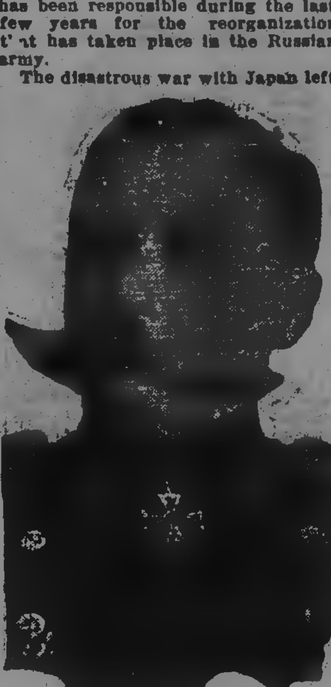
"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Rennenkampf's Work Has Earned Title of "Kitchener of Russia"

THE efficiency of the huge army organization of Russia is the mystery of the present war. The report that 5,000,000 men are now concentrated on the western border and that this vast aggregation will be doubled in another month is startling when one realizes that a few months ago no person would have made any possible comparison between the unwieldly hosts of the Czar and the admirable military machine of the Kaiser. Russia has surprised Germany, and incidentally the world, with an exhibition of military efficiency, largely due to the labors of Gen. Rennenkampf, who has been responsible during the last few years for the reorganization that has taken place in the Russian army.

The disastrous war with Japan left the Russian military forces in a state of the utmost military demoralization and it was not until 1908 that the Government tackled the problem of reorganization. As a result the entire army has been reorganized, rearmed and reclothed. The peace footing was raised in 1912 from 850,000 to 1,800,000, organized in 37 army corps, of which 30 were stationed in European Russia. These have been the gigantic duties of Gen. Rennenkampf, who is known as the Kitchener of Russia, assisted more recently by the military genius of Gen. Soukhomilnoff, the present Minister of War. Gen. Rennenkampf was one of the few Russian generals who emerged from the Japanese war with undiminished reputation. The great machine that they have brought into being is now to undergo the supreme test of war.



GEN. RENNENKAMPF.

Gen. Rennenkampf has been in command of the first army in the north flank operating in East Prussia.

Rennenkampf played a brilliant part in the Japanese war and was promoted from major-general to lieutenant-general. He won distinction in the battle of Mukden and in other great conflicts, and at the end of the war was assigned to suppress the revolution against Russia in the Trans-Baikal province.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson V.—Fourth Quarter, For Nov. 1, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xxvi, 57-68. Memory Verses, 63, 64—Golden Text, Isa. liii, 7—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Not only was there power in His two words, "I am," to send them all to the ground, but more than twelve legions of angels were ready to respond to His call if He had asked for them (verse 53; John xviii, 5, 6). But He came to fulfill all Scripture, and the time had come for Him to let them take Him. It was their hour, and the power of darkness. At least twelve times in Matthew's gospel it is written "that it might be fulfilled" or "then was fulfilled" (Matt. i, 22; ii, 15, 17, 23; viii, 17; xii, 17; xiii, 35; xxi, 4; xxvi, 54, 56; xxvii, 9, 35). After His resurrection He said that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the Law of Moses and in the prophets and in the psalms concerning Him (Luke xxiv, 44). He came to fulfill all Scripture, and He will; all concerning the future as literally as He has fulfilled the past; so when we read any yet unfulfilled prophecy we should say this shall surely come to pass in His time.

They laid hold on Jesus and led Him away. They took Jesus and bound Him and led Him away to Annas first (verse 57; John xviii, 13). It would be an inconceivable, unimaginable record, were it not so awfully true, that the Creator of all things, who giveth to all life and breath and all things, suffered His rebellious creatures to take Him and bind Him and lead Him as they pleased. According to the golden text, led as a lamb to the slaughter and as a sheep dumb before its shearers. God in the hands of sinful man, and submitting to all their ill treatment, that we who by His sufferings for us are made children of God when we receive the Lord Jesus, might learn how to submit to ill treatment for His sake (I Pet. ii, 19-25).

Peter followed Him afar off (verse 58), but his story will come in a later lesson. In verse 56 it is said that all the disciples forsook Him and fled. This also was a fulfillment of the prophecy, "I will smite the shepherd and the sheep shall be scattered."

There is an interesting statement in this connection in Mark xiv, 51, 52, concerning a young man who followed Him when He was arrested, having only a linen cloth about his naked body, and as some laid hold on him he left the linen cloth and fled from them naked. As Mark is the only one who gives this record, we shall have to ask him about it when we see him.

In the remainder of our lesson we see Jesus in the presence of the high priest, the chief priests, the scribes and elders and all the council. They sought false witnesses against Him to put Him to death, but though many bore witness they did not agree. At the last came two who testified that Jesus said, "I am able to destroy the temple of God and to build it in three days, but neither did their witness agree together (Mark xiv, 55, 59). Thus also was Scripture fulfilled which saith, "False witnesses are risen up against me, and such as breathe but cruelty." "They laid to my charge things that I knew not" (Ps. xxvii, 12; xxxv, 11). Oh, the cruel injustice of it all, the mad hatred of those who were fully determined to kill Him! Could Turks treat Armenians worse?

Jesus held His peace. He answered nothing (verse 63; xxvii, 12). There was nothing to answer, for no two witnesses agreed. How much false accusation can you bear meekly for His sake? Have you learned to see God and not people, and to say, "I, as a deaf man, heard not, and I was as a dumb man that openeth not his mouth?" "I was dumb, I opened not my mouth because thou didst it" (Ps. xxxviii, 13; xxxix, 9). It is a wise saying that "whoso keepeth his mouth and his tongue keepeth his soul from troubles" (Prov. xxi, 23), but who can do it, for the tongue can no man tame?

The people in the time of Hezekiah did wisely when they held their peace and answered not a word to the blasphemer. Hezekiah did wisely when he spread the blasphemous letter before the Lord (II Kings xviii, 36; xix, 14). When the high priest said, "I adjure Thee by the Living God that Thou tell us whether Thou be the Christ, the Son of God," then an answer was necessary, and Jesus assented, saying, "Thou hast said." But how startling to the high priest must have been the added words, unless he was too dead in sin to be startled by anything. "Nevertheless, I say unto you, hereafter shall ye see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of power and coming in the clouds of heaven" (verses 63, 64).

That settled it in the minds of these holy (?) men. The prisoner was a blasphemer and worthy of death; so they mocked Him, and smote Him, and spit in His face, and blindfolded Him, and asked Him to tell who struck Him.

Was ever a prisoner so ill treated even if guilty? Not so with us. But this man was innocent, for even Judas Iscariot had so testified. Some day all these men will be before Him as their judge, and unless they repented before they died they will have to hear His "Depart ye cursed." Even at this day the scholarship of this world may be heard declaring as blasphemers those who truly believe that Jesus is God, but the great truth stands, and the time of His coming again draweth nigh.

Dogs Fight For Masters.

The Belgian newspaper Patriote tells this story:

A battery of Belgian mitrailleuses was surrounded when their ammunition was exhausted, but the men determined to make a rush with clubbed rifles, using their bayonets as daggers. As everybody familiar with Belgium knows, dogs are everywhere used for light draft, and mitrailleuse batteries are mostly drawn by fine animals. Seeing their masters roughly treated in a hand to hand fight the dogs joined in so effectually as to enable the gunners to break through.

A soldier carried one of these heroic beasts in his arms, for it had a bullet through its paw, but it did not whine and kept licking the man's hand with its great hot tongue.

An Army of Gluttons.

The practice of the Germans on occupying a hostile town are clearly indicated by a proclamation now in the hands of the French, which was posted at Luneville when the Kaiser's men took possession. It calls for 100,000 cigars, 200,000 cigarettes, 500,000 litres of wine, and similar quantities of other luxuries. Failure to provide the articles requisitioned was punishable by a fine of $60,000.

It is said that the advance of the German troops into France was the coming of a horde of gluttons. Everywhere they went food, wine and tobacco were demanded without stint. Drunkenness is said to be the common rule among all classes of troops when not actually engaged in battle.

GOLDEN WEDDING

Beaverton, Ont., Oct. 29.—Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Butcher last evening celebrated their golden wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Butcher were married in Peterboro, in 1864. They came to Beaverton in 1878. The couple received a number of handsome presents.

SPECIAL ADDRESS BY DR. GORDON TONIGHT

Smoking, Dancing, Card Playing and the Theatre Are Discussed

Dr. Gordon delivers the special address of this campaign for better citizenship this evening. His subject will be, "The Private Life of Public Men." This will be a direct and practical discussion on the qualifications necessary in the life of an individual for the discharge of public duties. The people of Peterborough will be particularly interested in this discussion. No other address has been delivered by Dr. Gordon or will be delivered by him before the conclusion of this campaign which is of more importance to this community.

Mr. Edward Hesselberg, the Russian pianist, has prepared an unusually attractive programme of original selections and compositions for this evening. They will be rendered between half-past seven and a quarter of eight. The music lovers of the city will appreciate this special provision for their particular benefit.

Mr. Albert E. Greenlaw, the colored singer, will render this evening, first of all, his great "Crucifixion Song," beginning with the words, "Were You There When They Crucified My Lord?" He will also sing, "When the Trumpet of the Lord Shall Sound," and "Would You Believe?"

Dr. Gordon is daily in receipt of numerous questions from the people of Peterborough. In no other community where a campaign has been conducted have so many questions been sent in. It will be somewhat difficult for the lecturer to answer all of these questions. However, a large number will be introduced prior to the address this evening. The questions will be as follows:

1. Does the soul remain in the body after death?

2. Do you believe that the Bible teaches that Jesus is coming to this earth again in person?

3. Why did Jesus select Judas as a disciple?

4. Do you believe in a hell of everlasting punishment?

5. Can a person be a Christian who will not allow their hired help to eat at the same table?

6. If Jesus should return to earth which church would he join?

7. If my salary is $5 per week and I pay $3.50 for board, what do you consider is one-tenth?

8. Who should carry the household purse, the husband or the wife?

9. Is it always wise for a man to follow his wife's advice?

10. Do you believe in going to a spiritualistic seance in order to communicate with the spirits of the departed?

11. Is it right to hold bazaars and teas in the church?

12. Do you approve of billiard tables being used in the Y.M.C.A.?

13. Do you think it is right for an auctioneer who is conducting a public auction sale, to bid on his own goods?

Dr. Gordon's address last evening was on "The Problems of Questionable Amusements." He answered four questions:

First: Is it wrong to smoke?

Dr. Gordon said that men smoked because tobacco is a mild stimulant, and that no man should use a mild stimulant, as a rule, until after he is forty years of age. Dr. Gordon said it was exceedingly important that boys and young men who are laying the foundation for physical health should avoid anything in the nature of stimulants, even mild stimulants. I would not destroy that beautiful sight of the old man with a pipe in his mouth, sitting on the western side of the house as the sun goes down behind the western hills. I imagine that the old man has a right to indulge in a luxury of that sort, but I think with many boys and young men of the present generation that the smoking business is being overdone. Men are selfish in indulging in this habit. They smoke everywhere and anywhere, without any regard to the rights of others. In this respect, particularly, we need a new age of chivalry. It is an extremely poor recommendation for a man who is looking for a position that he should present himself in the office or store soaked and saturated with the vile fumes of bad tobacco. Please do not regard me as narrow or bigotted, but I think I am giving you some common sense on this particular subject.

Third: Is it wrong to dance?

I asked a young man that question, "Is it wrong to dance?" His answer was expressed in four words, "It is wrong for me." That I regarded as a very wise answer. Jesus once said, "If thy right hand offends thee, cut it off," and "If thy right eye offendeth thee, pluck it out." Be right with God and your conscience at any price. The question of dancing is a question of social intercourse. What amusements a Christian woman plans for her own children in her own home is certainly no business of mine, but let me tell you, the dance hall of our modern city, and the white slave traffic of modern times, are more closely related than most people imagine.

Third: Is it wrong to play cards?

What possible harm can there be in matching two cards? How shall we answer the youth's question with reference to card-playing? This is my solution: Do not command your son dogmatically not to play cards. Reason with him. There are just two points to be presented:—(1) The question of time. Card-playing is exceedingly fascinating, and time is the only thing which a young person has. Napoleon said, "Ask me for anything but time," and to the successful man, time is more than money, more than gold, more than radium. (2) The euchre deck of a pack of cards is the gambler's instrument. The hardest Christian to reach and save is a professional gambler. Not one gambler in ten thousand is ever converted or saved. The best-known gambler in the world, dying in New York, said: "I have been a gambler. Take any road but the crooked one. I wish I could gather up my influences and take them down into the grave with me."

Fourth: Should a Christian go to the theatre?

I answer this question in this way, whether is pleases you or not. This is my conviction. It is about time the Church, both Protestant and Catholic, demanded and suported a clean, decent, respectable and Christian theatrical. When the Church takes a stand upon this subject and practically owns its own play houses, even the preacher with his elders and deacons may go to the theatre.

Regarding the answers to these questions, Dr. Gordon made the following points for every man who has any regard for his Christian influences:

First: Every man should know his own limitations.

Second: Remember that every professed Christian is being watched.

Third: Remember your responsibility for your own personal influences.

Fourth: To guard well the secret chamber of the heart.

Remember the words of Robert Burns, "Had we never loved so kindly, had we never loved so blindly." Those two lines explain the secret of a thousand tragedies.

Fifth: The secret of solid jog is in a noble purpose.

Sixth: There is no solid joy in a godless life.

All these points were illustrated from history and biography, and Dr. Gordon closed his address with an earnest evangelistic appeal.

There will be two thousand copies of Dr. Gordon's little booklet, entitled "Grace's Grit," in green backs, distributed tonight at the service.

quit tea and coffee and use---
POSTUM

Once convinced that tea and coffee are actually harmful to health, few parents would give tea or coffee to their children, or drink it themselves.

What proof more convincing than the unnatural aches and pains that many tea and coffee drinkers suffer?

What proof more conclusive than the scores of expert medical and scientific opinions against tea and coffee?

Brain, Stomach, Heart, Liver and Kidneys are the first organs to be affected. Sometimes it shows in headache; often in nervousness, indigestion or heart disturbance; frequently in biliousness or disturbed vision.

If you are in doubt, try this test---
Stop both tea and coffee ten days and use POSTUM

This pure food-drink made of prime wheat and a small per cent. of wholesome molasses, has a delightful, snappy flavour and is absolutely pure and free from the tea- and coffee-drug, caffeine, or any other harmful ingredient.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be boiled. 15c. and 25c. packages.

Instant Postum—needs no boiling. A teaspoonful of the soluble powder stirred in a cup of hot water makes a delightful beverage instantly. 30c. and 50c. tins.

Grocers everywhere sell both kinds, and the cost per cup is about the same.

TWO MONTHS IN JAIL FOR THEFT

Young Man Was Convicted of Stealing Money and Watch

Fred Revoy was sentenced to two months at hard labor in the Police Court this morning for stealing $62 and a gold watch from a man named Cameron.

He came up this morning for sentence, having had his hearing a week ago.

Defendant's counsel made a strong plea for leniency, pointing out that this was his first offence.

Magistrate Dumble said there was a regular school of such men around this town who made it a habit of robbing drunks. He said there were men doing time now for the same offence, and he intended to put a stop to it.

STOLE BOARDER'S CASH SHE SAVED TO PAY DOCTOR'S BILL

In Police Court this morning Wm. Rose was charged with taking $6.00 from Sophia Edwards. It appears that Miss Edwards boarded at his father's place, and had this money saved up to pay a doctor bill, she having been in the hospital.

His past record was against him, he having been up in July, 1913, on a like charge. He was committed to jail for two months at hard labor.

THEATRICAL

The Montrose players put on a good performance at the Grand Opera House last night and the moving pictures and posing pictures were also enjoyed by the audience.

"Hard times" prices will prevail and the entertainment provided is easily worth the outlay. The program tonight will include the two act piece The Runaways and a feature picture entitled A Race for a Million.

OBITUARY

MRS. S. A. CARRUTHERS.

Mrs. S. A. Carruthers, a former resident of Peterboro passed away at Edmonton, on Thursday, October 22, at the age of 75 years. The late Mr. Carruthers had resided in Edmonton three years.

Three sons and three daughters are:

W. T. Carruthers, Edmonton; James A. Carruthers, Cobourg, Ont.; George C. Carruthers, Wolsely, Sask.; Mrs. A. W. Skinner, Inglehart, Ont.; Mrs. Dr. A. R. Stevenson, Ogdensburg, N.Y., and Miss Grace Carruthers, Thomasville, Ga.

MR. FRANK SMITH.

A very sad death occurred this morning at 7.30 o'clock, when Mr. Frank Smith, one of the most highly respected residents of this city passed away, death being due to heart failure. The deceased gentleman was born in Millbrook, but for the past 40 years had resided in Peterboro, where until seven years ago, he carried on a blacksmithing business. His jovial, kind-hearted disposition won for him the esteem and affection of both old and young who will be deeply grieved to learn of his demise.

In 1871 he was married to Miss Mary Robson, daughter of the late Ralph Robson, who predeceased him only eleven days.

The deceased was a member of George Street Church, and also a member of Court Little John Canadian Order of Foresters. Two daughters, Miss Nellie Smith, and Mrs. G. R. Holt; also one brother, Mr. James Smith of Mount Pleasant. The funeral will take place on Saturday, Oct. 31st, at 2.30 o'clock p.m.; service at the house at 2 o'clock. Rev. R. G. Peever will officiate.

MISS WEIR STATES HER POSITION

most of the teachers, myself included, are always willing to dmit pupils presenting a note from either parent or guardian, who give a valid reason for absence, but it must be in the writing of the parent or guardian.

Louis Sukloff always assured me when I enquired as to the reason of his numerous absences that Principal Kenner, of the Collegiate Institute, had accepted his reasons and excuses, and this concluded the matter as far as I was concerned, until I found that the same thing was being repeated again this Fall. I deemed it wise to call the atention of Principal Kenner to the fact, and let him act if he so desired, but if he did not so desire, then I felt he might leave the way open for me to act in the matter, for I always recognized that it was the place of the Principal to act in a matter of this kind, if he felt so inclined, and in the event of his not acting, then it was my duty to take the matter up.

Boy Prepared Statement.

At my suggestion, Louis Sukloff prepared and signed a statement of the reasons for absence, which is in the following words: "I, Louis Sukloff, fifteen years of age, on Monday and Tuesday, the fifth and sixth days of October, which are Jewish national holidays of a semi-religious nature, state that I was at perfect liberty to come to school if I so desired. (Sgd.) Louis Sukloff."

Pupil Sent to the Principal.

The pupil was sent to Principal Kenner with this statement of facts, and to this, according to Principal Kenner's report to the Supervision Committee, is what he takes exception. I suggested that the statement be given to the Principal, because I deemed it wise to ascertain whether this pupil honestly required to be absent or not. The question was then considered closed, until after Thanksgiving, and Louis Sukloff and I, were as we have always been, on the most friendly terms. Whether the Principal told Sukloff or not to bring a note in future absences, I do not know, but Sukloff consented to bring one and indicated his willingness most freely, and after this incident early in October, brought it. I did not open the note at the time, but opened it sometime after the difficulty had arisen with the boy, and I then discovered that the note was not written by either of the parents. I excluded him from the room for refusing to present a proper excuse for absence, and he remained stubbornly from the room and went to Mr. Crane. Louis Sukloff's father has told me, that a person in authority at the school had advised his son to resist my authority and go to Mr. Crane. It is admitted that the note was not written by either parent of Sukloff. Louis Sukloff finally admitted that the note was written by the maid servant at his home, but with his mother's knowledge. I said I want to be sure of it being written with his mother's knowledge, and that I expected he would bring me a note in the hand writing of either parent, stating the cause of his absence, and that the note which he had presented, written by the maid servant, had not met with that requirement. The pupil absolutely refused to do this.

According to the statement of the boy's father, Mr. Crane went to see Mr. Sukloff, who gave his version of it to Mr. Crane. I further understand from Mr. Sukloff, that he told Mr. Crane that he would support me even if his son's contention were right, but that he did not criticize my action of blaming the son.

A Supervision Committee meeting was called for Thursday night of last week, I understand, although I knew nothing about it at that time. The Principal's report was to be dealt with at this particular meeting so I am infomed, but I received no notice of it, and the result of the meeting apparently was, that on Monday morning, Principal Kenner spoke hurriedly to me in one of the school corridors, saying "You had no business to keep Sukloff out of his class." "Let him in." "Crane says so too." "I acknowledged his instructions with a smile and passed into the room, and felt that I required to act at once in the interest of discipline in my class. I asked Louis Sukloff why he was there without my consent, and he stated defiantly and impudently, "I am here by a higher authority than you, and I will not go." I said, "I fear you must," he said "I will not." I then said "You must if I have forcibly to eject you." As he still refused to go, I ejected him from the room. He was not struck. I simply took him by the shoulder and took him from the room.

These are briefly the facts upon which the committee acted, and I desire to leave this for the consideration of the rate payers, in order that it may be ascertained, whether or not, the opinion of the public is that the School Board have acted fairly and frankly with this case. I will give a further statement of facts later on, but these I deire to put before the public, so that no misunderstanding may arise.

Yours very truly,
(Sgnd) ANNIE WEIR.

ASPHODEL FARMER PLOWING CHAMPION

Chas. Would Guides His Plow to the Burnham Trophy and is Loudly Cheered --- Attendance of One Thousand Greets First Efforts to Revive Interest in Farming

The first plowing match under the new auspices of the Peterboro County Plowman's Association held on the farm of Mr. Sandy Matchett in Otonabee, was a great success. There were at least one thousand farmers and their friends in attendance. They came from everywhere—in autos, buggies, carts or on foot. The list of competitors while not as large as hoped for due to the fact that many farmers were afraid they did not know the rules. They were however on the spot to learn and the committee have the prospects of a large list of competitors for next year.

THE PRIZE WINNERS.

Class 1, open, in sod—1, Chas. E. Would, Asphodel, 2 Wm. Cleghorn, Otonabee.

Class 2, stubble—1 Chas. Coles, Smith; 2 E. Kelk, Otonabee; 3 P. Crough, Ennismore; 4 D. Matchett, Otonabee.

Class 3, for boys under 18 years—1 Robert G. Fowler, Smith.

Class 4, stubble—1 Harvey Borland, Indian River; 2 J. Matchett, Otonabee; 3 Stanley Harrison, Otonabee.

The judges made the decisions and the winners were announced by Mr. J. H. Garbutt, who in an excellent speech referred to conditions of a revival of interest in farming and expressed delight that the efforts of the committee had been well rewarded and everybody was pleased at the large attendance.

The committee is composed of Messrs. Joshua Smithson, H. B. Cowan of Farm and Dairy and J. H. Garbutt.

Mr. Smithson also made a fine speech dealing with the qualities of the true plowman which he said were self control, keen observation and a reflective mood. Mr. Smithson was a provincial champion himself and he said he was very much pleased at the success of the first plowing competitions.

Presentation of Cup.

Mr. J. H. Burnham was next called to present the cup and bronze medal to Mr. Would the winner. This was the signal for cheers. Mr. Would is a well known farmer, residing on lot 8, concession 13, Asphodel. The trophy which he will hold for one year and defend at the next plowing match, is an elegant piece of silverware. It is valued at $80 and with the bronze medal was purchased through Schneider Bros., Peterboro.

In making the presentation Mr. Burnham, said:

In presenting this cup to the County Council of Peterborough as a perpetual record of the names of those distinguishing themselves in the best of all industries and the most satisfactory of all vocations, the farmer's, permit me to say a few words. One of the things people have most to guard against in a slump in their efforts. Grown people like children get fits of laziness occasionally when when they are inclined to lie down under the shade of a tree, lean back and yawn and say, "Well! well! why work so hard? What's the use of it? Why not take it as easily as we can? We'll be a long time dead. There's no hurry. All this highflutin' talk about high spirit, hardwork honesty, the glory and satisfaction in being up and doing well our part in life, is all rot." Such people are themselves on the brink of the state of rot to which they refer. To make a long story we all know that the difference between the successful farmers the successful business man and every other good man and the tramp clothes consists solely in that high spirit which sometimes we hear decried. If it were not for an honest decent pride the pride of true manhood and womanhood we would be like the poor miserable tramp who laughs at every decent and respectable and wallows in filth squalor and decay. All this has a bearing on the other spirit which animates us today. We are here to do what we can to maintain in the County of Peterborough the pride of our fathers of the men and women who made this country and we are gathered together to show that Peterborough shall not be behind other countries in this respect. The charge has been made that Peterborough is falling behind. We will show the world that this is not true. It is true that the yield is not so great per acre as it used to be but when we learn intensive farming and proper fertilization and cultivation farming will be a delight instead of a toil. No other business is so steady in peace and war and so capable of providing body and soul with what nature intended, the peaceful fruits of the soil. The day is not far distant when capable farmers will in large countries like Canada rejoice in snug farms or spacious estates, pretty homes, beautiful surroundings, prompted and provided by scientific and intensive farming when one acre will provide what it takes five to produce at present and when we will save four-fifths of our labour by cutting out four-fifths of the area worked over.

Many old-timers who had not seen each other for many years enjoyed the day exceedingly.

As the winners came forward they were compelled to get into buggies, utilized as a platform, and they were loudly cheered.

Three of the winners were Englishmen, and three young competitors who won were Canadians.

One Englishman said in the broadest kind of Yorkshire: "I'm afraid to say anything for fear you Canadians will laugh at me."

Another Englishman said: "We'll try and show you Canadians how to plow."

The boy winner, a lad under 18, cried out as he got from the platform: "Well, those other three are Englishman; I'm a Canadian." There was great laughter.

Mr. Patrick Crough of Ennismore in receiving his prize, made a graceful acknowledgment and said he hoped next year to have his name inscribed on the championship cup. He was loudly cheered.

The quality of the work done was said by competent judges to be excellent. For the benefit of the uninitiated it may be said that the furrow should not only be straight but uniform in size and depth and well turned.

The skill of a plowman is shown in many ways, and to hear the judges talk, one would think it was sword exercises they were engaged in rather than the wielding of an instrument like a plow.

There can be no doubt that the people are desirous of reviving the good old county excellence in farming and are anxious to show that they take pride in it still.

A feature of the day was the large attendance of ladies.

Mrs. Matchett presided in the Matchett mansion, which is a large fine stone building beautifully situated in full view of the river.

Mr. Matchett did all he could to make the day pleasant for all.

The day, though cloudy, was not cold, and the wind passed overhead and did not make it unpleasant for the spectators. Too much credit cannot be given to Mr. J. H. Garbutt, Mr. Smithson and Mr. Cowan, who have labored unceasingly for the benefit of agriculture in this county.

Mr. Garbutt has given much of his time in the interests of Peterborough county, and he is entitled to the gratitude of the people. He is an excellent man and is deservedly popular.

Mr. Sexsmith, M. P., was present, and renewed acquaintances with many of his constituents. Though loudly called upon to say a few words he did not mount the rostrum.

Russians Secure Decisive Victory In Poland Fight

BERLIN ADMITS RETREAT

After Four Days' Fighting South of the Pilitza the Russians Have Inflicted a Severe Defeat on Austro-German Army---Enemy Fall Back in Disorder From Radom.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 29. — The following official communication was issued yesterday from general headquarters:

"In the battle which has been in progress for four days south of the Pilitza river, in the forests on the line extending from the Bialogura (Bialobrez) to Glowaczow, Policzna and Janowiee, our troops have inflicted upon the Austro-German forces a severe defeat. Between the Pilitza and Glowaczow the heroic efforts of our troops definitely broke down on Oct. 26 the resistance of the 20th corps and the reserve guards corps of the Germans.

"On the centre, after fighting of an extremely desperate character, we succeeded in establishing a firm foothold on the border of a forest in the region of the Villages of Adamoff, Severinoff and Marianoff.

"On the left wing we captured by assault a defensive position established at Policzna and enveloped a portion of the Austrian troops near Berdzeje.

"On the night of Oct. 27 the enemy's corps fell back in disorder towards the line between Edlinsk, Radom and Ilja. We captured both cannons and prisoners.

"On the right bank of the Pilitsa, on the front between Iejoff and Novomiasto, the fighting continued with the same desperation.

"In Galicia the battle is raging along the whole front of the River San. We have taken an additional ten officers and 500 men.".

"South of Przemysl our troops are advancing at certain points.

"In East Prussia the enemy has violently bombarded our positions in the operations in the region of Dakalarjevo. Repeated attacks have been repulsed.

"The success which we have won to the south of the Pilitza, and the result of which was the retreat of the enemy on the main front, is of the very greatest importance."

Berlin Admits Defeat.

BERLIN, Oct. 29.—(Via Amsterdam and London.)—The German and Austrian troops in Poland, according to an official announcement issued in Berlin yesterday, have been forced to withdraw before fresh Russian forces advancing from Ivangorod, Warsaw and Novogeorgievsk, after having repulsed all former Russian attacks.

The official statement continued:

"At first the Russians did not follow, and the withdrawal of our troops took place without difficulty. The reserve troops will change their formation according to the situation."

Radom Is Taken.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The correspondent of The Times at Warsaw has this to say of the campaign in Russian Poland:

"Radom, 57 miles south of Warsaw, was taken after a hard struggle, and large bodies of Russian cavalry occupied Lodz, 75 mile ssouthwest of Warsaw, yesterday, after considerable resistance."

ASK COMMISSION TO PROVIDE MAINS FOR WATER SERVICE

Many citizens who build three or four houses on a new street have often made the complaint that the Peterborough Utilities Commission will not supply them with water if there is not sufficient revenue from the street to warrant the laying of a main. At last night's meeting of the Board of Works, Ald. Duffus and Stratton put through a motion that the Board request the Commission to construct mains on Maud street, Rubidge street south of Murray, and on Gilchrist street between Murray and the creek.

The Board was unanimous in the feeling that the Utilities Commission should not hold up property owners on a street where the revenue would be light, as on many streets the revenue is very heavy. City Engineer Parsons stated that in Ottawa the water commissioners take that fact into consideration, and oftimes lay mains through streets where customers would be few and far between. It is probable that at the next meeting of the Utilities Commission this matter will receive consideration.

GERMANS ARE MASSING TO FIGHT EVERY STEP OF MOVEMENT TO OSTEND

Heavy Artillery is Being Pat Into Place on Coast—Attempt of the Kaiser's Armies to Advance Between Ypres and Dixmude is Repulsed and French Gain Ground—Crown Prince Gives up Positions.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The scene of the fighting shifted slightly yesterday. Instead of the Germans continuing to direct their main assaults on the line between Nieuport and Dixmude they essayed a major operation further east, between Ypres and Dixmude. Two French columns operating from Ypres met the brunt of this new movement, and not only stopped the Germans, but actually gained considerable ground. One column advanced east and the other directly north, the latter meeting the sternest resistance. A bayonet charge finally dislodged the Germans from several lines of trenches.

The fire of the French and British warships has effectually prevented the Germans from operations along the coast line of Flanders, but it now appears that a new phase of the campaign is setting in as the heavy artillery of the invaders is being brought into position. At Zeebruge, just east of Ostend, five train loads of artillery are reported to have arrived. A hurried movement is under way to fortify the whole Belgian coast line from Heyst to Knocke. The Germans are turning to account every sand dune, wall and village commanded by their forces, and it is certain that any attempt of the allies to penetrate toward Ostend will result in a heavy loss of life. Judging from present reports, the Kaiser's leaders intend to contest every foot of the ground which the allied tacticians deemed impossible of defence.

In a battle for control of the line of canals leading from La Bassee to the sea, the French and British yesterday won a most important victory. The engagement opened with an onslaught by the Germans, which was frustrated and followed up with a counter attack of the allied forces. This action came as the culmination of ten days' fighting, in which the Germans strove to win La Bassee. They met progress for several days, but have now lost that advantage and been compelled to retreat toward Arras.

Between Roulers and Ypres fierce combats have taken place during Tuesday and Wednesday. The advance rests with the allies. Roulers has been taken and retaken many times, and the latest manoeuvre of the Germans comprehended an advance westward.

The correspondent of The Evening News, wiring from "northern France," says: "The Germans are falling back all along the line from La Bassee to the North Sea."

The correspondent at Sluis of The Amsterdam Telegraaf reports that remarkable quiet prevails along the coast of Belgium. The German garrisons at Bruges, Heyst and Knocke, he says, are not very numerous.

The Duke of Wuertemberg's army has lost heavily in the north of France, according to a despatch received by the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Paris.

The Germans, the message adds, lost 2,000 in killed and wounded in an ill-fated night attack on Craonne, and the regions mentioned in yesterday's French official communication. The French casualties numbered 100.

From all sources reports favorable to the allies reached here yesterday. Evidently the attempt of the French to drive the crown prince's army out of St. Mihiel is about to reach a successful issue. On both sides of the town new ground was won as the result of Tuesday night and Wednesday's operations. Between Apremont and St. Mihiel the Germans lost several miles, and the French gained positions on high ground, which are expected to be of immense value to their artillery. In the forest of Le Pretre, in the same zone, the crown prince's command likewise ceded ground.

In the region of Craonne, on the right bank of the Aisne, the Kaiser's forces have shown renewed activity. A long artillery duel was followed by a charge of German infantry. This was met with French reinforcements and turned back after great loss to the foe.

On the heights of Chemin Des Dames, also on the centre, another attack in force was thrown back by the French.

Seven times the Germans have crossed the Yser, and seven times they have been thrown back, fleeing across human bridges of their own dead in the last retreat. French and Belgian artillery has made it impossible for anything animate to remain on the allied side of the river, which the Germans gained after such desperate valor on Saturday last.

ABOUT $1000 OF FUND HAS BEEN USED

Total Amount Collected is Less Than $5000

LINDSAY DOES BETTER

The total amount so far donated to the Patriotic Fund is $4,980.77 and the total amount utilized is $812.75. Of this amount $800 has been given Relief Officer Miller.

It is rather strange that Peterboro's Patriotic Fund should only be in the neighborhood of $5,000 while Lindsay's amounts to $8,774.30 and the residents of that town anticipate realizing $10,000. Either Peterboro has not gone the proper way about it or else there is not the patriotism and enthusiasm which marks the efforts of other cities and town.

FRAULEIN BECKER'S RUSE

By F. A. MITCHEL

Fraulein Anna Becker was sitting in her boudoir in Berlin embroidering when, looking out through the window, she saw a wasp waisted lieutenant stop at her door. There was something in his manner which was very serious and indicated that he was calling on important business. She had never seen him before, but her brother Carl was an army officer, and she knew that the stranger called on some business for him. Presently a maid brought in a card bearing the name of Herman Borngesser for Lieutenant Carl Becker. Fraulein Anna went to receive Herr Borngesser and told him that her brother was not at home. She would be happy to deliver any message Herr Lieutenant had for him.

"Will you kindly give your brother my card?" he said.

"Anything for him to do?"

"He will understand."

"Are you sure? Is there not something that will make his understanding the matter sure?"

Herr Lieutenant glanced at the ceiling for inspiration.

"You might say, fraulein, that it concerns an occurrence last night at the officers' quarters."

"With whom?"

"Captain Koch."

"I will give him the message with pleasure," said the young lady, and Herr Lieutenant marched away congratulating himself that he had acquitted himself with great discretion.

Fraulein Anna had learned from him all she wished to know, which was that her brother, a hot headed youth who was bitterly opposed to her engagement with Captain Koch, had picked a quarrel with him, had insulted him and the visitor had brought a challenge from the latter.

Fraulein's first act was to send her brother away on a fool's errand by sending him a telegram with his sweetheart's name attached, saying that she must see him at once. But since the sweetheart lived fifty miles from Berlin Lieutenant Becker must necessarily be away some time. The second move was to send word in her brother's name that he would meet Captain Koch the next morning at 5 o'clock at a certain place where duels between army officers were usually fought.

Now, though Anna Becker's features were not very like those of her brother, her height and weight were nearly the same. That evening, dressed in one of his uniforms and with a dozen of his cards in her card case, she sallied forth to put in practice a certain plan she had conceived. Entering a restaurant, she ordered a dinner with a bottle of wine. Presently she arose and threw the contents of her glass in the face of a quiet looking gentleman sitting near her.

"What does this mean?" he asked.

"It means that you stared at me in an insulting manner," replied Anna, and, throwing her brother's card on a table, she left the restaurant.

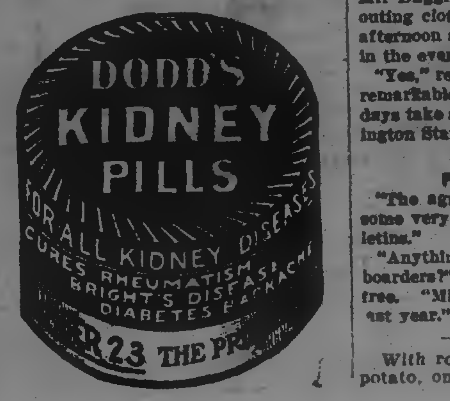
Two hours later when Anna returned to her home she had insulted six persons, and between 9 o'clock and midnight four challenges came in from different persons for Lieutenant Becker, two of them from army officers, all of whom fraulein agreed to meet the next morning at the time and place she had agreed that her brother should meet her lover.

When midnight came and Carl did not return Fraulein Anna felt sure that her ruse to get him out of the way had been successful. But it had only been partly so. When Lieutenant Borngesser returned to Captain Koch and reported what he had done the captain sent him out to find Becker himself. He came upon Becker in the billiard room of the officers' club just as he was reading the dispatch from his sweetheart that had been sent him by Anna. Consulting a time table, he found he could keep both appointments and agreed to meet Captain Koch at 6 o'clock the next morning at the usual place for the settlement of affairs of honor among officers of the army.

Koch noticed a discrepancy in the time of meeting between the written and verbal reply to his challenge, but thought little of it, though, that he might surely be on hand for the fray, he went to the ground at 5 o'clock. A quarter of an hour later a gentleman, with attendants, appeared and informed the captain that he had come to meet Lieutenant Becker, who had insulted him the evening before.

While Captain Koch was disputing with this man as to which of them should fight Lieutenant Becker first another party arrived on the same errand, and before 6 o'clock three different persons had arrived, each desirous of "pig sticking" (as they call it in Germany) Lieutenant Becker. At a quarter before 6 Becker himself appeared, having been traveling all night, to find five persons waiting to avenge themselves upon him, four of whom he had never seen.

Amid a babel of tongues a carriage arrived, and Fraulein Anna stepped out in the ordinary costume of a woman and stood looking at the disputants and laughing. When she had explained that she had replied to the captain's challenge and had insulted the four other challengers all except Koch and Becker joined in the laugh. But to please the lady the four strangers insisted on the two most interested making up their quarrel, and they shook hands.



Compulsory Service Blamed.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The Manchester Guardian thinks that the South African rising is purely political. Many Boers, rightly or wrongly, regard the European war as a foreign war, with which they have nothing to do, except defend themselves if attacked. The Union Government comes along and compels them to serve against German Southwest Africa. The Manchester Guardian remarks that if enlistment had been voluntary, as in Canada and Great Britain, there would have been no rising.

Prisoners Roped In Bog.

A Petrograd correspondent telegraphs the following: "An engagement at Krinitz, between Lublin and Kholm, where the Austrians lost about 6,000 prisoners and several guns, was decided by a bayonet charge. The Austrians got entangled in a bog, from which, after their surrender, they had to be extricated with the assistance of ropes."

Cargoes To Go Secretly.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. — Steps were taken yesterday by Secretary McAdoo to prevent information relating to outgoing cargoes outbound from ports of the United States getting to belligerent nations through agents in this country. The Secretary sent the following instructions to customs collectors:

"Until further directed you will refrain from making public or giving out to any other than duly authorized officers of the Government information regarding any and all outward cargoes and the destination thereof until thirty days after the date of the clearance of the vessel or vessels carrying such cargoes."

A Fleeting Observation.

He was a college professor, greatly beloved because of his kind heart, but with the common scholastic failing of being very absentminded. He visited his married niece and listened to her praise of her first born. When she paused for breath the professor felt that he must say something.

"Can the little fellow walk?" he asked, with every appearance of interest.

"Walk!" cried the mother indignantly. "Why, he's been walking now for five months."

"Dear me!" exclaimed the professor, again relapsing into abstraction. "What a long way he must have gone!"—New York Globe.

How It Happened.

"How did the accident happen?" asked the sympathetic friend.

"Well, I'll tell you," replied the man on crutches. "The automobile was going pretty fast, and all of a sudden we struck a wet place on the asphalt and there was a noise, and the doctor said, 'He'll be able to be around in about four weeks.'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Fruit Orchards of Penticton

PENTICTON (in the Okanagan Valley, British Columbi) is a place that smiles on the traveller on his arrival, calls him back the moment he has left it —and keeps calling. The raising of fruit is a kindlier task than the tunnelling of the mountains.

There seems a tendency for miners to become like moles. The coal-getters seem to gather some of the blackness of coal into their lives. They who mine for silver lead are brighter. Though, in the words of the old-time cow-men, they, too, are "defacers of the bosoms of Nature," some of the hard brightness of sparkling galena seems to be in them; there is all the difference in the world between the coal towns and the silver towns.

But fruit growers get something on them like the bloom on a peach. A life led in giving water to fruit trees —just enough, not too much—in protecting them from parasitical flies—a fruit-grower's life, all lived in the sunshine and the dry, clear air, with a tremendous blue sky overhead, and sandy yellow roads winding through his scented world among the hills, is nearer the ideal.

Lafcadio Hearn would surely have loved Penticton, and in words like jewels would have told of the ripples on the lake, how they are like thousands of little wavering mirrors flashing and flickering with as many colours as an opal. He would have delighted in the golden and silvery pennons of dust fluttering after the rigs driven, or ponies ridden, in and out of town. A white sternwheeler comes to Penticton long after dark, and sheds the strong rays of a search-light shoreward, so as to illume the landing—incidentally lighting up the world in the most witching way. Even the mere dollar-pursuer must enjoy these things; for surely, the happy child and the artist are in every man, neither to be throttled even by the struggle to make a living, nor quite exiled, without even brief returns, by the lust to make a living enough for a hundred rational men.

They have their worries at Penticton—as elsewhere—but if worry must come to man it is not a bad plan to make the scene of it as pleasing as possible. Colour is a great thing. And here there is colour. For me, I could spend days just loafing in Penticton, seeing people ride in to the stores and hitch their spirited ponies to telegraph poles while they are shopping; listen to the lake splashing; hear the pitter-patter, in the dust, of hoofs of the ponies.

The Okanagan Indians, south of the town, a cheerful band, have not lived in vain among the colour of this "dry belt" land. They have learnt the colour-schemes taught by the yellow sands, the blue skies, the russet bands of timber along the higher hills. The blue handkerchiefs on their heads; their big, glistening ear-rings; their dusty yellow moccasins; their variegated shawls—these splash more colour on the place when they come gliding into town in their buggies, with perhaps a piebald pony and a milk white one running in harness.

Change is busy here. Ten years ago the talk was all of steers and horses—now it is of irrigation and fruit. Over the hotel dinner-tables men tell each other not how many baskets they have shipped, but say, "Pshaw! I had to throw away half a ton for want of shipping facilities!" But whether this is merely a Western picturesque method of saying that the harvest is good, or whether it is literal, I know not.—By Frederick Niven, author of "Hands Up."

Masses of Troops Easily Seen.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The correspondent of The Daily Mail in Paris, in a despatch to his paper, gives a copy of the German order on avoiding aeroplanes. It says:

"According to the report of aeroplane observers, our troops are very easy to discover in spite of their grey uniforms, because of the density of their formation, while the French know how to protect themselves perfectly from aerial reconnaissance."

Nova Scotia Changes Gift.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The War Office has informed the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, that as it has been found impracticable for the Government of Nova Scotia to make the proposed gift of 100,000 tons of coal to the Home Government, His Majesty's Government has accepted the offer of $100,000 which will go to the Prince of Wales' fund for the relief of distress.

THE SPORTING WORLD

PETERBORO TO HAVE ONE INTERMEDIATE TEAM

Idea of Entering Two Teams Has Been Passed up—Peterboro Athletic Club to Disband — Some Action in Regard to the Juniors Should be Taken

The hockey fans of the city will be pleased to learn that the idea of placing two teams in the Intermediate O.H.A. has been passed up. The Peterboro Hockey Club will be the only club represented in the series. The formation of what was known as the Peterboro Athletic Club last spring gave rise to the rumor that this city would have two Intermediate teams and that the P.A.C. would also control the Junior O.H.A. team. Inquiries, however, reveal the fact that the Peterboro Athletic Club is going to disband.

When the club was organized last spring the idea of promoting athletics among the younger element was to be its motto and it was gratifying to see that citizens could understand the want of such an organization. The club met with approval from many quarters and a subscription list was opened. The men of the city "came through" and the result was a nice sum realized. It was the intention of the officers of the club to secure club rooms and bring the young men of the city together. The idea of getting rooms however was laid over till the winter months would set in as club rooms are never well patronized during the summer period.

The club withheld from taking any active part in the summer sports, intending to go in strong for hockey this coming season. The fact that money is not any too free gives cause for the belief that this winter will be a bad one for attendance at hockey matches, hence the Peterboro Athletic Club have decided to disband in preference to going in the hole financially. A meeting will be called in the near future and final affairs wound up. It is the intention to give back the money secured last spring by the subscription list.

That the Intermediate team will be well looked after by the Peterboro Hockey Club goes without saying but what about the Juniors? In other years the latter mentioned have been managed by Mr. F. D. Craig but this season he is not on the executive of the Peterboro Hockey Club. In consideration of his ability and the fact that he has taken deep interest in the Juniors for the past four or five years, it would, in our opinion, be but right to offer Mr. Craig a place on the executive committee and appoint him manager of the Juniors. This appears to be the only correct way of overcoming the difficulty. Whatever is done should be done immediately for delay is dangerous. The boys should be in training now and be prepared to go the limit when the curtain is lifted.

WAGNER TO HOLD DOWN FIRST BASE

Dreyfus Thinks Hans Will be Better Man Than Ed. Konetchy

"We will have a first baseman who will prove a better man than Konetchy," remarked President Barney Dreyfuss, of the Pirates today. "He is older, but he has more brains and ability, and will serve the club a lot better." It requires only one guess to know who the first baseman will be. Konetchy's flop to the Feds means that Honus Wagner will spend the balance of his career at first base. He has played the bag before and he will begin his forty-second year of his life as its regular guardian.

Another, and a younger man, will take the Dutchman's place at short. Honus is satisfied to play first base and the management feels assured that the new material will develop a good short field man.

If we could see ourselves as others see us few men would spend any money for photographs.

FOUGHT FOR MONEY TO PAY FOR OPERATION

Pugilists Wife in Hospital While he Has to Answer the Charge of Killing His Opponent

Chicago, Oct. 28. — "It was to have been my last fight," said Jack Lindgren, youthful pugilist, as he sat in the lieutenant's room at the Englewood police station. His clenched hands were crushing the hat he held, and his throat worked as he swallowed hard. "I had to have the money."

The other night Jack fought "Kid" Levendowski, of Michigan City, before the Tolleston Athletic Club of Tolleston, near Gary, Ind. In the second round of the encounter Levendowski went to the floor after a whirlwind attack by the young Chicago fighter. The referee counted ten over the prosprate form, and the winner of the bout leaped lightly over the ropes, dressed and hurried to catch a tain back to the city. A few minutes later doctors, who had been working to resuscitate Levendowski, pronounced him dead. Peter Mayhew, promotor, and Mossie Champaigne, referee, were arrested.

Mrs. Jack Lindgren, bride of less than a year, lies in the German Deaconess hospital on South Morgan Street. She is just recovering from an operation performed last Monday, and her condition is serious. It was to get the money for that operation that Lindgren went to Gary.

"She has been asking me to stop the fight game for a long time," said Jack, "and I told her that this would be the last time. I guess it was one time too many."

COMMENT

As You Like it

For a league of its class the Western Canadian believes it can claim the attendance record. The six cities in the circuit averaged about 50,000 attendace on the season and that without Sunday ball. A Western exchange says:

"Western Canada appears on a permanent basis at last and unless the club owners lose their heads again in the matter of boosting salaries, should prosper for years to come. Had it not been for the outbreak of the European war, which took the attention of the Canadians from baseball in the last half of the season, every club would have made money. Edmonton, with a losing team, drew 40,000 people in the first thirty games, but in the last two months of the season, the crowds dropped off, and it registered a total attendance of only 58,500.

Any manager in his first season with a club that finishes higher than it did in the previous season may rightly claim to have been successful. That claim belongs to Wilbert Robinson of the Brooklyn team this season, by landing the Dodgers in fifth place. Robinson has a long term contract with Brooklyn and it would not be surprising to see him land a winner before his term of service expires. This year he had the best hitting club in the National League but he lacked pitchers. With a large number of promising hurlers signed for 1915 the ex-Giant anticipates going strong from April till October.

A little card issued by the Royal Rooters of Boston announces that "we are an international cosmopolitan association." The international and cosmopolitan names of the first 20 Rooters who signed the list are Brady, Donahue, O'Hara, O'Meara, Regan, Fagan, Murnane, Callahan, Halligan, O'Brien, Walsh, Murphy, Hogan, McKevitt, Rooney, Keefe, O'Neill, Collins, Fitzpatrick and Fitzgerald.

It has been announced that the Army-Navy rugby game will be played on Franklin Field, Philadelphia, on November 28th. The Yanks wait for the result of this game with as much interest as they do the presidential election.

The annual meeting of the Hamilton Canadian League Baseball Club will be held next week. The main item of business will be engaging a manager. Several applications are already in.

Teddy Baldwin, the young third-baseman of the Hamilton Canadian League Club, whose boost to higher company was announced a few weeks ago will go to Memphis.

London is having their hockey players turn out with the rugby team and get into condition. Still Peterboro hesitates.

"RED" WANTS HIS RELEASE

Dooin Wasn't Forced Out but Gave up in Disgust

Philadelphia, Oct. 29.—"I'll get my release or I'll quit baseball."

That is the ultimatum Charlie Dooin, ex-manager of the Phillies, delivered to President William E. Baker, who announced the appointment of Pat Moran to succeed Dooin.

Dooin wasn't forced out of the managorial role, either, but gave up in absolute disgust because of the failure of the owners to give him the necessary financial support to build up a winner.

"I was thirteen years with the Phillies and five years as manager," said Dooin today, "and yet when it came to the matter of my release Baker wouldn't come across and allow me to go. I tried twice to quit, but there was nothing doing. Don't think for a minute that I was forced from my position. I wasn't. I quit.

"The main reason why I did not care any longer to continue as manager was the failure of the club owners to support me. They have never given me a cent to buy a ball player with.

"Well, I'm glad I'm free of all the worry of being manager anyway," remarked Dooin as he concluded, "I think I would have been a wreck in another year. Why, I have gained eleven pounds since the close of the season. Now I'm going to rest until I start on my vaudeville tour.

"The Boston Braves have made me an offer, but I cannot accept it because I am not a free agent. The Philadelphia evidently wants to make some money out of my sale and I would have to go to the club they sent me to or quit baseball.

"But I am not situated so that I have to play unless I care to, therefore I won't have to accept any proposition that doesn't look good to me."

Maurice Park Will Play This Season

Speedy Forward Man is not to Retire as Was Rumored

Maurice Park the well known local hockey player, whom it has been rumored, is to retire was approached last evening and practically gave out the assurance that he intended to try out for a place or in other words he'll be playing again this winter as usual. With he and Grover Halpin at mid-ice the nucleus of the forward department looks O.K.

RESIGNED TO LONG WAR.

Ex-President Fallieres Says France Is Not Discouraged.

PARIS, Oct. 29.—That the war is only beginning is the opinion expressed by Armand Fallieres, ex-President of France, in an interview published by the newspaper France de Bordeaux, says a despatch to the Havas News Agency from the French temporary seat of government.

"Months and months," M. Fallieres says, "will be required to overcome the military power of the enemy, but this does not produce discouragement in France. Our country has acquired the new virtue of constancy in effort.

"We shall certainly be victorious, for without reckoning our ardent patriotism and our inexhaustible moral and material resources, we have on our side Russia and Great Britain, with her strength and her tenacity, and Belgium as well as Servia; and, finally, we possess the moral support of entire humanity, which loves the ideal of liberty."

TETLOCK—CLARKE.

At George Street Methodist Church parsonage last evening, Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., united in marriage Miss Edith Clarke and Mr. John W. Tetlock, both late of Kingston. The bride was given away by Mr. W. Dyer. The groom was attended by Mr. A. Shadgett, and the bridesmaid was Miss Wiltshire.

Mr. and Mrs. Tetlock will reside in Peterboro.

BOATE—DARLING.

A pretty wedding was solemnized last evening at St. Andrews' manse, when Rev. Jas. Rollins united in the holy bonds of matrimony Miss Lily Alma, daughter of Mr. James Darling of Smith, to Herbert Ross, son of George Boate of Ennismore. The bride and groom were unattended.

After a short trip, Mr. and Mrs. Boate will reside in Eninsmore.

B. Armstrong, Toronto, is visiting here.

A. S. Cook, Detroit, is here on business.

Mr. W. Hawkes, Hamilton, is visiting friends here.

Mrs. J. M. Wallis, of Toronto, is visiting in the city, renewing acquaintances, and is the guest of Mrs. W. M. Rogers, Park street. Mrs. Wallis's two sons, who are well known here, are with the first Canadian contingent.

At the regular meeting Tuesday evening the Canadian Kitchener League decided to put their concert on Thursday evening, November 5th, in the Collegiate Concert Hall. The program committee of the league are arranging a splendid program, which no doubt will be a success. In a few days further announcements will be made.

The first "at home" of the season was held last night in St. Alphonsus Lyceum, under the auspices of the Dramatic Section, of St. Peter's T. A. S. Cards and dancing was enjoyed from 8.30 till 12 o'clock. The winners at the cards, were Miss N. O'Brien and Mr. S. O'Connor. The music for the dancing was acceptably rendered by Misses M. Gorman, V. Carveth, K. Moher and G. Rudkins.

When Miss Williams, the youngest daughter of Mr. John Williams, 311 Boswell avenue, became Mrs. Brown on the 17th inst., the charming young bride was the recipient of many presents. Among the rest, a shower of beautiful and varied presents from the young ladies of the Bell Telephone office, where she had been engaged up to the time of her marriage, and was also presented by them with a suitable address at the same time.

The groom, too, was the recipient of a cheque for one hundred dollars from his parents, who reside at 660 George street.

Asks $1000 for Loss of Foot

A writ has been issued by Gordon and Widdifield on behalf of Charles Benjamin Clute of this city against the Grand Trunk Railway for $1,500 as damages for injuries be received while in the employ of the railway.

It will be remembered that Clute had a foot amputated while braking on a troop train carrying soldiers from Peterboro to Cobourg about two or three months ago. The accident happened at the depot platform at Millbrook.

Auto Stolen

Mr. John Hill, the George Street grocer, had the misfortune to have his automobile stolen on Tuesday night. He was attending the service in the George Street Church and left his car outside. When he came out it had vanished. It has been impossible so far to obtain any clue.

The car was a Ford touring car, five passenger, with the makers' number of C7283. Government license was 24,507. If information that will lead to the recovery of this car will be welcomed by Chief Thompson, of the local force.

Is Busy Trying to Rectify Blunder

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—"Germany will not invade Canada. She will not try to seize any territory in either of the Americas, no matter what may happen on the other side."

Such was the opinion of Count von Bernstorff yesterday, German Ambassador to the United States, who continued:

"I don't want any mistake made as to Germany's attitude. Germany has no desire to come over here, no matter what may be the outcome of the war. There is no reason for this country to become disturbed on that end. Germany's intentions are the best concerning the United States."

Villages Shattered.

LONDON, Oct. 29. — The Times' correspondent in Belgium wires the following:

"Observation from a British captive balloon has revealed how effective has been the fire of the British warships on Ostend, Middlekerk, Lombaertayde and other coast villages. Not a single wall remains standing in the villages of Westkerke, Slype and Novis. Several other villages are also in ruins. All this damage was caused by the artillery of the British ships."

No Illegal Exports From Denmark Will Occur Says Premier

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 29. — (Via London.) — The question of British warships seizing steamers on the way from America to Denmark was raised in Parliament Tuesday when a member asked whether the Government could guarante that corn and foodstuffs imported from America were not re-exported to Germany.

The Premier replied that the Government was ready to guarantee to the British Government that no illegal exports from Denmark should occur, and he promised to introduce a bill in a few days providing penal clauses against incorrect statements of the destination of cargoes. The Premier added that investigation proved that recent rumors of illegal re-exports were unfounded.

Organize Union Conservative Club

The Union Conservative Club was organized last evening and it is understood eighteen or twenty men were present. The object is to form a purely Conservative club to improve Conservative conditions and organization.

The meeting was held in a Simcoe street building and it is understood that the club will branch out and become a powerful organization.

A committee of two was appointed to distribute relief. Another committee was asked to solicit donations of provisions.

UNEMPLOYED AND THE ALIEN LABOR PROBLEM

Mayor Buller this morning received a wire from W. D. Lighthall, honorary secretary of the Union of Canadian Municipalities, which stated that the Montreal council and board of trade, as well as the Union of Canadian Municipalities, are sending a deputation to Ottawa on Friday to appear before the Government in regard to the unemployment and alien labor problems.

His Worship replied, stating that it would be impossible for a local deputation to attend, but the city was in hearty sympathy with the movement.

A Word to the Talkative.

Goderich, Ont., Oct. 29.—A number of prominent Goderich citizens of German extraction who have been expressing pro-German views of late in connection with the war, have been warned by the authorities at Ottawa to cease their garrulity.

COULD BE PERSUADED.

A young woman with a party of Americans going through the parks and gardens of Warwick Castle, England, lingered behind to admire the gorgeous peacocks.

"Do those birds ever drop any of their tail feathers?" she asked of a gardener who stood by.

He looked around, lowered his voice, and replied: "They're hobstinate beasts, miss, but they drops 'em heasy att the sight of a shillin'."

NOTED ENGLISH COMEDIAN COMING

Mr. Lawrence D'Orsay, England's greatest comedian, and his all-star company, in the "Earl of Pawtucket," has been booked to appear at the Grand Opera House on Monday next.

Mr. D'Orsay comes to us direct from London and New York triumphs, and is recognized the world over as England's greatest comedian; Mr. D'Orsay needs no introduction to Canadian theatregoers, as his reputation abroad and in America has preceded him.

Mr. D'Orsay is distinctly not the time honored type of a stage Englishman, particularly a stage Earl; he is first and last of all personally a Britisher of education and breeding, and simply acts upon the stage as he acts away from it, while his characterization of this most delightful role of Lord Cardington is primarily keyed for the enjoyment and pleasure of his audience; it serves the further purpose of giving the observing theatregoer a chance to divest himself of some false impressions by studying the Britisher of breeding at close range.

THE BANNER OF ST. GEORGE

The announcement that the Peterborough Choral Society have taken in hand the contata "The Banner of St. George," composed by Sir Edward William Elgar, at the time of the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria in 1897 recalls the fact that since the days of Purcell, English composers of genius have been scarce and whether or no posterity concedes that rank to Elgar, he has at least one valid claim to that distinction—the disagreement of the critics. Born at Broadheath, near Worcester in 1857 of intellectual parentage, he early developed musical ability and at the age of 15 was assistant organist to his father, also playing in an orchestra. From 1879 to 1884 he was the leader of a unique band at the County Lunatic Society, composed of the attendants, for which he composed quadrilles and other kindred pieces. His marriage with Miss Roberts in 1889 gave him the required impetus and removing to London he endeavored to place his works before the public but with little success at first. It was at Hanley in Staffordshire that Elgar's "Saga of King Olaf" met with such noteworthy success that it was recognized that Elgar was a candidate for the laurels. In 1900 he was asked to compose a work for the Birmingham Musical Festival and produced "The Dream of Gerontius," on Cardinal Newman's poem which describes the death of a man the passing of his soul into the presence of God, and then into purgatory. Since then the work has been given in nearly every musical country in the world. Forty years handling of many instruments, exemplifies what may be called the inductive method in musical composition. The power to apply this method in music has been seen in some foreign composers, but not in Elgar's English predecessors. Knighted in 1904, Elgar has received the degree of Doctor of Music from Oxford, Dunelin, Leeds, and Pittsburg, U.S.A. The fact that an Elgar Festival was held in Covent Garden, for three whole days in 1904 gives an idea of the prolific nature of his works. The best known of his songs are "Weary Wind of the West," "My Love Dwelt in a Northern Land," "Like to a Damask Rose," "A Song of Flight," "The Pipes of Pan," "Queen Mary's Song," and "In the Dawn." It will be recalled that the famous Sheffield Choir gave a chorus from "The Dream of Gerontius" a few years ago which was heartily received. The production of "The Banner of St. George" in its entirety, by our local society, may lead to the production of the larger work at a future date.

CITIZENS CLEAR SIDEWALKS AFTER SNOW PLOW PASSES

City Engineer Would Have This Provision in By-law — Allow the Unemployed to Clear Away the Snow Suggests Ald. Saunders — Board of Works Will Call for Tenders

A short meeting of the Board of Works was held last evening, there being present Chairman Ald. Duncan, Mayor Buller, Ald. Duffus, Stratton, McIntyre, Johnston, Green, and Saunders, and City Engineer Parsons.

Removing Snow.

City Engineer Parsons had a communication before the board reminding the members that it was time to call for tenders for clearing the snow off the sidewalks. The letter further advised the passing of a bylaw ordering the citizens to shovel the snow off the sidewalks after the plow passed. Ald. Saunders brought up the question of giving the unemployed the work. It was, however, decided to call for tenders, and the contract will include a clause ordering men to keep the surface as reasonably level as possible.

Pay for Crossing.

On motion of Ald. Johnston and Green, the meeting decided to pay $20.00, which is the cost of the crossing to the School of the Immaculate Conception in East City. The work was done by the Catholic congregation, under the supervision of the City Engineer.

Will Use Influence.

On motion of Ald. Duffus and Ald. Stratton, the Board will use its influence in an effort to secure water for several sections of the city where the Water Commissioners have refused, on account of inefficient revenue.

Engineer Has Power.

Mr. Parsons asked the Board if he had power to order trees to be cut down. A local newspaper had referred several times to his actions, stating that he had no authority to do so. The Board assured him that he did have authority.

FREE FALSE FACES.

The False Faces now in the window at Grafton & Co.'s Store will be given away free to the boys at 4 o'clock on Friday, October 30th.
